The Middies actually outscored the Tar Heels in matter of first places, 8-7, but Carolina picked up nine second spots to aid the worthy cause. Double winners in addition to Moody were Navy's Dick Ambrogi, with a pair of dash decisions, and Jim Oberholtzer, who gained the Middies 10 valuable points with wins in the 880 and one-mile runs.

Even Terms

The two teams battled on even terms most of the way through the meet. The score was tied at 27-all at the end of six events, again at 36 after eight events, still again at 45 after 10 events.

The 11th event — the two mile — gave Carolina a lead it never relinquished. Sam Magill, the winner, moved out front on the third lap and was never pressed thereafter, winning by a good 100 yards over Navy's Dick Hall.

Other Carolina firsts were scored by Taylor in the high hurdles, Bob Seligman in the discus and Skeets Baldwin in the javelin.

Hearnmen Lose Third in Row Despite Rally

By Buddy Vaden

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 8—North Carolina's baseball team scored six runs in a big eighth inning against Georgetown here today, but the rally fell one tally short and the Tar Heels suffered a 7-6 setback—their third loss in a row.

The Hoyas did all their scoring in the first three frames and then settled down to holding down the Carolina club. They were successful most of the way, but the Hearnmen finally broke loose in the eighth.

Big Inning

Whitey Black, leading off in the big frame, reached first when hit by a pitched ball. Jim Hayworth and Frank Jones both flied out but then the fireworks began.

Jim Kelly tripled, Jack Brasington doubled, Rip Ryan was hit by the pitcher, Jim Hamilton singled, Emmet Cheek doubled, pinch-hitter Sid Varney singled, and Black, up for the second time, clipped another one-bagger. Hayworth grounded out to end the inning after six runs had crossed the plate.

The Tar Heels staged a threat in the final stanza, loading the bases with one out. But Hamilton forced Jones at the plate for the second out and Cheek was retired to end the game.

Hoyas Score

Georgetown wasted little time in jumping to a quick lead, scoring three runs in the very first inning. Two singles and a walk loaded the bases and two errors by Tommy Andrew, the starting and losing pitcher, plus another walk pushed those runners in.

The Hoyas tallied another run in the second frame and then had another three-run inning in the third. Before the side was retired, Andrew retired in favor of Dean Cassell, who allowed one hit in pitching the next five innings. He was taken out for a pinch hitter during the eighth-inning rally and Vinnie DiLorenzo finished up.

The Tar Heels outhit Georgetown, 10 to 4, but five errors and a like number of walks in the first three innings helped the Hoyas overcome this handicap.

Duke Downs Deacons

Durham, May 8 — Duke's baseballers made good use of three hits to obtain a pair of runs and a subsequent 2-1 victory over Wake Forest in a Big Four tussle here this afternoon.

The Blue Devils tallied once in the first on a single and double. Then, after the Deacons had tied the score in the sixth, Duke came up with the winning marker in the seventh on a walk, sacrifice, passed ball and another single.

Those were the only hits allowed by Dale Blackwell and Vernon Mustian, the Deacon hurlers. Al Curtis scattered six safeties to gain the victory.

Racquet Squad Cops 9-0 Win In Dual Finale

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

RICHMOND, May 8 — North Carolina's netters completed their dual season here this afternoon with an easy 9-0 victory over the racquet-wielders of the County Club of Virginia.

The win gave the Tar Heels a 20-1 record for the 1848 season, including outstanding triumphs over Yale, Cornell, Michigan, Army, Penn and Davidson. Only blot on the slate was a 5-4 setback from the strokes of William and Mary's powerful team.

One Goes Limit

Only one match today went as far as three sets. Playing on court three, Ray Morris was pushed to the full limit before turning back Miller of the home forces.

Elsewhere along the lineup, it was Carolina by anywhere from two to five games. In the feature duel, Clark Taylor was extended in the first set, finally gaining a 10-8 win over Leitch, top player for the Richmond club. The second set was altogether different though, with Taylor breezing to a 6-1 success.

Skakle Stays Undefeated

The other singles matches saw Carolina wins registered by Stan Gruner, Charlie Rice, Don Skakle and Heath Alexander. For Skakle, the triumph gave him another undefeated season, this time with 19 straight. He has won 39 in a row over a three-year span.

Singles: Taylor over Leitch, 10-8, 6-1; Gruner over Dickinson, 6-2, 6-4; Morris over Miller, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2; Rice over Harris, 6-3, 6-2; Skakle over Blair, 6-1, 6-1; Alexander over Lamb, 6-1, 6-4.

Doubles: Taylor-Wilder over Leitch-Dickinson, 6-3, 6-3; Morris-Rice over Miller-Cabell, Sr., 6-3, 6-1; Alexander-Skakle over Horsley-Cabell, Jr., 6-1, 6-2.

Jayvees Battle PJC In Maxton Tomorrow

Carolina's jayvees nine will go after its ninth success of the season tomorrow afternoon when the Tar Babies journey by bus to Maxton for a return tussle with Presbyterian Junior college.

Victors by a 9-2 count in the first outing between the two clubs, the local lads will also be seeking their seventh straight win. Southpaw Bill McGinn is Coach Henry House's choice to handle the mound chores, with the rest of the starting lineup expected to remain the same as that which defeated Duke twice during the past week.

In the initial clash between the two teams, the Tar Babies emerged on the long end of a 6-1 count. The PJC outfit has shown steady improvement since then, however, and is pointing for a return upset.

Tomorrow's game will be the first of three for the jayvees this week. They tackle State's juniors on Thursday and meet the Blue Imps of Duke Saturday.

SC Net Tourney Here This Week

The annual Southern conference tennis championships will be played on the local courts starting Thursday, with William and Mary, the defending champion in both singles and doubles, again the top favorite.

The tournament will be a three-day affair, the finals coming up on Saturday. With the annual conference track and field meet scheduled here for Friday and Saturday, Chapel Hill will rank as the sports capital for this area during the weekend.

Gardner Larned, who won the 1947 singles crown for William and Mary and also shared in the doubles title, has since transferred to Rollins, but the Indians still field a powerful outfit. Fred Kovaleski and Tut Bartzen, singles semi-finalists last year will be back to pace the W & M attack. They team to form what will probably be seeded the top doubles combination.

Carolina's number one player, Vic Seixas, is expected to be ready for a return to action after being out almost three weeks with an acute case of glandular fever. The Tar Heel captain was runner-up to Larned last season.

Other singles stars in the field will include Bo Roddey, Davidson's ace, Clark Taylor and Ray Morris of the Tar Heels, and Howe Atwater, number three on William and Mary's squad.

Duke Captures Team Title; Ward Second For Medalist Honors

By Billy Carmichael III

Pinehurst, May 8 — A lone crusade for Southern conference golf honors by Carolina's Harvie Ward fell one stroke short here this afternoon as the defending champion Tar Heels proved to be a shadow of their former selves and left the 18th green with only runner-up honors in the medal play to show for the day's work.

Ward finished one stroke behind Wake Forest's Arnold Palmer, who combined a brilliant morning round of 71 with a creditable card of 74 for the afternoon to stave off a late rally by the Tarboro lad. Ward, coming in at 145, soared to 76 on the morning round, but rallied after lunch to register an outstanding 70 for the last 18 holes.

Takes Six

The Tarboro Tartar took a six on the par-3 sixth hole during the first go-round and that was a handicap from which he never quite recovered.

Duke, meanwhile, was walking off with the team title, as the foursome of Jimmy McNair, Art and Fletcher Wall, and Mac McLennon turned in a total of 607 to win easily. Wake Forest placed second with 619, State was third with 627 while Carolina placed fourth with 636. Washington and Lee (638), Davidson (649), and VPI (653) rounded out the finishers with George Washiington not completing the competition.

The Tar Heels with the exception of Ward didn't fare well for the day. Harvey Oliver was the second lowest of the Carolina entry, carding 83-80—163 to edge Jack Brantley (79-85—164), Bob Cox (80-85—165) and Roy McKenzie (82-84 — 166). Frank Brooks was the other Tar Heel competitor with the little freshman having the top tally of the day, a 88-87—175.

Three Strokes Back

Three strokes behind Ward in the medal play came Blue Devil Art Wall at 149, beating teammate Fletcher Wall by two strokes. Bud Worsham of the Deacons, Charlie Gibson of State and Jimmy McNair were tied at 152 to complete the list of low scorers.

The Palmer-Ward battle was one that remained so until the next to the last hole. Ward started the afternoon round with a blaze and had cut Palmer's five stroke lead to one at the 10th hole. Palmer went 2-up with a birdie on the 11th while Ward missed a chance to tie the match up when they both bogeyed 12th and 13th.

Ward got a birdie on the 14th which Palmer matched with a 2 on the short 15th and Ward repeated on the long 16th, putting Palmer 1-up going to 17th.

Barron Has Big Lead In Goodall Links Play

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. May 8 (UP)—Herman Barron of near by White Plains, N. Y., has practically clinched first place in the Goodall round-robin golf tournament being held here.

Barron, who almost withdrew yesterday because of an injured ankle, shot two rounds of 71 today to take a commanding 17-point lead over the field. With one round remaining, Barron has a plus 39 score.

Bob Hamilton is second with plus 22, followed by defending champion Bobby Locke and Lloyd Mangrum, who are tied for third with plus 18.

Eleven Softball Teams Sport Perfect Slates; Emerson Already Victor in Dorm League Two

Time has just about run out for the intramural softballers in their round-robin play and through last week's action 11 teams remained undefeated, with one having already clinched the title in its respective league.

Emerson has finished its slate with a perfect record of seven wins and no defeats to capture the title in league number two of the dormitory division.

Lewis 1 and the Mud Dobbers in league four and Graham 1 and the Misfits in league one all have posted a record of five victories against no losses with two more games to be played.

The Law School remains on top of league three with a 5-1 record with the Bombers and Mangum no. 2 trailing with a 4-1 mark.

Phi Kappa Sigma's no. 1 team, last year's all-campus champion, is still on top in the first fraternity league with a 5-1 slate. Zeta Psi 2 is ahead in league two with a perfect 5-0 score. Sigma Chi 2 and Lambda Chi 1 are right behind with 4-1.

Another possessor of a perfect record in the play thus far is the DKE's no. 2 team, which leads league three with 5-0. A hot battle is being waged in the next group with Phi Gamma Delta 3 and Kappa Sigma 2 both tied for first place with a perfect mark of five wins and no losses.

The top teams in both leagues five and six, PiKA 2 and Sigma Nu 1 respectively, are also undefeated after four games but anything could happen in their remaining three games.

Most of the 79 teams which are taking part in the tourney have either finished their schedules or have a game or so left and then the top teams in each loop will move into the round robin play to pick the dormitory and fraternity titleholders for the season.

This week's intramural play will be limited to two days—Monday and Wednesday—because of varsity baseball games at home on Tuesday and Thursday. This week will also see the start of action in another Spring activity, water polo, which gets under way tomorrow. Games will take place in the evenings as well as afternoons.

May Day Successful; Senior Week Coming

By Weddy Thorp

May Day went off as scheduled last Sunday in spite of the threats of rain, and was as lovely as had been predicted. Even the showers held up till Catty was crowned. Marcie Harrer did a particularly good job with the seventh graders who presented the pageant, and everybody seemed well-pleased with the selection of queen and the court attendants. A very nice ending for the big weekend.

Senior week activities beginning on Thursday will sparkplug this week. Aside from the Krupa feature, which is enough in itself, there are several things coming up in conection with it that should be good for kicks. Barefoot day will be no bad deal for most dignified seniors; and the faculty-senior softball game is something to look forward to.

Then with the Krupa outfit on hand for concert and dance, the campus can expect a big Saturday. Should be fun.

And incidentally, tickets are still available for the concert. You can get 'em at the Y.

Recognition is due Benedicta Quirino Dos Santos this week, for the honor extended her by Mademoiselle magazine. She is now entering the finals of the guest editorship contest. Here's a big wish for success!

What with plans for orientation getting under day, the Glee club concert coming up, and almost every phase of coed organization being squared away for next fall, Carolina lasses these days are leading little bee lives. As one coed said when she left the dorm, "I've got to go be extra-curricular."

Pan-Hell has a pretty good idea, combining their workshop with a picnic. But generally speaking, coed meetings are the order of the day, and plans for next fall are moving fast.

Which brings us to the realization that this year has almost had it. It seems impossible that school is a matter of weeks at this point.

Picnics and Beach Trips

Picnics and beach parties continue to claim a goodly number of our oh-so-studious clan as Spring wears on. A couple of the sororities are having big house-parties at Wrightsville right now, and a quick survey of campus entertaining would indicate a marked outdoor trend. All we need is a revival of "Music Under the Stars."

This business of going to school isn't, after all, SO hard to take.

Phi Mu Alpha Initiates 12 New Pledges

The following pledges were initiated into Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, Alpha Rho chapter of the national music fraternity, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Hill hall: Harold Andrews, Durham; Norman Clark, Oxford; Jack Clinard, Winston-Salem; Clifford Doll, South Orange, N. J.

Sam Green, Mooresboro; Frank Groseclose, Asheville; Bob McDonald, Little Rock, S. C.; Frank McGuire, Asheville; James Moore, Reidsville; William Tritt, Fayetteville; Clyde Wade, Roxboro; and James Weathers, Shelby.

After the ceremony there was a picnic supper given by the fraternity in conjunction with Sigma Alpha Iota, the women's musical organization for the new members.

Pan Hell Sponsors Picnic for Council

The pan-Hellenic council held a picnic and workshop combined on Wednesday at 4:30. All old and new council members were present for the affair in Tenny's meadow.

The purpose of the get-together was for new council members to get acquainted before next fall so that they may work in better harmony.

Rushing problems, and the value of sororities were discussed during the course of the afternoon, and a picnic supper was served.

Evelyn Pettitt was overall chairman of the social.

SP MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Student party in Roland Parker lounge No. 1 at 9 o'clock tomorrow night. The SP Executive council will meet in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

'Unmentionables' Are . . . . . Left in the Rush

Ten Coed Campers Recovering From Ordeal

By Jim Dickinson

About 10 coed campers early yesterday morning were trying to recuperate from their ordeal of Thursday night in which a sudden rainstorm sent the pajama-clad trail blazers scurrying from their sky-blanketed camp site on Mason farm.

They left behind an array of "unmentionables" and other regalia hanging in trees and deposited in various nooks of the encampment. The pell-mell rush ended at 2:30 Friday morning with several rain-soaked figures arousing Hostess Peggy Ellis and begging admittance to Alderman dorm.

"We've had it," moaned sleepy-eyed Becky Holton, while picking over her unappetizing plate lunch of bacon and eggs in Lenoir hall yesterday morning. The comely cheerleader and physical education major was relating the previous night's disheartening activities.

"It was Frances Burns' camping class," she continued, "and we were putting into practice some of the things we've been learning from books. We pitched camp at 4 o'clock and cooked ourselves a pot of tasty goulash under direction of chef Bill Henderson. We topped this off with strawberry shortcake."

"Things were going fine," Becky went on. "We had our bed-roll book along and that simplified the problem of getting ready for bed. The book is wonderful and tells everything about camping trips."

"About 11:30 we tucked ourselves in and prepared for a tranquil night of rest beneath a then star-studded sky. At 1:45 the rains came and the rush started. Halfway down the hill I was leading the pack when I stepped in a deep hole and got all tangled up with my pancho and an ample layer of mud. By virtue of this I dropped to eighth place in the mad rush."

Other than Becky the camping group included explorers Nancy Tucker, Lib Browning, Scotty Dellinger, Dot Lunsford, Frances McLean, Anne Adams, and Bill Henderson.

"Next time," said Becky, "we're going to take along a book which gives an hour-by-hour prediction of weather to be expected."

Society Notes

On Wednesday evening, April 28, the Delta chapter of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity formally initiated the following new men: Thomas C. Haddon, Jr., Durham; Charles R. Gilchrist, Jr., Greensboro; Thomas E. Blair, Charlotte; Percy McNeer Dillon, Jr., Statesville; and Walton M. Cheesborough, Asheville.

Tuesday night the Alpha Gams entertained Cooney Beland, their mascot from the Sigma Chi derby, with dinner at the house. Thursday afternoon the Senior members of the sorority entertained Dean Carmichael at tea.

The Chi O's entertained the Sigma Chi's with a "farmer" party on Thursday night. The party was held at the Chi O house, and everybody came dressed in blue jeans.

The Pi Phi's are having a picnic at Hogan's lake for the Deke's on Tuesday night.

Thursday night the Alpha Gams entertained the Sigma Nu's with a party at the house. The theme was "Spanish Girl" and the entire program of the evening, costumes, and decorations revolved around this idea.

The ADPi's entertained their alumnae and patronesses on Monday with a tea at the sorority house, and on Tuesday afternoon the sorority was entertained by the Lambda Chi's at tea from 3:30-4:30.

There will be no Alpha Gam coffee hour this Sunday night.

Betty Winton, '47, has been visiting in Chapel Hill for the past week.

The KA's will entertain the Chi O's on Tuesday afternoon at the fraternity house.

Lambda Chi will entertain the Tri Delts at a tea on Tuesday afternoon.

Six Coeds, Dean Of Women Tapped Into Valkyries In Dawn Ceremony

By Ruth Evans

Six coeds and the Dean of Women of the University will be wearing golden Valkyrie keys for the first time today.

Frances Angas, Helen Bouldin, Mary Anne Daniel, Teenie Royall, Sue Stokes, and Sally Woodhull joined the ranks of outstanding Carolina women students this morning when they were tapped into Valkyries in a dawn cere-

As a highlight of this spring's tapping was the selection of Miss Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women, as an honorary member. Miss Carmichael went through the secret ordeals of being awakened by an ominous gong at 4:30 o'clock as light was breaking [illegible].

Secret ritual involving black-cloaked figures of the senior members of the group and frightened honorees were held early today in the annual affair at which outstanding juniors are chosen and named into the highest honorary organization for Carolina coeds. This group is the equivalent to the national organization of Mortar Board.

Members are chosen from the whole junior class on standards of leadership, character, attitude, sound judgement, service, and scholarship. Throughout the years, girls tapped by this women's honorary have had broad records in all these fields.

Newly-tapped members hail from many states, and have varied interests and records in their work at the University. Frances Angas, from Brooklyn, N. Y., was chosen speaker of the Coed Senate in recent elections, and has just been crowned Sweetheart of Sigma Chi. She is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Helen Bouldin, from Clarksdale, Miss., is the new chairman of the Women's council, and will be in charge of coed orientation in the fall. She is a member of Chi Omega, and has been active in several branches of student government this year.

Mary Anne Daniel, newly-elected president of the YWCA, is from Weldon. She has been a member of the Phi, the CCUN, and has served on the public affairs committee of the Y all year. She is an Alpha Gamma Delta.

Katherine "Teeny" Royall, who is from Goldsboro, has a record of service through many channels of activity. She has been a member of the Coed Senate, the worship committee of the Y, an officer in the Canterbury club, and will be in charge of coed student advisers during orientation next fall. She is a Pi Beta Phi.

Sue Stokes hails from Raleigh, and is new president of the Women's Interdormitory council. She is president of McIver dormitory, having already served one quarter. She is new president of Theta Psi Epsilon, honorary chemistry sorority, member of the Women's council and the Coed Senate. She is a new member of the Y cabinet, and an officer in the Canterbury club. She is an Alpha Gam.

Sally Woodhull, from Bethlehem, Penn., is active in publications. She is the advertising manager of the Carolina Magazine, a member of the Daily Tar Heel staff, and secretary and publicity chairman of the YWCA. She is president of Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary sorority, and a member of Pi Phi. She will be one of the chairman of the WSSF drive next fall.

Officers Listed

Graduating members of Valkyries and the officers of the group are: Jo Fishel, president; Marshall Spears, vice-president; Julia Ross, secretary; Bill Lloyd, treasurer; Barbara Cashion, alumnae chairman; Jo Butler, Jane Rogers, Sarah Buchanan Porter, Donnie MacDonald, Marcella Harrer, Grey Simpson, Ruth Evans, Bootsie McWilliams, Jo Farris, Meg Healy, Betsy Ann Barbee, Emily von Borries, and Miriam Evans.

Among the honorary members and alumnae now active are Betty Rose Dowden, Twig Branch, Mary Frances Kellam, Cappie Swain, Peggy Jergensen, and Dean Stacy.

Planetarium Workers Leave Jobs

Strike Is Against J.A. Jones Company All Around State

By Jim Dickinson

Approximately 125 A.F. of L. union workers walked off their jobs at Morehead planetarium yesterday morning and spokesmen for the group said they are striking for hourly wage increases of 25 and 37½ cents.

The strikers, employes of the J. A. Jones Construction company of Charlotte, left work at 7:30 and formed picket lines fronting the project grounds along Franklin street.

Strikes in State

Officials at the A.F. of L. Labor temple in Durham said the strike is a general one in which skilled and non-skilled union workers are leaving the company's jobs in Charlotte and Greensboro. Other strikes were reported at a Liggett and Myers project in Durham and at Duke university.

G. W. Wise, superintendant of the company's local conctruction unit, said the workers had left their jobs but declined to make any comment on the reason for the union action.

Sympathy Strikers

Striking iron workers, hoisting engineers and cement finishers said their groups are seeking a pay hike, but that other workers including bricklayers and carpenters are on sympathy strike.

Representatives of the latter group said their wages were increased recently, but also stated they would return to wark only at such time as an agreement is reached between the company and those workers seeking a pay increase.

A picketing iron worker said, "The company offered to pay half the raise we are seeking but we intend to hold out for the full amount."

The union is seeking an increase of 37 and one half cents for steel hoisting engineers who now make $1.25 and $1.50 an hour, and an increase of 25 cents an hour for workers in other trades who now make $1.75 an hour.

Called a "Surprise"

A company supervisor at the project said the strike was "somewhat of a surprise" to the company executives.

Reports yesterday indicated that only unskilled workers who are not members of the union are still on their jobs here and at the Liggett and Myers project in Durham.

Union officials said another project at Neuse in Wake county will be affected today unless an agreement is reached between the company and union.

Leary Says Redistricting To Be Completed Today

By Chuck Hauser

"A redistricting bill to present to the Student Legislature will be completed by tomorrow afternoon," Joe Leary, chairman of the Elections committee, stated yesterday evening, following the adjournment of an open meeting of the committee.

The group considered the merits of three bills yesterday. The first was introduced in a recent Legislature meeting by Leary, and was written by members of the University party. The second was proposed to the Legislature last week by Lindsay Tate. The third was a surprise, being suggested during yesterday afternoon's hearing by Gran Childress.

Calls for Six

The latest measure calls for six town men's voting districts, while the UP bill provides for four and the Tate bill for nine.

The districts for dorm men, dorm women are substantially the same in all three of the proposals.

The Childress bill calls for the following six districts for town men: (1) Victory Village, Pittsboro road trailer camp; (2) Area west of Pittsboro road and south of West Cameron avenue, but including all residences on both sides of Cameron; (3) Area north of West Cameron, south of West Franklin and west of Old Fraternity row (Porthole alley); (4) Area north of West Franklin and west of Columbia road; (5) Area north of West Franklin and east of Columbia road; (6) Area east of Pittsboro road and Porthole alley and south of East Franklin street.

Districts Listed

The Tate bill drew up nine districts by doing a little re-arranging and a little cutting-up of the ones named above. The Tate district 3 is composed of the fraternity houses on West Cameron, including Little Fraternity court (Kappa Sig, Zeta house, etc.) and both sides of Pittsboro street from Cameron to McCauley. District 4 is all buildings on both sides of Columbia street between Franklin and McCauley, including Fraternity court (Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu house, etc.). District 5 is the entire business section of town, including everything north of the business district, running all the way out West Franklin (taking in both sides of the street) from the post office to Carrboro.

Gene Krupa Bids Still Available In Free Bargain

Bids for the Gene Krupa dance Saturday night are being distributed free of charge in the Y lobby to all students who purchase two tickets to Krupa's Saturday afternoon concert, according to Bill Tate, vice-president of the senior class.

Tickets for the concert, to be presented in Memorial hall at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, are 75 cents each and are available to all students, whether members of the senior class or not. Dance bids are free, and are available to all seniors and to underclassmen who show two concert tickets.

"Krupa has been informed of the tastes of the Carolina student body," said Tate. "We've asked him to really knock himself out for the concert, and to play lots of slow, danceable numbers Saturday night." The dance will be semi-formal in Woollen gym from 8 to 12 o'clock.

The senior class will be unable to meet expenses, Tate said, unless all tickets to the concert are sold. Sales are going well, so far, yesterday being the best day. Everyone, particularly seniors, is urged to support the class in their attempt to present to the campus an open dance at a low price. "You'll never find another bargain like this," Tate said.

The committee has planned very few decorations for the dance, since they cannot count on complete sale of tickets.

A SPEAKER at the coming CCUN state conference, Dr. Jan-Albert Goris is commissioner of Belgium information service in this hemisphere. He will speak on the recent European five-power military and economic pact.

Subject to Be European Pact, World Affairs

Dr. Jan-Albert Goris, high commissioner of Belgium information services in this hemisphere, will be one of the main speakers at the state conference of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations in Chapel Hill Friday and Saturday.

His subject will be the recent European five-power military and economic pact, Belgium's part in international affairs, and intellectual cooperation between nations.

Dr. Goris holds the rank of director general in the Ministry of Information, and was for several years principal assistant to the Belgian minister of economic affairs.

He is at present high commissioner of information for Belgium in this hemisphere, and a professor at the Ecole Libre des Hautes Etudes in New York. He is a doctor of historical science and formerly was a professor of economic history at the University of Louvain, Belgium.

Also an author, Dr. Goris' last books, published in New York, are "Belgium in Bondage," "Strangers Should not Whisper," and "Rubens in America."

Dr. Goris will be one of the speakers on the program planned for Friday night at 8:30 in Gerrard hall.

Unions Cancel Railroad Strike At Last Minute

Washington, May 10 — (UP) — The three railroad brotherhood unions tonight called off the nation-wide railroad strike set for 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The decision was announced at 9:23 (EST) by the wage committees of the three unions, the engineers, firemen, and switchmen. Representatives of the three brotherhoods were called into secret session tonight after papers restraining the strike had been issued by Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Goldsborough's injunction directed them to call off the strike and to keep their 150,000 members on the job. The government order came just two hours after President Truman seized the nation's railroads and put them under Army control.

According to a spokesman for the three unions, "The three brotherhoods will obey the court order. Steps to that effect are being taken immediately."

Civil Rights Group Member to Speak Here May 20 Under AVC Sponsorship

Mrs. Dorothy Tilly, a fellow member with Dr. Frank Graham of the special presidential committee that recently drafted the much-talked-of Civil Rights report, will speak in Hill hall on this subject Thursday evening, May 20, George Tindall, chairman of the sponsoring University chapter of the American Veterans committee said yesterday

The AVC head said that Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., another member of the committee and a national officer of this veteran's organization, has informed the local chapter that he is planning to take part in this civil rights program also if he can fit the trip into his business schedule.

Mrs. Tilly has been outstanding over a number of years as an educator and a church worker with the Methodist denomination. She is the secretary of Christian Social relations and Local Church activities, southeastern region, of this church, and was the first woman trustee of Wesleyan college.

In the field of civil rights Mrs. Tilly has served as the secretary of the Association of Southern Women to Prevent Lynching, the director of the 1947 Conference on Human Rights and World Order, and the director of a conference this year on civil rights. She is also the current field director of the Southen Regional council.

At a southeastern womens' convention in Atlanta, May 1, Mrs. Tilly was chosen as "Woman of Achievement in the South in World Peace."

Contralto Slated To Sing Thursday With Glee Club

Mary Helen zum Brunnen, contralto, will appear as soloist with the Women's Glee club Thursday night at 8:30 in Hill hall

Miss zum Brunnen, a native of Charleston, S. C., is a pupil of Harold Dickensheets and Edgar Schofield. Her professional engagements have included two seasons with the San Francisco Opera company and appearances with the N.Y.S.T.A. Opera association. She has been soliost at the Marble Collegiate and Fifth Avenue Presbyterian churches of New York; First Baptist church, Berkely, Cal., and Temple Emmanu-El, San Francisco; and has presented solo recitals in California, New York, and North Carolina.

She has made numerous appearances in oratorio productions and has sung two Gilbert and Sullivan roles at the Transylvania Music school-camp in Brevard.

No One Injured

A quickly-put-out brush fire caused a great deal of excitement yesterday evening that the fire department didn't even hear about.

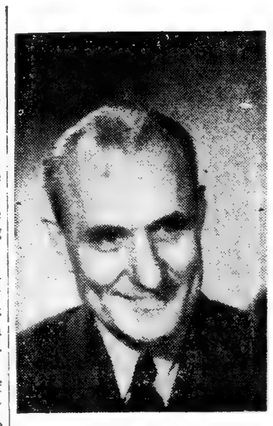
The alarm began squawking about 8:30 last night, and the Chapel Hill fire department took no great time in locating and extinguishing it.

For some reason, a lot of people had gotten some very strange ideas about that fire. The first call to come into the Daily Tar Heel office wanted to know how badly the bell tower was damaged. The second wondered if Frank Graham's house had been burned all the way to the ground or not. The third asked how badly the student was hurt who was taken away in an ambulance.

The last wishful thinker wanted to know how many people were injured in the Deke house fire.

Barrus Heads YM Program Starting Today

Recently Returned From Italian Post



By Sally Woodhull

Robert Barrus, new associate secretary of the YMCA, will start today as head of the entire program of the YM here during the leave of absence of Claude Shotts, who will be working with the American Friends Service committee in Germany during the summer months.

Barrus, who arrived in Chapel Hill last week, returned recently from Italy, where he had spent two years in the American Friends program of post war rehabilitation and reconstruction.

A graduate of the University of Rochester, Barrus went to Italy soon after the end of the war. He helped to organize an Italian volunteer service movement, engaging the aid of university and secondary school students to rebuild demolished homes and aid in rehabilitating the people.

He has been active in YMCA work in New York city, and has worked with boys in summer camps and with the Youth Hostel movement.

CLAUDE SHOTTS

ROBERT BARRUS

Barrus, who will be in complete charge of the YM program during the summer months, will continue as associate secretary after Shott's return in the fall.

Shotts Will Spend Summer In Germany

Shotts will leave Chapel Hill today, and will sail from New York on May 14, landing at Southampton on May 19, and arriving in Berlin on May 21. There he will be attached to a neighborhood educational self-help home, somewhat like a settlement house in America. He will also be in charge of conferences and institutes which will be held there.

In the heart of the Russian zone, the settlement house is an old estate, reconverted to make a rest home for teachers and social workers, and to provide equipment for citizens to repair shoes, tolls and other things.

Educational aspects of the work will include international institutes using American, British, and French visiting professors, and work with youths and adults.

National Editorial Association Will Arrive Here Today on Tour of State

The National Editorial association, which has been in convention in Pinehurst for the past week, will visit here this morning to look over the campus and Chapel Hill.

The group, composed of 200 men traveling in seven buses, will arrive on the Hill at 11:30 this morning, according to their schedule. A committee of University officials will meet them in Durham. These are C. E. Teague, University business manager, Alumni Director J. M. Saunders, Mayor R. W. Madry and others.

Cafe Scores High

A big letter "A" for cooperation and sportsmanship is in order for the University Cafe and its popular proprieter, "Max". People eating there Sunday were quick to notice that the prices, item by item, were identical to those charged during the week.

The change in Max's prices brings the total of "no Sunday increase" restaurants to four, including Harry's, the Marathon and Danziger's. The fact that one of the four places in town that had high prices is able to lower them to normal is proof that the other three places, the Porthole, Coffee Shop and Campus, can lower theirs too.

Incidentally, Max is one of the several merchants who accept "signed checks" from known customers when their cash supply is low. Mrs. Max estimated to me that Max takes in such checks from approximately 600 people. I have also noticed this being done in Harry's, the Porthole and Danziger's, and it is probably done in the other places too. A mighty nice token from the cafe owners . . . it is the student's responsibility to see that they pay their bills to keep their creditors out of the red. —B.B.

Who's Your Uncle?

(Reprinted from Southern California Daily Trojan)

Once upon a time there was a little boy named Giuseppe who had two uncles named Sam and Joe.

Now, each of Giuseppe's uncles wanted very much to be his favorite uncle and each of them was just as nice to the little boy as he could be.

"Who's your favorite uncle, Giuseppe?" Sam would say, handing the boy a piece of candy.

"Uncle Joe's your favorite, isn't he?" the other uncle would say, patting the boy on the head.

Finally Giuseppe said that on a certain day he would decide which uncle was his favorite and that in the meantime he wanted to think the matter over carefully.

Now, Uncle Sam was very, very rich, so he went to his nephew and said:

"Giuseppe, if you will make me your favorite uncle, I'll buy you lots of candy every day."

But Giuseppe was a smart little boy and said he didn't want lots of candy every day.

"If you'll make me your favorite uncle, I'll take you to the movies every night," Uncle Sam promised, trying another tack.

"What do you want then?" Uncle Sam asked.

"I want some tools and some wood so that I can make things for myself and to swap with other kids. I could even make things to sell and earn money enough to pay you back. Later on I'd be able to go to college and maybe some day I would be as rich as you," Giuseppe said.

So Uncle Sam smiled and promised the boy that he would give him tools and wood to build things with, and when the day came to name his favorite uncle, Giuseppe named Uncle Sam.

Uncle Joe's feelings were hurt, but he said:

"I will still come and see you, Giuseppe, and maybe some day you will change your mind."

But Uncle Sam just laughed and laughed at this. Hadn't Giuseppe named him his favorite? Giuseppe wouldn't change his mind no matter what.

So Uncle Sam gave the boy some candy and sent him to the movie and told him once in a while what a good boy he was, but Uncle Sam was a very busy man and he began to pay less and less attention to Giuseppe.

Guiseppe asked his uncle about the tools and wood he had been promised, but Uncle Sam always put him off with:

"Yes, yes, my boy, later when you grow up more. Here, have some candy and don't bother your Uncle Sam, he's very busy."

After a time Giuseppe became discontented. He was getting sick of eating candy, and the movies he saw were not very good. One night, while his Uncle Sam was away on business, Giuseppe packed up his things and ran away.

The boy went to the home of his Uncle Joe, which was on the other side of town. Uncle Joe had several other nephews living with him, and he was very strict with them, punishing them severely if they did not obey him. And there wasn't much to eat for the nephews at Uncle Joe's house.

But Giuseppe didn't find this out until it was too late. So he stayed with his Uncle Joe because he had to and Uncle Joe taught him to hate his Uncle Sam, who had now realized his mistake and lived to regret it.

Moral: Don't forget Giuseppe. —Al Hix

Law School Takes Poll

By R. Foo Giduz

Most rational action yet taken concerning the question of Negro graduate and professional school admissions is the impartial poll of the Law School on that general topic, results of which should be in today's Durham Morning Herald. . .In commenting on the vote (on this same page) Herald reporter Walter Carroll has impersonally appraised the idea and tried to prove its worth. . .Not that we expect anything of policy-shaking significance necessarily to result from this poll. . .But were the Trustees, Legislators —(and all of you)— to read any of these painstakingly ritten ballots as we have, we should have complete faith in their ability to render a just and progressive decision, not a stall.

. . .At any rate, it IS an optimistic note for tomorrow in reading the law students' answers. . .For from the UNC law school of today as always shall come the rulers of NC in but a few years. . .Check the roll of 270-odd students and note the past great names of NC: Aycocks, Vances, Swains, Royalls, and Gardners. . .Whichever way the poll went isn't especially important in this case, except to the news hounds. . .But the individual statements are mytee important. . .Maybe the sun's coming up. . .

. . .So Jimmy Wallace, general factotum faculty of Robersonville High School and perennial UNCollegiate ere this year dropped back for an unannounced inspection tour over the weekend. . .While disdaining and refusing formal comment on the state of the campus, atomic energy, and politics, "Legend" Wallace graciously dropped one pearl: "The planetarium looks good," he quoth courageously and absolutely for-the-record. . .(News Item: Next day the planetarium workers went on strike!). And just to keep another record straight. . . In recently crediting the GI pay hike to AVC, the Carouseler meant no exclusion to the independent school veterans groups over the county. . .Many like the local UVAmen, put in much campaigning time too. . .

It will probably be a surprise to Wallaceites and Anti-Anti's alike that Bill Richardson, local HWFPC chief is leaving the movement. . .And not only resigning as president of the local Wallace Club. but withdrawing as a vice-chairman of the N. C. Progressive party, and also as a member of the National Wallace-for-President committee. . .CC's view is that Bill has NOT soured on Henry Wallace. . .(Even Sen. Pepper referred to him as an unimpeachable American!).—But that he has decided the Wallace boom is not entirely the "peoples" political movement he was looking for. . .Is disgusted with many of the Red-tinged, band-wagon-riding, factionalized opportunists in the HWFT leadership who are running the campaign from their skyscraper offices down instead of from the grass roots up. . .

Stay Away From Cold Showers

New York (UP)—This country may lead the world in the number of bathtubs but many Americans don't know how to take a bath properly, according to Harold J. Reilly, for 30 years head of a health service here.

"A lot of people actually do damage to themselves by lack of proper bathing knowledge," Reilly said.

"They seem to think that sitting in a hot tub, using a lot of perfumed soap, shivering under a cold shower and drying by the brisk rubbing of a rough towel are essential parts of being clean and healthy. Actually, some of these things can hurt their health."

"Cold showers are never advisable except as a treatment by a physiotherapist for poor circulation," Reilly added. "Brisk drying overheats the body to the point where, if you go near a draft or dress immediately and go outdoors, you are likely to get some kind of muscular ache or a cold."

In The Ballot Box

Students Voted Seriously

(The article below refers to a poll concerning Negro admissions to the University Law School which the author, a reporter for the Durham Morning Herald, took by personally-mailed ballot last week. Findings of the poll are expected to appear in the Hehald this morning.

The mimeographed ballot included an explanation of the nature of the poll, and three questions generally along the following lines: (1) Would you accept as a fellow student a qualified Negro state resident who was accepted for admission as a day student; (2) as a full-time student; (3) write an essay on whether you feel North Carolina is ready to elminate educational segregation, and should UNC take the first step.

At the time this was written the author had not compiled all ballots, but wished it understood that he does not believe the final computation should be considered specifically "for" or "against" the questions. Rather he considers each individual answer a seperate and different approach to the questions and requests they be taken as such. He has written this article to emphasize what he believes to be the true meaning of the poll.

By Walter Carroll

About two weeks ago I attempted to poll the UNC Law School. On the day the ballots were due to be collected I was informed that someone or some party had spirited the ballot box away. The law students themselves, many of whom had laboriously answered the essay portion of the questionaire, were angered by the theft.

Last week I conducted the same poll. The box was locked in a law school office at night and I picked it up Friday. I have not finished counting the answers yet, because most of the ballots have been answered carefully and require careful reading. It would be dangerous to merely count them and say this many voted "yes" and this many voted "no", not taking into consideration that it would be grossly unfair to those who spent so much time answering them.

There were those who voted yes and no, and there were those who qualified their answers to great length.

Although ballots were issued to all the students in the law school, some did not answer. On the second balloting some either did not have the time, were taking bar examinations in other states, or did not care to go into it for a second time.

On the whole, however, I think the poll is successful. Those who answered no, gave clear and intelligent answers as to how they felt about the issue, as did the majority of those who answered yes. It would be hazardous to describe one answer as liberal and the other as not. There seems to be some discussion as to what the word, "liberal" means anyhow. If I am to judge, I would say all were liberal in that the students, pro and con, taking part in a poll in a democratic way expressed their convictions clearly and intelligently.

The questions answered, if studied properly would be adequate to the University Law school, stated how they felt with reservations which command respect, and most of those who did favor admitting Negroes to the law school did not ask for a landslide.

The questions answere, if studied properly would be adequate material for a Phd. dissertation, and a valuable antidote for misrepresentation.

I am in a turmoil as to which and how many of the answers to quote. They would fill the pages of an ordinary newspaper and are so complete that it will be difficult to slice out paragraphs.

The Campus Forum

What's Your Choice?

By Pete Gerns

Who would you like to see in the White House next year? In order to check on the student body's reaction to the forthcoming presidential election, Campus Forum is polling you for your presidential preference.

Below are the names of 14 official contenders for the country's highest office and of three official parties. The reader is requested to circle one of each and send the ballot to Campus Forum, c|o Daily Tar Heel, Graham Memorial, by Thursday midnight, or deposit it in the Forum box by the bulletin board in the YMCA. It will be necessary to sign these ballots to prevent duplication. The reader's vote as in the past will be kept in strictest confidence. Results of this poll will be made known through these columns as soon as tabulation is completed.

Redistricting

It Can Be Done

By Chuck Hauser

Another redistricting bill showed its ugly head yesterday afternoon in the Elections committee open hearing. This one has six districts for men living in town in contrast to the University party four-district bill and the Lindsay Tate nine-district measure.

In talking the new bill over with Joe Leary, chairman of the committee stuck with the problem, we asked if the six-unit piece of legislation was a good compromise between the four and the niner.

"Hell, no," Leary said. "The four-district bill's a compromise between the nine and six proposals!"

The only true solution to the redistricting problem was endorsed by Leary himself the other night after the Student Legislature meeting when he said that he was in favor, if it was possible, of precincting the entire student vote. Which means that with 50 legislators in office, there would be 50 districts, or precincts, each of which would have elected one man to represent them in the Legislature. That would cause a lot more campaign uproar and a lot more work for the Elections board, but it would most certainly create a helluva lot more interest on campus and off in student government here. It can be done.

"Tripe" Say The Communists

Editor:

This morning's column by Kennedy Gammage was a new low in nonsense. We who are Communists would be amused (if the over-all situation were not so serious) when we hear the old saw 'Communists don't play according to the rules and should not be accorded the usual privileges.' I should like to know if Tar Heel readers consider Kennedy Gammage's tripe 'playing by the rules.' This accusation that we Communists obey a Third International (no longer existent), or any other such organization, is sheer nonsense based on no honest research and, far from 'playing by the rules', is designed to smear any progressive movement that will not remain content under the mythical status quo."

Those who are frustrated by their inability to adjust to the crescendoing tempo of modern events might well blink amazed on their toadstools of gradualism when they hear that our own country is being inwardly corrupted by the moneyed powers. It seems impossible in a democracy. But the arrest and intimidation of Harry Mensh in Fairfield, Alabama, of Glen Taylor in Birmingham, the riots against Wallace meetings in the Midwest and in Ney Jersey, the threatening Mundt Bill—are blatant proofs of a pattern both national and international in scope, a pattern revealed early in the Taft-Hartley law and in the Truman-Doctrine-Marshall-Plan.

This pattern is crystallizing proof that there can be no lasting political democracy without a growing economic democracy. In America, our economic system is rapidly leveling what democratic posture we have achieved. This is a tragedy to which no man need submit if he has the understanding and the courage to act on it. We Communists challenge Tar Heel readers to look deeply for their facts before succumbing to the false rationalizations of the press, the moneyed powers, and all their cowardly lackeys. If their lies are to be our prescribed rules, we shall not 'play' by them, indeed

College Collumnist Drops a Few Hints On Dance Etiquette

Bowling Green, Ky.—(ACP)—A columnist of the College Heights Herald gives tips on dance etiquette.

"There are a few important rules about the cutting-in-system that everyone should know. Never cut in again the minute the girl has been snatched from you. Dance with someone else first.

"Don't argue if someone cuts in on you. Let the girl go for the minute. You can cut back later.

"Don't push, shove, grab, or deliver a knockout blow when cuttin in. A tap on the shoulder, a smile, or 'please, may I,' is enough of a signal.

"At public dance or one where girls may be unescorted, there are also several rules to remember. Be careful to see if a girl came with an escort before asking her to dance. But if she did, you should ask the escort to introduce you to her. After you've danced with an unescorted girl, you may take her back to the place you found her, thank her for the dance, and excuse yourself. Don't ever leave her standing in the middle of the floor.

"Don't try to force a name or address out of a girl. If she is unescorted and you'd like to take her home, you can tell her so, but chances are you won't make first base by trying to command the situation.

"Here's one sure tip. Don't try to keep up a steady stream of conversation while you dance. You don't have to talk at all. Act as though you were so entranced with the girl, the music and the movement that words fail you. Your dancing will be better, too.

Men's Council

Carolina Code of Honor

(This statement of Carolina's Spirit of Living is the first in a series of five articles prepared by the Men's council and designed to asquaint the student body more thoroughly with its self-imposed Honor and Campus codes and the manner in which they are upseld by its duly elected representatives. This first statement was drawn up by the Student council of 1938-39.)

The principles upon which Carolina student government is based are a way of living. As the creed of University life it stands for the individual assumption of an active policy of honesty and fairness, of gentlemanly conduct. So keenly is this spirit felt that it has become a social as well as personal responsibility. We Carolina students have pledged never to lower our standard of honor, and we have set up among our number student councils to which we send those who do not respect our self-imposed code of life.

To think and act the truth is the heart of our way of life. The Honor principle states: "A student is on his honor not to lie, cheat, or steal." This is a personal, living principle that we strive to live, and its practice is its own reward.

A second self-imposed and self-maintained standard in our University life is the Campus Code. Simply stated it is: "A student is on his honor always to conduct himself as a gentleman." Listing offences, it leaves its interpretation broadly to the student and relies upon Carolina's long-standing traditions to mark the channel.

The Honor system can be, and is, easily perverted in the minds of many people. The idea that reporting an offender is spying and tattling, is a relic of childhood when reporting to an external authority was to "break faith with the gang." Here at Carolina the "authority" is self-imposed. We report to an internal authority, to fellows whom we elect to do our bidding. With this change of circumstances, not to report it to "break faith with the gang" in a larger and more important sense. We accept the fact that we have entered a new life in a self-determining democratic society where we have responsibilities both to ourselves and to our fellow men. To retain the freedom which we now know or this campus, to help ourselves and our fellows learn and live honestly, to maintain our self-imposed standards, we must at all times act promptly to prevent and correct violations of this trust.

Golfers Meet Wake Forest At Hope Valley; Baseballers Battle Deacons

Netmen Prep for SC Tourney; Seixas Returns From Illness

Coach John Kenfield's tennis squad, after finishing the regular dual season with a 20-1 record, began preparations yesterday for the Southern conference championship tournament to be held here Thursday through Saturday. Vic Seixas, number one player for the Tar Heel netters who has missed three weeks of play due to a case of glandular fever, returned to the courts for the first time since his illness yesterday and will bolster the Blue and White squad in the tournament which William and Mary is favored to cop.

Six conference teams have thus far announced their desire to enter the tourney. Topping the list is defending champion William and Mary. N. C. State, The Citadel, and Maryland round out the list. Davidson, perhaps the number three team in the circuit, will not be present at the tournament due to a conflict in examinations.

Four or eight of the top players will be seeded. If Seixas rounds into shape and plays in the event, he may be seeded number one, followed by Fred Kovaleski and Tut Bartzen. Had Davidson entered, their top star, Bo Roddey, would have been awarded the fourth spot.

Last year Seixas downed Kovaleski in the semi-finals, only to lose to Gardner Larned, William and Mary ace, in the finals. In his semi-final round, Larned defeated Bartzen, and went ahead to take the Conference title. Larned will not be playing with the Indians this year, for he is now playing for the Rollins college team in Florida.

Drawings for pairings and seedings will be made here Wednesday evening.

Monogram Plans

A Big Four Monogram softball tournament to be sponsored jointly by Duke, Carolina, State and Wake Forest, will be held on the Wolfpack campus this Friday afternoon local monogram president Bill Pritchard announced yesteraday.

The event is being backed by the Monogram groups of the four schools in order to promote relations between the schools in all athletics. The four clubs are planning a joint organization for this purpose and the event will be an attempt to see what degree of success can be obtained.

All-star groups will represent the four schools and top-flight competition is expected. The Duke softballers many of which will play Friday, won the Big Four intramural softball title at Duke recently.

Following the contests there will be a barbecue for the lettermen and their dates at neighboring Pullen park after which all players will be guests of the State monogramers at their first annual Red-White spring football game.

BADMINTON PLAY

Doris Beasley, representing Spencer in the badminton tournament walked off with all honors last week in defeating Pat Winslow, Town girl, 11-4, 11-2, to become champion. Doris reached the finals by defeating Scotty Dellinger, and Pat climbed the heights in her win over Bunny Davis.

Linksmen Seeking Seventh Triumph; Ward Vs. Palmer

By Billy Carmichael, III

Carolina's dethroned Conference golf champions will attempt to start back up the ladder this afternoon when they tee off against the potent Wake Forest linksmen at the Hope Valley country club. The first foursome will go out at 1:30.

The Tar Heels finished fourth in the loop tourney at Pinehurst Saturday, behind Duke, Wake Forest, and State, and will be out today to prove that performance was in somewhat of the nature of an off-day.

Feature Match

The feature match of the afternoon will pit the tournament's medalist and runnerup against each other in one of the top tests of the season. The medalist, Arnold Palmer of the Deacons, will be at one No. 1 post to face the runnerup, local Harvey Ward, at the other. Palmer edged Ward by one stroke in finishing with a 74-71-145 total to his opponent's 76-70-146 card.

The Tarboro Tarter defeat Palmer in match play earlier in the season in the quarter-finals of the North-South amateur which Ward went on to win. Holin' Harvey won that one 4 and 3 in 36 holes.

The rest of the match should be of equal interest all the way down the line. Coach Chuck Erickson will probably finish out the rest of the Tar Heel lineup with Jack Brantley at No. 2, Bob Cox at No. 3, Harvey Oliver at No. 4, Frank Brooks at No. 5, and Roy McKenzie at No. 6.

Facing Locals

Facing the Tar Heels will be the freshman power of the Deacons which includes such promising stars as Dave Warsham, brother of National Open champion, Lou Warsham. The Deacons have beaten all comers this year including Duke, while losing only a return engagement to the Wolfpack of State college.

The Tar Heels will be seeking their seventh win of the season against two losses to Duke and Michigan. They hold wins over Harvard, Williams, Georgetown, Davidson, Virginia and State.

Vinnie DiLorenzo Chosen to Hurl Today As Locals Seek Third Win Over Deacons

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels move into a stiff schedule of Big Four games this week by facing Wake Forest's Deacons in a vital loop contest schedule for Emerson field this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Tar Heels, who currently pace the Big Four circuit with a 4-2 won-lost record, face all three of the other teams in the circuit—Duke and State in addition to Wake Forest. The Wolfpack will perform here on Thursday and Duke will be host to the Tar Heels on Saturday in Durham.

The meeting between Carolina and Wake Forest will be the third of the season between those two clubs, and each of the previous games has turned out to be a real thriller. The Chapel Hill outfit was victorious on each of those occasions, with a 1-0 win behind Frank Robinson's superlative tossing and 5-4 triumph in another great battle played in Wake Forest.

Vinne DiLorenzo, Carolina southpaw who hasn't seen duty against the Deacons this season, is slated to take the mound for Carolina this afternoon. DiLorenzo's last starting effort resulted in a 1-0 win over State, achieved on ten and two-thirds innings of no-hit pitching. He fared rather poorly in a relief turn against Duke and pitched only one inning in Carolina's nothern tour last weekend. With ample rest, he should be in top form this afternoon.

Fabulous Harry Nicholas, Wake Farest's much-publicized pitcher, may possibly get the starting nod from the Deacons this afternoon. The Tar Heel batters, who have read innumerable press clippings on Nicholas' merits say they are hoping he does pitch. Nicholas' last turn on the hill was in the Deacons' 9-0 win over State last Wednesday.

Moe Bauer, who traditionally seems to do the hurling against the Tar Heels, actually is in line to pitch again today, since Nicholas has hurled more recently than has Bauer. But Deac coach Frank Novosel may elect to throw his ace Nicholas into the fray in an effort to stop the pace-setting Carolinians.

Carolina could increase its first place margin in the Big Four to one and one-half games with a victory over Wake. Defeat would cut the lead to a half game.

Hits Plentiful In Mural Loops

The batters unleased a murderous assault against the opposing pitchers in yesterday's intramural softball play to win almost every game with heavy stick work.

In only two out of the 15 games played did the winners fail to rack up at least 10 runs to take the win.

Phi Delt no. 2 and Phi Gam no. 2 captured 8-3 and 8-4 victories over Sigma Nu. no. 1 and DKE no. 2 respectively in the closest games.

Phi Gams Win

Phi Gam no. 3 walked off with the batting laurels by battering DKE no. 2 to the tune of 20-0. In the only other standout of the day, Delt Sig no, 1 defeated Phi Kap no. 2, 14-0.

Two seesaw battles were taken by KA no. 2 and Lamb Chi no. 1 over Chi Phi no. 1 and Sig Chi no. 2 by scores of 18-16 and 18-15.

The Misfits and Graham no 2, both of whom were unbeaten up to yesterday, met in domitory league one play and the Misfits protected their victory skein by pounding out a 17-1 decision.

Presbyterian Junior College Gets Win Over Carolina Jayvees, 4-3, at Maxton

By Larry Fox

Maxton, May 10 — Presbyterian Junior College's baseballers came through with a single run in the last half of the ninth inning here this afternoon to take a thrilling 4-3 triumph over the University of North Carolina Jayvees.

Lefty Bill McGinn, Carolina's top-ranking mound man, was the victim of the late inning Presbyterian uprising. The Tar Babies were sporting a 3-2 lead in the eighth inning, and this margin appeared sufficient behind McGinn's tight pitching. But the home club managed single tallies in both the eighth and ninth frames to win.

Presbyterian forced its winning run across in the last half of the ninth on three singles and a walk. Andy Rowe, fireball pitcher of the Presbyterian staff, came through as a pinch hitter, gaining life on first with an infield single. Teammate Coates forced him at second for one out. Herb Know was walked by the tiring McGinn to place runners on first and second, and Joe Siceloss' single loaded the bases. Carolina got the second out of the inning with a force out at home, but a single off the bat of Buchannon produced the run that meant the game.

Brookshire, Carolina shortstop, led the batting for the afternoon with three hits in four trips to the plate.

The score by innings:

Carolina	020 010 000	3 13 2
PJC	002 000 011	4 10 2

McGinn and Walch: Smith and Hodge.

'Henri III' Earns $85 for France

Bill Baskin, president of Le Cercle Francais, announced yesterday that a check in the amount of $85 was sent to American Aid to France last week. The money was obtained by selling programs at the presentation of the romantic-drama of Alexander Dumas "Henri III et Sa Cour" which the club presented on April 22 and 23 in the Playmaker theater under the sponsorship of Graham Memorial.

The money will go to the children of Lorient, Britanny, as part of the $60,000,000 needed to help the 230,000,000 hungry children in war empoverised countries of Europe and Asia. Forty-five nations are cooperating in this United Nations appeal for children.

Former UNC Professor says:

(Howard Mumford Jones, UNC English professor from 1920-26, and once Dean of the Hardard Graduate School, writes of Henry Wallace's new book, Toward World Peace*):*

"One may be for Henry Wallace or one may be against him, but it seems to me that for the sake of honesty in public life one must not persistently misrepresent him. Here is a man who has been Vice-President of the United States, Secretary of Agriculture, and Secretary of Commerce; who has headed numerous bureaus, commissions and committees; who has a wide acquaintance with the peoples of the world and their cultures; and who has been and is a successful business man, writer, editor and public speaker. It seems incredible that intelligent Americans should declare, in the face of this career, that Mr. Wallace is dreamy-minded.

"This book ought to end this Wallace legend. Few candidates for the presidency in our history have presented more facts and figures that Mr. Wallace does in this book. The writing is simple and clear; I find in it nothing apocalyptic, it is a book filled with intelligent interpretation and good judgment."

Listen to Henry Wallace tonight.

The Merchants Association of Chapel Hill wishes the goodwill of each and every student of the University. During the past several years much mis-information has been given the students in regard to the activities and intentions of our group. With these facts in mind we wish to give the student group certain information in regard to the so-called Umstead Act around which practically all of this discussion has centered.

REASONS FOR THE PASSAGE OF THE UMSTEAD ACT:

1. On January 1st, 1939 The University of North Carolina was engaged in the retail mercantile business on a large scale. Coal, electrical appliances and fixtures, gas appliances and fixtures, building materials, plumbing supplies, men's clothing and notions, novelties and other articles too numerous to mention were sold over the counter. In addition to the over-the-counter trade practically any article of merchandise could be purchased from catalogues through the Book Exchange or the Franklin Street store.

2. On January 1st, 1939 there were five store buildings vacant on Franklin Street between Strowd's corner and the post office. Tax values were on the decline and that meant decrease in income for both the county and the town of Chapel Hill. It was a recognized fact that no merchant, with the possible exception of a druggist, could compete with the University that paid no rent, no taxes and had water, sewer and electric services at cost.

3. On January 1st, 1939 the entire profit from the merchandising operations of the University went to the general fund of the State of North Carolina and not to either the students, the faculty or the University.

4. On January 1st, 1939 it was generally known that plans had been discussed to expand the mercantile operations of the University that would have eliminated all merchants in downtown Chapel Hill.

5. On January 1st, 1939 the University was the object of attack by the North Carolina Merchants Association. At their annual meeting in the summer of 1938 they unanimously passed a resolution condemning the retail mercantile operations by the units of the Greater University and especially the unit at Chapel Hill. This was due to the fact that the operations at Chapel Hill were more widespread than at the other institutions. Similar resolutions had been passed at each annual session of the association for a number of years.

6. On January 1st, 1939 there were alumni of the University who were refusing to send their sons to the University due to resentment at the University engaging in the retail mercantile business. This was likewise true of non-alumni.

Thus, you will see that on January 1st, 1939 the University was engaging in the retail mercantile business on a large scale, thus driving individual merchants out of business. This automatically cut tax values and took from both county and town revenue sorely needed for necessary services. At the same time this retail merchandising was building up a wall of resentment on the part of more than thirty thousand merchants throughout the state. It was also violating one of the cardinal principles of democratic government, that of individual enterprise. All this was being done, not for the benefit of the students, not for the benefit of the University, but for the sole benefit of the general fund of the State of North Carolina.

No Agreement Yet In Morehead Walkout

Elections Committee Approves Redistricting Bill

BEFORE THE DEADLINE of the threatened national railroad trike, railroad stations throughout the nation were jammed with passengers anxious to get home. Top, crowd waits for gates to open in New York's Grand Central Station. Bottom, Mrs. Reynold Gualco and her son, Jeffrey, read notice at San Franciso station of impending rail strike. New Measure Calls For Five Districts For Town Students

The Elections committee of the Student Legislature got down to business yesterday afternoon and emerged with a new redistricting bill all packaged up for presentation to the Legislature in its Thursday night session.

In the last of a series of open hearings on the subject the group finally chose a measure calling for five separate districts for male voters living in town. The proposal was drawn up by Joe Leary, chairman of the committee, and Al Lowenstein.

The five-district move is substantially the same as the University party four-unit measure, except that Carrboro has been set aside as a separate district, on the condition that at least 100 men students are living there when elections roll around next year.

Other outlying districts, including Burlington, Graham and Greensboro, are to remain in town district 3, which takes in the northwestern section of Chapel Hill north of Cameron avenue and west of Old Fraternity row, with the exception of those living north of Franklin street and east of North Columbia (district 4) and those living in houses facing Cameron avenue (district 2).

District 1 in town remains the same — Victory Village and Pittsboro road trailer camp.

Another decision made by the Elections committee yesterday divided the women's dorm district along geographical lines to place Alderman, Kenan and McIver into district 1 and Carr Spencer, Smith and Archer house into district 2.

Two redistricting bills killed in committee were Gran Childress's six-district measure and Lindsay Tate's nine-district proposal.

The bill will be the second to come onto the Legislature floor this year for consideration. The last one passed during the winter quarter, but was vetoed by President Tom Eller. A similar action took place during the spring quarter of last year, when President Dewey Dorsett vetoed a Legislature-approved bill just two weeks before spring general elections.

SP CAUCUS

A meeting of all Student party legislators will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 2 of Graham Memorial.

Dance Friday To Be in Honor Of CCUN Meet

Roy Cole and his orchestra will provide music for a dance Friday night in the main lounge of Graham Memorial in honor of delegates and speakers attending the International conference of the CCUN there Friday and Saturday.

Sponsored by Graham Memorial, the dance will be free to the entire student body, form of dress is optional. The dance is scheduled from 9 to 1 o'clock.

Cole's orchestra has played for many student functions, as well as engagements throughout North Carolina and neighboring states. The group has also made several recordings of Carolina songs and popular arrangements.

During intermission a receiving line will be formed to give students, whether they are attending the conference or not, an opportunity to meet the speakers and officers of the conference.

Principal speakers will be Lt. Col. A. L. Cox, from the office of Air Secretary Symington in Washington; Dr. Jan-Albert Goris, high commissioner of information for Belgium in this hemisphere; and Harding F. Bancroft, associate chief of the division of International Security Affairs of the U. S. State Department.

Representatives from five state districts will attend the conference to make plans for CCUN activities during the coming year and for the New York Intercollegiate Institute of the United Nations in June.

Town Men's Group Slates Election

The re-organized Town Men's association will meet at 4:30 this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge 1 of Graham Memorial to elect officers, pass on a constitution and by-laws, and plan a party for all members, according to John Van Hecke, spokesman for the organization.

"All students who live off the campus, and do not live in fraternity houses are invited to join the association," Van Hecke stated yesterday. "We welcome all fraternity men as long as they do not reside in their respective houses," he continued.

Clothing Drive Continues; CRIL Sponsoring Project

Posters and signs bearing the slogan "If You Care, Share" dot the campus today as the CRIL-sponsored clothing drive for overseas relief goes into its fourth day.

Large boxes have been placed in all dorms, sorority and fraternity houses for collection purposes, and room to room canvassing is being carried out by dorm solicitors.

Charlie Enman, chairman of the drive on campus, said yesterday that it was hoped the campaign would bring in nearly half a car-load of much needed clothing, bedding, shoes and other articles scarce in Europe.

A similar drive was held by CRIL the last of January in which over one-fourth of a car-load was collected by the town and University, the majority being from the latter.

Collection boxes will be picked up next Monday and the clothing carried to one of the local churches for packing. All clothing collected throughout the country will be sent to Church World Service headquarters in New Winsor, Maryland and from there articles will be shipped to Germany, Austria, Italy, Greece, Finland, Poland, China and Japan. Distribution will be strictly on the basis of need without regard for race, creed, color, or politics.

North Carolina led the nation in all such drives for 1947 and thus far this year is still way out front.

Mr. Claude Shotts, secretary of the YMCA, saw a great deal of the clothing distributed last year while traveling in Europe with the American Friends Service Committee. Mr. Shotts said the bulk of the clothing went to refugee camps, uprooted peoples, prisoners of war, and people bombed out by incindery bombs which completely destroyed all clothing.

Some of the articles most needed overseas are clothing (all kinds for all ages), Bibles, games, school supplies, bedding, shoes (tied in pairs) galoshes, linens, bar soap and other toilet supplies.

Judge Sewell Will Address Law Luncheon

North Carolina Supreme Court Justice A. A. F. Sewell will speak at a luncheon of the Phi Alpha Delta fraternity in the Carolina Inn today at 1 o'clock.

The law school fraternity is sponsoring a regular series of luncheons at which well-known legal men will speak, according to President J. W. Alexander. An initiation of new members is also scheduled for the meeting.

Sewell, who has served on the Supreme Court since 1938, was a member of the class of 1889 here. He practiced law in Sanford and served several terms in the General Assembly in the State Senate. In 1935 he was appointed State Attorney General by Governor Ehringhaus.

Strike Enters Its Third Day Today; Picketing Goes On

By Jim Dickinson

The general strike at Morehead planetarium and other J. A. Jones Construction company projects in this area moves into its third day this morning and as yet no agreement between union and company officials has been reached.

E. M. Kratt, vice-president of the Jones company, reported last night that "nothing new has developed" which would alter the strike.

Union Leaders Meet

He said it was his understanding that union leaders were meeting at the A. F. of L. Labor Temple in Durham last night but that no company officials were participating.

P. M. Taylor, Durham building trades union official, said after last night's meeting that "everything remains the same" and indicated that the next move is up to the company.

Involves 325 Workers

The strike, called by the Durham Building Construction Trades council, involves 125 union workers at the planetarium and about 200 workers at the Liggett and Myers project in Durham.

Iron workers, hoisting engineers, and cement finishers are striking for 25 to 37 1-2 cent pay hikes and other skilled workers are on sympathy strike. Only unskilled non-union workers remain at work at Jones company projects.

Refuses Wage Increase

Union officials in Durham said the strike occurred because the Jones company refused to increase wages to a point which would equal that being paid by local contractors in Durham and other cities of the area.

A report last night showed another walkout occurred yesterday at the $3,000,000 project at Neuse in Wake county. Union men left their jobs after a deadline had been reached in which the Jones company had failed to meet the terms of union officials.

Picketing Continues

Pickets continued marching at the planetarium and other Jones projects yesterday and gave word that they intend to remain on strike until what they consider a fair wage is installed.

"We can hold out as long, if not longer, than the Jones company," said a spokesman for the group.

A picket at the planetarium project carried over his shoulders a placard which read, "This job is unfair to organized labor."

Other Projects Affected

Jones projects also being affected by the walkout include the library addition and physics building at Duke university, and other construction units in Charlotte and Greensboro.

The union is seeking a 25 cents per hour increase for workers now making $1.75 hourly, and an increase of 37 1-2 cents an hour for those who normally make $1.25 and $1.50 per hour.

Company spokesmen said yesterday that they had offered to meet the union demands halfway but that the offer was refused.

QUARTERLY MEETING

A meeting of the staff of the Literary Quarterly will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 3 according to an announcement by the board of editors.

Caribbean Conference Starts Here Tonight

[illegible] in international relations of the Department of Political Science will open their two-day Caribbean conference tonight at 7:30 with a banquet at the Carolina Inn in honor of the [illegible] participating delegates at Chapel Hill for the conference, all intimate with the political, economic, or social affairs of the Caribbean colonies, dependencies and republics.

The purpose of this program is to exchange information and viewpoints among the peoples of the Caribbean states.

[illegible] Cleveland, student chairman, will act as master of ceremonies. Miss L. A. Armstrong [illegible] the Division of Dependent Areas of the U. S. Department of State, who will deliver the opening address, will be introduced by Professor C. Frazer, faculty advisor. Miss Armstrong will discuss the [illegible] future alternatives of the dependent areas of the Caribbean: [illegible] trusteeships, or independent states.

Following the banquet, a series of color slides will be shown and narrated by Victor H. Gibean of the Virgin islands, depicting the geography and native life unique to the Virgin islands of St. Croix and St. Thomas. Entertainment after the banquet will be furnished by the Sigma Chi Sextette.

In addition to Miss Armstrong and Gibean, the program will bring together such outstanding delegates as E. E. Sabben-Clare, British representative on the Caribbean commission; Dr. L. A. Peters, agricultural counselor to the Netherlands embassy; Dr. John L. Taggart, Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, U. S. Department of Agriculture; Commander Donald W. Gladney, Office of Naval Operations (International Affairs) U. S. Department of Navy; Henri Claudel, attache to the French embassy.

Dr. E. C. Collins of the Department of Economics of State college will participate as well as all local faculty members, among them Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt, director of the Intra-American institute here; E. D. Turner, department of Romance Languages; Dr. Will C. Ryan, Department of Education; Mr. Keener C. Frazer, professor of international affairs and political science and director of the Southern Council of International Relations; Dr. Fredrico Gil, professor of Latin American affairs and political science.

The panel discussions tomorrow afternoon from 2:30 to 4:30 in the Roland Parker lounges of Graham Memorial as well as the open meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Gerrard hall will emphasize student participation in the discussions and the South and its relations to the Caribbean islands.

Those students, faculty members, and townspeople wishing to attend the banquet should contact any member of the conference committee in 214 Caldwell immediately as the places reserved for the dinner are limited.

WAYS AND MEANS

The Ways and Means committee of the Student Legislature will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial according to chairman Len Butt.

Groves Group Talks About Kinsey Report

The famous Kinsey report, "The Sexual Behavior of the Human Male," came in for a spirited discussion here last night when delegates to the 11th Groves Conference on the Conservation of Marriage and the Family joined in a roundtable on the implications of the report in social research and welfare. The session was led by Dr. Paul W. Shankweiler of the University of Maryland Department of Sociology.

General concensus was that, although the Kinsey report fell down in a number of aspects, including loopholes in analysis of data collected and in the selection of interviewers, the report and Dr. Kinsey's subsequent reports offer a challenge to social workers, counsellors and others who deal with human problems.

Dr. Shankweiler said that, regardless of any criticism from any quarter of the Kinsey report, "it is a worthwhile work if for no other reason but that it shows us the futility of legal and moral codes regimenting people in one pattern. The big hullabaloo being made over the report," he said, "shows the need for bringing the basic facts of crime, delinquency and abnormality out in the open. With the facts that Dr. Kinsey has presented, the social scientists, social workers, counsellors and all those whose work is concerned with human behavior can go ahead with the job of trying to correct and improve."

Other speakers on yesterday's program of the conference which today will move to North Carolina colege in Durham for the final session, included Dr. W. Critz George, head of the Department of Anatomy of the University medical school, and John

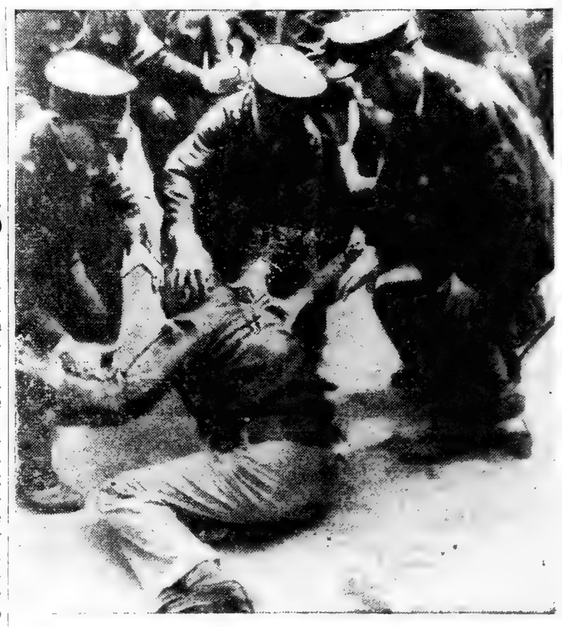
Di Will Discuss Negro Admissions At Meet Tonight

Students will argue admission of Negroes to graduate schools run by the State for the first time publicly tonight when the Dialectic Senate meets at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West.



A bill to be presented at that time, when all Di members and all other interested students are invited to discuss, would favor accepting Negro's applications for four specific reasons.

First, the graduate schools provided by the State especially for Negroes are not academically equal to white schools, according to the Senate measure.

Second, the proposal maintains that graduate schools such as the University's are capable of handling Negro students.

Refusing Negroes as graduate students to these schools, the bill asserts, is an act of rank discrimination to forbid equal educational rights.

Finally, such Supreme Court decisions as Missouri ex. rel. Gaines vs. Canada and the Oklahoma case are cited as evidence that discrimination is a violation of the United States Constitution.

DURING ONE OF MANY RIOTS staged by Koreans in Kobe, Japan, against the closing of Korean schools, a demonstrator is felled by Jap police. The outbreaks followed announcement by the Jap Minister of Education that all private institutions would have to be licensed. The Koreans declared this was an effort to rob them of their culture. Law School Approves Negroes As Day Students

Poll Conducted by Durham Herald Reveals 59 Per Cent Favor Move

Results of a poll of the University Law School, conducted by the Durham Morning Herald, show that 59 per cent of those participating in the survey favor the admission of Negroes to the Law School as day students.

Of the 71 favoring day students, 46 said they favor the admission of Negroes either as day or full-time students, while the remaining 25 qualified their answers with the stipulation that Negroes be admitted as day students only.

44 Vote Against

Of the 119 students polled, 44 were against admission of Negroes, either as day students or full-time students. Four of the 119 made no comment. There are 274 students enrolled in the University Law School according to the student directory.

The poll grew out of a recent news story, released in The Daily Tar Heel, concerning two law students of North Carolina college who have filed applications for admission here.

Non-Admission Understood

Walter Carroll, reporter for the Durham Morning Herald and conductor of the poll, reported that before the poll was conducted it was understood that Negroes could not be admitted to the University without proper action on the part of the State Legislature, and it also was understood that in the event the poll was conducted, the results would not necessarily reflect the attitude of the entire student body.

The questions, addressed individually were, "Would you accept as a fellow student an adequately qualified Negro resident of this State if he applied and was accepted for entrance to the University of North Carolina Law School as a Day Student? (One who would not necessarily eat or sleep on the campus.)"

Essay Question

The second question was the same as applied to a full time student. The third, an essay question, read, "Do you feel that North Carolina is ready to eliminate segregation in its educational institutions? Do you think the University of North Carolina should take the first step?"

A preface to the questionaire informed students that the poll was not prompted by any political group and would not be used for purposes of propaganda.

On the even of the date of the first collection, Carroll was informed that the ballot box had disappeared. It is not known who took the box. When the second poll was conducted last week, the ballot box was locked in an office at night and during the lunch period.

At the time of the second collection six students had not opened their ballots. Two were taking bar examinations in South Carolina, two had graduated; three had withdrawn from the law school and quite a few others did not answer because they had devoted considerable time on the first ballot and did not want to take part in it a second time.

Essays Express Views

One student said, "I wrote you a 45-minute essay on the first go-round, but I didn't care to the second time." According to Car-

Good Job, Mr. Carroll

Commendation is due Walter Carroll, staff writer for the Durham Morning Herald, for his report yesterday on his poll of University Law school students upon the question of whether they favor admission of qualified Negro students to the Law school.

Mr. Carroll did not attempt to draw conclusions from the poll nor did he allow his own opinions to color his phrasing of the story. He simply tabulated the results of the poll and gave examples of the answers on both sides of the questions. It was a complete and unbiased account of the facts.

Mr. Carroll did a good job of reporting.

A Beginning Here?

The issue of segregation of the Negro in the South is attracting more and more pubic attention in the Nation and in North Carolina. This week a poll of the 274 students in the University Law school showed that 71 of the 119 who replied favor admission of qualified Negroes as day students in the Law school. As far as bringing about admission of Negroes, the poll meant nothing, since at present only the State legislature has power to authorize their admission. The poll was, however, indicative of a progressive trend in the thinking of the younger generation of North Carolina.

The issue is no longer one of whether segregation should be continued or should not be continued. Eventual elimination of segregation is inevitable. It is inevitable because the issue is essentially one of right and wrong, and history has shown that although issues which are fundamentally right or wrong according to the general belief of mankind may be ignored and supressed for centuries, the right is always dominant in the end.

Almost everyone in this country claims to be an American. A great many claim to be Christians. There is no way in which we can compromise a belief in Christian principles and democratic ideals with a belief in complete and permanent segregation.

Everyone who has faced the issue squarely realizes that whether he likes it or not, segregation will in time be abolished. The problem facing the South is what plan to use in abolishing it. Segregation cannot be eliminated overnight. An attempt to legislate it immediately out of existtence would bring about results comparable to those following the emancipation proclamation and the Civil War. Its elimination must be an evolutionary process geared to the speed with which both Negroes and whites adjust themselves to the changes.

A firm stand upon the "status quo", however, will never set this gradual process into motion. A beginning must be made somewhere. Men on the educational level of university graduate schools would seem best qualified to make this beginning. A majority of the students polled in the Law school here are willing to make the beginning. We believe a majority of students in the other graduate schools are also willing.

North Carolina has long prided herself on being a progressive state — a leader in the South. On the issue of segregation she should once more assert her leadership. Her State legislature can do this by amending state laws to admit qualified Negroes as day students in the graduate schools of this university.

Smart Public Relations

The chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants association has adopted a smart public relations idea for promoting local interest in the activities of the two communities. It is the making of a documentary film depicting business, civic, religious, agricultural industrial and social activities of Chapel Hill, Carrboro and the University.

Already in process of filming, the movie will be completed in about three weeks. It will then be shown in a local theater. A 16 mm copy of the film will also be made for showing at alumni association meetings elsewhere.

Since most residents of the community, particularly students at the University, have only a limited perspective of the many aspects of Chapel Hill life, the film should arouse much interest and contribute beneficially to a better understanding of the activities which combine to make Chapel Hill what it is.

Merry-Go-Round

Arabs Plan May 16 Fight

By Drew Pearson

Washington — Arab leaders have been meeting secretly to plan for the invasion of Palestine, and some of them are not too happy. They don't particularly trust King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan, the central figure of the proposed invasion.

King Farouk of Egypt, Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and the Syrian government fear Abdullah will promote his own greater-Syrian ambitions by annexing part of Palestine for himself and then quit. These fears were increased by a recent secret meeting at Amman between Abdullah and his nephew, Prince Abdul-Ilah, the Regent of Iraq. Arab leaders have also got wind of a secret British understanding with Abdullah, giving Trans-Jordan a permanent corridor to the Mediterranean, in the vicinity of Gaza.

Final agreement on Arab invasion plans was reached at a secret meeting at Serka, Trans-Jordan, on April 23, attended by representatives of all the Arab states and the Arab higher committee, including the Mufti. The main points of the agreement were:

The invasion army to be known as the "Arab League Palestine Army of Liberation." It will comprise the Arab Legion, supplemented by contingents from the regular forces of Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, and Saudi Arabia. The contingent from each country will number between 2,000 and 3,500 men. In addition, Egypt and Iraq agreed to supply air force units.

Azdullah was appointed Supreme commander, with a general from each Arab state and two Palestine Arab commanders under him. General Ismail Safurt, British-trained commander-in-chief of the volunteer "liberation army," and Fawzi Al Kawkji, present field commander of Arab forces are to be absorbed in the new headquarters at Jericho. Abdullah and the Mufti have already moved to Jericho. The Mufti's assignment is to watch Abdullah.

Arab states agreed at the secret meeting to finance the operation in proportion to their national resources, not in proportion to their contingents. Egypt is to bear the largest share; Iraq, which gets most of its money from England, is next.

D-Day was set for May 16, on which day a Palestine Arab Provisional government is to be proclaimed and recognized by the Arab governments.

One significant statement at the meeting was made by the grand Mufti, who interpreted the State Department's and United Nations' failure to become alarmed at previous Arab aggression as a guarantee they would not become excited over the invasion.

If the United States or the United Nations stiffened its attitude, however, it was agreed that Arab strategy might have to be changed.

Note—Since then, Arab leaders are reported worried over the Jews' ability to defend themselves. This may affect their ardor for invasion.

THE HAWAIIAN STATEHOOD BILL, which passed the House by a big majority, was secretly scuttled 7 to 5 by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs committee. Republican Sen. Guy Cordon of Oregon and Democratic Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney of Wyoming led the fight for making Hawaii the 49th state, but were overridden behind closed doors by Senators Hugh Butler of Nebraska, the committee chairman, Eugene Millikin of Colorado, and other Republicans.

However, here is the pay-off. After voting down the statehood bill, the same senators decided on another congressional junket to Hawaii—the 14th in the last five years—this time to investigate alleged Communism in the islands.

Butler and GOP colleagues apparently were more interested in getting a vacation on the sands of Waikiki at the expense of taxpayers than in granting Hawaii's rightful claim to statehood.

Men's Council

Honor Violations

When a student violates the Honor or Campus Codes, both of which he agrees to uphold when he enters the University, his breach of faith with the Student Body must be reported to the representatives of that Student Body so that proper action may be taken.

Since a student's honor is one of the strongest foundations of his character, and consequentsly is of very great concern to him, he should feel that it is his duty to himself and to his classmates to report himself if he violates this honor. When a man turns himself in to his council, he demonstrates forcibly that he is fully aware of the wrong he has committed and that he is willing to accept the punishment called for by his action. He realizes that he has broken the rules laid down by the society of which he is an integral part.

If a student sees a man violating one of these self-imposed codes, he should inform a member of his council so that some action may be taken on behalf of the injured Student Body. When the student cannot on his own contact a member of the council, he can ask his instructor or the Dean of Men for aid in arranging a meeting with a council member to discuss the matter.

The matter of a violation remains entirely in the hands of the students throughout the whole procedure because the violation is one against the Student Body and, therefore, is handled by representatives of that Student Body, which expects the co-operation of every man and woman at Carolina.

Write Away

If War Should Come

Editor:

Wish to extend my warmest and most sincerest praises to "C. L." who wrote the editorial in today's DTH on the anniversary of VE day. Doubtless many of the people here on and off campus weren't even aware that today was the anniversary of the first surrender in this last war to end all wars.

"C. L." made many good points in his determination to put forth to the DTH's readers that if another war should come (God forbid) the only persons to blame are ourselves. The veteran today, underneath perhaps, doesn't want to have his name brought up as if he was a tin god that "saved the world from destruction" but rather as a citizen that did his bit to keep Democracy alive in his kids' hearts for the future.

The guys that won this war not yet completely forgotten in many hearts and minds, are over there asking us to see to it that they aren't disturbed by the sounds of shell fire again as they receive the eternal sleep they so rightly deserve. They did "buy a piece of peace" it is true, but the price they had to pay for it should not be advertised on the peace market again; and it will not if we all look at the guy in the mirror and say that he is the only guy that can prevent it, so let's get to it and see to it that it doesn't happen again.

Where Is My Uniform?

Editor:

The American people, acting through their Congressional members, are about to institute conscription. This is being adopted because, it is argued, the national security is being endangered.

The national security, as I understand it, means the security of all and each of the 140 million citizens. If this is true, then the security of each is being threatened equally and its defense should be borne equally insofar as possible.

Obviously all the 140 million can not go into the army. But two things those not conscripted can share—the financial burden and the "coercive" burden.

All will be placed on the basis of the conscripted private. Each of us will receive that which the War Department needs to feed, clothe, shelter the individual conscript plus 50 (or 75) dollars monthly, whatever the case may be. This is sharing the financial burden.

The government must likewise be given the power to place each one of us in the job that government officials believe will contribute most to the defense of the national security just as government officials place the conscript wherever is thought best. This is the "coercive" part and all salaries will be that referred to above.

This is the democratic sharing of the threat to the national security. It should be adopted immediately.

Mundt Bill Not For Us?

By Bill Robertson

After we have gotten it clear in our minds what is attainable, what is within our grasp—and in our life-time—the next step is to fight for it—consciously and resolutely, to stand up and be counted!

In this connection the latest attempt by the un-American Activities Committee to put over the un-American program of Forrestal and his big business associates on the home front deserves our attention.

A bill—known as the Mundt Bill (H. R. 5852)—to outlaw the Communist Party has been cooked up. First, we should like to repeat the question which we put before the Philosophical Assembly the other night. What is the essential difference between the out-lawing of the Communist Party in the United States and similar moves as they have occurred in Hitler Germany, Fascist Italy, Tojo's Japan, and Franco Spain? Now let us look at the bill concretely.

The first thing to be noticed about the bill is that it does not identify the Communist Party by name. Instead it declares the activities of any Communist political organization a menace to the U. S. (The attorney-general is to decide what constitutes a Communist political organization!) The bill also specifies that members of such organizations should register with the Justice Department and that members of such organizations will face prison for terms up to 10 years. (Should I register or shouldn't I? — what a choice!)

In order to make clear that all decent Americans would be affected by this bill, it lists the following as "methods" of "Communist political organizations": (A) "the disruption of trade and commerce" (strikes, no doubt) (A) "inciting of economic, social, and racial strife and conflict" (what bigot has not used this argument against liberals who fight against racial prejudice?) (C) "the dissemination of propaganda calculated to undermine established government and institutions." (the National Association of Manufacturers in particular and monopoly in general are now "institutions" in our country.)

Now a few words about our sponsor. Representative Karl E. Mundt is from South Dakota. The Secretary of State of South Dakota has the following names listed among the principal financial contributors to Rep. Mundt's campaign fund—du-Pont, Mellon, Pew, and McCormick!

In addition, the New Republic mentions that Mundt "once tacitly encouraged an audience to engage in anti-semitism in regard to the familiar charge that the Jews started the war". It also tells of a meeting in New York at which Mundt spoke with Rep. Hamilton Fish who "roused the crowd to anti-Semitic outbursts and the frantic renditions of the Nazi salute."

These facts are sufficient to indicate the seriousness of the situation. Today it only takes "intestinal fortitude" to speak out for democracy—and to fight for it. If this bill passes it will take more than "intestinal fortitude" — because fascism (that is, open, terror dictatorship by big business) will have come into existence legally!

William Tells

Man Here Talks To Self

By Bill Payeff

After climbing out of the trench in front of the Lower Quad sidewalk, I was sitting upon the curb calmly setting my compound fracture when suddenly I recalled a lively little conversation that ensued between Bill Payeff and myself. Wouldn't mention the guy's name but I promised his mother I'd see that his name got in the Tar Heel if I had to do it myself. As I dropped one and began to purl two, he says! "Why don't you talk to animals and things, Bill?"— a perfectly normal question.

"How come animals and things, Bill?" I says to myself, becoming entangled in my yarn.

"Because, my boy, (he always calls me "my boy"), you'll never become an established columnist of your sort until you find some animal to interrogate concerning campus affairs. Nothing is more inspiring to the student body, nothing quite as unique as a skillful dialogue between man and beast. If, of course, you can't find an animal to your liking, invent a character, But it's a poor second. Now Dan the Dog and Jud Kinberg. . ."

"Stop, Bill!" I whisper harshly, biting a hang-nail.

"Stop, schmop! Listen, boy! Have you never heard of Foo Foo Jelly Roll or Athelstan? Have you never heard of. . ."

"Cease and fall, fellow!" I scream, and all the time my heart is breaking. "Don't you think I've been plagued enough with my own shortcomings of late without hearing you echo those thoughts?! Don't you think I've had searching parties out for talking animals, characters, yea, from daylight to dusk, even unto Carrboro. Fourty hour week, of course. I just don't know anybody to talk with except a few students, profs, coeds, and one of my roommates. I simply don't seem to have the inside on how to go about finding a dog (A talking one, I mean. I ain't blind, you know.) or any other beast. Then to make matters worse if possible, I don't seem to have the knack of inventing a character with enough savoir-faire (French for savoir-faire) who could amuse the students. Guess I'll never make a columnist."

"Not only a columnist will you never make, my boy!" At this point I say something like "Out, out, brief candle" and am alone again. It's a sore point if I must say so myself. It amounts to admitting defeat. I have been unable to conjure up an animal to talk with and unable to create a character with whom I would hold fascinating dialogues to the hysterical pleasure of the student body. And I'm so young, too! I've though about taking the coward's way out but I've got three subjects that are leading me in that direction with far greater skill than I could devise.

There's only one road left for me. I'll try writing an occasional word or two on my own. In the meanwhile I'll make a lot of false promises to the Editor about locating a comrad in repartee, knowing all the time I won't be able to but hoping he won't find out before I graduate.

Just Here

Put Away That Pencil

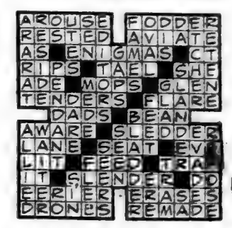
By Larry Berry

The assignment is to write a paper on "Influences of Romantic Poetry", using books in the library for information. This would be a logical assignment in the English department with the student being left with the problem of sorting through the varous books searching out the details he needs. Upon opening the books the Carolina gentleman finds a joker has been thrown into his assignment.

There are marginal glosses put in by learned fools, some illustrations by learned fools, missing pages which are importantly referred to in the index, and many asinine sections underlined. The necessary rigors of education are numerous enough without the student having to combat obstacles placed by other students.

I would suggest that the person of intellect who is tempted to insert marginal gloss should compile his work into an anthology for malcontents to glean before reading. This individual will then become a member of the Chapel Hill writer's colony and will no longer have to use this quibbling means of disproving statements by preceding writers.

For those of you who express your psychosis in art forms the remedy will not have the same degree of glamour. You should see a doctor. After being the victim of many student book illustrations, I am convinced we have a number of malicious Walt Mittys among us.



Many persons have a high degree of belief in their ability to find hidden meanings within certain lines of a book. In order that anyone who comes after them may know there is something great in the lines, they underline their discovery. To those who come along looking only for the obvious meaning, these lines cause much subconscious confusion. I would suggest to the underliners that they practice some self-discipline and take notes.

A few of our residents seem to enjoy taking certain pertinent pages from the books they come in contact with. I imagine these are trying to make a collection of the world's best and do not wish to be bothered with any excess pages or bindings. The remedy for them is to either buy the book or forget it; they won't remember the in-between pages when they try to use what they have.

The whole thing is a great inconvenience to all the rest of us when we do try to use the library, so take your feelings out on the crossword puzzle instead of the library books.

Tar Heels Defeat Wake Forest In Baseball, 3-2, But Drop Golf Decision

Carolina Tallies Twice in Eighth Frame To Break 1-1 Deadlock; Ryan Hits Homer

By Bob Goldwater

Already adjudged as pretty adept in winning the close ones, Carolina's baseballers added another one-run decision to their string yesterday afternoon in Emerson stadium when they edged Wake Forest, 3-2 in a Big Four duel.

The triumph — their fifth in the four-team loop — increased the Tar Heels' lead to a 1 and one-half game margin over N. C. State, with the two teams battling in a crucial tussle here tomorrow. All five victories were decided by one run; yesterday's win being the third over the Deacons by one tally.

The Tar Heels gained their victory with a two-run rally in the eighth inning, although the 4,500 spectators almost saw a different ending in the final chapter. For after Carolina moved into a 3-1 lead, the Deacons came right back with one marker and had the tying and winning runs in scoring position with only one out. But that's as far as they got.

Pitcher's Battle

Going into the eighth, the contest had resolved itself into a 1-1 pitchers' duel between Tar Heel Vinnie DiLorenzo and Deacon Harry Nicholas. Both gave up runs in the second inning and then settled down to matching goose-eggs on the scoreboard.

A double, infield single, and infield out combined to produce the Forresters' first run. Carolina immediately offset the advantage in the bottom of the second when Rip Ryan poled a line drive along the leftfield foul line and outlegged the relay home for his first homer of the season.

Tranavitch Triples

Neither team threatened after that until the Tar Heels applied the clincher in the eighth. Andy Tranavitch, who caught a fine game for the locals, opened the proceedings with a three-bagger that travelled to the same locale as did Ryan's homer. DiLorenzo, given a chance to win his own ball game, did just that, lining a single past second to send Tranavitch home.

As an insurance measure, the Carolina club went out after another tally via the sacrifice-into-scoring-position method. Whitey Black provided the bunt and DiLorenzo moved down to second. He came home a moment later when Jim Hayworth drove a safety into left, upping the score to 3-1.

The Carolina runmaking ended there, although the rally continued. Frank Jones forced Hayworth at second and Jim Kelly singled past short. But Jack Brasington forced Jones at third for the final out.

Old College Try

In the one inning they had left, the Demon Deacons came through with the old college try — but it just wasn't enough. Woody Wrenn opened the ninth with a one-base knock over second, and Charlie Teague slapped a sharp grounder to the right side, but the ball hit Kersh moving down to second for the first out.

Joe Fulghum's single advanced Teague all the way around to third and when the play went that direction, Fulghum proceeded down to second. Paul Livick, who led the Foresters with three hits, smashed a hard infield drive that Ryan held to a single. Teague scored on the play but Fulghum was kept on second.

The situation darkened for the home forces when a wild pitch moved both runners into scoring position. But DiLorenzo bore down, getting Gene Hooks on his sixth strikeout and making pinch-hitter Charlie Kinlow ground to short.

DiLorenzo's Fifth

The victory was DiLorenzo's fifth of the season and second in

Four Sports Head Intramural Sports For Coed Athletes

By Faith Adams

Tennis, softball, archery, and swimming intramurals head the coed athletic agenda this month, with the tennis matches beginning this week, softball finals being played next week, and the swimmers and archers warming up for their meets to be held this Monday.

First and second rounds in the tennis contest must be played off by tonight. Rules concerning the tournament are posted on the bulletin board in the Woman's gym.

Participants and their first round opponents are: K. D. Durham vs. Cynthia Cannon; Martha Register vs. Letsy Pearson; Lucille Arnott vs. Nancy Carter; Nancee Black vs. Mary Ann McKee; Carolyn Driver vs. Bill Henderson; Ruth Golding vs. Jane Morrison; Chris White vs. Betsy Green; Sarah Montague vs. Barbara Bess, and B. A. Pope vs. "Butch" Goodwin.

Kenan and Chi Omega will play the championship softball game next Thursday afternoon on Kenan field. The game will be followed by a WAA banquet.

Entries in the archery tournament, to be played next Monday and Tuesday, should be handed in to Beckie Holton by tomorrow. Each organization is permitted to enter one girl.

Swimmers for the intramural meet must be signed up with Miss Mary Frances Kellam, physical education instructor before Friday. One girl may swim in as many as three events. The meet, preceded by a Splash club performance, is to be Monday night at 7:30. Events and rules are posted on the Women's gym bulletin board.

Carolina, Maryland Favored To Capture Loop Track Title

The 24th annual Southern conference track and field meet will be held on Fetzer field Friday and Saturday afternoons. Over 275 top Conference trackmen will be on hand to compete in the event, expected to be one of the closest meets on record, with the top-flight entries from 14 southern teams scheduled for the 15 field and track events.

Carolina, who walked away with the meet last year, scoring 83 points, will again be favored, but stiff competition is expected from Maryland, one of the best conference clubs this year.

Ten individual defending champions will again be on hand to try and hold their titles won last year. Among these men are Tar Heels Bob Seligman, Conference champion in the shot and discus, Jack Moody, ace high jumper, and Jimmy Miller and Sam Magill, who are currently co-champions in the two-mile run.

New Records

Considering performances in dual meet competition, thus far this season seven of the 15 events may see new records established. Norman Rucks, South Carolina middle distance star, has already bettered last year's conference winning time in the 440 by 1.7 seconds. In the 220 low hurdles three men have bettered Chunk Simmons' winning time of 24.5 seconds. Ted Schultz, of Carolina, Chambers of State, and Scupino of Duke have all done 23.6 or better. Other events which have seen better results this far in regular season competition are the two-mile run, high jump, pole vault, shot and discus.

Roger Neighborgall, who won the 440 and 880 in last year's meet for Duke, will be with the

Ward Tops Palmer In 16 1-2 -- 10 1-2 Loss by Linksmen

By Billy Carmichael III

Though teed off to a good start by Harvie Ward and his two-under-par 68, the Carolina golf team couldn't hold the pace at Hope Valley yesterday afternoon and fell before the Deacons of Wake Forest, 16 1-2 to 10 1-2.

The Ward fired a 34-34 round to top Arnold Palmer, Southern conference medalist 5 and 4 in the feature match of the afternoon. The Tarboro lad has six straight pars at the start and then birdied the 7th to go 4-up on the faltering Palmer.

The pair halved the next two holes and then on the 10th Ward made his only bogey of the day, missing a six foot putt to take a five. He came back on the next hole, dropping a beautiful 20-footer for a birdie, and duplicated the feat with a shorter putt after a beautiful iron on the 12th.

The Tar Heel ace played par figures the rest of the way, just missing a 10-foot putt for another birdie on the 14th when the ball lipped and almost holing out his iron shot from the tee on the short 18th. The shot, which would have given Ward a 66, missed the pin by inches.

The rest of the Carolina entry didn't fare so well with the exception of Roy McKenzie, who rallied to play par golf on the bad nine and win his match, 2-1, and Jack Brantley, who steadied his way to almost a shutout win. Both carded 76 for the afternoon.

Bud Worsham was the medalist for the visitors, trailing Ward by a single stroke. The Wake Forest player went out two strokes under par, but slowed up slightly on the back nine to register a creditable 69.

Frank Brooks got the rest of the individual points for the locals, gaining a nine hole split with opponent Gray for a half a point. Brooks had a 79. The remainder of the Tar Heel points came in the best ball division in the last two foursomes.

The summary.

Harris (WF) defeated Cox, 3-0. Brantley (C) defeated Agner, 2 1-2—1-2. Best ball to Wake Forest, 2 1-2—1-2.

McKenzie (C) defeated Beam, 2-1. Gray (WF) defeated Brooks, 2 1-2—1-2. Best ball to Carolina, 2-1.

Net Championship . . .

Six Teams To Compete In SC Tennis Tourney

An eight-man delegation of tennis players will be carrying the Carolina hopes of regaining the Southern conference net championship tomorrow afternoon when the three-day tourney begins here at 2 o'clock.

Last year William and Mary copped honors by taking the singles and doubles titles. No team scores are kept in the tournament, which is based on individual competition.

A total of six schools are entered in the tourney with a possibility that another, Wake Forest, will send a team. William and Mary, Duke, State and Carolina are all entering the maximum of eight men, while Maryland has six and The Citadel seven.

The Tar Heels faced all but the final two institutions this season. The Indians were the only team to defeat Carolina and the locals hope to reverse that decision now that they have the services of their ace player and captain, Vic Seixas. Seixas' effectiveness is problematical though, for the ninth-ranking amateur in the country has just returned to the courts after a crippling attack of glandular fever.

Larned Gone

Gardner Larned, Seixas' old nemesis who won the singles crown last year with the Indians, will not be here as he is now playing at Rollins college. However, both Fred Kovaleski and Tut Bartzen of W & M have more than an outside chance of keeping the solo championship in the family.

The two Indians will probably be seeded either first or second in the doubles play also. Bartzen and Kovaleski teamed up for the first time this campaign and thus far are undefeated.

Larned and Bartzen won the doubles last year by defeating their teammates, Howe Atwater and Kovaleski, in the finals. The latter duo downed Seixas and Clark Taylor in the semi-finals.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the tournament are now on sale at the gym. As it is a Conference affair an admission of 50 cents will be charged for each day of play. A ticket good for all three days will sell for $1.00. Passbooks will not be honored.

Carolina men entered in the tourney are:

Seixas, Taylor, Ray Morris, Charley Rice, Don Skaale, Heath Alexander, Duke Wilder and Stan Gruner.

Four Cage Teams Join BAA Circuit

Chicago, May 11 — The National Basketball league isn't letting the apparent loss of four teams stop it from going ahead with business as usual.

The National, one of the two top pro basketball leagues, lost four clubs when Rochester, Minneapolis, Fort Wayne and Indianapolis jumped to the Basketball Association of America yesterday. League officials were quick to announce that they would investigate the legal aspects of the deal and indicated that they intend to fight to hold the players on the teams which have jumped.

Today, the National league held its regular draft meeting, and took time out to accept a new member, a team operated by a Detroit syndicate. A league spokesman, Mike Fitzgerald, says that applications for National league franchises have been received from five other cities.

Golfers Preparing

Philadelphia, May 11—A record field of 191 golfers have begun tuning up for the $15,000 Inquirer Golf tournament in Philadelphia.

Qualifying rounds for the fifth annual renewal of this tournament will be run off tomorrow. The four-day 72-hole medal play competition begins on Thursday with defending champion Bobby Locke the favorite.

ITS NOT TOO LATE TO BE PREPARED FOR THAT NEXT BIG DANCE —

Nothing gives you confidence in Dancing like knowing that you're Dancing Correctly.

So Be Confident! Dance like the college gentleman is supposed to dance. Discard those immature high school postures and grotesque hand grips and look handsome on the dance floor. You can look inches taller when you dance in correct posture. And you can practically lead anyone if you develop that positive lead for each and every step you intend to execute. Let your dancing be versatile and thrilling. It can be, you know, if you learn to dance at Wherry Studio. Men hear the lines whispered about your dancing such as these—"He's a marvelous dancer. A girl gets a real thrill dancing with him. He never seems to do the same thing twice. They say variety's the spice of life and he sure gives a girl a variety of dance steps. I think I could dance every dance during the evening and never even care if anybody broke."

Yes, this is what the girls will say about you when you have mastered dancing at Wherry Studio. Men and women are coming miles from far away towns to secure dance lessons at Wherry Studio. No matter how many dance lessons you have had before you will still feel that you have not had a real thorough workout in Dance and its fundamentals until you've had some lessons at Wherry Studio.

Come by the studio and make arrangements for your lessons. Don't wait. Do it today. Studio open from 11 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. Early morning hours and late evening hours by appointment only.

Senate Committee Passes Five-Year Draft-UMT Proposal

States Will Get Volunteer Credit For Enlistments

Washington, May 11 — (UP) — The Senate Armed Services committee today approved a combined draft and universal military training bill to be in effect for five years.

The measure provides that 18-year-old men could be drafted for one year of military training, and men from 19 to 25 years old would be eligible for a straight draft which would place them in the regular armed services for two years.

The measure has several surprises. One would allow the 18-year-olds to volunteer for one year of training, thus taking out insurance against being drafted for a longer term later. Another clause gives each state credit for the number of men who volunteer.

The committee voted seven to two to send the bill to the floor.

The Senate bill differes considerably from a straight draft bill which already has cleared the House Armed Services committee. The House measure would only draft men between 19 and 25. Eighteen-year-olds would not be taken for any type of service. Swift action is expected.

Kinsey Report Causes Much Spirited Discussion at Marriage Conference

T. Manning.

Other features yesterday included a book review session led by Dr. Herbert D. Lemson of Boston university; a workshop on marriage counseling, presided over by Dr. H. L. Pritchett, Southern Methodist university, and a film on marriage and counseling, shown by Rev. J. T. Greene, Battleboro.

Participants in the Kinsey roundtable, led by Dr. Shankweiler, included Dr. Melvin J. Williams, Florida State University; Dr. Green Ruedi, Hollins College, and Lester S. Pearl, of this University.

Prof. Alice B. Lorenz of Toledo university presided over the morning session; Prof. Anne Green Smith, Meredith college, the afternoon, and Prof. W. N. Hicks, State college, last night.

Attorney Manning, who discussed laws of interest to marriage educators and counselors, said, "The average family of today necessarily must come into contact with many legal pitfalls which could and do frequently mean an end to what would otherwise be a perfect family life. Their unpreparedness," he emphasized, "to even recognize these pitfalls, much less avoid them, is appalling. The family counselor could go far in helping them recognize some of the main ones."

Dr. George, speaking on multiple births, said information on this subject "has significant implications in philosophy, medicine, sociology, and in the realm of political science.

"It shows us," he said, "that the old sayings about making silk purses out of sows' ears and gathering figs from thistles applies to human beings as well as to lower organisms. It warns us that we should examine critically the proposals of those social philosophers who would have us adopt revolutionary and irreversible changes in our social pattern on no firmer foundation than current slogans or sentiment or faith in the easy improvability of human nature.

"Studies in multiple births teach us that, although we should strive to provide the most favorable environment possible in order that good hereditary qualities may approach their full capacities for development, the production of fine families is dependent first of all upon good heredity in the parents. It would seem to follow also that insofar as foresight can play a part in the evolution of a great people and a great nation we should seek to avoid deterioration of our hereditary composition and strive to improve it."

Dr. Williams, who gave an extensive evaluation of Dr. Kinsey's research for the volume and its implications for sociologists, said that in spite of the many methodological criticisms he made, "the study deserves praise because (1) it is a pioneer work which already has opened up numerous possibilities for further research; (2) Kinsey has given us data that offer as exacting proof of the operation of certain sociological principles in one area of human behavior as has ever been offered since the pioneer work of Le Play; (3) offers a healthy suggestions to all social scientists to approach the study of human behavior in terms of pure science; (4) gives social workers, counselors, and others in the field of individual treatment a mass of data to strength emphasis upon individualization in education; (5) gives sociologists and social scientists a definite warning that there are certain areas of human life which must be studied, and (6) the work lifts the study of sexual behavior out of the realm of the sensational and sordid and places is in the realm of the vital and natural patterns of human behavior."

"There are some who will make fun of it in terms of the sensationalism and sordid thinking of our time." he said, "but we as social scientists have known for a long time that this it not the realm where sex should be placed . . . For those of us who are interested in stabilizing family life and in building firmer foundations for family living, this study is a definite challenge."

Durham Herald Poll Gives Facts on Graduate School Negroes Question

roll, the essays turned in with the second ballot would be adequate material for a Ph. D. dissertation. Some of the best expressed answers are given below:

Student who voted "no" to first two questions: "As Eisenhower recently said, 'You can't pass a law to make someone like someone.' The situation deserves our best efforts, but an effective lasting solution to the problem will not come about by a forcing of the issue overnight, i. e., by court order, etc., but by gradual change over a period of time seems to be a condition precedent to the successful solution of the problem."

Student who voted "yes" to the first two questions: "North Carolina was ready in 1868 when she adopted a progressive Constitution. The step is long overdue. As a State institution, bound by the letter and the spirit of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the U. S., the University of North Carolina ought to have abolished segregation long ago. Equality with segregation is a myth. The State owes a duty to all its citizens."

Student who answered "no" to first two questions: "Under our present racial set-up in N. C. Negroes have made great progress during the past 10 years. They can expect this progress to continue—but only under the status quo. The groups which hold themselves out as the champions of the Negro, actually are not sincerely interested in civil rights, but are intent upon obtaining the Negro vote for their own selfish purposes. By pushing the Negro into this demand for racial equality, they are ironically doing the Negro great harm."

University's Duty

Student voted "yes" to first two questions: "I think it is the duty of U. N. C. to admit Negro students—but it is also the duty of this school to see that this elimination of segregation comes about gradually. If these lines are broken down too rapidly, the results can be disastrous. But it would also be disastrous if advances are not made, when we are ready for them. I believe the graduate schools here are ready; the undergraduate schools are not; the town, maybe."

Student who voted "Yes" to first two questions: "No matter how unattractive the idea of sitting in a classroom with Negroes sounds, I can see no valid reason for barring them from the University of North Carolina, which, after all, is not a social club, but an institution to be utilized by qualified students without discrimination insofar as facilities will permit. It is conceded, I believe, that the dual system is more expensive and it seems to me that there are enough white students now who are aware of the social benefits to the whole South, if the status of the Negro can be raised, to warrant an attempt to admit them."

Marked Distinction

Student voted "no" to first two questions: "I do not feel that North Carolina is ready to eliminate segregation in its educational institutions. I feel that there is a marked distinction between discrimination and segregation. Discrimination cannot be morally or practically justified by means of rationalization. Segregation without discrimination I feel is the solution of whatever racial problems may exist in North Carolina. I feel that this is the most practical and most beneficial way for the white and colored races to handle this problem today, not only in education, but in all fields. The life of a handful of Negros in a white institution would be intolerable to the Negroes, and often embarrasing to the white students. I feel that this problem will be eliminated in the distant future, but that the efforts of a few to do away with segregation while the sentiments of the overwhelming majority are strongly against intermingling, will only make it more difficult and postpone the attainment of segregation without discrimination."

Big Four play. His six strikeouts increased his total for the year to 83 in 64 and one-thirds innings.

Nicholas, making his first appearance against the Tar Heels, also pitched good ball, allowing only five hits. But the two that went for extra bases proved to be his downfall.

Blue Devils again this year. Doug Ausbon, another Dukester who copped the title in the broad jump will be back again to defend his title. Ausbon also won the 100-yard dash and placed second in the 220.

Maryland's squad, which was third in last year's meet, will have four men back that placed last year. Leading the list is star field man Ike Eichhorn, who has tossed the javelin 195 feet already this year. The Terps also boast of a mile relay crew which has travelled the distance in 3:21.

The Carolina crew is strongest in the distance and field events. With Magill and Miller entered in the two-mile, Moody in the high and broad jump, and Seligman in the shot and discus, the Tar Heels should take several firsts in these events.

Don Nelson, in the 220 and Julian MacKenzie in the 880 are two more men that should add a few points to the Carolina cause. Dick Taylor and Bob Morrow, both hurdles men, have shown up well in dual meets this season and despite the fact that they will be facing the cream of the crop, they should do well.

The 100-yard dash, won last year by Ausbon, will feature several runners who have broken ten seconds. Both McGowan of Maryland and Goldberg of State have been clocked at 9.9 this season.

Six men in each event will qualify for the finals, all of which will be staged Saturday afternoon starting at 2:30. Each team may enter as many as five men in each event.

Leary, Lowenstein Statement on Bill

Below is a joint statement by Joe Leary, UP chairman of the Elections committee, and Al Lowenstein, SP member of the committee, concerning the redistricting issue:

"When the Elections committee began its open hearing on the various districting proposals, it did so with the intention of working out as fair and non-political a bill as possible. The committee heard testimony from all political parties and from every geographic area before it reported favorably on the bill which will come before the Student Legislature tonight. What is remarkable is that, despite the divergent political views of the members of the committee, it was possible, by a procedure based on an honest attempt to do what was fairest for everybody, for the committee to arrive at the same conclusions, unanimously in every case.

"The most controversial portion of the bill is that in which town men are put into five districts. As two members of the committee of different political connections we wish to state emphatically that the compromise we arrived at in committee is based on a non-partisan regard for the town men involved who will do the electing of representatives from their districts.

"The bill stands as a tribute to what can be done by level-headed open-minded people who are determined to play fair and seek what seems the best interest of everybody. It would be a pity for such a bill, representing as it does a cooperative effort of eight legislators of three parties, to be torn asunder by partisan consideration."

Carolina Playmakers Thirtieth Season To Be Climaxed by 'Cyrano' Next Week

When the Carolina Playmakers climax their thirtieth season's activities next week with a production of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" in the Forest Theater, another thirtieth will also be celebrated.

James Geiger, junior from Miami, Fla., will be making his thirtieth appearance as an actor in Playmaker productions. In "Cyrano," he will play the role of "Carban de Castel-Jaloux," another of the character roles for which he is well known to Chapel Hill audiences.

Geiger was recently seen as "Kenston" in "Call Back Yesterday," and some of his roles have included "The Inquisitor" in "Saint Joan," "Morten Keel" in "An Enemy of the People," and "Mooney" in "Drama at Innish." His one-act play "Au Fond de Coeur" was recently presented on a bill of experimental plays.

In spite of all his acting experience, Geiger doesn't want to be a professional actor.

"My main interest is directing," he says, "but I have a lot to learn about technical theater work, too." He has recently been working in the scene shop, building and painting scenery.

At one time he directed and acted with the Miami Civic Theater, the Temple Players, and the Federal theater project.

"I have been working on acting and directing for twelve years," Geiger says, "except for the time I spent in the Army. He is now a member of the Air ROTC unit here, and is serving as squadron commander.

Geiger is the student who recently turned safe-cracker and opened the stubborn new safe in the Playmaker business office. He explains that it was not an accident, but that he was a professional locksmith for five years.

Feldman Is Elected To ZBT Presidency; Four Are Initiated

Bob Feldman, junior from Plainfield, N. J., was elected new president of the Alpha Pi chapter of Zeta Beta Tau at the last regular meeting. Feldman succeeds Arnold Marks of Greensboro.

Other officers are Gerald Shor of Raleigh, vice-president; Bill Benjamin of Salisbury, Md., secretary; Bill Shrago of Goldsboro, treasurer; and Herb Nachman of Augusta, Ga., historian.

Four pledges were initiated into the chapter recently.

Planetarium Strike Continues Despite Union-Firm Meetitg

Strike conditions at the planetarium and at other points in this area remained unchanged last night following a meeting of union and company officials in Durham late yesterday.

P. M. Taylor, Durham building trades union official, reported union leaders had joined in a "good will meeting" with E. M. Kratt, vice-president of the Jones company, but that no terms had been reached concerning union demands for pay increases.

Kratt, who has conferred with union officials for the past two days, declined to comment on the proceedings of yesterday's meeting.

Planetarium workers continued to walk picket lines yesterday and indicated they were "waiting" for the company to take action.

The three-day-old strike began when the J. A. Jones company refused to meet demands of the A. F. of L. union which called for a 25 to 35 cent an hour increase for cement finishers, iron workers and steel hoisters.

Another walkout occurred yesterday as steelworkers left their jobs at Muirhead Construction company projects in Durham, Greensboro and Winston-Salem. Union officials are demanding a 25 cents per hour increase from the Muirhead company.

The overall strike at Jones company projects includes construction units in Durham, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and at Neuse in Wake county.

Jones company projects being affected in Durham are the Liggett and Myers project and library and physics building at Duke university. Only those workers who are unskilled and non-union men remain at work at the Jones projects.

Friends Sewing Group Offers Services To Mend Clothing Given Overseas Drive

All mending that needs to be done on clothing turned in in the clothing drive for overseas relief should be taken to the second floor of the Y building. The Friends sewing group, made up of townspeople who donate their services to the organization, have volunteered to handle mending for the clothing drive that is now in progress.

Mrs. Claude Shotts, a member of the group, requested that anyone willing to help mend the clothing join the Friends sewing group every Tuesday night from 8 to 10 o'clock which meets on the second floor of the Y building. The group was organized about a month ago, and has since that time sent 160 pounds of clothing to the American Friends Service committee, which in turn ships the clothing overseas. The Friends sewing group sponsors a continuous drive for clothing for overseas relief, instead of one big drive a year.

The clothing drive, which ends this Sunday is the second CRIL-sponsored drive this year. In January over one-fourth of a carload of clothing was collected by the town and University.

Clothing, Bibles, games, school supplies, bedding, shoes tied in pairs, galloshes, linens, bar soap and other toilet supplies are some of the articles most needed overseas.

Collection boxes will be picked up next Monday and the clothing carried to one of the local churches for packing.

Col. Cox To Address CCUN Conference; Informal Talks Slated

LT. COL. ALBERT COX, North Carolinian in Air Force Public Relations, who will speak on the subject, "Air Power is Peace Power" in CCUN conference tomorrow.

Lt. Col. Albert L. Cox from Air Secretary Symington's office in Washington will be a main speaker at the Collegiate Council for the United Nations state conference being held in Chapel Hill tomorrow and Saturday. Colonel Cox will deliver an address on the subject "Air Power Is Peace Power" in Gerrard hall at 8:15 tomorrow night.

Colonel Cox is a native North Carolinian, formerly of Raleigh. During the war, he was commanding officer of the 325th Bombardment squadron with the 8th Air Force in England. His combat record resulted in his promotion to commanding officer of the 92nd Bomb group in the final phases of the war. His decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross and the French Croix de Guerre.

He is now assigned to Air Force Headquarters in Washington, where he is Chief of the Veterans Organization Section and Director of Public Relations, Office of the Secretary of the Air Force.

Speaking with Cox Friday night will be Dr. Jan-Albert Goris, High Commissioner of Information for Belgium, who will discuss the part of small nations in international affairs and the recent five-power pact of the Western European powers.

Speakers at the Collegiate Council conference will be talking informally in university classrooms and participating on radio forums and panel discussions tomorrow morning. Public forums and meetings are planned for the afternoon.

Delegates from five state districts of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, will meet to discuss plans for activity throughout the state next fall. Also planned during the conference are a United Nations ball tomorrow night in Graham Memorial and a banquet honoring the speakers and delegates tomorrow evening at the Carolina Inn.

Phi Passes Bill To Alter Present Grading System

The Phi assembly Tuesday night passed by 15-6 vote a bill changing the present grading system to a system which will place the final numerical average with the rank of the person in the different classes and the number in the class on the report card.

A bill stating that the Phi go on record as favoring the students grading of the instructors at the University was unanimously passed.

John Giles led the discussion in favor of the numerical grading system saying that, "Some of us are often unjustly penalized with the letter grade system in that the departments here do not use the same basis for grading."

Bob Coulter introduced an amendment that we use the absolute grading system and abolish the curve but this amendment failed. He argued, "If we are going to set standards by which we can grade, they must be representative of the work that they yield."

Pete Burks, in giving his initial speech on students grading faculty, said, "This is a good system but should not be used to fire a teacher. This system should be of great help to a teacher. We are employers and we should have a part in determining what we want a teacher to give us. This evaluation is essential to progressive education."

In the executive session of the assembly, a motion that the Phi only have two more meetings this year and that it become inactive for the summer quarter was passed.

Coed's Glee Club Will Give Concert, Hill Hall Tonight

The University Women's Glee club will present its annual spring concert tonight at 8:30 in Hill hall, under the direction of Paul Young.

The concert will feature as soloist Mary Helen zum Brunnen, contralto. Accompanists for the program will be Gwen Howard, Betsy Green, and Joycelyn Rhyne.

Traditionally, the club joins the Men's Glee club in presenting the Christmas concert but both clubs give separate performances to climax the year.

The program tonight will include six love songs by Brahms, several folk songs, and numbers by Mendelssohn, Liszt, Handel, Purcell, Mozart, and Schuman.

Pre-Registration Is Still Going On

Students desiring to pre-register for the summer session may see their faculty advisors to have their green forms prepared through this coming Saturday.

Green forms should be taken directly to the Registration hall, Venable "X". Positively no summer session green forms will be accepted in the Registration hall after Monday, May 17.

Students who do not plan to attend the summer school but who will return for the fall quarter, may pre-register for the fall starting Monday, May 17 and continuing through Saturday, May 22. The procedure is the same as for the summer—from faculty advisors to the Registration hall, Venable "X".

Appointments with faculty advisors for those who plan to pre-register for the fall quarter next week, may be made by signing an appointment sheet at the information desk, main lobby of South building through this coming Saturday, May 15.

General college students who failed to make appointments for summer school pre-registration should see Mrs. Adams in 308 South building before Saturday.

Long and Stevens finished third in the mixed section at Tulane in February and were among the finalists at Fredericksburg in March. Mitchell and Shelton had similar successes at both places.

Shelton will be finishing his debating career at UNC this afternoon, since he graduates in June. He has handled many of the extemporaneous speaking assignments for the squad and has frequently participated in team debate.

Roving Band of Seniors to Guard Barefoot Day Tradition on Friday

Friday coming is Barefoot day for all seniors and that means all sheepskin aspirants caught with even the scent of a pair of shoes will be subject to a premium penalty of proportions never yet equaled in Judge Whitfield's courtroom.

In fact, rumors are getting around that all leather luggers and canvas packers will be deshoed publicly by a roving band of seniors who have been deputized to guard with their lives the barefoot tradition.

The penalty for shoe-bearers will not be tar-and-feathering or peanut-pushing by nose, it was disclosed, but will involve some lesser punishment to be left to the discretion of the Senior court.

Punishments inflicted for similar crimes at other colleges and universities include dunkings in lakes and lashings in nearby wooded areas, the files indicate.

As a last word, the senior class urges all its members to cooperate in making this the most successful Barefoot day in University history.

Besides, say the seniors, the movie cameramen now scouring the campus are suckers for scenes like barefoot festivals. The dignified alumnus in 1968 would get a hearty laugh from seeing his big feet on a film somebody had saved.

Conference Delegates to Talk Before Classes This Morning

The Caribbean conference, sponsored by the students in international relations of the Political Science department, convened last night with an informal banquet at the Carolina Inn, following the arrival of distinguished Caribbean authorities in the afternoon.

The conference agenda for today begins this morning when several of the delegates will speak before various classes in history, political science, sociology and economics. This will be followed by three panel discussions this afternoon in the Roland Parker lounges of Graham Memorial, meeting simultaneously from 2:30 to 4:30.

The first of these panels will discuss the dependent areas of the Caribbean and will include such political authorities as E. E. Sabben-Clare, British representative on the Caribbean commission; Miss L. A. Armstrong of the Division of Dependent Areas of the U. S. Department of State; Dr. Duncan McKay, U. S. State department; and Dr. Fredrico Gil, professor of Latin American relations here. Mr. Kaener C. Frazer of the Political Science department will act as moderator and Bill Porter will act as student leader.

The social panel will consider the problems of land tenure and color gradations and will be moderated by Dr. Sturgis E. Leavitt of the University. Participating in the social forum will be M. Henri Claudel, attache of the French embassy; Dr. Will C. Ryan of the Department of Education here; and Dr. Glenn L. Taggart, of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations of the U. S. Department of Education. Charlie Kauffman will act as student leader.

Other panel discussions and activities will go on throughout the day, and all students and townspeople are invited to attend and participate. The conference in Gerrard hall, scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock, is also open to anyone who wishes to attend. Reports will be given from the panels at that time.

Met Star Sees . . . . . . Conductor Dangling

Super Man Proportions Didn't Make Him Football Player

By Doris Thomas

When a boy grows up to be a six-foot-six, 200 pounder, something good is just bound to come of it. Often it means that he is destined to become a football or basketball idol, at least, the object of mass feminine admiration.

But for Norman Cordon, Metropolitan opera star who is a native North Carolinian and a former student here, a super man-sized frame didn't make a football star out of him . . . but it does house one of the finest bass baritone voices anywhere.

Cordon will appear with the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, Friday, May 14, at 8:30 p. m. in the Hugh Morrison High School auditorium in Raleigh. He will sing "In diesen heil'gen Hallen," from "Die Zauberflote" and "La Calunnia," from "The Barber of Seville."

Cordon was born in Washington, N. C. in 1904, but spent most of his boyhood in Charlotte. He began his musical career as a vested choir boy at St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Charlotte, but when he came to the University, Paul Weaver, director of the Glee club then, persuaded him to use his talent professionally. Since then, he has reached the acme of singers' dreams—the Met.

Aside from the voice that has won the acclaim of many thousands of the most discriminating of music lovers and critics, as well as the wholehearted, if less expert, appreciation of everyday folks who don't know much about music except "what they like because they like it," the six feet and 200 odd pounds have also come in for their share of credit. As Mephistopheles in "Faust," critics say Cordon's magnitude, together with the scarlet tights and robes, make for a more convincing devil than Lucifer himself if he should attempt the part.

Cordon's contemporaries at Chapel Hill included Kay Kyser, Skinny Ennis, John Scott Trotter, and the late Hal Kemp. He even played a saxaphone in a quartet with Kemp, but "wasn't good enough to be in Kemp's band," he said smilingly.

Telling of some of the hilarious college experiences he remembers, Cordon recalled a time when the Glee club and the band was giving a concert at the high school in Morganton. The old auditorium there had a canvas curtain with advertisements painted on the front, he said. At the bottom was a wooden roller, and the curtain had to be raised by hoisting the roller. It took enough hoisting to require the services of two husky football players in the wings of the stage.

The conductor stood before the band, Cordon explained, waiting But he was too near the curtain and so were the tails of his dress coat. These were rolled into the curtain, and the conductor's surprise he found himself being lifted bodily off the floor.

The astonished audience saw a man dangling some six feet from until the lights were lowered which was a signal for the football players to hoist the curtain. the stage by his coat tails, while the University band gaped upwards in amazement. The horrified football players, seeing what they had done, hurriedly released the rope . . . causing the curtain. weighted by the heavy roller and a conductor, to fall with a crash, knocking the first violin player cold and doing no end of damage to the pride of the irate conductor.

So You Want to Vote

North Carolina students here who have attained the ripe old age of 21 and are not yet registered to vote will have to take a trip home this weekend if they want to have a hand in picking the next governor of the state.

Saturday is the last day to register to vote in the Democratic primary on May 29, and in North Carolina the Democratic primary is the election.

In order to register, the prospective voter must have been a resident in North Carolina for one year prior to the time of the election and a resident in his present precinct for four months. Most students will be ineligible for registration in Chapel Hill because of the temporary nature of their residence here. However a few may be able to register if they can establish that they intend to remain here permanently.

The rest of us who wish to vote will have to sign with the registrar of our home precincts not later than sundown Saturday and go back again on May 29 to vote.

Toss 'em in the Box

If you have been too rushed to get around to it so far, this week would be a good time to do some spring cleaning. With the advent of sun bathing and jammed tennis courts and midday classes beginning to get uncomfortable from the heat, it looks as if warm weather is here to stay. That means that summer uniforms are the order of the day and winter clothes have been shoved over into a corner of the closet waiting to be put away.

While you're packing up those old clothes to send home, take a look through them to see how many you've outgrown or almost worn out. They're just cluttering up your space, but they might be some good to somebody—and inside your dorm door there's a box which is just the place to toss these unwanted items.

That box was placed there by members of the Council for Religion in Life for the express purpose of receiving donations of clothing, shoes, bedding, games and other items which can be used by European people who need them badly. Inflation is rough over here, but over there you can't buy these items for any price.

So take a survey of your surplus supplies and toss the ones you can spare into the box.

An Honor for 60

Sometime within the next few days 60 men here will receive an outstanding honor. Perhaps they will not at first recognize it as such, for this honor, like most others, will carry with it a price tag marked in responsibility and hard work. These 60 men will be those picked to carry out the freshman orientation program next fall.

A ten-man orientation committee headed by Bill Miller has been engaged in the arduous task of selecting from almost 7,000 students the 60 who are most representative of Carolina's way of life. The dissenting of two members of this committee has been enough to prevent a man from being chosen as an orientation counselor. In many instances those selected will be men outstanding in student activities, but leadership alone was not the cause of their selection. Every one of the 60 will have been picked because he has demonstrated in his living the ideals of the Carolina tradition.

Freshman orientation was one of the principal points in all political platforms before the last election. It well deserved its prominent position, for upon the orientation program depends to a large extent the proper functioning of Carolina's honor system. Orientation is the transition point for students fresh from the proctor systems of high schools or other colleges into a system in which they are responsible only to themselves and to their fellow students for their conduct.

By Thursday night the orientation committee will have completed its selection of counselors. Within a few days 60 men will receive notification of their appointment. In choosing them the committee was mindful of the responsibility it was investing in them. In receiving the honor these men should be mindful of the responsibility of the job which they are accepting.

Communism And China

By Bill Patterson

Some of my friends have admonished me to "quit fighting Bill Robertson—be constructive—state yours and let his be." I cannot see that. I think that Bill Robertson and his screwey ideas represent a definite and widespread menace, and one that is eminently worth the trouble of combatting.

A few weeks ago a Chinese General who had risen from the ranks of China's common men, one Li Tsung-jen, became a rallying point for China's non-communist dissatisfaction. Was he quieted by the powers that be in China? No. They tried, but he won out, in a peoples' victory, and became the first Vice President of China.

This victory was neither complete nor final, but it was a step in the right direction. Vice President Li, whose work on behalf of the common man in China won him his job, became the second ranking member of what Mr. Robertson chooses to call "the counterrevolutionary rule" of China. Reader will please note that now, even if not before, it is possible to vote, successfully, against the government in China. Thits, then, is what Mr. Robertson and his allies are fighting against in China!

Robertson quotes—with obvious glee—a Chinese communist as saying: " . . . Together with the democratic forces of the whole world we need only exert our efforts and we can. . . block a third world war so that it cannot take place, overthrow the oppression of all reactionaries, and win the victory of eternal peace for all mankind." Now, that's real nice. Count me in. Just join up with "democracy" and fight "reaction," and we will have world peace. First, perhaps, before we sign up, we had better take a closer look at this "democracy" and this "reaction". . .

When Bill Robertson and his Chinese communist bedfellow speak of "democratic forces", what do they mean? Even a casual perusal of Robertson's writings will reveal that to him "democratic forces" means (1) The U. S. S. R., (2) Soviet Satellites and, (3) communist fifth columnists, Robertson included, all over the world. Their idea of "reaction" is equally interesting. When they speak of blocking a third world war by "overthrowing the oppression of all reactionaries", they mean fighting a war against both the governments and the non-communist peoples of the U. S. A., Great Britain, France, and all other non-communist countries. In other words, that war which gives the world to the communists of the world will be the war to end all wars!

Since even a war to end wars is a war, how can anyone say that such a war will prevent war? What Mr. Robertson really advocates, then, is not a cessation of war, but an all out war to make communism the supreme force in the world!

Is such doctrine a worthy target? I think so.

WHAT'S UP in Graham Memorial

Tomorrow will see the arrival on campus of a number of delegates to the CCUN's international conference. Tomorrow night GM will give the entire campus an opportunity to meet the delegates and the speakers at a dance in the main lounge. Roy Cole and his orchestra will play for the dance, which will be semi-formal, and will last from 9 to 1.

On tonight's recorded dinner music hour Sergei Rachmaninoff will be heard as conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra playing his Third symphony. Mendelssohn's Third symphony will be heard played by the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra with Jose Iturbi conducting.

Pit and the Pendulum

Things Kipling Never Knew

By Raney Stanford

Eureka!

Which is all Greek to everybody but has come to imply the problems are all solved and the situations are well in hand.

And so I exclaimed when eager compatriots and fellow criminals recently pointed out a news item from the Syracuse, N. Y. zoo.

"This is an animal that will have things to say," they explained as they held up a story of an ancient leopard whose tail had been bitten off by a jaguar. "This is a beast any columnist would give his eye teeth to talk to."

So I dashed off a quick note to the zoo authorities and scant days later received word from the express office there was a crate waiting. Upon arriving there I found a ramshackle crate with an envelope affixed to the lid, which an opening turned out to be a sheet of paper inscribed "Thanks" and signed with 17 names and 23 inky paw prints. This would make most men a little wary, but as there is no fool like a fool, I pulled the box over to the light and tore off the top.

Peering eagerly into the interior I dimly perceived a huddled ball of fur out of which suddenly glared a jaundiced optic. The thing blinked and snarled:

"Get that light outa here, what do you think this is, a sun parlor?"

Then over the edge came two dirty paws and a moth-eaten head with one clawed ear at half mast. Yawning stupendously and showing only three teeth, two capped with porcelain, the monstrosity whined:

"What a crumby joint. What do you do around here, Mac?"

I'm supposed to record your sage comments for posterity. Won't you say a few things for the public?"

"Talk, smalk," the beast scrambled ungracefully from the box and shambled to the door. "Kid, I'm all gabbed out. Sat up all night shooting the breeze with three weasels that were going on vacation to Florida. Say Joe, let's you go and fix me supper. I'd like about 30 three-minute eggs to start with. Guess you can't get hold of anything elaborate this late, but I'll draw up a menu for you to follow first thing tomorrow."

"Yeh?" I bristled, "and supposing I don't? What are you going to do, massage my leg with your toothless jaws?"

"Nothing so crude," he purred ominously. "I'll just set up a howl like a banshee and in very short order a representative of the Society for Prevention to Animals will show up and your troubles will just be beginning."

"Yes sir," I said weakly, and my tailless persecutor flagged a taxi, stretched out in the back and told me to climb up front and let us be gone.

"Pay the man, kid," he growled after we reached the domicile. "Pay the man and tell me where the shower is; think I'll go soak 'til supper. This country soitenly ain't air-conditioned."

As he padded down the hall he turned back to inform me: "Met a gang of dogs down at the station today and invited them out to your place here for a little party tonight. You better get some supplies on hand." With this adminition he vanished into the washroom from whence shortly came the sound of running water and a peculiar sobbing whoosh which might have possible been "Bongo, bongo, bongo, I don't wanna leave the Congo."

And so I am sitting here quietly writing and listening. It's getting late and Baggy-eara just called that he's about ready to eat. I have been reading up on Burmese tiger traps and have two set up outside the windows and have an open box in front of the door with the lid handy for a quick closing. This should teach me a lesson.

Write Away

Heard On The Party Line

Editor:

It was interesting to read comrade McGirt's opinion that passages from the Third International, quoted by Gammage, do not represent the aims of present day world communism.

It is also of interest to remember that the party line often reveals itself because it is a mine of factual misinformation. The best explanation of why it should be so, (in direct opposition to its own interests) that has come this way is as follows. All external news entering Russia is said to go to a corps of propagandists, who interpret it for the rest of the population. From this point on nobody from the bottom in the forced labor multitudes to the top in the positions of greatest responsiblity in the arm-chairs of the politburo can separate fact from opinion.

This makes it difficult to deal with the Russian leaders if for no other reason than that they do not have their facts straight. Another consequence is that by the time the party line interpretation of events in this country comes back here its glaring or ludicrous factual errors brand it for what it is. It is recognized as a foreign product by fearless labor leaders, such as Walter Reuther, who by no stretch of anybody's imagination—with the possible exception of a communist's—could be branded a tool of interests.

The Dialogue Does It

Hollywood — (UP) — Tim Holt, cowboy star, says it's not action that makes western pictures so popular. It's the dialogue.

The public doesn't go for characters who speak in sophisticated epigrams of gangster movie staccato. No, says Holt, they like those western men who talk their own language.

"A lot more people in this country," Holt said, "greet their friends with 'Hi, pardner,' than 'Hello, dahhling!' "

Holt, veteran of some 30 plain-spoken pictures about cowhands, rustlers and hoss thieves, is making his fourth post-war film, "Wild Horse Mesa," at RKO Radio studios. He admits that gun battles, fist fights and spectacular falls from galloping horses don't hurt the pictures' gross, but he insists that simple American speech is a big popularity factor, too.

"The audience feels that they know the people in the pictures," he said, "and they like them because they speak the same way."

Simple, declarative sentences form the backbone of western dialogue. They are easy to speak and easy to understand. No matter how complex the plot, the dialogue remains simple and clear.

Men's Honor Council

UNC Expulsion Is Permanent

This is the third in a series of articles written for the purpose of acquainting the student with the Men's Honor Council.

After a violation of the Honor Code has been reported by either an instructor or a student, the violator receives a summons, brought to him by the chairman of the Council. In this he is told of his reported infraction and the time that he is to appear before the Men's Council. Before his appearance in court he is given ample time to talk with his instructor concerning the violation and to find witnesses or material which would help to prove his innocence.

On the night of the trial the accused is brought before the members of the Council, and he tells them his side of the case. The actual methods of interrogation will not be discussed here, for it suffices to say that they are much the same as any court of justice. After the witnesses of both the accuser and the defendent have been questioned and all the evidence has been presented before the Council, the Council considers the case and arrives at a verdict.

There are five types of punishment which may be dealt out by the Council — reprimand, official reprimand, probation, suspension, or expulsion. The first two are of less serious nature than the other three. A reprimand is given by the Council and consists of a serious warning "to keep a clean slate from here on out." An official reprimand is much the same as a reprimand, but it is recorded on the student's permanent record in the files at South Building. Probation consists of putting the student "on probation", i.e. he is told that any future misdemeanor on his part will mean his suspension or expulsion from the University. During the period of probation the student is not allowed to represent the University in any official capacity — athletics, student government, etc. If during this probationary period he should be found guilty of any violation of the Honor Code, he is automatically suspended.

The two most serious punishments are suspension and expulsion. A student suspended from the University is dropped for a period of one quarter and may, upon his application for readmission, be accepted if his application is approved by the Honor Council. A student who has been suspended must clear up his business and leave the campus within forty-eight hours. If a man has made a mistake, it is greatly to his advantage to make a clean breast of it by freely admitting guilt, for in reviewing his application, the Council takes into consideration, among other things, his general attitude and truthfulness during the trial.

The most serious punishment given by the Council is expulsion. A student who has committed several violations of the Honor Code at different times or who, after conclusive proof of his guilt has been presented to the Council, continues to lie and deceive the Council as to the true facts in the case may be expelled from the University. A student who is expelled can never enter the University again.

If a student does not feel he has been given a fair trial decision by the Honor Council he may appeal his case to the Student Council.

In closing the Council would like to leave you with one thought. Although you may know people who lie, cheat and steal and apparently get away with it", and you yourself may have committed such unworthy acts in the past don't continue the practices. Suspension or expulsion from the University is too great a price to pay for just one little answer from your buddy's Trig or English exam.

One Man's Opinion On Lenoir

By Bill Buchan

Lots and lots of people have been saying "why don't you say something about Lenior Hall — the food is awful, the service is terrible and the prices are outrageous — so I took myself down to that remote end of the campus last week and ate there for six straight days. I even got up for breakfast, for the first time in my somewhat questionable Carolina career.

I now have a notebook filled with prices, notations on food, on service, on lines and Lenior Hall in general. Most of the people who eat there are not going to like my figures. Admittedly, I never eat in Lenior except maybe once a month when I happen to be in that direction, but after a week, I cannot see anything so definately wrong with the setup. (This does not attempt to include all the stories about management, people and finances which may or may not be true, I personally have no idea.)

After six days or 18 meals with the lowest price — for breakfast — at 30c and the highest price — for supper — at 68c, I found that my average meal was 53c. (That is pretty dern cheap.) The week cost me $8 even.

One morning at breakfast, my scrambled eggs were not particularly good and that particular morning, the coffee was not as hot as it might have been, aside from that, I found nothing wrong with breakfast.

For my desserts, I varied between cake and pie and got two pieces of definately stale cake. The first time I took a piece of meat loaf, it was not hard to detect bread among its ingredients. The next piece (the next day) unforunately, contained just as much. Aside from a couple of blank stares from behind the serving counter when I asked for a helping, the counter workers seemed capable and willing to serve me. There were no signs of sarcasm or stubborness on the part of anyone. The students working the tables kept them cleared as much as possible, except during the daily rushes when they were obviously overworked.

The biggest complaint that I found in Lenior hall is against students themselves who break into the line ahead of others who were patiently waiting their turns. On one day, between ten to one and one, I noticed sixteen uncouth characters breaking into line, the next day, there were seventeen.

The orchid of the month goes to the one student — male — who refused to break in line, but told his inviter, "come back to the end, if you want to talk to me." Aside from this one individual, as many as five people joined one man who was holding their places in line so courageously.

It is difficult to say so, but I really can't see anything wrong with the prices, or the food (at least not enough to warrant all the gripes one hears), or the service. It seems to me, that the main complaints are because students living in the quads eat there continuously, three times a day, seven days a week and the monotony of one place is enough to cause anyone to revolt. If prices are compared, one can find that places up town are not too different in their prices from Lenoir. Instead of eating at Lenior continuously, students would be wise to eat at least one meal "out" every day or so.

As I said, I don't eat there regularly, and I may be all wet, but I don't think so. If you don't like Lenior, or are tired of it, try eating up town. There is at least one place, I know, that offers a meal consisting of a meat, two vegetables, a drink and a dessert for fifty-five cents. That seems reasonable enough.

Lucky Strike Pull Strips

By Tom Kerr

Speaking of queer doings around our campus. We were caught unawares the other evening while stooping for the little red celophane pull strip of a package of Luckys. Of course we were forced to find an explanation.

It all goes back to one fine day several weeks ago when one of the DTH loyals, charming triDelt Margaret Gaston, was caught in the same imbieilic position by us. She promptly gave of a story of woe vaguely resembling the following.

A friend of a friend of a friend . . . of hers is blind. Of course Lucky Strike couldn't miss a chance like this, so one of those advertising geniuses thought it worthwhile to offer this friend of a friend . . . a seeing eye dog if she could produce one pound of the little red strips off their cigarettes.

Word of this little promotion stunt soon got around to the friends of the friends . . . , so now a bevee of the ink-stained extroverts of publication now find themselves turning their daily gatherings from the byways of the campus.

All this would be very well, but, by careful use of the chemistry department's balance we found that the celophane strips in a pound rapidly approaches infinity. By now this stooping has gotten to be a habit, however, so maybe we'll all get her the seeing-eye dog yet.

Dropped into a local printwas, doing and found out that the first issue of "Factotum" the new privately owned literary mag was doing fine. Three of our literarily inclined Tar Heels, Paul Ramsey, O. B. Harshop to find out how Tarnation Dison, and Harvey Honig are behind what promises to be a good little mag. With some talented writing, tasteful selection, and a nice clean make up, the boys ought to get quite a good reception for their forty-eight page baby. We're watching the presses right now.

Baseball, Golf Teams Encounter State Today

Robinson to Pitch For Carolina Nine In Loop Tilt Here

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels, who now lead the Big Four baseball circuit by two games will be afforded an opportunity to increase their loop lead when second-place N. C. State invades Emerson stadium this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The two teams have broken even in a pair of contests thus far this year. Coach Vic Sorrell's Raleigh outfit copped the first game, 8-1, on their home field but fell victim to Vinnie DiLorenzo's fine pitching in a 1-0 loss to the Tar Heels in the return meeting.

Frank Robinson, hard-working Carolina righthander, is scheduled to handle the mound chores in today's battle. The game will mark the first time that he has faced the Pack this season, but he boasts a perfect record of two wins and no losses in Big Four competition. Robinson's victories were scored over Wake Forest, 1-0 and Duke, 6-5.

For the Wolfpack, a loss today would virtually eliminate them from the loop title chase. Duke's Blue Devils dumped them, 8-1, in Durham yesterday, thereby dropping the Pack into a three-way tie with Duke and Wake Forest for second place in the loop.

Interesting Games

Another large crowd is anticipated for the game. The current Carolina baseball nine has developed a knack for winning the close games, and the result has been an interesting brand of baseball which has produced good attendance.

To date, all five of the Carolina wins in the Big Four have been scored by one-run margins. The record lists triumphs over Duke, 6-5; State, 1-0; and Wake Forest, 1-0, 5-4, and 3-2. Carolina has five Big Four games, including today's encounter, remaining to be played this season.

Probable Lineup

Carolina is expected to open with the same lineup that started against Wake Forest on Tuesday. Andy Tranavitch, who caught a great game against the Deacs, will open behind the plate. In addition to contributing an important triple in the late stages of the game, he threw runners out who were attempting to steal second. There were no stolen bases on him.

Jack Brasington probably will get the call over John Gregory and Will Hobbs at first, Jim Hamilton will handle second base. Rip Ryan will open at short, and Jim Hayworth, at third. Ryan was one of the batting leaders against Wake Forest with a home run.

In the outfield, Jim Kelly, whose .346 average is tops among the Tar Heel regulars in Big Four play, will be in left field. Ken Black will patrol center, and Frank Jones, right field.

Official Big Four batting averages this week showed the Tar Heels as the loop's weakest-hitting outfit, with a team figure of .211, all of which reflects more credit on the Carolina pitchers.

State has the top average—.275, while Wake Forest has .258 and Duke, .246.

JIM KELLY, Carolina's veteran leftfielder and winner of the Big Four batting championship last season, is enjoying another successful season as a regular Tar Heel outfielder. Kelly, who hails from Elizabethtown, is currently sporting a .346 Big Four average.

Rainfall Fails to Interrupt Track Drills for Title Meet

Yesterday's rainfall failed to interrupt Coach Dale Ranson's track squad as they went through a final heavy workout in preparation for the Southern conference track and field meet, to be held tomorrow and Saturday at Fetzer field.

The meet, the 24th running of the annual affair, will get under way at 3 o'clock tomorrow when preliminaries in the shot put and javelin will be held. The remaining events have been scheduled up until 5:50. All final events will be run Saturday, starting at 2:30.

Admission will not be charged for Friday's events, but a charge of 50 cents will be made for Saturday's schedule. Ducats may be obtained at the Woollen gym ticket office. Because this is a Southern conference championship meet, passbooks will not be honored.

Finals Saturday

Saturday's program opens with the finals in four field events. The pole vault, high jump, javelin throw, and shot put are all scheduled for 2:30, while the remaining field events, the broad jump and discus throw, will begin at 3:15.

The first track event on Saturday will be the mile run, slated to get underway at 3 o'clock. Other running events follow at ten minute intervals, with the final event, the mile relay, set for 4:30.

The top five men in each event will be awarded medals and a trophy will be presented to the winning team. Special awards will be made for winners in the 880, two-mile run, high jump, and 220 low hurdles.

51 Tar Heels Entered

A total of 51 men will represent the Tar Heels in the meet. Thirteen of these men placed in last year's meet. Jack Moody and Bob Seligman were the only ones that copped a first place. In the

Five Mural Clubs Assured of Crowns

Five teams have battled their way to the top spot in their respective leagues and now await the members of the other five loops to select a winner to advance to the championship in the intramural softball play.

The Misfits and Emerson have swept aside all competition to sew up the crown in dormitory leagues one and two.

Pi Kappa Sig. No. 1, last year's champs, Zeta Psi No. 2, and Pi Kappa Alpha No. 2 have also copped the title in three of the fraternity rounds.

In the other leagues the title is deadlocked among two or three teams.

Golf Team Seeking Seventh Triumph, Second Over 'Pack

Carolina's thrice-beaten Tar Heel golf team will be seeking its second win of the season over the linksmen of State college when they journey to Raleigh this afternoon to face the Wolfpack on the rolling fairways of the local country club.

The charges of Coach Chuck Erickson will be in search of their seventh win of the campaign. They defeated the West Raleigh entry at Hope Valley earlier in the season, 15 1-2 to 11 1-2.

Tar Heel Lineup

Harvie Ward will lead the way for the Tar Heels, holding down his usual No. 1 spot and playing in the same foursome with Harvey Oliver, who is set to handle the No. 2 position.

The second foursome will have Bob Cox at No. 3 with the dependable Jack Brantley, whose card hasn't varied for more than four strokes all season filling out at No. 4.

The last two slots will find Roy McKenzie at No. 5 and the up-and-coming Frank Brooks at No. 6. Brooks, the freshman from Siler City, has continued to show improvement through the year and is reaching the top of his game.

Gibson Tops State

Ward's probable opponent at the top position will be Charlie Gibson, whose 152 aggregate gave him a tie for fifth place in the Southern conference tournament last weekend. If the State linksmen line up today as they did against Carolina in the first match, it will be Bracket at No. 2, followed in order by Dixon, Saenz, Turnbull and Bearstyne.

Only one more engagement remains on the Tar Heel slate after today's encounter. That one, like this afternoon's, will be a return match, Carolina journeying over to Wake Forest to repay a Deacon visit to Hope Valley earlier this week.

The Deacs were victorious in the initial meeting by a 16 1-2 to 10 1-2 score.

Boston Red Sox Ship Hughson to Minors

Boston, May 12—(UP)— The Boston Red Sox have shipped their 20-game winner of 1946—Big Tex Hughson—to the minors.

Hughson, who has been hampered with arm trouble since early last season, was optioned to the Austin club of the Texas Big State league. At Austin, he will be within a few miles of his home at San Marcos.

Red Sox General Manager Joe Cronin said the husky hurler was being shipped to the farm team because the arm trouble that plagued him last season, necessitating two operations had not healed.

Lewis forfeit over Oakwood Dr. Phi Kap 4 won by default over Phi Kap 3.

Monogram Softball

Manager Jess Greenbaum yesterday announced the roster for the softball team which will represent Carolina in the Big Four Monogram day at State college on Friday.

The squad is composed of Jim Godwin, Nemo Nearman, Bill Russell, Fred Sherman, Fred Swartzberg, Joe Thigpen, Bill Sunas, Bill Moore, Joe Romano, Jack Ross, Bill Flamisch, George Sparger, Coy Carson, Bill Spiegel, Cookie DiChiara, and Ted Haigler.

Carolina meets Wake Forest and State plays Duke in the initial softball activities for the afternoon. A barbecue supper, followed by State's Red-White intrasquad football game, will complete the program.

Jayvees in Action Against Wolfcubs

After having a six-game winning streak snapped by Presbyterian junior college last Monday, the Carolina jayvee baseballers will be attempting to start another streak when they meet State's juniors at 3:30 today in Raleigh.

Coach House will probably start the same nine that has been used throughout the season, but there is a possibility that Charlie Garganus will not see service behind the plate due to an injured finger. However, he may get the nod in right field.

Ralph Brake is to be on the mound for the Tar Babies and his batterymate will be either Garganus or Bill Walsh. In the infield will be Jake Carter at first, Stan Goodman at second, John Senter at third, and Joe Brookshire at short. The outfield will be composed of Jerry Allen in center, Don Ward in left, and either Garganus or Ed Lamb in right.

This is the third time that the University lads have met the Wolfcubs and they have been victorious on each occasion. When the dust had cleared away at the previous encounters, the scores were 9-4 and 7-4 respectively.

Seixas, Kovaleski Top Seedings In SC Net Play Starting Today

By Larry Fox

The Tar Heel Captain Vic Seixas will be seeded first in the singles play and Fred Kovaleski and Tut Bartzen of William and Mary will be ranked tops in the doubles competition when play begins at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the second postwar renewal of the Southern conference tennis tournament which has drawn a total of 47 netters from six different schools to Chapel Hill for the three-day tournament.

With Seixas back on the courts, even though his recent illness may keep him from reaching his championship form, Carolina will have a good chance of defeating the Indians, conference champs, in the singles and doubles play.

Seek Individual Honors

William and Mary already holds the loop team title by virtue of its undefeated record in dual meet play this season, and the Indians will be hoping to add the individual trophies to their list.

The Indians took both titles last year and have a strong eight-man squad entered in an attempt to keep the crowns in Williamsburg.

Bartzen and Kovaleski are ranked second and third in the singles play in addition to their top doubles rating. The Indians have another act combine in Bob Doll and Bob Galloway.

Gardner Larned, who won the singles title last year by defeating Seixas in the finals and who shared in the doubles win for the Indians will not be competing this year.

Won Doubles Last Year

It was an all-W & M doubles finals last year with Larned and Bartzen defeating Howe Atwater and Kovaleski. The latter pair defeated Seixas and Clark Taylor in the semi-finals.

Taylor, top-ranking New England amateur, is ranked fourth among the singles players and shares number two billing in the doubles with Seixas.

VIC SEIXAS

Ray Morris and Charlie Rice form the number two doubles combination for Carolina with Heath Alexander and Don Skaklo, and Stan Gruner and Duke Wilder also pairing up. All eight boys will also compete in the singles action to give the Tar Heels the maximum number of entries.

Other Entries

Duke, State, Maryland, and The Citadel are the other schools participating in the tournament. Duke and State are entering eight men with The Citadel sending seven netters and Maryland a team of six.

The Terrapins are headed by a promising lad named Miller while John Ross, a smooth-stroking freshman, is expected to lead the Blue Devils. Ross started the season playing in the third slot, and moved up into the number one position near the end of the campaign.

The Tar Heels had little trouble when they played State during the dual meet season. The Kenfieldmen shut out the Wolfpack, 9-0. Duke was a little stronger, capturing two decisions before bowing, 7-2.

Regular Season Match

William and Mary is the only other school in the competition that Carolina has faced this year and the Indians handed the Tar Heels their only defeat of the season. Carolina, without the services of Seixas, was leading at the end of the singles matches, 4-2, but dropped all three doubles contests and the decision.

Officials hope to narrow the field down to 16 singles players this afternoon and six of the clay courts will be brought into operation. Two rounds of singles competition and one of doubles are on tap. One round each of singles and doubles contests are slated to be played off Friday morning with the clay courts expected to be utilized.

The tournament will probably move up to the finals by Friday afternoon and the champions will be crowned after Saturday afternoon's action.

50 Cents for Admission

Admission to each of the afternoon sessions will cost 50 cents and a combination ticket, good for all three days, will sell for one dollar. No admission will be charged Friday morning. As the Southern conference is holding the tournament, passbooks will

Coeds Advance in Intramural Tennis

Fifteen girls have advanced to the second round of the coed tennis tournament with five matches remaining to be played before the deadline on Friday, extended because of yesterday's rain.

Winners of their matches thus far are: K. D. Durham over Cynthia Cannon, 6-1, 6-0; Jane Morrison over Ruth Golding, 6-1, 6-1; Lib Browning over Chris White, 6-3, 6-1; Beckie Holton over Betsy Green, 6-0, 6-2; and B. A. Pope over "Butch" Goodwin, 6-3, 6-4.

Those girls moving into the second round by virtue of byes are Scotty Dellinger, Doris Beasley, Martha Mendenhall, Sarah Walker, and Charlotte Johnston.

Matches remaining to be played in the opening round are Myrtle Westbrook vs. Tandy Lacy, Sarah Montague vs. Barbara Bess, Bill Henderson vs. Carolyn Driver, Nancee Black vs. Mary Ann McKee, and Lucille Arnott vs. Nancy Carter.

Official referee for the tournament will be E. T. Pennzoil, a member of the Executive Committee of the Middle Atlantic Lawn Tennis association.

Davidson, which beat Duke earlier in the season, was expected to enter a strong aggregation, but the proximity of exams kept the Wildcats from entering a team.

Bo Roddey of Davidson would probably have been seeded ahead of Taylor by virtue of his defeating the Tar Heel when the two teams met this season. The Keesler brothers, Lenoir and Ted, would also have been strong in the singles and doubles.

Members of NEA Visit Chapel Hill; House Renders Harmonica Selection

Seven bus-loads containing 230 members of the National Editors association pulled up in front of the gym Tuesday morning at 11:15, and standing on the steps of the gym to greet them were Dr. Frank Graham, Chancellor Robert House, C. E. Teague, Business Manager, Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong, Mayor Robert Madry, and other officials.

The 230 members of the NEA, representing 38 states, are making a tour of this state and stopped in Chapel Hill for only 20 minutes while enrouts from Raleigh to Greensboro.

Dr. Graham made a short, welcoming speech which was heartily applauded. Then an elderly, white-haired woman, one of the leaders of the tour, introduced Chancellor House who promptly drew out his harmonica and rendered a couple of tunes.

When several editors were questioned about the trip, they unanimously agreed that the tour was being successfully and enjoyably conducted, and they highly lauded the hospitability which they are receiving in North Carolina.

A few minutes before the group boarded the buses, the white-haired MC introduced the new president of the NEA, Owen Taylor, and, on the behalf of the group, she thinked UNC for its fine hospitality.

The group of editors then dashed for the buses, and a few minutes later were off to Greensboro where the group was due for a luncheon. After Greensboro, the editors went to Winston-Salem where they will be addressed by the Republican candidate for president, Harold Stassen. The tour will end in Asheville, after a trip through the Smoky Mountain area, and will stop for a banquet with the famous poet Carl Sandburg.

Others that earned points in last year's contest were Don Nelson, in the 440 and 220; Bob Kirk, in the javelin throw; Mark Burnham, in the 880; Larry Klosterman and Gene Russell, in the discus and pole vault.

Five Districts Bill

The redistricting issue will come before the legislature tonight for the second time this year. Approved by a unanimous vote of the Elections committee Tuesday afternoon, the present bill would set up five men's town districts.

The bill as it will come before the legislature is essentially the same as the original University party four district measure, with the exception of the addition of a fifth district comprising Carrboro and Hillsboro. The district which will give the Carrboro area one representative in the Student legislature, is being set up on the provision that 100 students are residing in the area at the time of the next election. The bill would also provide for six men's dorm districts and two women's dorm districts.

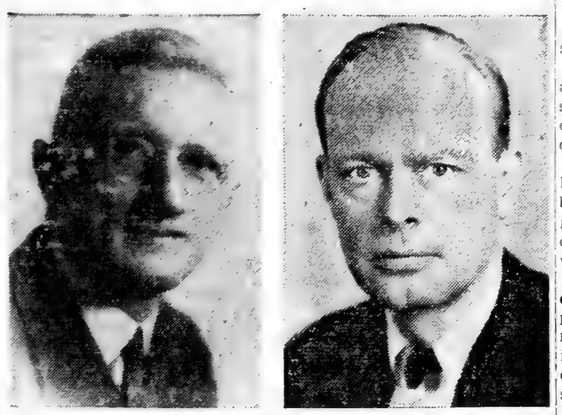
State CCUN Conference Opens Today; Plans For Next Year To Be Outlined

Program Includes Banquet Tonight; Radio Broadcasts

The final conference of the year for the State headquarters of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations opens here today with the registration of state delegates in Graham Memorial commencing at 9 o'clock.

During the two-day gathering, students will hear speeches and forums on the present critical international situation. Committee meetings and plenary sessions will also outline the future course of the CCUN organization next fall.

Students and faculty of the University are cordially invited to attend all meetings. Speeches by representatives of branches of the US government and other dignitaries arriving at the Hill by plane and train for the two-day affair will constitute a large part of the program of the conference. Special emphasis will be placed on the increasing necessity of strengthening public support of the United Nations and on strengthening the United States as an end towards giving the UN the power to enforce its decisions.



This morning ,the speakers present at the conference will talk informally with students in social science and political classes. A half-hour broadcast over station WDUK at 1:30 will be a panel discussion on the Palestine situation. At 2 o'clock Dr. Earl Hollier Tomlin, educator and authority on the Middle East, will speak on the crisis in that area.

Committee meetings of the student delegates to the conference will continue until five. At 6:30 a banquet honoring speakers and delegates will be held at the Carolina Inn with Chancellor R. B. House giving a short address.

The evening program, which will also be broadcast, is scheduled for 8:15 in Gerrard hall. Lt. Col. A. L. Cox, Chief of the Veterans Section of Air Secretary Symington's office in Washington will speak on "Air Power is Peace Power." Following his speech, Harding F. Bancroft, Associate Chief of the Division of International Security Affairs, U. S. State department, will speak on the subject "U. S. Foreign Policy and the UN."

From 9:45 to 1 o'clock, Graham Memorial is sponsoring a semi-formal dance to which the public is cordially invited. Music for the occasion will be provided by Roy Cole's orchestra.

Dr. Jan-Albert Goris, Commissioner of Information for Belgium, was unable to attend the conference as planned due to circumstances beyond control.

DR. EARL HOLLIER TOMLIN AND HARDING F. BANCROFT (left and right) are two of the principal speakers at the state-wide CCUN conference which starts here today. Bancroft will speak tonight on "U. S. Foreign Policy and the U. N." in Gerrard hall at 8:15, while Dr. Tomlin speaks early this afternoon on the Palestine situation at 2 o'clock in Gerrard.

CICA PICNIC

All CICA members planning to attend the picnic Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock are asked to contact Jenny Trott in McIver dorm by Monday, May 17.

Town Men's Association Elects Officers; John Van Hecke To Head Organization

John Van Hecke, senior from Chapel Hill, was elected president of the recently re-organized Town Men's association at the meeting held Wednesday afternoon in Graham Memorial.

Other officers elected at the meeting were Alex Sessoms, vice-president; Dan McLaughlin, secretary; and Erwin Danziger, treasurer. All three are residents of Chapel Hill. Three members-at-large were elected to serve on the Executive committee along with the four officers. They were Gran Childress and David Sharpe of Chapel Hill and Nelson Taylor of Beaufort, N. C.

Van Hecke who has been instrumental in re-organizing the group is a former member of the old association, the legislature, a member of the Di Senate, and the CCUN.

Sessoms is also a carry-over member from the old association and is a junior majoring in Commerce.

Danziger, a son of the local candy king, is also a sophomore.

Childress, a junior in the Political Science department, is a former chairman of the Student party, a member and former critic of the Di senate, and has been active in the Wesley foundation.

Taylor, junior in the University, is in the NROTC and is vice-president of the Carteret County club.

Before the elections were held, a constitution for the association was presented. After some additions, it was passed by unanimous vote.

Van Hecke appointed Ed Coley of Raleigh as Social committee chairman. Coley will investigate the possibility of having a picnic for the group sometime before the end of the quarter.

IFC Scholarship Renamed to Honor Andrew Bershak

The scholarship being offered to an outstanding North Carolina senior by the Interfraternity council of the University has been renamed the Andrew Bershak Interfraternity scholarship, Jack Thompson, president of the IFC announced yesterday.

Formerly known as the Interfraternity council War Memorial scholarship, the name has been changed, Thompson explained, in order to recognize the contribution which Bershak made to the University.

During his stay here, Bershak played an "outstanding" brand of football for the University, was consistently on the Dean's list, and became a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Seriously injured during the course of the Virginia game in 1942, his senior year here, he nevertheless continued to play.

His injury is thought to have made him ineligible for military service and later to have caused his death. These facts, Thompson declared, caused the IFC to rename the scholarship in the hope that it would both serve as a memorial to Bershak and through his name be an inspiration to its holder.

The scholarship, funds for which were made available through contributions from fraternity men on the campus, is to be awarded annually.

Judging of Feet Will Take Place Throughout Day

Today is Barefoot day for seniors from sunup till moonup.

All seniors reading this who are improperly dressed have the senior class' request to hotfoot it dormward and re-emerge with corns and bunions showing.

Rumors have it that prizes will be awarded those bearers of the biggest, ugliest, prettiest and best groomed pairs of feet witnessed during the day. Value of prizes will descend in the latter order.

Separate tokens will be extended to males and coeds, it being prevalently understood that female feet are usually handsomer in design and less expansive in contour than those of the hardsides.

It is said the senior barefoot tradition dates back through two world wars, 21 revolutions and 17 football victories over Duke. During that period the largest barefoot turnout was 89 per cent. A 90 today will set a new record and the hoped-for 100 per cent will give future campusites something to shoot for.

Barefoot headquarters said yesterday a special "foot-conditioning" machine will be available on campus today for tenderfeet who are unaccustomed to bare exposures to Chapel Hill gravel.

Headquarters also wishes to remind seniors that this may be the last "legal" opportunity for them to unembarassingly participate in a barefoot parade. After graduation a certain dignity must be maintained which is not in keeping with sportive gestures of this kind.

The latest bulletin says the uniform of the day over seniors way starts at the ankles and moves upward.

Local Song Stylist Will Be Featured On WPTF Tonight

Riqui Casino, Latin-American song stylist, will be featured over radio station WPTF at 10:45 tonight in a new program entitled "A Date With Riqui." This is the first in a series of Friday night performances.

Accompanists for the sustaining show will be Jimmy Peace, guitarist, and Sid Epstein, accordionist.

Riqui, a senior, has given many singing performances in Chapel Hill and in night clubs throughout the state since his return from the Army in 1946. He types his music as "popular songs of the Americas."

The popular song stylist had his own show for a period of time at station WSJS in Winston-Salem, and has also been featured in shows originating from station WTOP in Washington, D. C.

Riqui sings in several languages including English, Spanish, Portuguese and Italian. His effort in all performances is to present a variation of songs which will be appreciated by the majority of radio listeners.

Many who have heard him say that Riqui has a unique singing style which gives the impression that the song is being directed expressly toward the individual listener.

Riqui sings those songs which are universally popular, and many of his audience say the song stylist sings in a charming manner that helps the listener to fully understand the songs of an entirely unfamiliar language.

CAROLINA DAMES

Members of the Carolina Dames club will have a pot luck supper this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the rear lawn of the Methodist church, weather permitting. In case of bad weather the supper will be held in the social rooms of the church. Each member is asked to bring a picnic lunch in a covered dish.

Husbands and children of members are invited to attend the supper.

Legislature Kills Block Fee Increase; Little Opposition To Redistricting Bill

By Gordon Huffines

Meeting in a closed executive session, the Student Legislature killed a proposal to increase the student block fee structure last night. As reported out by the Finance committee the bill would have increased graduate and undergraduate student fees 50 cents a quarter on approval of the Board of Trustees.

According to President Jess Dedmond the measure was killed because the legislators objected to faculty intervention in the matter which would be necessary to present the proposal to the Board of Trustees at this time. In a statement made last night after the session Dedmond said, "The bill to increase student funds was defeated primarily because I was unable to obtain a place on the agenda of the Board of Trustees. Secondarily, there was some questions as to the advisability of attempting to raise the fee structure at this time in light of constitutional restrictions."

Dedmond also explained that he called the closed executive session because the "information to be devulged, if revealed at this time, would possibly cause the loss of any benefits that might be derived for the students." He asserted that any information on the issue would be released as soon as circumstances permitted.

Redistricting Bill

The redistricting measure, providing for the apportioning of members of the legislature according to legislative districts, passed with little opposition. The bill sets up five town men's districts, including a special district for the Carrboro area.

The bill also provides for six men's dormitory districts and two women's dorm districts. The legislature defeated an amendment introduced by Jo Farris to set up a special district for Kenan dorm. There will be one town women's district composed of all women living in town.

According to the measure, the Elections Board has the power to determine the number of legislators to be elected from each established district.

Faculty Instruction Poll

The Legislature also passed a measure providing for a student poll on faculty instruction under the plan of the University Teacher-Rating scale. The poll is to be conducted by a committee composed of five members of the Student Legislature and the Faculty committee on General College Instruction with the consent of the individual instructor to be graded.

Appearing before the legislature, Professor A. P. Hudson, chairman of the Faculty committee, told representatives that approximately 6,100 of the teacher-rating scales had been distributed to instructors and department heads since March 27. He asserted that the action had been taken on the recommendation of the University Board of Trustees.

In expressing a favorable opinion on the legislature bill, Dr. Hudson warned the legislators that the good will of the faculty was necessary to conduct the poll successfully. He also stated that President Frank Graham and Chancellor Robert B. House were in favor of the student poll.

According to an amendment which was passed last night to remove a technical loophole in the bill, all schools and departments not under the jurisdiction of the General College shall also be included in the poll. Results of the poll, which is to be conducted at a time set by the committee, will be reported to the Chancellor of the University and to the Board of Trustees at his discretion. Results concerning individual instructors will be reported to appropriate heads of departments.

Sessions, Emily Sewell Chosen Quarterly Editor, Business Head

Faculty Committee, Publications Board Announce Selection

Bill Sessions, literary editor of the outgoing Carolina mag, was selected Tuesday as the new Carolina Quarterly's first editor and Emily Sewell, junior from Norfolk, Va. was named as the magazine's business manager.

The two selections were made by the quarterly's Faculty Advisory committee and the Publications board and announced at the meeting in Graham Memorial.

Applications had been received by the committee and board for several weeks, and the two highest quarterly posts were filled after careful consideration of the applicants' previous experience with publications and after considering other qualifications.

Sessions, rising senior from Conway, S. C., has served for more than two years on the Carolina mag staff and has held positions on several campus publications, including the Yack and the DTH.

In accepting the post of editor for the 1948-49 year, Sessions said, "I think the Carolina Quarterly can be of great service and interest to the student body."

Miss Sewell served for two years as associate editor of the Bertie Ledger-Advance in Windsor during the first of the war, and left her position there to enter service in the Marine corps. She transferred here from William and Mary college this quarter and is majoring in creative writing.

Sessions, an ex-merchant marine member, has served on the publicity cabinet of the YMCA and for two years has made contributions to the National Anthropology of College Poetry.

The new editor urges that all students who are interested in working on the quarterly staff contact him at the earliest opportunity.

The Faculty Advisory committee is composed of three English and two journalism professors and the Publications board consists of faculty and student members.

Election of the quarterly's editor and business manager was one step in the activities of the mag's faculty, executive and finance committees in working toward the first publication of the quarterly next fall.

A program has been underway for several weeks to secure finances for publishing the new literary mag.

Sandy Harris Elected President of YDC

Sandy Harris, law student from Mebane, was elected president of the Young Democrats club at their annual election meeting Tuesday. Former secretary of the group, Harris succeeds Lester G. Carter, Jr., law student from Fayetteville.

Other officers for next year include Wingate Hannah of Waynesville, vice president, and Rita Adams of Troy, secretary-treasurer. Formation of committees will take place at the next meeting.

Although most of the clothing collected from the University in February's European Relief drive was distributed through Church World Service, some of the clothing was sent personally to Mrs. Herta Epstein, CRALOG representative for Berlin by Claude Shotts, general secretary of the YMCA, for distribution among students in the Kirchliche Hockschule at Berlin.

About 400 young men and women are living in this Theological seminary, the majority coming from the Russian Zone to prepare for the ministry. Most of them are in dire need of clothing as well as of additional food; but the clothing question seems to be the most difficult to solve.

Students have organized a committee which consists of representatives of both sexes. It is up to them to distribute the incoming supplies among themselves according to their greatest need. A few hundred new students are expected for the summer term and it is likely that they will be the ones to receive the gifts.

Since students returned in the middle of April for the beginning of the summer-term, it was decided that clothing packages would be distributed only after all students had arrived.

Snapshots of students receiving clothing along with letters received from the group are to be on display at the YMCA within the next few days.

Typical of many Europeans.

Advance Ticket Sale for Playmaker Production to Begin This Morning

The advance ticket sale for the Carolina Playmaker production of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," which is to be presented in the Forest Theater on May 21, 22, and 23, will start this morning, according to an announcement by business manager John W. Parker.

. "There will be no reserved seats," he said, "and tickets will be good for any of the production nights. However, holders of season ticket books should be sure to exchange their book stubs for tickets before performance nights."

Tickets, which are priced at $1.00, may be obtained at Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street, or at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall.

Di Passes Negro Question Bill

Midnight Ballot Approves Issue

Dialectic Senators and interested students who filled the Di hall Wednesday night for the campus's first public debate on admitting Negroes to graduate schools heard three hours' worth of pros and cons before approving colored graduate students by a ratio of two to one.

At midnight a vote of 18-9 passed the bill of the evening, stamping Senate approval officially on acceptance of Negro applicants to state-owned schools in the South.

This decision, however, did not come without heated debate, comprising substitute measures, and a "Di-hard effort" to table discussion for one week until after the University Board of Trustes takes action Monday on present applications for admission to the Law school here.

Among the first of a long line of substitute bills was Dortch Warriner's idea that "regional graduate schools be established in the South for Negroes with all Southern states having the right of extraterritoiality in the area in which the school is located." This was branded "too expensive a venture" and defeated. Rejection also met a later alternative measure by Harold Darden to the effect that each Southern state found a school for one particular occupation to handle colored graduates through the entire South who were interested in that profession.

Between the substitute measures, the majority of those present seemed to agree that Negroes definitely deserved educational equality. However, Al Lowenstein struck the crux of the issue when he maintained that the question was not what colored people deserved so much as the possible reaction to anything they were to be given at this time.

Charlie Hodson and Jim Spence asserted that accepting Negro graduates would most assuredly create awkwardness for the University, and Bob Nelson thought Negroes themselves would be uncomfortable in white graduate schools unless they started off with their equality as early as grammar school.

Two Students Strip For CRIL

By Bill Kellam

Nobody knew just what was coming off yesterday morning in the Y lobby.

Nobody, that is, but Wild—to say the least—Bill Buchan, a DTH associate editor, and usually reserved Ed McLeod, Y cabinet member. This pair decided earlier this week that the CRIL clothing drive needed a little life and consequently the two staged an original burlesque act yesterday during the break between the 10 and 11 o'clock classes.

Gypsy Rose Lees

The Y lobby was its usual tumultuous self when the bundle bearing would-be Gypsy Rose Lees made their way to the collection box, situated next the Woman's Glee Club ticket table in the lobby.

As the duo dropped their bundles into the box, the amplifier atop the lobby's phone booth broke into the tune of a Hank Beebe-lyriced singing commercial. The music, also composed by Beebe, was sung by the renowned Sigma Chi sextette.

"Take'em Off"

As the six Sigs sang the strip polka, Buchan and McLeod, to the amazement of all, began to disrobe. Off came their shirts, then the undershirts, and finally the pants.

Throughout the performance, Fran Angas, speaker of the Coed Senate who was selling tickets at the Glee club table, gaped speechlessly at the scantily-clad lads.

Mother Casts Confusion

Fran wasn't the only astounded feminine onlooker who was close to the performers. McLeod's mother had arrived at the Y a few minutes before the show began. Her appearance at the scene momentarily confused the two but they decided to carry on, or rather off, no matter who was present.

According to Buchan, the idea was originally conceived as a joke. Since both of them showed up at the Y at the appointed hour, however, they had to go through with it. Buchan commented yesterday afternoon that the stripped garments were good ones, too.

In addition to Beebe, the sextette was composed of B. K. Grow, Bill Tsunas, Earl Somers, Buddy Lyons, and John Clayton. The groaners, under the direction of Beebe, recorded the tune in Swain hall on Wednesday night.

Will We Meet The Challenge

Today and in the near future world civilization is and will be guided in large part by the economic and diplomatic power of the United States. History will tell whether the American has the capacity to assume the responsibility thrown upon him by the peoples of other nations who, weakened by devastation, hunger, and fear, turn toward us for leadership and material aid.

Although busy with his own affairs, the American is beginning to understand that he is also a citizen of the world; that he is a part of a privileged and therefore obligated nation.

But only free men can be brother citizens. In Europe the urge towards a federation of western European nations is stronger than ever before in history. It is obvious that some facets of the process are more feasible than others. Military co-ordination will come first, because the time is short and the fear of aggression strong, but voices cry out in Europe that it must unite in order to maintain peace. The machinery for the removal of traditional frontiers on a relatively small part of the continent moves doggedly ahead with work on economic, military, and governmental co-ordination among nations.

Elsewhere in the world people are also beginning to realize that diplomatic negotiations must, for once and for all, be backed by a concerted and organized movement on the part of many nations to insure that the United Nations will have the chance to expand and lay the basis for a satisfactory brotherhood of states that can exist in mutual support and co-operation.

A few men call for a group of free states to confront the forces of Communist expansion with a collective security league of determined and superior moral, economic and military force — so used that no one state will fall victim to the common threat of domination. Such a combination of power would not be an expression of despair, and acceptance of the inevitability of another war, but rather a testimony of the willingness and hopes of a great many to work for peace. The peace must, after all be on a lasting foundation, and the critical need for it must determine the method of insuring it.

The American citizen is forced to see himself and his nation as a great factor in the final outcome. In this nation lies a large part of the food, money, resources and influence that can be used to guide the rest of the world toward either a lasting peace or the worst of wars.

It is not hard to see the seriousness of the situation, but it is hard to see a lasting solution in the midst of fear, hate and distrust. To an American, being a citizen suddenly means being a responsible citizen on a universal as well as a national basis. Will we have the wisdom, the understanding, the determination to meet the challenge of this realization?

— George Drew

Shoes Must Go

Today it pays to be a senior. For no good reason except that they've managed to stay here for four years the lucky bums get to walk around barefooted all day today without everyone looking at them as if they were crazy.

Why should the seniors be the only ones to have this privilege? And why should it be for just one day? Shoes are necessary evils in winter but comes the good old summer time and just plain epidermis is good enough for me, thank you.

If students on this campus are ever to live in comfort we must abolish shoes. There must be a revolution from the bottom up. The poor downtrodden feet must emerge into their rightful place in the sun.

Fellow students, I urge you to join with me in a magnificent People's Crusade for comfort. Shoes must go!

NegroQuestion UpForTrustees

By R. Foo Giduz

That's Monday morning at 11 o'clock. . .When the Executive Committee of the University Board of Trustees meets in Raleigh to discuss, among other things, the three Negro applications to professional schools of the University. . .It seems to have been already well established that this august body will do little more (publicly) than to pass the whole matter on to higher authorities.

And while we aren't totally acquainted with the inner legal, perhaps necessary red tape machinations of the Trustees, we should one and all hope the matter will not be strung out for years on Jim Crow technicalities—as is now being done in most other suthun states, suh. . .Shall we be able to continue to be proud of North Carolina for taking action instead of reaction?. . .

—Carouseler recommends to any parties interested in this timely matter that they read in the spring issue of Southwest Review, (SMU publication) the concise and conclusive story of the "Sweatt Case" in Texas . . .That's on the Library reading room shelves. . .Packed with facts, reasons, and conclusions! . . .Not meaning to be overly facetious about this matter, but : —guy seriously asked C.C.: What's gonna happen next year if a Negro requests admission to UNC to study astronomy?. . . Must Mr. Morehead build a planetarium at NCC? . . . . That's not beyond possibility!

Afterthought: — We've seen at least one definite note of progress resulting from recent discussions of this topic. . . . One and all who have expressed opinions pro or con have at least granted that segregation is on the way out. . . .WHEN is the only question.

Final warning good buddies. This Saturday is final day for registration in the May 29 gubernatorial primary. . . . Will you get on board?. . . . It's the truth! . . . Though we thought it'd never, never happen (even to a dog). . . My boy the Mellow-Man Melton is really going straight. . . . Yep, getting married, and next month. . . . Friend commenting on this yesterday sez, "Yep, marriage is an institution. . . .

Closing on a more climactic quote. . . . Doc Lefler waxed historical the other day speaking of student activities in state schools back in the '90's: ". . . What is now Dook University went for about 30 years without professional football!". . .Now we know.

Fee Increase Needed

By Pete Gerns

"Are you in favor of an increase in student fees?" Perhaps you have read a lot about this controversial subject lately. This columnist believes that the blame should not be put on anyone's shoulders in haste; we hope that whatever is enacted shall be constructive enough to outlast several student generations.

"The student constitution sets a maximum of $20.00 to be charged each student in student fees. We are operating under a fee now that is not sufficient to run our student government. If an increase is necessary to run our government, then I say increase the fee." Joe Leary.

"I think that an increase in the student fees is necessary due to the fact that the fees that we now have are not sufficient nor will they come near covering the expenses of the student activities." Tom Shreve.

"It is the only way to pay off the debt — it's just that simple." Patsy McNutt.

"The present use of funds collected from student fees is uneconomical and wasteful in the sense that little is provided for the average student in comparison to the expenditures. In particular, the enormous sums spent on certain student publications show an unreasonably small return. No student fees are at present used to promote cultural or educational activities of lasting value. Fees should be lowered rather than raised." John Zucker.

"I feel the activities on the campus at present are beneficial to all students and should be continued. With increasing prices a raise in student fees is necessary." Jack Girard.

"Speaking as a veteran I would not be affected by an increase in student fees. Were the extra fee to come from my pocket, I would like to get more for my money than I believe I am getting. Were I to feel that I was getting something from the addition — then I would be in favor of the extra fee — at present I find it hard to believe that I would receive more by paying more." W. G. McFarland.

"The fact that more and more students are becoming interested in campus activities necessitates an increase in the capacity of the activities to provide a place for all who desire to participate." Tom Shelton.

"I feel that this increase (the proposed seventy-five cents) is small enough that it will not affect any student and the legislature is in need of the funds. I feel that the activities of student government are important to the entire campus and an essential part of the Carolina way of life. We should whole-heartedly support them." Merle Stevens.

"I am definitely in favor of raising fees, particularly for seniors. Without the old system of class fees, it is impossible to do anything without selling — and students just won't pay even a nominal amount out of their own pockets. Until classes have a definite amount of money they can count on, we'll never have the desired spirit. Failure to have a Senior banquet, picnic, etc., along with the loss of the old Junior-Senior prom is ample evidence that more money is needed for class affairs." Bill Tate.

"In view of the lack of entertainment funds and increase in cost of operation of student activities I think an increase in student fees is advisable." J. C. Brown, Jr.

The deadline on the presidential poll has been extended to next Tuesday due to popular demand. Readers are requested to send in their ballots as soon as possible.

The Political Spotlight

Why Not Nine Districts?

By Charlie Long

"Elections Committee Approves Redistricting Bill" reads Wednesday's Tar Heel headline so it is to be presumed that the legislature will be given the opportunity to pass judgment on who will sit with them. In all probability the legislature, sitting Thursday night, will pass the bill without too much discussion. Frankly, after what was said in the elections committee hearings, not too much remains to be said.

Leary's committee held open hearings for two days while one and all tried to outdo each other in stating the high and noble plan upon which they would "compromise" the representation of the students. The UP in a noble gesture permitted the setting up of Carrboro as a separate district. With Carrboro as a district we now have five districts in town from which to select approximately 25 legislators. Two of the districts, Victory Village and Carrboro will have a combine strength of three representatives which so far as redistricting goes makes the entire ball a first class farce.

Exactly why the University Party will not permit a nine town district bill to pass has never been exactly explained. The people living in town need the competition in small areas for legislature posts to build up interest in their government and for real representation. At the present time there is at most two legislators from town who are not UP and fraternity men. That means that over two thirds of the town is represented by two men. This does not mean that fraternity men are not capable of representing all of the town but, it is indicative of the fact that a block frat vote can generally name its own ticket from town. It means that the person nominated can sit back and know that the election is won without a fight. It further means that little or no attempt is made to find out who they represent or what the peons in town would like to see happen in student government. Then the UP and the fraternities shake their heads and wonder where all this anti-frat stuff comes from.

All of the blame however: should not be laid on the block vote and it must be recognized that at any time they wanted too, the non-frat town electorate could sweep every legislature seat if they would get out and vote. The only problem there is that no one stirs up their interest and so they remain dead politically and student government suffers accordingly.

Interesting side note: Not one of the defeated presidential candidates is serving on the president's coalition cabinet. The University Debate Council has about given up the idea of sending a debating team to England this summer. Rumor has it that they can't find two debators good enough to warrent the cost of the trip. The Senior Class is experiencing trouble selling all the bids for the Krupa dance. Remember the howls that went up when everyone couldn't get a bid for the Spring Germans. Sounds sorta like the old rationing days, "if you haven't got it then by damn I want it."

Write Away

Against The Mundt Bill

The House un-American Activities Committee has introduced a "Subversive Activities Control Act of 1948" to Congress. This bill, known as the Mundt-Nixon Bill (H. R. 5852), if passed, would destroy the most fundamental features of the Bill of Rights.

This is no alarmist statement. It is a cold legal fact. The bill would not only punish members of the Community Party, by fines and imprisonment, for their political views—it would do the same for every progressive American, every militant trade unionist or even conservative political opponent of the administration's war program.

1) "Disruption of trade and commerce." (Any strike for higher wages could come under this provision.)

2) "Inciting economic, social, and racial strife and conflicts." (Any protest against Jim Crow or anti-Semitism is labeled "racial incitement" by bigots.)

3) "Dissemination of propaganda calculated to undermine established government and institutions." (Publication of anything exposing governmental betrayal of the people's interests, such as Henry Wallace's fight against the sell-out of FDR's foreign policy, would come under this provision.)

Sponsors of the bill claim that it will not illegalize the Communist Party but will force to bring it out into the open. How much is left of "legality" —how "open" can a party be if advocacy of its principles and program is made a crime punishable by as much as ten years imprisonment and $10,000 fine?

Progressive-minded people must act to defeat this bill. Demand that your congressmen fight and vote against it. Arouse your organizations, your friends, your neighbors, to the danger facing us all.

Plans Set For Center

By Dan Sapp

Tentative floor plans for the proposed community center were shown at the village council meeting Monday night. The Center is to be constructed from two barracks each measuring 25 by 60 feet. The plans show an auditorium, approximately 40 by 50 feet and a nursery approximately 25 by 20 feet, plans also include offices and rest rooms.

Residents of the trailer court will participate in the activities when the Center is erected. Court residents have volunteered assistance in construction and contributions for financing the Center. A survey is being made to get pledges for the Center.

Discussions of methods for getting labor for the Community Center were held Monday night. T. L. Burch, village manager who was present at the meeting suggested that a fulltime labor foreman be employed. The majority of the work is to be done by volunteer workers.

The traffic problems of King St, Johnson St., and Daniels Road were discussed although there were few residents from these streets to participate in the planned open hearing. Surveys made by council members of the streets in question showed that all three streets are in favor of one way traffic. The council was presented a plan for movement of the traffic counter clockwise entering King street from upper Mason Farm and into Johnson and Daniels still moving counter clockwise. The Daniels road "spur" will not be one way for obvious reasons. The council plans to publish a map showing the traffic directions in detail. Signs are expected to be completed in about a week.

In answer to complaints about continuous speeding in the Village, the council passed a resolution to get form letters stenciled telling persons that they have been seen speeding and warning them of the consequences of continuing to do so.

Mrs. Nelson, council secretary, reported on a letter she has received from the Post Office stating that letter and storage boxes for the Village have been ordered for some time but have not yet arrived. At the direction of the council Mrs. Nelson will write a letter to the Post Master General in Washington. We'll get those mail boxes yet.

While we're on the question of letters, one Village resident is due to get one soon that he won't like. According to report this citizen's front yard is a shame and disgrace and plans are being laid for a complaining letter to be forwarded to him.

For some pleasant dancing music, don't forget to come around to the main lounge tonight where Roy Cole and his orchestra will be playing for a dance in honor of CCUN conference delegates.

Tschaikovsky's Symphony No. 3 will be heard on tonight's recorded dinner music hour, with Albert Coates conducting the London Symphony orchestra. Also, Simeon Bellison will will be heard as clarinet soloist with the Roth String quartet playing Mozart's Quintet for Clarinet and Strings.

If you like ping pong, make use of GM's game room, on the ground floor behind the Rendezvous. All you need to do to get in a good game is walk in and shout "Winners" — or maybe if you're not so good you'll want to play whoever loses the game in progress.

You Know It . . . . . Or Do You?

By Walter A. Sharafanowich

With this issue, the Daily Tar Heel is beginning a new feature — a series of questions about various buildings and objects of interests on the campus that the average student passes several times a day, but perhaps does not notice.

The answers will be found on page four. (No fair looking at the answers until you've guessed for yourselves. A certain DTH trio didn't do well, either.) The questions count one point each. A ten-spot puts you in Species Genius.

1. How many women in the Post Office Mural?
2. How many pillars on Graham Memorial?
3. Are they round or square?
4. How many pillars on the Post Office?
5. Are they round or square?
6. Which faces Franklin Street—Battle Vance or Pettigrew?
7. Where is the opening between the building—B-V, B-p, V-p?
8. What shape is this opening? arched, squared, or alley-way?
9. How many paths meet in front of the Confederate Soldier?
10. What, if anything, is in the meeting place of the paths there?

Men's Honor Council

Council Members Are Capable

This is the fourth in a series of articles designed to acquaint the student body with the honor and campus codes. In this article we present the campus with an introduction to the members of the Men's Honor Council.

From the top down the Men's Honor Council represents some of the top men of the campus, all chosen in general elections by the student body.

The oldest member in length of service is the recently chosen chairman, Page Harris. He is the hold-over member from the past year's council. Page, who is a rising junior from Durham, is an active member of the Order of the Grail and the Phi Assembly.

Navy Air Corps veteran Gene Jones lends his maturity to the council in his capacity as vice chairman. Gene is a graduate of the University of South Carolina and is workng on his masters degree in zoology.

Probably best known to the campus of all the council members is former co-captain of the football team, Ralph Strayhorn. Ralph is president of the first year law class and the Law schools representative in the council. He is also an outstanding member of the Order of the Grail and the Golden Fleece.

Two capable members of the university's men's glee club fill the senior council slots, Bud Bryson and Stan Smith. Bud is a graduate of Woodberry Forrest School. Stan, hailing from Asheboro, is a Commerce major.

Junior class representatives are Charles Smith and Dick Boren. Charlie served the past year as president of the sophomore class and is now, in addition to sitting on the men's council, serving as chairman of the Inter-Fraternity Council court. Dick is well known for his excellent work in the legislature and is still a member. Also he is a member of the University Glee club.

NROTC student Chuck Northend and veteran Bruce Sanborn complete the roster of the council by serving as sophomore members. Chuck is a native of Florida while Bruce is a native North Carolinian from Gastonia.

The outstanding thing about the Men's Council makeup is the general cross-section of the campus found in its membership. Thus in the council you find no one faction, no one political party, or no one anything represented except the one student body of the University of North Carolina. It is upon this principle that the council operates and in doing so keeps one of the kingpins of student government sharply in place.

With the Lewiston Police, you can't win. Recently they arrested two women, twins, and charged one of them with lewd and lascivious conduct. The other was charged with idleness. (Lisbon (Maine) Enterprise.

A garbage man was arrested for posing as a diplomat. Nevertheless, there's a lot worse equipment a diplomat could have nowadays than a good sound knowledge of what garbage is and what isn't.

Rain Partially Halts Conference Net Play; Loop Track Meet Opens Today

Golfers Rally To Deadlock State; Baseball Rained Out; Play Today

Cox, Oliver Gain Important Points

Raleigh, May 13 — Carolina's golf team rallied from behind in the last foursome here today to gain a 13 and a half to 13 and a half tie with the linksmen of State college over the rolling fairways of the local country club.

It was Bob Cox and Harvey Oliver that gathered the necessary tying points for the Tar Heels with Cox halving his match while Oliver completely shutout his opponent. The two combined to add a whitewash in the best ball department to give Carolina seven and a half of the nine points in the foursome and a tie for the afternoon.

Oliver Hot

Oliver had his best round in many a day, carding a par 72, but the medalist honors for the match went to State No. 1 man, Charlie Gibson who gave par a four-stroke slashing in registering a 32-36 — 68 which proved a little too much for Tar Heel star Harvie Ward.

Ward couldn't match the par-breaking figures of his foe, and found himself closed out when the pair reached the 16th with Gibson a mere five under.

Roy McKenzie, back at his old No. 2 spot, found the return to his liking as he fires 17 pars and a birdie for a 71 card and a 3-0 shutout. Jack Brantley added the majority of the rest of the Tar Heel tallies, winning at the No. 3 position.

It was the Tar Heels' first tie of the season against a record of seven wins and three losses.

Summary

Gibson (S) defeated Ward, 3-1. McKenzie (C) defeated Brackett, 3-0. Best ball to State, 3-0.

Brantley (C) defeated Saenz, 2 and a half to one half. Dixon (S) defeated Brooks, 3-0. Best ball to State 2 and a half to one-half.

Cox halved with Turnbull, one and one-half to one and one-half. Oliver (C) defeated Dearstyne, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

Big Four Lettermen Stage Outing Today

Monogrammers from Big Four schools will get together today in and around Raleigh for an all-day outing which will include a barbecue and a softball tournament.

Busses will be leaving Woollen gym at 1:30 for Monogram club members and their dates. Tickets can be obtained at the busses from Bill Pritchard.

Wake Forest will oppose Carolina in one softball contest while Duke and State meet in the other clash. The winners will then battle for the championship. There will be a consolation tilt for the losers.

The Carolina lettermen will then go over to Pullen park for a barbecue. The whole crowd will journey to Riddick stadium this evening to view the first annual Red-White football game. The contest, to be played under the lights, will climax State's spring grid practice.

Frosh Cindermen Conquer Raleigh

Raleigh, May 13 — Carolina's freshman track team repeated last week's triumph over Raleigh high school with a 73½ to 39½ victory over the same team here this afternoon.

Top scorer for the Tar Babies was Roscoe Hanson, who gained a first in the shot put, a third in the discus, and a tie for third in the high jump.

Other Carolina firsts were made by Flowers in the 440, Carr in the 880, Perry in the discus, Mosely in the javelin, Kemp in the pole vault, Montague in the broad jump, and the relay quartet of Lane, Koenig, Carr and Flowers.

220-yard dash — Wadsworth, (R) Melvin (C), Rouse (C). 22.5.

880-yard run — Carr (C), Ferrell (R), Brockman (C). 2:09.

One mile run — Leonard (R), Wooten (R), Barringer (C). 4:56.7.

Shot put — Hanson (C), Goss (R), Perry (C). 40 feet.

Discus — Perry (C), Hubbard (C), Hanson (C). 117 feet.

Javelin — Mosly (C), Harris (C), Payne (C). 157 feet.

Pole vault — Kemp (C), Tie for second between Blackard (R) and Howell (C). 10 feet 10 in.

High jump — Goss (R) Peebles (C), tie for third between Howell (C) and Hanson (C). 5 feet 6 inches.

Relay — Carolina (Lane, Koenig, Carr, Flowers). 3:44.6.

Entries in Coed Tank Meet Due

All organizations planning to participate in the coed intramural swimming meet to be held Monday night at 7:30 must submit the names of their swimmers to Miss Mary Frances Kellam, physical education instructor, by today. No entries will be accepted later than that time.

Six events are listed on the program for the meet. Swimmers entering will compete in the 25-yard free style, 25-yard backstroke, 25-yard breaststroke, 50-yard freestyle, 75-yard medley relay and 200-yard freestyle relay.

Meet officials have announced that all girls entering the competition must have an "A" medical rating and should have participated at least twice before entering the meet.

State Nine Leading When Deluge Comes

Trailing by a 3-0 score in the last of the fourth inning, Carolina's loop-leading Tar Heels welcomed a tremendous downpour of rain which flooded Emerson field yesterday to halt their game with N. C. State's Wolfpack.

Coaches of the two teams agreed that the game should be played off this afternoon at 4 o'clock, providing the field has sufficiently dried.

Probable mound choice for the Tar Heels this afternoon will be Dean Cassell, sophomore right-hander, who will be making his second start in Big Four action. Cassell hurled eight innings against Duke 10 days ago, allowing five hits during that stretch. He has not figured in any decisions this season.

John (Tootsie) Holding, Wolfpack pitcher, had set the Tar Heels down in order for the first three innings to have the beginning of a no-hitter. He retired the nine men who faced him without a semblence of a hit.

Frank Robinson was on the mound for Carolina, and he succeeded in blanking the visitors for three of the first four innings. State picked up all three of its runs in the second frame, largely as a result of Robinson's wildness.

A walk, two hit batsmen, and a single forced in one State run, and Hank Utley' line drive single to center accounted for two more. Those two hits were the only ones of the afternoon for State.

Thus the Tar Heels still lead the Big Four race by two full games. Duke and Wake Forest, with 4-5 records, and State, with 3-4, complete the loop. Carolina has a 5-2 mark.

Eight Tar Heels Among Advancers In Singles Field

A driving rain brought play in the Southern conference tennis tournament to a halt in the middle of the second round yesterday afternoon as the big loop net show got underway on the local courts.

The rains put a slight crimp in the plans for the tourney setting the action back a bit off schedule, but barring further bad weather the players will get back on the track with a strenous day of tennis beginning this morning at 9:30.

Concluding second round matches will be first in the order of the day, to be followed by the first round of doubles competition. At 2 o'clock the third round of the singles play will be reeled off, after which the second round matches will be played.

In that manner play will continue all day until the semi-finals matches in both divisions have been played or rain or darkness overtakes. Tourney officials doubted last night that the finals could be reached today, necessitating semi-final matches tomorrow morning.

Yesterday's play saw all the favorites advance as expected, with all eight Tar Heel entries moving forward.

Tar Baby Baseballers Rained Out at State

The baseball game between the jayvee nines of Carolina and State which was slated to be played yesterday was postponed and the two outfits will probably meet sometime next week.

The juniors were seeking to rebound from a 4-3 setback they received at the hands of the Presbyterian Junior college last week. The Tar Babies had compiled a six-game winning streak up to that point. The Carolina juniors will be seeking their third victory of the season over the Wolfcubs.

Fourteen Teams Competing Today In Trial Events

By Buddy Vaden

Preliminary events in the 1948 Southern conference championship track and field meet will be held this afternoon on Fetzer field starting at 3 o'clock. Finals in the 15 scheduled events will be held tomorrow afternoon starting at 2:30.

Admission will not be charged for today's activities, but there will be a 50 cents admission fee for Saturday's classic. Passbooks will not be honored because this is a conference championship meet.

Fifty-one Tar Heels will be competing in a field of over 275 trackmen, representing 14 conference schools. The only two schools in the league that will not send representatives are George Washington and The Citadel.

Maryland Powerful

Maryland, which won the Carolina relays and placed second in the indoor meet, will be one of the strongest teams on the field and will be a threat to the Tar Heels, defending champions. The Terps, unbeaten in dual meet competition this season, will bring a 36 man team to Chapel Hill in an attempt to dethrone the current champs.

Although the Tar Heels will have four defending champions on the field today and tomorrow, they will be missing the abilities of Jack Milne and Chunk Simmons, both winners last year. Simmons collected ten points for the locals by copping firsts in both hurdles events. Milne, one of the top milers of this area, won the title last year with a time of 4:27.4.

Today's Schedule

3:00—shot put, javelin throw, preliminaries.
3:30—Broad jump, 100-yard dash trials.
3:50—120-yard high hurdles trials.
4:10—440-yard run trials.
4:15—Discus throw, preliminaries.
4:30—100-yard dash semi-finals.
4:40—120-yard high hurdles, semi-finals.
4:50—880-yard run trials.
5:05—220-yard dash trials.
5:20—220-yard low hurdles trials.
5:40—220-yard dash semi-finals.
5:50—220-yaard low hurdles semi-finals.

Modified High School Day Planned In Conjunction With Track Meets

In conjunction with the Southern Conference track and field championships scheduled here for 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon there will be a modified high school day.

Orrin Rogers, junior athletic director of the Conference and chairman of the Southern Conference Track committee, extended invitations to all high school pupils in this section to visit representatives from the various states and the Dominion of Canada during the afternoon. The invitations were issued both to pupils and teachers who are members of track and any group of students in the state whom the pupils might wish to honor.

(Invitations were issued by proxy today. The high schools of the state [illegible] Association were [illegible] it was [illegible] to estimate just how many persons would respond, but that he expected a good delegation.

He pointed out that the appreciation invitation exercises would [illegible] to some degree in discussing the purpose of inviting high school students. Armstrong said it was to establish [illegible] and it was to stimulate interest in the track and field [illegible].

The Monogram will be hosts to the delegations from the various [illegible] represented at tomorrow's athletic event. The events will include the dashes, the one and two-mile runs, the middle distances, high and low hurdles, [illegible] jump, high jump, [illegible] and pole vault.

Where's My Broom?

As of yesterday gubernatorial candidate Charlie Johnson is minus two supporters in Chapel Hill. Seems that Johnson wrote to journalism professors Stuart Sechrist and L. M. Pollander yesterday on the forthcoming elections. Unfortunately Johnson addressed the letters to the two gentlemen in care of the University Maintenance department. When last seen Prof. Sechrist was inquiring where he had left his broom.

Pre-Registration Corrected Report

Pre-registration for the summer session began Monday. Only students who are registered for the spring quarter are eligible to preregister for the summer session.

Students should see their faculty advisers by tomorrow to have the green forms prepared. Green forms should be taken directly to the registration hall. Venable "X". Positively no summer session green forms will be accepted in the registration after Monday.

Preregistration for the summer may be for either term or both terms. Students who register for the first term only and later decide to register for the second term must wait until July 21 to register for the second session of the summer school.

Students who do not plan to attend the summer school but who will return for the fall quarter, may preregister for the fall, next week, May 17-22. The procedure is the same as for the summer—from faculty advisers to the registration hall, Venable "X".

All general college students who will not attend one or both terms of the summer school should register for the fall quarter during the period, May 17-22. Registration is by appointment with the student's general college adviser. Appointments may be made by signing an appointment sheet at the information desk, main lobby of South building during the period, May 11-15.

Students who desire exemption from classes at certain hours for the summer school or the fall quarter should secure petition blanks form their deans.

Phil Ellis Says Radio Stations Emphasizing Local Coverage

By Jim Dickinson

Phil Ellis, station WPTF's special events director and popular news commentator, told a group of aspiring radio writers Tuesday that a majority of radio stations today are featuring local news coverage and are de-emphasizing national and international news.

Ellis, who graduated from the University in 1940, spoke before Joe Morrison's radio writing class in Bynum hall.

"Local news is the big thing now," said Phil. "Most people want to know what's going on in their own backyards."

He said the trend of most stations now is to present local news in a colorful manner that will be most appreciated by radio listeners.

The weather, says Phil, is probably the most important news item of any radio station. A report is given on every newscast throughout the day at WPTF, he relates.

Relative humidity reports are the one big request of all sponsors he went on. "People who pay for programs seem to be primarily interested in their customers' comfort."

After being introduced by Morrison as a capable jokester Phil said apologetically, "I have no old jokes and I have no new ones. Anyone interested in either is free to leave now."

He mentioned that the class facing him was the same one he addressed while visiting here last year.

"I hope everybody has been promoted since then," he said.

Whitsunday Service to Hear Talk By Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor of American religious thought at Duke, will be the speaker at the community Whitsunday service Sunday night at 8 o'clock in the Episcopal church.

Sponsored by the Chapel Hill Ministers association, the service in celebration of Whitsunday, Pentecost, the festival of the [illegible] today of the Christian church [illegible] services being held throughout the country in preparation for the meeting of the World Council of Churches at Amsterdam, Holland, from August 22 to September 4.

Sharing in the leadership of the service are the Rev. Bernard Mangum, pastor of the Congregational church and chairman of the local [illegible] and the Rev. E. C. Cooper, of the Lutheran congregation, chairman of the committee which planned this service.

Music will be by a chorus composed of members of choirs of the Churches of Chapel Hill directed by Gene Stryker of the Music department. Hilda Frances Lawrence, senior voice major, will act as soloist for "The Church's One Foundation." Gwen Howard, chairman of the YWCA music committee, was chairman of the committee arranging the music.

As a further means of giving emphasis to the unity of Christians and the privilege they share in common worship, the ministers of the community are to exchange pulpits for the morning service of [illegible].

Coeds Available As Baby Sitters

Fifteen members of the Social Service committee of the YWCA will be available at the specified times to serve as baby sitters for children of University students.

If parents are unable to contact any of these coeds they are asked to call Jane Castevens at 6071, chairman of the committee who will make the necessary arrangements. Parents are urged to give advance notice if possible.

Negroes here would bring criticism from the State legislature in such drastic form as appropriation slices. Refusing them, Long thought, might be beneficial as a basis for a test case in the Supreme Court to strike educational discrimination from North Carolina laws.

Gran Childress predicted "no convulsions" after a few objectionable newspaper articles and student demonstrations, guessing that eventually Negro graduates would be accepted less as novelties. Bill Buchan also cited the calmness with which women suffrage was tolerated as an example that expected objectionable demonstrations often did not materialize.

The debate took complex turns all through the evening. An attempt to table the timely bill until after trustee action was repudiated as "side-stepping issues."

Still, the Di opinion of having Negro graduate students in state-owned schools throughout the South was questionable until a vote was called and approval came with surprising decisiveness.

KA OFFICERS

Marvin Lee of Hopewell, Virginia, was elected to replace Bob Kirby as president of Kappa Alpha at a meeting of the fraternity held Wednesday evening.

Kirby, who was only recently elected to his third term in the office, had resigned because of the pressure of his work as secretary-treasurer of the student body.

Lee, the new president, transferred from Randolph-Macon where he served as president of the student body and as president of Kappa Alpha. He is a graduate student in political science here.

Coed Senate Picks Patsy McNutt New Parliamentarian

Patsy McNutt was appointed Parliamentarian of the Coed Senate in the meeting held Tuesday night in Graham Memorial. This position is a newly set-up office and will remain a regular part of the Senate.

Following the committee reports, a bill was passed unanimously to prohibit photographs to be taken on the girls dormitory floors except by girls for their private use.

A discussion was held on the present dollar fee required of a Coed at each quarter and the group decided to retain this fee for at least another year.

English Lecturer To Give Weil Series Starting on May 24

Richard Henry Tawney, well-known British lecturer and au- r and professor of economic tory in the University of Lon- n. will deliver the 1948 series : Weil lectures here May 24, .. 26.

The lectures will be in Gerrard all and will begin at 8:30 o'clock n each of the three nights.

General Subject

The general subject will be Social Democracy in England." Titles of the three lectures will be "The English Approach to Socialism," "Policies and Methods," and "The Prospect for the Future," in the order named.

The Weil lectures on American citizenship were inaugurated at Chapel Hill in 1914 with the then ex-president and future chief justice of the United States William Howard Taft as the lecturer, and were established on a permanent foundation through the generosity of the families of Sol Weil and Henry Weil of Goldsboro. Since then they have come to be an annual event of outstanding importance on the public events calendar of the University.

Born In Calcutta

Professor Tawney is well known in the United States and specifically in Chapel Hill where he lectured in 1941 while on a visit to President Frank P. Graham, who is a former student of his at the University of London. He was born in Calcutta, India, and was educated at Rugby and at Balliol college, Oxford.

He has been professor of economic history in the London School of Economics of the University of London since 1914, after having taught the same subject at the University of Glasgow and in Oxford university.

In addition to his academic activities he has served England in many public capacities, including membership on the Consultative committee of the Board of Education, the Coal Industry commission, the Cotton Trade Conciliation commission and as advisor to the British embassy in Washington in 1941-42.

Religion and Capitalism

His most widely read book is "Religion and the Rise of Capitalism," first published in 1926 and since reissued in many editions, including a 35-cent Penguin book edition in 1947. Other books by him which have evoked a wide popular interest are "The Acquisitive Society" and "Equality," while his more erudite studies include "The Agrarian Problem in the Sixteenth Century," "English Economic History" and "Land and Labour in China." He holds honorary doctorates from the Universities of Manchester, Paris and Chicago, and is a Fellow of the British Academy and a member of the American Philosophical society. He is now visiting professor at the University of Chicago.

Food Demonstration To Be Given Tuesday

Mrs. Frank Hanft, Chairman of the Nutrition committee of the Chapel Hill Chapter of American Red Cross, announces a food demonstration to be given by Miss Elizabeth Whitney of Kraft food company on Tuesday night at 7:45 in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

Miss Whitney is coming to North Carolina on the invitation of the Alamance county Home Economics association which she will address in Burlington.

In Chapel Hill she will have two especially interested groups, the Durham-Orange county Home Economics association and the Carolina Dames club. The meeting is open to the public and anyone interested is invited to attend.

FIVE ATTRACTIVE SPONSORS and the man with the music are shown left and right. The five girls will lead the figure in tonight's Senior Prom scheduled for Woollen gymnasium from 9 to 12 o'clock, and Gene Krupa and his orchestra will provide the background. Krupa will also give a concert this afternoon in Memorial hall from 4 to 6 o'clock. The sponsors, top row, left to right, are Catherine Holt of Burlington, who was recently crowned May Queen and who is social chairman of the senior class, escorted by James McCormick, Sanford; Minor Boring, Oxford, sponsor of Benson McCutcheon, Durham, president of the senior class. Bottom row: Mrs. Anne Cothran Tate, formerly of Raleigh, sponsor for her husband, William Knox Tate of Washington, D. C., and Chapel Hill, vice-president of the senior class; Peggy Clemmer, Sanford, with Meigs Golden, Sanford, social chairman; and Annie Ben Beale, Greensboro, secretary, whose escort will be James Earl Somers, Burlington.

Dance Tonight Will Climax Senior Week

Gene Krupa Will Play for Prom, Concert; Tickets Are Still Available for Both Events

Gene Krupa, the ace drummer man, and his orchestra will provide the rythm and fireworks for the Senior Prom tonight and a concert in the afternoon.

The dance, which is semi-formal, will be touched off at 8 o'clock in Woollen gym. The concert will be held in Memorial hall from 4 o'clock until 6. Tickets for the dance will be available at the door for $1.50 per couple.

The two performances will climax a week of senior activities including Barefoot day yesterday and a student-faculty softball game.

Benson McCutcheon, senior class president, expressed his appreciation for the excellent cooperation of seniors and other students, and urges that an increased effort be put forth today in the sale of dance and concert tickets.

Krupa will bring a troupe featuring vocalists Buddy Hughes and Dolores Hawkins, and an array of stars including the Jazz Trio with Charlie Kennedy, alto sax, and Teddy Napoleon, piano.

The tom-tom king popularizes his performances with music designed to appeal to all types of dancing. He believes a good rhythm beat should be blended into fast and slow tunes alike.

Publicity agents like to boast that Krupa started handling drum sticks almost as early as he learned to wield a knife and fork -- but they must have been the turkey kind.

Actually, Gene first sat in on the drums when he was 13 and his debut was not an impressive one. He played for several minutes with a dime-dance grind group called the Frivolians.

Later that year he heard Benny Goodman on the clarinet and became goggle-eyed with admiration. The idea of becoming a professional, and especially playing with Goodman, was born then and there.

Krupa finally realized his boyhood dream by landing a job with Goodman in 1934. From then on it was clear sailing and Gene finally organized his own orchestra, a group which was destined to become famous with no trouble at all.

A limited number of tickets are available for the concert and will be put on sale at the door of Memorial hall.

Britt Is Elected CRIL Chairman

Charlie Britt was elected chairman of the Council for Religion In Life to serve during the 1948-1949 school year. Britt was chosen in a special elections meeting held recently at the "Y".

Others elected as officers were Charlotte Rosenberg, vice-chairman; Ann Carlton, secretary; and Bob Miller, treasurer.

CRIL has full plans for next year, including two drives, a Religion In Life week, and a World Student Service Fund drive. Committees for these projects are already underway, and a spring clothing drive conducted by CRIL is in full swing this week.

President Graham, Dr. Hall, Senator Hoey Talk in Capital

Dr. James K. Hall, president and medical director of the Westbrook sanatorium in Richmond, Va., who is well known in North Carolina, being a native of Iredell county and a frequent visitor to the state, will preside over the annual meeting of the National Association of Private Psychiatric Hospitals, of which he is president, in Washington, D. C., tomorrow according to a program just announced.

President Frank P. Graham of the University and Senator Clyde R. Hoey of North Carolina will be guest speakers at the night session.

Dr. Hall is serving his second term as president of the association, having headed the organization previously in 1940-41. He has also served as president of the Psychiatric association (1941-42) and as president of the Southern Psychiatric association.

Dr. Hall is a University Phi Beta Kappa graduate, class of 1901, and the University conferred on him an honorary degree in 1935. After finishing his medical course at Jefferson Medical school in Philadelphia, he practiced in Morganton for several years. He has been president of the Westbrook sanatorium since 1911.

He is a member of many national medical and mental hygiene organizations and of several North Carolina groups.

MUSIC CONCERT

The informal chamber music concert scheduled for 7:30 tonight has been postponed until next Saturday at the same time.

Vacancies Open For Cadet Pilots

Successful Aviation Cadet candidates are assured of a monthly income up to $336 after only 12 months of training. Pilot officer training is open to all unmarried male citizens between 20 and 26 and one-half years of age who are in excellent physical condition, who have had two or more years of college or can pass an examination of the educational equivilant, and can pass the qualifying examination to measure the degree to which they have the aptitude for modern military flying.

Graduates of the Air Force pilot training course will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force reserve, given their aeronautical ratings as pilots and assigned to Air Force units for active flying duty. Up to five per cent of each Aviation Cadet graduating class will be offered regular Air Force commissions under the US Air Force program.

Professed 'Kleptomaniac' Admits Stealing From Northern Colleges

A 33-year-old woman has admitted that she robbed dormitories of four Pennsylvania and Maryland colleges because she had an "intense desire to steal."

Mrs. Lillian Becker of Santa Monica, Cal., told Sheriff Bartis O. Vickers of Kent county, Maryland, and State's Attorney A. Parks Rasin, Jr., that she looted rooms at Goucher college, Baltimore; Hood college, Frederick; Wilson college, Chambersburg, Pa. and Washington college, Chestertown.

Recently, Dean Fred Weaver received a letter from Henry I. Stahr, president of Hood college, Maryland, informing him of the fact that a mysterious woman had stolen close to $600 in money and valuables from several colleges in the state. A description of the woman was also included in the letter.

She was arrested last week while fleeing from Washington college's Reid hall, where she had stolen $81. Mrs. Becker admitted the theft in Reid hall but for nearly 24 hours denied she was implicated in the other robberies.

However, under questioning she broke down and admitted the thefts, but quickly added she was a "psychiatric kleptomaniac with an intense desire to steal."

Authorities called her husband, Ford Becker, at Santa Monica who confirmed the woman's story on her mental condition. Mrs. Becker was arrested in her automobile near Centerville, Md. She was trailed by Barbara Hunley of Baltimore, a student, who rode behind the car on a bicycle.

After the coed noted the car's license number, Miss Amanda Bradley, dean of women, reported the robbery to police.

Sheriff Vickers said a search of the automobile revealed dozens of pieces of costume jewelry, valued at $1,100, similar to those reported stolen from at least two other colleges.

State's Attorney Rasin said he was not completely satisfied with the woman's statement and would continue his investigation to determine if the suspect was implicated in other robberies.

Henderson to Direct Lawn Concert Featuring Two University Bands

Hubert Henderson, assistant director of the University band, will conduct a lawn concert featuring the University concert and varsity bands at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Henderson, a graduate assistant in the Department of Music from Raleigh, has performed as solo cornetist with the band during concerts conducted by Earl Slocum, director of the band.

The program will include a modern arrangement by William Teague of Joseph Myrow's "Autumn Nocturne" in which Harry Shipman, senior from Greensboro will be featured on the clarinet.

Billy Thompson, a Chapel Hill grammer school student, will be featured as xylophone soloist in a medley of familiar songs arranged with band accompaniment by director Earl Slocum.

A similar concert will be given next Sunday afternoon at 4:30. In the event of rain tomorrow's concert will be held in Hill hall. The public is cordially invited.

U. N.C. Debaters Defeat Emory On World Government Topic

The University Debating team defeated Emory university in Di and Phi halls yesterday by a 2-1, 3-0 decision.

The question, "Resolved, that a World Government be Established," was upheld for Carolina by Charlie Long and Merle Stevens. Debating the affirmative from Emory were Ned Hansell and Bob Flournoy.

Upholding the negative for Carolina were Tom Shelton and Herb Mitchell with Scott Houston and Cubbage Snow representing Emory.

This was the last debate of the year for the Carolina team and was the last in Shelton's collegiate career since he graduates next month.

According to reports, the team had a successful season on all trips this year including South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and the Tulane and Fredericksburg nationals.

Long and Stevens finished third in the mixed section at Tulane in Februray and were among the finalists at Fredericksburg in March. Mitchell and Shelton had similar successes at both places.

New Summer School At Roanoke Island Is Being Completed

The Roanoke Island Fine Arts center, new summer school of the University is rapidly taking shape under the direction of Russell M. Grumman, head of the Division, and Miss Louisa Mustin of Augusta, Ga., director of the new school.

Manteo residents, who have worked and planned for a school of this type for a number of years, are opening their homes for students, and arrangements have been made with the management of "The Lost Colony" for students to take their meals in the drama company's dining hall.

Music courses are to be offered by Paul Young of the University Music department, and William Meade of the Art department, whose illustrations have long been a familiar feature to readers of "Colliers" and "The Saturday Evening Post," will offer courses in beginning painting and design. Miss Mustin will handle the course in appreciation of painting.

Classes in speech and acting will be taught by Elizabeth Welch, of the Salem college faculty, and Harry Coble of the dance department of the Boston Conservatory will instruct classes in body training. Coble has been a member of the Ted Shawn and Charles Weidmann professional dance companies.

LAUNDRY MONEY

The University laundry department advises all students using the University laundry that all unused credit balances on hand May 25 will be returned to the University Accounting department so that refund checks may be ready for distribution by June 2.

All students who plan to attend summer school and who do not wish their laundry service interrupted during examination and commencement weeks are urged to advise the laundry office, 106 W. Franklin street immediately, so that their unused credits will not be cancelled.

VA Announces Transfer Rules

Veterans attending colleges and universities under the GI Bill PL 346 must obtain supplemental certificates of eligibility from Veterans Administration if they plan to enroll in a new school this summer or next fall.

The certificate should be requested from the VA regional office, 310 W. Fourth St., Winston-Salem, N. C., at least 30 days before the date the term opens at the new school. Advance requests will help speed prompt payment of subsistence allowances after the start of the new term.

Supplemental certificates to the original certificate of eligibility issued by VA are necessary only when a veteran changes from one school or training establishment to another.

Veterans who will attend a different school this summer from the one in which they are now enrolled should apply immediately for their new certificates. If they will not enter the new school until the fall term, they may wait until later on this summer.

Young Republicans Hear Woodhouse On Party's National Representation

"The Republican party of this State has not had fair representation in the national government despite the fact that one-third of the state's population votes a Republican ticket in the national elections," said Dr. E. J. Woodhouse in an address before the Young Republicans club Thursday night.

Bill Hipple, club president, presided over the weekly meeting in Graham Memorial which heard the political science professor speak on the subject of "Republicanism in the South."

Woodhouse told the group that gerrymandering has been used as a discriminating force against Republican voters. The party in power, he said, has used its influence to encircle voting districts in such a manner that would prove unfavorable to Republican representation.

Admittedly a staunch Democrat, Woodhouse smilingly told the club, "You have a group of able candidates to choose from but about all we can do is nominate Truman."

Woodhouse said his express purpose at all times as a teacher is to help people to think, whether the subject be political parties or that of other sequence.

"Let your mind range," he said, "and let it grow. There's no telling where it will go. I always hate to see a good mind go to rust."

In a question-and-answer session Woodhouse protested against inheritance procedure in which millions of dollars pass from hand to hand merely on the basis of blood relationship. "I feel there should be a limit on the size of inheritance," he said. "A person should be rewarded in accordance with his service to society rather than by his relationship to another individual."

In disclosing current activities of the club, Hipple said, "The Young Republican club here at the University has initiated an attempt to federate the other clubs in several colleges throughout the State."

The club announced its intentions of traveling to Durham next Thursday night for a joint meeting with a Young Republican club in that city.

Dr. E. H. Tomlin Speaks to Group In Afternoon Meet

Speeches by Harding F. Bancroft of the United States State department and Col A. L. Cox of the office of the Air Secretary climaxed the statewide CCUN conference held here last night.

The series of speeches, informal discussions, radio broadcasts and panels was sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations under the leadership of local student Lincoln Kan, state director for the North Carolina CCUN group.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Earl Halber Tomlin, president of the Rhode Island Council of Churches and an authority on the Middle East, spoke to Collegiate Council delegates, local students and visitors in Gerrard hall on the Palestine situation, even as the expiration hour for the British mandate in the Holy Land neared.

Col Cox, who is chief of the veterans section of Air Secretary Symington's office in Washington, spoke on the subject "Air Power is Peace Power." His fellow speaker on the Gerrard rostrum last night was Harding Bancroft, associate chief of the Division of International Security Affairs of the State department. Bancroft spoke on "U.S. Foreign Policy and the U.N."

The tall, sandy-haired diplomat discussed recent legislation which has come before Congress pertaining to the United Nations, and went into the subject of the foreign policy of this country in relation to policies and actions of the U.N. organization.

Bancroft pointed out in his speech that out of 23 vetoes exercised by the Soviet Union, 11 have been used in an attempt to keep five nations from joining the United Nations. He went on to state that in international courts, Russian justices had uniformly voted in conjunction with the Western Powers.

Col. Cox stated during the course of his address that the human race is convinced that "only an informed world can be free, and only a free world can be secure.

"We in the Air Force," he continued, "are not unmindful of the serious responsibilities which are ours. First, it is our purpose to maintain an Air Force-in-being, in the highest degree of effectiveness, to serve as our strongest deterrent to any possible future agressor. Second, we intend that this force shall be sufficiently strong for defense against enemy air attack, and capable of instant retaliazation at the source of any such attack."

Law Frat Installs Campbell New Dean

Battle Senate, local chapter of the Delta Theta Phi law fraternity, installed officers for the 1948-49 college year in ceremonies conducted in Manning hall at the University this afternoon.

John W. Campbell of Lumberton took the oath of dean and appointed committees for the coming year.

Other officers installed were Thomas F. Adams, Jr., Willow Springs, vice-dean; Herbert Horton Rountree, Farmville, clerk of the rolls; Zennie L. Riggs, Maysville, clerk of the exchequer; Bruce K. Hutchinson, Oxford, master of the ritual; John A. Robertson, Raleigh, bailiff; and E. O. Brogden, Jr., Raleigh, tribune.

Weekly Square Dance Is Slated for Tonight

The weekly square dance of the Presbyterian church will be held tonight at 8:15. No bids are required and the dance will be "stag or drag."

The Problem Of Money

With the appointment of an editor and a business manager this week, the literary quarterly is now ready for the task of making itself a reality on campus. To do this it will literally have to pull itself up by its own bootstraps. At present its financial foundations are shaky, to say the least. Only certain source of funds is the $2000 for which the Student Legislature underwrote the project, and this, according to the provisions of the Legislature bill, is not to be used until the end of the year and then only in case of a deficit. Its initial cost and operating expenses will have to be supplied entirely by subscriptions, advertising and contributions from interested persons. To get started at all on this basis will require high-powered salesmanship by Business Manager Emily Sewell and the publication's finance committee.

Newly-appointed Editor Bill Sessions is optimistic about the future of the magazine. He has some good ideas, and we feel that once started the quarterly will attract enough interest both inside and outside the University to insure its continuation. Certainly it will fill a definite need here as an outlet for students with a bent for creative writing.

In an institution of higher learning with an enrollment approaching 7,000 the new mag surely will be able to find enough students with literary interests to assure its collecting sufficient funds to get started and to keep going as a self supporting proposition.

Bill Shuford Is Needed

Managing a student union is a hard and often a thankless job. It's a job that will take every minute of a director's time, if he'll let it. Bill Shuford, director of Graham Memorial, has let it take too much of his.

Trouble with Bill — if you can call it a trouble — is that he is a perfectionist. He took a hard job and he's willing to give it nothing but his best — and his best is plenty good. If you need proof, take a look at the increased use by students of the Rendezvous Room resulting from innovations and improvements there. This increased use is also keeping the Rendezvous from operating at the terrific loss that it has incurred at times past. There is always something going on at Graham Memorial — bingo, bridge tournaments, dancing classes, recorded concerts — always something. And in addition to his regular duties Bill has taken on the task of helping the Student Entertainment committee pay off its whopping deficit. Made a sizable dent in that deficit, too, with the appearances of Polgar, the hypnotist, here.

You'd never think it from looking at the little dears, but students are hard people to work with. They get all worked up over some wonderful idea, rope someone in to help them put it into effect, and then begin to lose interest or find something else to get hot and bothered about and leave that someone to do the work by himself. Those who work with and for students may work themselves to death and all they will get in return is requests for more work and complaints about things that haven't been done or haven't been done to the students' liking.

Bill Shuford has been director of Graham Memorial for less than a year. He has done a fine job. Now he is discouraged. He wants to resign. He considers the things he has accomplished, and for the time and effort they've cost the accomplishments seem small. He considers all the things he'd like to accomplish, and the intervening obstacles are many and large. The job seems pretty hopeless, and the students don't seem to care one way or the other.

So far the University has refused to accept Bill's resignation. It has even offered to raise his salary if he will stay. Considering that he could probably get a job with shorter hours, more pay and more future, Bill might be making a mistake if he stays here, but Graham Memorial, the students and the University will be making an even greater mistake if they let him go.

Carolina Carousel

A Column About Columnists

By R. Foo Giduz

Springtime brings out many undesirable happenstances besides longer beer lines, classroom daymares, and more whathaveyous . . . Columnists start breaking out like allergy rashes . . . colyoomists . . . those scribes of questionable virtue who are neither particularly human nor very bright. . .

. . . So gives it in order for a shirtsleeve appraisal of these peculiar masses of protoplasm. . . . Ex-Ed. Mills, now publisher of Poor Barron's Weekly Alamance Almanac had a few choice bon mots for columnists in his own daily diatribe "Gall Stones. . . ." . . . It was something about columnists and tapeworms, the usage of the editorial "we" by columnists, and how only one columnist, who was nevertheless sans tapeworm, used the editorial "we" in his scribblings.—presumably the Carouseler. . . . (Editor Eddie never hollors on C. C.'s using the editorial "we" in his writings but he often intimates we've got tapeworms and the like in our writings.) . . . So for a few candid and under-the-record views on the genus columnista, we move today for the first and only time into the ego-ridden role of the first person. . . .

. . .First thing I don't like about columnists is the way they consider what they write so gawdamighty important. . . . when it really doesn't amount to a thing. . . . It's just a lot of fun — sometimes satisfaction-giving—to write what you feel . . . And if anyone likes it—fine. And if they don't; well, toujours gai, kid. It's only your opinion. . . . And the editor can always fire you. . . .

The character who talks about writing a column and how he has to fill up space rates A-1 on the C. C. pet peeve list. . . . Whyn't he just write his tripe and let the reader draw his own humble conclusions. . . . If those scribes wrote just like I do that would never happen anyhow, since obviously I always write the whole blooming Carousmelly works just as fast as I think of it and in an impossibly revisable form . . . And a column should be just like that in many ways. . . . That is. . . . It should contain only what the writer really feels. . . ."Plugging" this and that isn't much help if it isn't sincere. . . . It's no help to either party, and generally works to the degradation of both. . . . (Where possible!). . .

For my money the more DTH columnists the better. . . We're certainly our own best audience—zealously and jealously critical to the point of asininity often. . . Yeah, and something else I don't like are the scribe characters who write only for themselves and their partic. clique. . . . Columning has social disadvantages likewise. . . . Wherever I go now I'm no longer "Jolly R. Giduz," but instead "that damn Carousel character."

Now good buddies, this could go on and on and on and on and on. . .But I just feel like talking about columnists today. . . . I ain't mad with nobody. . . . coming around about time to get back into C. C.'s specially-tapewormed "we" category and start writing some genuine columns again. . . such as they Even if it mattered. . . .But it's are!

Time Marches On

By Ed Lanier

The war ended and the young Tar Heels returned to Chapel Hill from Berlin, Rome, and Tokyo. Prewar enrollment of 3,500 mushroomed to 7,500. Trailer camps, Victory Village, quonset hut colonies, and Snavely's Tar Heels flourished. More classes and more instructors were necessary. Larger class schedules appeared from quarter to quarter. Pre-registration appeared and flourished. Quarterly class schedules gave way to an annual class schedule—as big as a single bed sheet.

The class schedule for 1948-49 was too big for any of Chapel Hill's printing presses.—and so we now have, for the first time, a class schedule in book format. That's progress, but the fellow who cooked up Lanier's Lottery should have thumb-indexed the schedule book.

Men's Honor Council

A Case Ot Cheating

Continuing the series designed to acquaint the student body with the Men's council, we should like to call your attention to a cheating case showing Council procedure.

In a Math class last quarter, Mr. . . . asked a classmate for a copy of an example which was on the quiz. The classmate handed the example to him and Mr. . . . copied it. When reported for cheating, Mr. . . . . denied the accusation, but upon being brought face to face with the classmate, he confessed that he had cheated. In view of the fact that Mr. . . . . had been placed on probation once and had been suspended once, the council expelled Mr. . . . . from the University.

The classmate who gave Mr. . . . the answer to the problem was reported by another classmate for cheating and appeared before the Council. He readily confessed his guilt for giving help on the quiz and reported four men who accepted aid from him. He was suspended indefinitely from the University, but as he was very cooperative with the Council, every consideration will be awarded him when he reapplies for admission.

The four men also confessed readily, and were suspended indefinitely.

At this point, it may be necessary to clear up two terms: 1) To expel a student is to dismiss him or her from the University, to which he or she may never return as a student. 2) To suspend a student indefinitely is to dimiss him or her temporarily, the opportunity being afforded the student to reapply after one quarter's absence from the University. Reapplications for admission must pass through the Men's Council for approval.

It is relatively simple for the student who reads this to realize that the Council is much more tolerant toward the person who confesses his guilt readily than to the person who stalls or lies in the Council room. But bear in mind that cooperation outside is just as important as cooperation inside the Council room, Without this working-together, there can be no strong Student Government.

Adventure On A Bus

Editor:

In the Morgan decision, the Supreme Court ruled segregation in interstate travel illegal. On May 11 I boarded a Trailways bus in Lynchburg for Chapel Hill. I sat in the Negro section. Some fifty miles out of Lynchburg the bus driver politely asked me to move to the front. I explained my status as an interstate passenger which entitled me to sit anywhere on the bus. He informed me that he would have to have me removed from the bus if I refused to move to the front. I replied that I did not wish to move. The driver returned to his seat and we continued to South Boston.

At South Boston the driver called the police. One of them told me I had to move to the front or come with him. Again I explained the Supreme Court had declared that segregation in interstate travel was illegal. The policeman stated that the Supreme Court had nothing to do with my case, that I was in Virginia below the Mason-Dixon Line, in Jim Crow territory.

Finally, the policeman warned me to take his advice. Then he and the driver left the bus and had a long conference with other policemen and other persons in the bus station. After a total delay of approximately thirty minutes, the driver returned to the bus and we proceeded to Durham.

At Durham the driver pointed me out to a station operator. I had to change buses in Durham and I again sat in the colored section. Nothing was said by the driver or the passengers, and I arrived safely but shakily in Chapel Hill.

The bus drivers and policemen in this part of the South realize that they have no legal recourse in such a case. Still they attempt to enforce segregation in interstate travel by intimidation. If numerous examples of nonsegregated interstate travel occur, the drivers and policemen will stop this practice of intimidation because it will mean too much work.

I feel that all of us southerners who believe in nonsegregation should sit in the Negro sections on busses and trains when we hold interstate tickets. Do not move from your seat unless the policeman presents a warrant for your arrest. Otherwise, as soon as the bus leaves, the policeman may dismiss you without charges and there you are stranded. Furthermore, travel with one or more persons who hold similar views. Believe me, I was mighty lonesome in South Boston!

Why All Sorority Girls?

Editor:

I noticed that six coeds were tapped into the Valkyries. These girls were selected on the basis of standards of leadership, character, attitude, sound judgment, service, and scholarship.

I could not help but notice that all of these girls were sorority girls. Surely, out of the whole junior class there must be one non-sorority girl with the above mentioned qualifications, considering how few juniors are sorority girls?

Stop Cigarette Stoop

Editor:

Attention Tom Kerr:

I hate to explode your pipe dream about the Lucky Strike strips, but I feel that it is my duty to do the deed.

Knowing how you and your bosom buddies must feel after progressing from "cigarette hangover" to "cigarette stoop", I submit the following experience:

A hill billy girl friend from West Virginia came down to the UNC-NC State football game last season. At the time I noticed that she, her sister and her mother were badly bent from this thing known as "cigarette stoop." Little did I know that I was destined to be a victim of this dread disease.

Before returning to the hills, the mountain gal ordered me to volunteer to help her sewing circle save red cigarette strips in order to get a seeing-eye dog for their local blind veteran. Saving the red strips became an obsession. I finally got so "stooped" that my hands were dragging the ground and I had to lower my trouser pockets to the bottom of the trouser legs.

One day my spirit rebelled and I wrote a letter to a tobacco company in Durham. They answered that they had received numerous letters in regards to saving the strips for seeing-eye dogs but that it was all a vicious rumor.

You can easily spend a few cents and verify my story by telephoning the tobacco company in Durham, thereby saving the University infirmary from an epidemic of "cigarette stoop."

Give Me Back My Breaktast!

We have been noticing a definite climatic heaviness about, which warns of cause-champioining time. In answer to the call, we take up ink and newsprint to get a long harbored idea off our chest. What this fair town of Chapel Hill needs is a good sidewalk cafe. There . . . we've done it.

Straight stuff, we would definitely go for a peaceful spot in the old outdoors in which to relax, come sunset, over a brew, Vienneese, or what have you.

Some ambitious lad with a little capital and a good architect could scoop in the four-beer notes. And we unambitious could find a comfortable place to gab with our friends and calm our front-porchitis.

"Local Boy Makes Bad" One of those stupid columnists on the DTH has finally done it. Don't want to call names, but it seems this eager scribe got an idiotic and untrue paragraph or two into his column the other day on Lucky Strike pull strips. (See Write-Away below).

Now this is a shame, and verily he must needs be chastised. Fall in to the right . . . pardon us, the left.

Can't help but notice, thanks to the public press, that one Joker John Van Hecke is sharing the headlines with the local strike and the Communists. All this, for your information, is the result of some hard work on J.J.'s part in reorganizing the Town Men's Association.

Beer of the Week (you buy it, we'll give it) goes to J. J. for this noble move (pause and point the finger skyward) for a noble cause.

Presidential Candidates

Vandenberg-A Man With Plans

(Editor's note: Between now and the political conventions this summer the Daily Tar Heel will carry personality and career sketches of all the outstanding possibilities for the presidential nomination. The first article opening today, is on Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.)

Lansing, Mich. — (UP) — Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg of Michigan has his sights trained on the nation's highest office to crown a political career that took him from an editor's chair to world statesmanship in 20 years.

He goes to the 1948 Republican convention as Michigan's "favorite son" choice and a definite dark horse threat to win the nomination for president. However, he did not seek the honor publicly.

The political rise of Michigan's senior senator to presidency of the Senate and chairmanship of the Senate foreign relations committee was not a sudden one.

He might have had the GOP nomination in 1936 if he had fought for it, but he was certain he could not defeat then the late President Roosevelt. He did seek it unsuccessfully in 1940.

At that time, he was strongly isolationist. But by reversing his stand and whole-heartedly supporting the war effort, he gained stature and influence. Since the war, he has championed a bi-partisan foreign policy. He has staunch friends high in both major parties.

The tall, dignified flawlessly-dressed Vandenberg was a political power before going to the Senate in 1928. As editor of the Grand Rapids Herald, he wielded strong influence in domestic and foreign affairs.

His career is in the American tradition. His bearing is reserved, even toward his closest friends, but he attracts followers by his straightforwardness, fidelity, keen wit and dry humor. His oratory is the best in the Senate and he is a fast thinker.

Vandenberg was born 64 years ago in Grand Rapids, the son of a harness maker. He began making a reputation as an orator in high school.

Close associates say the need to leave the University of Michigan after his first year probably was responsible for making him what he is today. His passion is learning, through books and travel.

In his formative years, he spent all his spare time reading and enlarging his vocabulary. He always knew what he wanted and worked for it.

Vandenberg's one big disappointment was in his desire to be a lawyer. Instead, he became an editor and publisher, starting as a city hall reporter of the Herald after his one year in college.

His energy and zeal won the attention of the late Sen. William Alden Smith, then publisher of the Herald.

One story is that Vandenberg introduced himself and modestly informed Smith: "I am your next editor." He was, at the age of 22.

Vandenberg virtually owned the Herald when Smith died in office in 1928. He also had other business and banking interests. He was appointed to the Senate to succeed Smith and Michigan voters have been sending him back ever since.

As an editor, Vandenberg admired and supported Woodrow Wilson, wartime president, but later bitterly opposed his League of Nations and wrote the GOP plank on the League in 1920.

The senatorship has been Vandenberg's only political office. He refused repeatedly to run for local and state posts, but he kept active within the party. He first mentioned Charles G. Dawes for vice president in 1924.

As a young editor, he wrote a book about Alexander Hamilton, entitled "The Great American." Another was entitled, "If Hamilton Were Here Today," and a third, "The Trail of Tradition."

Vandenberg has been married twice. His first wife died in 1916 and he later married Hazel Whitaker of Fort Wayne, Ind., a newspaper woman he met in college.

One Man's Angle

And The Tearers Of Hair

By Kennedy Gammage

The tender concern of the Communists over the Bill of Rights, coupled with screams of outraged virtue, gnashing of teeth and beating of breasts, when their own warped conception of it has been violated, is indeed a touching thing. It grieves me deeply to say that my sympathies are not with them, but they are not. The reason stems from the fact that I shall look to someone other than those who would destroy the Bill of Rights for a warning of its violation: the tearers of hair over the Bill of Rights are quite often the very lads who would substitute for that Bill another document, modelled after the Russian version, which would be about as democratic as a Mark IV tank, if we are to judge by the setup in Russia today.

Communists love to play the persecuted martyr, too . . . that way, they are able to point to themselves and say, with tears in their little Red eyes, "Look what they've did to me!" Like the Commie chick who threw herself, deliberately and with malice aforethought, in front of an innocuous and astounded member of the New York Gendarmerie who was riding on a horse during one of the May Day Parades; the news cameras were grinding away, and it made great propaganda for the Russians to whom the cut version of the newsreel was shown. Maybe the girl was stage-struck; longed to get into pictures. At any rate, her devotion to the cause was heart-rending. Perhaps the horse, knowing beast that they sometimes are, stepped in her face, or something equally appropriate.

If you listen hard enough, you can hear the crocodile tears falling over what the Communists call "thought control" and the eventuality of a "police state" coming into being in this country. In some instances, you will hear it said that it is already here. The Communists idolize Russia, and yet Russia admittedly has one of the most efficient and deadly systems of espionage and secret police that the world has ever known, through the good offices of their OGPU, or GPU as it was called, and the NKVD.

I fear the "police state" and "thought control," too. But the danger of their coming over from Russia is, it seems to me far greater than the possibility that such institutions will be instituted by, say, Earl Bunting, President of the NAM, or Secretary Forrestal. Both seem to be very fine fellows. Both seem to believe in the same things that I believe in . . . free enterprise and the American version of democracy. The same cannot be said for the Communists.

Seixas In Round Of Four In Net Play; 11 UNC Trackmen Qualify For Finals

Tar Heels Increase Big Four Lead With Close 5-3 Triumph Over State

Two Runs in Hectic Eighth Provide Win; Hearnmen at Duke Park This Afternoon

By Dick Jenrette

In a game that was replete with arguments and thrills at every turn, Carolina's Tar Heels extended their lead in the Big Four baseball circuit with a hard-fought victory over N. C. State, 5-3, before an enthusiastic attendance of 4,000 fans that were on hand for the meeting of the two old rivals.

Duke will provide the opposition for the Tar Heels this afternoon in another loop game which is scheduled for Durham. Vinnie DiLorenzo will be on the mound for Carolina in the contest which gets underway at 3 o'clock.

The game was filled with unexpected occurrences throughout, with not the least being the fact that Carolina was able to win by two runs. Prior to yesterday all five of Carolina's Big Four wins had been by one run.

The climax of the game came in the eighth inning, at which time the score was deadlocked at 3-3. After Rip Ryan had popped up, Jim Hamilton smacked a clean single into left field to open the rally. He promptly stole second. Andy Tranavitch then sent aa roller to deep shortstop, with Hamilton going to third on the play aand Tranavitch being declared safe at first on a close play.

Costly Argument

At this point, the whole State team rushed out to protest the ruling at first base, and Wolfpack catcher Bill Fowler was in this group, leaving home plate unguarded. The alert Hamilton then dashed home with a run that broke the tie. State again protested, claiming that the base umpire had called time out on the play. After a ten minute argument, the umpires still allowed the run and Carolina was ahead by 4-3, thanks to Fowler's faux pas in leaving home plate.

Tranavitch stole second on the frustrated Wolfpack, and Ray Blair gained life at first when the luckless catcher Fowler dropped a third strike. Harry Beason then rolled one down first, which also was errored, and Tranavitch streaked home with an insurance run to complete the final 5-3 score.

This inning's activities delighted the partisaan Carolina crowd, and they let loose such yells as "Poor Cow College" and "Throw him out," referring to the State players. The umpires complied with the latter wish booting State's Willie Evans from the game for a too vehement protest.

Will Hobbs' single, a fielder's choice, and a truly tremendous double by Tranavitch gave Carolina its first run in the fourth inning. Tranavitch's hit bounced out of the park—about 440 feet away—and he circled the bases for an apparent home run. But a ground rule—stating that a ball that bounces out of the park is a double—sent him back to second.

Hobbs Connects

Carolina picked up a single run in the seventh inning to go ahead by 3-2, but State retaliated with one of its own in the ninth to set the stage for Carolina's dramatic eighth inning outburst.

The game increased Carolina's lead in the Big Four to two and one-half games. The Tar Heels now have won six of eight loop encounters.

W and M Trio Also Gains Semi-Finals; Conference Tournament Continues Today

By Billy Carmichael III

Tar Heel Vic Seixas along with a trio of William and Mary net stars moved into the semi-finals of the Southern conference singles tourney yesterday as the rain-delayed play battled through a long and hectic day on the local courts.

Three rounds of singles and doubles were all but cleaned up during the afternoon, but tournament officials announced that no attempt would be made to play the finals this afternoon, the day being devoted to the semi-finals singles and doubles play with the championship matches to be reeled off tomorrow afternoon.

Local Vic Seixas will battle ittle Bernard Bartzen, one of the ndian triad in one of the round of four matches today forcing wo teammates, Fred Kovaleski and Bobbie Doll to play each other in the other bracket. Both contests will begin at 2 o'clock.

Seixas advanced to the final round by virtue of two victories during the day—one, an unimpressive triumph over Ragan of State college, and the other, a brilliant win over highly-touted Howie Atwater, also of William and Mary, in the quarter-finals.

The Tar Heel ace had all the old touch in the latter match, looking completely recovered from his recent illness, and treating the crowd to an almost unprecedented local view of the Seixas of the summer grass circuit.

The big surprise of the tourney, though, proved to be the bouncing Bobbie Doll, a previously outshone star among the Virginians. Doll, still showing the physical effects of a serious automobile accident last year, defeated the Taylors of Duke and Carolina along with Don Skakle, all in a day's work to grab plaudits of the crowd and the role of tourney dark horse.

Doll's opponent of today, second-seeded Kovaleski, had two serious scares before reaching the semi-finals. In the morning he was forced to three sets to top teammate Brenden Macken, while in the afternoon he again needed the full limit to dispose of Tar Heel Ray Morris.

The Morris match was probably the best of the day, with the local player threatening heavily while losing the first set, break through Kovaleski to take the second, and then battle on even terms for the opening games of the last stanza before falling to defeat.

Three rounds of the doubles were completed during the day with the exception of one match which will be played this morning. The semi-finals in this division will be conducted this afternoon after the singles, with the team of Seixas and Taylor already in the round of four and Morris and Rice still battling for entrance.

The rest of the Tar Heels went to the sidelines during the day. In singles, Heath Alexander and Duke Wilder went out in the second round, with the following bracket proving the downfall of Stan Gruner.

Tar Babies Meet Duke Here Today

Playing Duke must be a habit for the Carolina Jayvees for this afternoon's tilt will be the fifth meeting of the two outfits. Gametime at Emerson stadium is 3 o'clock.

The local juniors have taken three of the four decisions thus far with the victories coming consecutively. The Tar Babies hope to add two more notches to the win column over Duke before the campaign ends.

Ralph Brake, who was slated to hurl against the Wolfcubs Thursday, will probably open for Coach Henry House. Charley Garganus may start behind the plate if his injured finger is deemed recovered. Garganus has been patrolling rightfield for the past few games so that his potent bat would be in the lineup and Big Bill Walsh has been filling in with the mask and mitt.

If Garganus goes behind the plate, Walsh's booming bat will be lost to the team, so Coach House has a bit of a problem.

Otherwise the local lineup is the same as the one which propelled the team to a six-game winning streak, which was broken by Presbyterian Junior college last Monday.

Terps Tied With Carolina; Duke, State Follow Close Behind With 10 Men Each

By Buddy Vaden

The University of North Carolina and Maryland university both paced a field of 13 teams in the Southern Conference track and field meet preliminaries here yesterday qualifying 11 men each for the finals to be held this afternoon on Fetzer field starting at 2:30. Duke and North Carolina State followed close behind with ten men each reaching the finals.

Other teams that qualified men for today's events are South Carolina 4, Virginia Tech 3, William and Mary 2, Washington and Lee 2, Clemson 2, University of Richmond 2, Furman 1, Wake Forest 1, and Virginia Military Institute 1.

Two Conference records were officially broken by Duke's Jim O'Leary in the shot put and South Carolina's Scooter Rucks in the 440-yard run. Rucks knocked one-tenth of a second off the old record of 48.2 seconds set in 1933 by Welford of VMI. O'Leary added eight inches to the old shot record established in 1941. The new record now stands at 50 feet, seven inches.

Bob Seligman led the Tar Heels yesterday by placing among the top six in the shot put and discus. He topped the field in the discus with a throw of 139 feet, 10 and one-quarter inches.

Carolina sent three men to the finals in the javelin throw. Leading the list is Bob Kirk, followed by George House and Winfield Baldwin. The Tar Heels also placed two men in the 220-yard low hurdles. Ed Schultz and Bob Morrow will be carrying the Carolina colors in that event this afternoon.

Julian MacKenzie, Don Nelson, Dick Taylor, and Jack Moody rounded out the list of 11 Tar Heels that will be running this afternoon.

N. C State's Chuck Chambers took top honors of the day by qualifying in three events. He scored in the 220-yard low hurdles, the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash.

Julian MacKenzie, in winning the third heat of the 880 with the fastest time of the day, was clocked at 1:59.4. MacKenzie led all the way and was followed for the first lap by Carolina's John Hoots. However, Hoots dropped behind halfway through the second lap and finally finished fourth.

In the third heat of the 220 high hurdles, Tar Heel Dick Taylor turned in the fastest time of 14.9 seconds and was a full three yards ahead of Maryland's Rubach.

Qualifying heats were not held yesterday in the mile and two mile runs, mile relay, or pole vault, but will start this afternoon with the finals.

Committees Are Appointed by CRIL To Head Religion Week Next Year

Seven committees to head the Religion In Life Week next January were appointed this week by the Religious Emphasis Week Executive committee. This committee is headed by Jim McAllister and is made up of representatives of all the religious groups on campus.

To determine the theme for the religious week which will center around the translation of religion into action on campus, a Program committee was appointed. Dr. Arnold Nash, Mr. G. H. Ruark, Charles Britt, Iris Lee Bost, Mel Steinberg, Betsy Huggins and Bob Eagle make up its membership. This committee will invite the main speaker for the week and approximately 15 other speakers who will go into classrooms, fraternity and sorority houses, and dorms.

The Classroom Appointments committee will make the contacts with students, professors, and organizations. Members are Dean William Wells, Jim McAllister, Anne Wells, Charlotte Rosenberg, Sam Angell, and Carlyle Markham.

The program arranging for the main meetings of the week and the providing for all the churches to be open will be done by the Worship committee, whose members are Mr. E. C. Cooper, Bob Barrus, Leon Morse, and Edlyn Frurks.

The Hospitality committee will be in charge of meeting all the speakers and arranging adequate services to them and places for them to stay. It will also arrange faculty luncheons and breakfasts. Members are Mrs. S. A. Rosenberg, Professor Warren Ashby, Betty Jane Blalock, Bert Kaplan, Bob Bunch, Carolyn Guthrie, Helen Phillips, and Frances Greene.

Serving on the Publicity committee are Mr. Walter Spearman, the Rev. David Yates, Ray Mills, Sally Woodhull, Bill Sessions, Doug Crisp, Ben Parker, Virginia Nash, Charlie Gibson, Jack Spfoutz, Marvin Nathan and Harriet Saunders.

Those in charge of the Finance committee are Dr. R. W. Cruchfield, the Rev. Bernard Munger, Wally Vreeland, Riman Muth, Bill Shrago, and Jim Brockman.

The Committee on Organized Houses which will make the appointments in the houses and dorms is made up of the Rev. Charles Jones, the Rev. Hilton Seals, George Worth, Teenie Royal, Gene Turner, Baily Hobgood, Tom Hughes, Leonard Kaplan, Sue Stokes, and Jack Thompson.

The Executive committee of Religion In Life Week will have its final meeting this coming Monday night at 8:30 in the Y library. The following Monday all of the appointed committees will meet in joint session with the Executive committee and with Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden and Mr. Claude Shotts, directors.

HOUSING NOTICE

These students are now eligible for dormitory room. If they do not contact the housing office by Monday their deposits will be refunded and their applications cancelled:

Navy Offers to 650 Graduates Commission, Flight Training

The Department of the Navy has adopted a new program which offers apaproximately 650 college graduates an opportunity to enter the Regular Navy as commissioned officers and to receive 18 months flight training.

Qualifications required for appointments under the program are that the applicant must be: native born, or a naturalized citizen of the US for a period of at least ten years; not less than 19 nor more than 25 years of age on July 1 of the calendar year in which commissioned; physically qualified and aeronautically adapted for the actual control of aircraft; and must attain a minimum grade of "C" in the aviation classification test, the mechanical comprehension test, and flight aptitude rating; shall have satisfactorily completed at least four years in a college or university accredited by a national or regional accrediting association.

Presidential Candidates Discussed By Y Public Affairs Group Meeting

In the last meeting of the Public Affairs committee of the YWCA Mary Anne Daniel and Patsy McNutt were guest speakers, both speaking on possible presidential candidates in the forthcoming election.

Mary Anne, president of the YWCA, reviewed Harold E. Stassen in a manner that becomes a Democrat who is endorsing a Republican for president. Mary Anne, a staunch Democrat, read to the group from last year's December issue of Pic magazine. From this she reviewed Stassen's war record.

Continuing with her discussion on Stassen, Mary Anne reviewed his record in his home state, Minnesota. For two consecutive terms, she said, he was chosen by his fellow governors of both parties as chairman of the National Governors conference. He was elected governor of Minnesota three times with increasing majorities each time, and he has never been defeated in an election.

In discussing Stassen's acts for peace, Mary Anne said he helped draft the United Nations charter as one of the United States delegates to the San Francisco conference. "But he said at the time that it was not a guarantee of peace," she said. He was the first American leader to urge a conference of nations to revise the charter to make it a real instrument for peace. A recent Gallup Poll, she continued, showed that two-thirds of the American people approve Stassen's proposal. "He believes the UN can be made to work."

Harold Stassen is a liberal, she said, and he will draw off wild-eyed college students from Wallace. Also, she concluded, he is the logical person for the Republicans to nominate, as he will come nearer carrying the South.

Patsy McNutt, rising senior from Greensboro, spoke at Monday's meeting on the possibilities of Tom Dewey's receiving the Republican nomination for president. At the beginning of her talk she told the group that she personally would not endorse Dewey. "He is a competent man, but he wouldn't make a good president."

Patsy pointed out the Dewey had the largest number of delegates now, but that he had a slimmer chance at gaining the Republican nomination. "He was defeated four years ago, and that fact will work strongly against him."

The speaker reviewed Dewey's education and his political history in New York. She pointed out that he made a name for himself in 1937 as district attorney for New York. "He jailed plenty, and with plenty of publicity." Patsy then asserted that he was motivated very strongly be personal ambition. She pointed out that New York people thought Dewey used them as a stepping stone to the presidency. In 1940 he and Taft were passed up for a dark horseman, Wilkie.

Tar Heel Trackmen Retain Conference Cinder Championship

THE CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS' annual Forest theater production, the climax of each year's activities, will be presented next Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at 8:30. This year's play is Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," and in the scene above, Cyrano calmly watches as Roxane meets Christian in the romantic drama, a story of the swashbuckling swordfighter and poet with the tremendous nose. Frederick Johnson (center), of Chico, Calif., plays "Cyrano;" Gloria Gunn, Wellington, Nev., plays "Roxane," and David Samples, Joliet, Ill., portrays "Christian."

Claude Shotts Sails For Berlin to Serve In Relief Program

Philadelphia, Pa., May 15—Claude Shotts, secretary of the YMCA at the University of North Carolina, sailed yesterday aboard the Queen Elizabeth for Berlin where he will work with the American Friends service committee program.

Shotts spent more than a year in Germany during 1946 and 1947 as representative of the American Friends Service committee and as chairman of CRALOG (Council of Relief Agencies Licensed to Operate in Germany). During that time, Shotts was instrumental in opening negotiations with Russian military authorities for an Amerian Friends Service committee child-feeding program in the Russian zone. He visited often in the Russian zone and arranged for other AFSC personnel to visit there after his return to the United States.

On his current trip to Berlin, Shotts will observe this AFSC feeding program in the Russian zone which is planned in conjunction with the feeding of 100,000 school children by the International Red Cross.

Shotts will also study and work with the youth program at the Mittelhof Neighborhood center established by the Service committee in Berlin. Another of his tasks will be to study the possibilities for holding an international seminar in Berlin toward the close of the summer which would use American teaching personnel and to which would come American, British and German students.

Since his return from Germany, Shotts has been serving on the North Carolina State Committee for the Church World Service. He has spent many years in religious work, having served as associate secretary of the Christian association of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as general secretary of Colgate University Christian association and for 13 years as general secretary of the YMCA at Northwestern university. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and of the Yale Divinity school.

PICKETING STRIKERS AT THE Morehead planetarium were still parading up and down in front of the construction job Friday afternoon, and all reports indicate that they will be there again tomorrow as the strike goes into its second week. Arbitration conferences have been held continually this week at the A. F. of L. Labor temple in Durham, but no definite steps at mediation have yet been taken. One of the pickets remarked Friday, "If they don't settle pretty soon, we'll be eating this lumber out here."

Maryland and Duke Chief Opposition For Local Trackmen

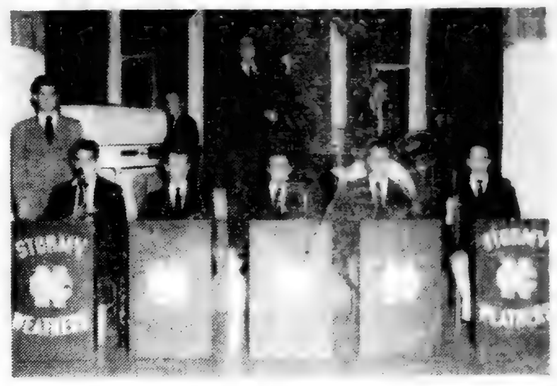
By Bob Goldwater

The Southern conference track and field championship will remain in Chapel Hill—its usual resting place—for at least one more year.
from Maryland and Duke,

For despite bitter opposition by strong cinder units from Maryland and Duke, North Carolina's track team, the perennial power, ran off with top honors in the title meet yesterday afternoon on Fetzer field. The Tar Heels scored 55 1-7 points, with Maryland's 44 1-4 tallies being sufficient to withstand a late Duke rush that netted the Blue Devils 40 and 25-28 points, good for third place.

N. C. State finished a good fourth with 31 points, and the rest of the eight teams that broke into the scoring totals were far below. The additions of the 1948 championship gave Carolina its 10th crown in the past 14 years.

Easily the outstanding star of the afternoon was Norm Rucks, South Carolina speedster who lowered his conference quarter-mile record set in the preliminaries Friday afternoon and also breezed home first in the 220-yard dash. His 440-yard dash effort of 47.4 was seven-tenths of a second under his previous day's record-breaking time.



High scoring honors for the day went to Charlie Chambers, State's one-man track team. The Wolfpack star copped firsts in the 100 and low hurdles, and took a second in the 220 for a total of 14 points.

Both Rucks and Chambers played big roles in the Carolina victory, gaining important points that otherwise would have gone to Maryland. Outside of their help, the Tar Teel triumph was definitely a team victory, with three first places and seven seconds making up the bulk of the Blue and White total.

Winning performances for the Tar Heels were registered by Dick Taylor in the high hurdles, defending champion Bob Seligman in the discus, and Bill Joyner, a surprise victor over Jack Moody in the high jump. It was the latter event, the ninth on the program, that paved the way for the Carolina success.

At the end of the first eight events, Carolina, Maryland and Duke were all tied at 24 each.

Student Union Concert Slated Tomorrow Night

Graham Memorial will present "Stormy" Weathers and his orchestra in an informal concert tomorrow night in the main lounge from 8:30 to 9:30.

Organized in the fall of 1947, the nine-piece swing outfit is under the leadership of Jimmie and Bynum Weathers, brothers from Shelby. Jimmie, a piano major in the Music department has played with various bands in the state. He also attended the Navy School of Music while in service and played with Admiral Ingram's fleet band aboard the U. S. S. Augusta which took President Truman to the Potsdam conference in 1945.

Bynum Weathers majored in music at the University of Michigan before the war, and has played bass with bands in Pennsylvania and North Carolina.

Tomorrow night the band, which has played for dances on the campus during the past year, will feature three original compositions by Bynum Weathers. Both of the brothers are arrangers and a number of their arrangements will appear on the program.

In discussing the outfit the brothers explained that the orchestra has been organized on the belief that "a small group can be made as full as a large group with the proper arranging." The numbers the band plays have all been re-arranged and adopted to the smaller instrumentation of the outfit.

Norman Cordon To Direct State Musical Program

Norman Cordon, North Carolina's contribution to the Metropolitan grand opera, is coming home "to use his distinguished talents and dynamic personality in the service of the people of the state of his birth and great devotion," President Frank P. Graham announced last night.

Speaking at an informal and somewhat impromptu dinner given at Lenoir hall to welcome Cordon, with a few of his personal friends in Chapel Hill and other towns in attendance, President Graham hailed the Metropolitan star's return to the state as "an important part and the next advance in the development of fine arts in North Carolina."

Promoting Music

President Graham also announced plans that call for the establishment at an early date of a North Carolina Music Foundation for the purpose of encouraging existing music organizations and organizing and promoting other groups throughout the state.

Governor R. Gregg Cherry, a student at Duke at the same time Cordon was attending Carolina, was unable to be present on account of a conflicting engagement, but he sent a message in which he said "North Carolina is indeed fortunate in being able to bring Norman Cordon back to his home state. This is one of the happiest movements that has been started in North Carolina. It is a long step toward the rounding out of a well-balanced fine arts program for our state."

Extension Division

Cordon will be associated with the three institutions of the consolidated University in a statewide program designed to promote the knowledge, understanding, and enjoyment of all kinds of music—including church, folk, community singing, radio, instrumental, and orchestra. In Chapel Hill he will be connected with the University Extension Division.

Cordon has been spending a good deal of time in the state since the end of the opera and concert season. He has appeared twice as guest soloist with the North Carolina symphony orchestra, has done some promotion work for "The Lost Colony," and will be narrator in the "Shout Freedom" symphonic pageant in Charlotte May 20.

To Continue Opera Work

He will continue to make guest appearances in opera and on the concert stage during the winter season, but will devote most of his time to his work here and throughout the state.

Cordon in responding to the warm welcome given him here tonight said in part:

"All the time I've been traveling around the world I've constantly had in mind a great desire to return to North Carolina and do my part to help my homefolk get a better appreciation and understanding of the world's great music.

"I'll do all in my power to take the stuffed shirt from classical music. People would live a fuller life if they weren't frightened by the word 'classical.' I am especially interested in seeing the encouragement of composition among our musicians and a greater development of folk festivals throughout the state."

Mrs. Cordon and their eight-year-old daughter, Susie Harwood, who are now in Charlotte, will move to Chapel Hill early next month. They will live in the home being vacated by Dr. and Mrs. Lee Wiley, who are to spend the coming year in Europe. Mrs. Cordon is a well known golfer, having won the Southern championship for women once and the state title three times. They will also continue to make their summer home in Linville.

Pharmaceutical Group Installs New Officers

The ceremonies were held at the chapter's annual Founders Day reunion banquet at the Carolina Inn at which alumnae from 1940-47 were special guests. Plans were made to organize an active alumnae chapter in North Carolina. Miss Blanchard presided over the session.

Other officers installed for the coming year were Ginger Limbaugh Callahan, vice-president; Jane Bradford, secretary-treasurer; and Peggy Costner Simmons, pledge sponsor.

The Lambda chapter was installed at the University's School of Pharmacy April 21, 1940.

First New Dormitory Nearing Completion

By Margaret Gaston

In a week or ten days the last finishing touches of Dormitory "A" located on the Raleigh road and Raleigh street and parallel to Woollen gymnasium, will be made.

Dormitory "A" is the first of the three new dormitories to be completed, and will be open next monday for occupancy by men students in the summer school. Dormitories "B" and "C" will be completed in 30 to 60 days, and the University plans to open them for occupancy in the fall quarter.

The recently-completed dormitory has 95 rooms, of which 90 will accomodate three roomers each and 5 will accomodate two each. The total capacity is 280.

Considered Big Improvement

In discussing the new dormitories C. E. Teague, assistant comtroller and business manager, and J. S. Bennett, director of operations said they considered the new dormitories a tremendous improvement over the other dormitories on campus.

The halls are insulated, and each hall is divided into four sections. Each section has a bath, they added. The rooms are the same type as others, and contain two closets each. The dormitory itself is about twice as large as any other men's dormitory on campus, and is about the size of Kenan dormitory.

Phone Buzzers Installed

Each room in the new residence hall has a buzzer over the door so the occupants can be singled to the telephone, thus alleviating the general confusion of calling someone to the phone. Dormitory "A" has terrazo floors, which is ground stone.

The three dormitories combined cost $1,200,000, exclusive of furniture and ground work. Construction began about two years ago, and Raymond Weeks, Durham, was the architect. The buildings were erected to relieve the serious scarcity of living quarters.

Contractor's Inspection

Last Wednesday the new dormitory was submitted by the contractor to inspection by the University. The University was represented in the inspection by Collier Cobb, Jr., chairman of the Buildings committee of the Trustes; J. S. Bennett; and Giles Horney and Joe Sparrow, technical experts in the Buildings department. Frank Turner, the engineer, represented the State Budget bureau.

Main Building Satisfactory

Although finding some details that needed correction, they said in the main the building was a satisfactory job.

The furniture for the residence hall will be brought from High Point May 20 and installed immediately. The building will probably be used for the quartering of visitors and alumni at this year's commencement.

The three dormitories, "A", "B", "C", for practical purposes are duplicates of each other. The Welfare committee of the University has designated one of the dormitories as a graduate residence hall, and all three will be occupied by men.

Episcopal Church To Hold Pentecost Services Tonight

Students and townspeople will join tonight in a service of worship in commemoration of Whitsunday, or Pentecost, the festival of the birthday of the Christian church, to be held at 8 o'clock in the Episcopal church.

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor of American religious thought at Duke, will be the principle speaker at the service, and minister from Chapel Hill taking part will include the Rev. Bernard Munger and the Rev. E. C. Cooper.

Music, which was arranged by the YWCA music committee under the leadership of Gwen Howard, will be by the combined choirs of Chapel Hill churches, directed by Gene Stryker. Hilda Frances Lawrence will be featured as soloist.

Dr. Smith is a member of the North Carolina Council of Churches and served as chairman of the 1946 Convocation of Churches. He has also been active for many years in the International Council of Religious Education.

Betsy Huggins Is Elected President Of 2,000 Campus Baptist Students

Betsy Huggins of Raleigh has been elected president of the Baptist Student union for the year 1948-49. Miss Huggins and her council will direct the activities of the largest number of Baptist students in any North Carolina college or university, numbering close to 2,000 in the current student body.

Among the activities which the B. S. U. council directs are fellowship groups, study clubs, worship programs, recreational functions and social action. Plans are being made this year to erect one of the largest and best equipped student centers in the country to provide facilities for these student activities.

Other members of the council are Riman Muth of Hilton Village, Va., treasurer; Bill Cash, Spindale, secretary; Orman Hutcherson, Winston-Salem, and Frances Greene, Chapel Hill, membership; Edlyn Freerks, Spruce Pines, worship; Joe Giles, Chapel Hill, publicity; Anne Carlton, Atlanta, Ga., and Oliver Gaskins, dieticians; Mary Tandy Lacy, Hopkinsville, Ky., and Gene Truner, Laurinburg, recreation; Bob Hanes, Charlotte, Sunday school; Milton Bliss, Thomasville, music; and Helen Phillips, Chapel Hill, pianist.

BETSY HUGGINS

The work among the Baptist students is sponsored jointly by the Chapel Hill Baptist church and the Baptist state convention of North Carolina, with full cooperation on the part of the University administration. The Rev. J. C. Herrin is serving as the first full-time chaplain.

Spanish Dances Scheduled Tonight

Frances Johnson will be featured in a recital of Spanish dances tonight at 8 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial under sponsorship of the Spanish club.

The program will feature Miss Johnson in fiery gypsy dances from Andalusia and popular rhythms from Latin America.

William H. Hooks, graduate student from Whiteville, will team with Miss Johnson in two dance specialties and Bob McDonald will serve as accompanist at the piano.

Admission for the recital will be free and the Spanish club urges students to take advantage of this occasion to see five Spanish dances performed by a professional.

Miss Johnson has studied in California with several members of the Carreno family—one of the world's most famous dance families.

While in California she was a featured dancer with the Broden-Savoy Light Opera company, the Pacific Opera Company Ballet, the San Francisco Ballet and the Mount Tamalpeas Ballet.

Paul Green's Drama. . . . . Shenkkan's Arrangement

'The Lost Colony' On Air Today

By Jim Dickinson

A special radio adaptation of Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," will be aired on the University hour over a statewide network at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The half-hour radio play was arranged by radio writer Robert Schenkkan of the Radio department and will be directed by Jane Grills, instructor in the Radio department. Robert Rolnick will serve as announcer.

Paul Young of the Music department will direct the music for the show which is being produced in the studios of the Communications center. John O'Steen, student accordionist, will also be featured on the program.

"The Lost Colony," an outdoor drama with music and dancing, based on the early history of North Carolina, will open on July 1 in the Waterside theater near Fort Raleigh in Manteo under direction of Samuel Selden.

The radio play today will feature several members of the regular "Lost Colony" cast and will include a larger group composed of University students and Radio department instructors.

Marjorie Norris is serving as assistant production director and Bob Andrew will be narrator for the show. John Young is studio engineer and Merrily Brooks and George Holloway will serve as turntable operators. Earl Hartsell and Colbert Leonard will be in charge of sound effects.

The play will feature Robert Epstein as Old Tom, Jean Schenkkan as Eleoner Dare, Sam Hirsch as John Borden, John Ehle as Father Martin, Alice Ross as Dame Coleman, Carolyn Padgett as Queen Elizabeth and Irvine Smith as Sir Walter Raleigh.

Also included in the cast will be John Clayton, Betty Jane Blalock, Pat Hole, Ophelia Hooks, Frank Mooney, Mary Jo Cain, Grace Marie Blades, and George Holloway.

"The Lost Colony" relates the story of the first English settlement in the new world. It tells of Sir Walter Raleigh's expedition in seeking a new colony for men, women and children.

The play is enshrouded in a mystery of the group of early settlers who waited at Roanoke island for ships to arrive from England bearing supplies.

England became entangled in a war with Spain and was unable to send aid to the settlers for a period of time. When the first ship finally arrived at Roanoke no trace could be found of the colony. All that remained was a gatepost bearing the word "Croatan" and there was born the ageold mystry of the Lost Colony.

Constitutionally Correct

Action of the Student Legislature Thursday night when it went into closed executive session and ejected all visitors and the press caused heated objections from a few interested persons who questioned the Legislature's right to take such action. These students took the stand that the Legislature is the duly elected representative of the student body, that it was discussing the block fee structure, a matter affecting the pocket books of all students at the University, and that therefore the Legislature had no right to exclude any student who wished to be present at the discussion.

When the proposal to increase student fees came up on the agenda, Speaker Pro Tem Tag Montague complied with President Jess Dedmond's request for a closed session by announcing that the Legislature would go into executive session and all visitors must leave. None of the visitors challenged this announcement although Montague was clearly overstepping his authority in announcing an executive session without a vote of the legislature. This point was cleared up by vote after the visitors left. The legislators then discussed the proposal and saw fit to defeat the fee increase.

President Dedmond's public statement of his reasons for asking the closed session was necessarily weak, however he has satisfied the Daily Tar Heel that he did so in the belief that it was in the best interests of the student body. Actually the reason for the closed session was that part of the discussion concerned certain negotiations with a member of the administration which that person wished to keep private until he could confer with other officials. President Dedmond, through a representative, entered into an agreement that this information would not be released to the general public until authorized.

Constitutionally the Legislature was within its rights in holding the closed meeting. The constitution empowers the Legislature to set up its own rules of procedure so in its bylaws it has adopted Robert's Rules of Order, which rules that every deliberative assembly has the right to decide who may be present at its meeting. Whether the Legilature as the representative of the students has the moral right to exclude those students from its meetings and whether President Dedmond had the right to enter into an agreement which would necessitate a secret session are questions which are still debatable.

Teacher-Grading Systems

There is a great deal of overlapping between the faculty-rating bill passed by the Legislature last Thursday and the teacher-rating plan already instituted by the faculty committee on General College instruction. In fact the only difference between the two is that the Legislature authorized plan will cover instructors in schools and departments other than the General College and results will be reported to heads of departments as well as to individual instructors.

Neither grading sustem is compulsory, nor will the results of either be made public. These would seem to be the two weak points of both systems. The questionaire of the University teacher-rating scale, which faculty committee has distributed to the departments since March 27, is composed of eminently fair questions and should prove helpful to those instructors using it. On it students grade their instructors on all phases of their teaching methods. They also put down their last quarter's grades so the person criticized can judge whether he is being too harshly blamed by a student who consistently makes low grades.

Only trouble with the system is that instructors do not have to submit to grading unless they wish to. In most instances it is the instructors who need the criticism who refuse to submit to it. Good instructors are not afraid of the criticism and welcome the chance to find out the points on which their students think they can improve their teaching.

Although there are strong arguments against making the results public, to do so might be fairer to the students since it would give them a more or less official opinion of the quality of instruction they would receive from each instructor.

Old Shoe Martin

Boston —(UP)— Joseph William Martin, Jr., House speaker in the 80th Congress, explained the secret of much of his political success when he said, "everybody calls me Joe because I'm plain as an old shoe."

Son of the village blacksmith, the chunky, raven-haired Martin was born Nov. 3, 1884, at North Attleboro, one of seven children. He and his 85-year-old mother and widowed sister still share the old white clapboard family house there when the genial bachelor isn't at Washington.

A newsboy in high school, Martin gave up a college scholarship to become a reporter on a newspaper that suspended six months after he joined the staff. Later he worked on the Providence (R. I.) Journal.

But he inherited frugality as well as a slight verbal burr from his Scottish father. He saved $1,000 from his meager earnings and bought the North Attleboro Chronicle, which he still runs with his brother Charles. He financed two brothers through Dartmouth.

No Time Clocks

His Chronicle has a circulation of 3,480. Martin never has fired an employe from the paper and he abolished the paper's time clocks as "beneath the dignity of workingmen."

Though a staunch Republican, Martin first ran for his home town school board as a Democrat and was defeated by 56 votes. Eight years later, in 1912, he was elected representative to the Massachusetts legislature and two years later was a state senator.

A delegate to the GOP national convention at Chicago in 1916, Martin was secretary of the Republican State Committee from 1922 to 1925. It was in the latter year he first was elected to Congress from Massachusetts' 14th congressional district.

12 Terms in House

Martin's election in 1948 marked his 12th House term and his first as speaker, though he had been minority leader eight years. His greatest feat, from a party standpoint, was in 1938 when he managed GOP strategy and regained 81 congressional seats for the Republicans.

Generally regarded a conservative, Martin represents an industrial area and his voting has crossed party lines. He supported increased workmen's compensation legislation, the wage-hour bill and social security.

He opposed reciprocal trade agreements principally because of the large North Attleboro jewelry business.

Jolly, jowled and personable, Martin has been a close friend of many political opponents. The late President Wilson welcomed him as a White House visitor. He was a crony of the longtime Democratic majority leader, Sam Rayburn.

Defers to Rayburn

When King George VI of England visited the United States in 1939, Martin, who habitually dressed in a casual manner, acquired a top hat for the occasion. But when he learned Sam Rayburn had no topper he swapped his finery for the Democrat's derby.

"He was more important than I am," Martin explained. "I thought he ought to look right."

WHAT'S UP in Graham Memorial

Stormy weathers and his orchestra will appear in concert tomorrow night in the main lounge of Graham Memorial at 8:30, playing an hour program of varied popular numbers. Sponsored by Graham Memorial, the concert is free to all comers.

Travel Agency Director Bob Watson tells us there is still space on the Silver Meteor and other trains for trips at the end of the quarter. He advises making reservations soon, though, to be assured of getting space you want.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Pay Wanted For Teachers

By Drew Pearson

Washington.—Representatives of 20 national organizations backed House Speaker Joe Martin into a corner the other day and demanded bluntly what he was going to do about federal aid to education. With U. S. teachers underpaid, with Russia now attaining U. S. literacy standards, GOP leaders in the house still are blocking the $300-million aid-to-education bill, already passed the Senate.

Confronted face to face by the educators, Speaker Martin spoke bravely, but ducked the issue.

"We agreed some time ago," he explained, "that we would find out what the defense needs of the country are and determine that before we did anything about this kind of legislation."

Shot back Anna Lord Strauss of the League of Women Voters: "Decent education for the young people of the country is one of the most important and one of the least expensive defense measures."

Marjorie Temple complained that her organization, the American Association of University Women, had to give its members an answer on what was holding up federal aid to education.

"I know you must be getting pressure," soothed the Speaker. "Many Congressmen are hearing from home too, and coming to me."

But Russell Smith of the National Farmers Union caught the Speaker off-balance.

"We get the notion here sometimes in talking to people," cracked Smith, with an accusing eye on Martin, "that one reason this legislation hasn't moved along is that some of the House leaders aren't friendly to certain candidates for President over the Senate."

"I don't want you people to get the idea that there is any antagonism toward Senator Taft," replied Martin hastily, himself a rival of Taft's for the Republican nomination. "I want you people to know that I have a high regard for Senator Taft."

Hitting again at the Speaker's sensitive political spot, Rev. Thomas Keehn of the Congregational Christian Churches gently reminded him that this is an election year. Discreetly he added: "This kind of legislation would be good for the Republican party to pass."

Martin smiled, then gave the well-worn Republican reply: "We have to watch expenditures."

From Martin's home state, Massachusetts, Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, representing the General Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke up: "I realize that our state of Massachusetts does pretty well with education, but there are other states not nearly as well off. The people of Massachusetts should be just as concerned about the people of Mississippi and Alabama."

"I realize," admitted the Speaker, "that they have much more difficult problems in many states than in Massachusetts."

Note—The educators were quite right in pressuring Speaker Martin. Though the education bill is blocked in the Labor and Education Committee of Chairman Hartley of New Jersey, Martin could move it out if he gave Hartley the nod.

THE MARINE CORPS has a great record—from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli. But in Washington, D. C., Marine brasshats seem to think that enlisted men are to be used on such unheroic jobs as bartending and housecleaning.

Last week it was a new kind of war. The Marines were sent over the top as housepainters.

For 12 hours a day they painted—from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.—on the order of Col. L. B. Cresswell, commanding officer of the Marine Corps barracks. They were painting the house of the assistant commanding general.

When the new Commandant, Gen. Clifton Cates, moved into the barracks, his quarters were repainted chiefly by civilian painters.

But now that Gen. Oliver P. Smith is being transferred to Washington, the house which he is expected to occupy was painted by Marines working gruelling hours which no civilian painter would be expected to put in. Sometimes the Marines worked not only until 8 p. m. but considerably later, with liberty cancelled.

Note—Iwo Jima seems to have been forgotten around Washington. The monument to the heroes of Iwo Jima has now been removed in favor of a basement being excavated for a new Pan American Building.

Tate Of The Campus

Politics, Women, And Song

By Lindsay Tate

The Girl's Glee club has completed a successful year and given its final concert. The crowd was a small one; I feel it's a shame the concert was given on the night of the legislature. No matter how small an audience, the girls deserve a hand for their hard work and successful performance.

There seems to have been a good deal of criticism of the legislature for holding a closed session on Thursday night. As a member of that august body, may I plead for a little tolerance and patience? When fifty people vote unanimously to meet in closed session, knowing that they will be severely criticized for it, they must have good reasons. I hope there will be some who reserve judgement and keep faith that the fifty representatives elected by them are trying to act in the best interests of the student body.

The matter of one dollar fee for the Coeds to pay to the Coed Senate has come up for discussion again. Here's one coed who believes it fairer to charge the same fee for both men and women. The campus at large voted in the last election to constitutionalize the Coed Senate by placing it under the jurisdiction of the legislature. Legally it would seem to follow the appropriations for the Senate should come solely from the Legislature. Since we have only one student government, and only that body should have the right to tax.

Students in the law school have expressed their opinion concerning the admission of Negro day students to University graduate schools. I understand that a poll conducted among graduate students in the Physics department shows that a large majority there also endorse this plan. The Di Senate voted two-to-one in approval at its last meeting. Of course the whole matter will be referred to the Trustees; but these three groups are a good indication that the young people, at least, of North Carolina, are willing to take a firm stand in guaranteeing equal educational rights to all people's. It's to be hoped that our elders will also be willing to put tolerance and equality into practice.

The debate with Emory University saw Carolina's team score again; both affirmative and negative teams won. It seems to me this organization deserves the praise and thanks of the student body. Although they have no cheering section to spur them on, their battles are just as hard-fought as those of the athletic squads. So here's a cheer for the Debate squad.

After months of deliberation and debate, a redistricting bill has finally been passed by the legislature. As a final comment, I'd like to state that from a strictly coed point of view the men did an injustice in refusing to designate a representative from Kenan. The legislature should represent all groups and all interests; the representation of graduate women has not been provided for by this bill. Although it is my personal opinion that the bill leaves much to be desired in fair redistricting, it is one step forward. Joe Leary and his committee worked long and hard, and to them goes the credit and responsibility for it.

Big parties ahead are the joint Di-Phi picnic and the Student Party party. Even the campus wheels take time out now and then for social life.

Off For The Beach

Lesser The Better

(UP) — A prominent psychologist says the only trouble with women's bathing suits is they cover too much.

Dr. James Bender—head of the National Institute of Human Relations—says now that the warm weather is here, women ought to step into the briefest swim suit they can find and that the law allows. Says Dr. Bender—"Girls should liberate themselves from their clothing. When they wear less, it shows they have more power with the men."

Why, back in 1898, he continues, when grandma wore long bloomers and stockings for her dip, she was just a household slave subject to the whims of her old man.

Nowadays, says Dr. Bender, the gals are apparently in less and less on the beach. And that, he adds, shows they are getting an equal footing with males.

To support his argument, Dr. Bender mentions the French bathing suits—famous for their brevity. The Psychologist says there is a definite relation between the brief bathing suits and what he calls the fact that women have become the dominant sex in France.

However, Bender has a few words of warning about the beach. Scantily-clad bathers are a fine thing, he says, but marriage after a short beach acquaintance is not. It's a good idea, the psychologist says, to see your dream-man in a full suit of clothing before you decide to make him a life-mate.

Plans For Town Men

By Bill Buchan

The way it looks from this position, the newly re-organized Town Men's Association is the exact prescription needed to organize the 2000-odd "town men" into a workable group, giving them representation on various committees and organizations.

The men living in town have been more or less stranded too long without any noticeable sayso in the affairs of the campus. The TMA will enable them to meet together, learn to know each other, and to state their desires and interests in student government. The new outfit is unique in that its officers do not expect all the members (they are hoping for a conservative membership of 400 out of 2000) to attend the scheduled meetings, rather plans are to be made for regular "social gatherings" or picnics, which all town men will be eligible to attend. At these affairs, if politics are in season, any would-be politicians will be invited to attend and "mix with the boys" so that the voters can meet the candidates.

The association does not plan to initiate any large scale membership drive this spring, rather the drive will be conducted in the fall when students register. However, the group are planning an opening get-together before the spring quarter is over for all town men. Tickets to the affair will be sold in the "Y" and all men living in town including fraternity men living outside of their frat houses will be eligible to attend. More information about the picnic will be forthcoming in the DTH.

Men living out in town who have felt that perhaps they aren't getting the sayso in campus affairs that they would like to have, then have the opportunity to gain the opportunity through the Town Men's Association. The next meeting of the group will be held in Graham Memorial, Roland Parker No. 1. All town men are invited to attend.

In a column on Lenoir Hall, printed in Thursday's DTH, the figures that I gave on the average price for six days were incorrect. The $8 total was for five days instead of six, with an average of 53c per meal. With the three meals for Saturday included, the total for the six days is $9.63, or a weekly average of nearly 54 cents a meal.

French House Praise

Editor:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the splendid program of study offered by the University of North Carolina at its annual French House. I had the privilege of attending La Maison Française last summer as a student and the six weeks which I spent there were among the most valuable of my entire educational training.

Most of the students who attended the six weeks program had a very limited knowledge of the spoken language. But there was noticeable progress every day and almost every hour of the day for there was seldom an hour that went by without adding a word to one's vocabulary or learning the correct construction of a statement.

The entire program was always under the careful and excellent supervision of the staff. Every evening there was some kind of organized activity after supper, whether movies, lectures, recitals or picnics all conducted in French. Every student who attended the session last summer came away with a remarkably improved fluency of the spoken language. I hope that La Maison Française will be continued and will be the nucleus of an ever growing program which will eventually lead to a group of International Houses in which students can live and learn to speak a number of languages not just for a period of some six weeks during the summer, but as an all year proposition just as any other division of the University.

There is a pressing need for an increase in language interest and study in these times of international accord and discord. As the cultural center of the South, the University of North Carolina should make every offort to provide the means for better world understanding by placing more emphasis on the USE of foreign languages.

William H. Baskin III

Paeans From Peons

Editor:

We, the peasants who are forced to eat in Lenoir hall, wish to acknowledge our appreciation to Mr. Buchan for his interest in our welfare. We sincerely hope that this investigation did not inconvenience him. What a horrifying experience it must have been going to that remote part of the campus in the wee hours of the morning. Just think, he did it for six full days.

I have not made an investigation, but I have found from eating in Lenoir for the past eight months that few students are complaining about the prices or line breaking. There is some doubt in everyone's mind whether a dietician should be paid to tell the cooks to prepare Salisbury steaks (meat balls) and pinto peas every day.

Seixas, Kovaleski In Loop Net Finals Today; Baseballers Lose To Duke, 3-2

Local Star Downs Bartzen In Battle Lasting Five Sets

By Billy Carmichael III

Several hundred priviledged spectators got an exhibition of what it takes to make a champion yesterday afternoon on the local tennis courts.

The champion in the making, Tar Heel Vic Seixas, treated the crowd and his opponent, little Bernard Bartzen of William and Mary, to just such a show in the semi-finals of the Southern conference singles tourney as the local boy rose from the proverbial floor in the final sets of a two and a half hour match to rally from behind and win, 6-4, 3-6, 7-7, 6-3, 6-2.

The victory placed Seixas in this afternoon's finals match against second-seeded Fred Kovaleski also of the Indians, who entered the promised round by virtue of an easy straigh set, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2 win over teammate Bobby Doll in the other semi-finals match. The championship will get underway at 2 o'clock.

The Seixas-Bartzen match was one to remember. The Tar Heel captain, recently beridden by glandular fever just wasn't a physical match for his never-tiring, never-relaxing opponent. It was the unshakable poise and unbeatable spirit of the Carolina player that brought him final victory. Seixas, faltering physically after a brilliant first set, time and time again rose to Herculean heights to outstroke or outmanuveur his capable opponent.

Seixas started like a house afire in the first set and it looked as if he would play Jack Kramer to his Riggs-like opponent for the afternoon when he captured the first set, 6-4. Bartzen, though, opened his own show in the second set winning it, 6-3. He then played Seixas on even terms until the 5-all count had been reached, proceeded to break the Victor's service and win his own and the set as the sun and sickness caught up with the Tar Heel and left him all but a beaten man at the intermission.

But Seixas came back in the final two sets and unleashed a Seixas that had been seldom seen in these parts. Exhausted, he moved sluggishly until time for the kill arrived, at which point he added the touch and moved on through his formitiable foe 6-3, 6-2 for the victory.

The semi-final doubles saw Seixas and Clark Taylor swamp Doll and Galloway, 6-0, 6-0, 6-4, to move to the finals where they will face Kovaleski and Bartzen today following the singles. The William and Mary pair advanced by winning over Tar Heels Charlie Rice and Ray Morris in the other semi-final clash, 6-3, 6-4 6-3.

Tar Babies Down Duke, 7-2; Brake Gets Credit for Win

By Buddy Vaden

Collecting four hits in both the seventh and eighth innings for seven runs, Coach Henry House's jayvee beseballers won their fourth victory of the season over the Blue Imps of Duke yesterday afternoon, 7-2, at Emerson stadium.

Until the big seventh and eighth frames, Duke pitcher Benfor held the Tar Babies down to a mere three well-scattered hits. But the Dukesters started off in a big way, touching pitcher Ralph Brake, who was credited with the win, for two hits in each of the first three frames.

Two doubles in the first inning by Grace and Murray gave Duke its first run. The Imps collected two singles in the next frame, and one man walked. But they failed to score as leadoff man Baroff was put out, short to first, for the third out.

The second and last Duke run came in the third inning when Murray, who had doubled in the first inning, tripled with Grace on base. Murray turned out to be carrying the big stick for the Blue Imps, for in three official trips to the plate, he collected a single and two doubles.

The Tar Babies came to life in the seventh after being held scoreless for the first six frames. Stan Goodman walked to start things rolling. Ed Lamb struck out and Charlie Gurganus was safe at first on an infield error. Big Bill Walsh, who was later to show his real hitting power, collected a single and a run batted in as Goodman scored.

Joe Brookshire added another run with a single which scored Gurganus and Brake flied out to left field for the second out. With two away, Zero Allen singled to score the third run and was put out at second for the final out.

In the eighth John Senter reached first through courtesy of the Duke shortstop and Goodman followed him with his first hit of the day. Gurganus sent Senter across the plate with a single. Then Walsh stepped to the plate and socked his round-tripper for two runs. The side was retired after Brookshire flied out, Brake singled, and Ward flied out to Senter.

DiLorenzo Loses Tough Mound Duel With Al Curtis

By Dick Jenrette

Durham, May 15—Carolina's Tar Heels fell victims of poor clutch hitting here this afternoon as the Duke Blue Devils turned in a 3-2 triumph despite the fact that the visiting Big Four leaders slammed out 13 hits.

Carolina could have clinched at least a tie for the Big Four championship with a win today, but the fates were simply against them. A qeustionable decision at home plate deprived the Tar Heels of a run in the ninth inning, and a bad hop on a grounder enabled Duke to score the winning run in the last of the ninth.

The game was equally as thrilling as all the other close contests that the Tar Heels have participated in this year, and the team battled gamely to the end in an effort to pull this one out of the fire. It was simply a case of inability to hit with men on base that cost Carolina the game.

Hit in Every Inning

Al Curtis, Duke hurler who now has a 4-0 record in Big Four competition, was hit freely by the Tar Heels. Carolina got at least one hit in every inning. But Curtis worked himself out of constant trouble to pitch the win.

Curtis' mound adversary, Vinnie DiLorenzo, pitched a great game himself and deserved a better fate. He allowed but eight hits and issued only two bases on balls, meanwhile striking out nine. The loss extended Vinnie's hard-luck string against Duke. In the last meeting of the two teams he was the loser, 6-5, when the Devils rallied for five runs in the ninth and then pulled a triple play to halt a budding Carolina rally.

Fateful Ninth

As the case has been in most of Carolina's games this year, most of the action was packed into the ninth inning. Trailing by 2-1, the Tar Heels managed a single run in their half of the ninth to tie the score at 2-2. Pitcher DiLorenzo led off the rally with a walk, and Kenny Black sacrificed him to second. Jim Hayworth then slammed a liner into centerfield, and the ball went through the Duke fielder's legs, rolling to the fence. DiLorenzo scored easily on the play and Hayworth attempted to come all the way home.

But Umpire Veasey ruled Hayworth out on a very close play at the plate. The Carolina players protested the decision vigorously but the decision remained, and the Tar Heels' potential winning run was nullified.

Yet the chances for Carolina victory were still good. DiLorenzo had retired 14 of the last 15 batters to face him and seemed to be getting stronger as the game progressed. With one out in the ninth Stu Erickson managed a single into center, and John Falwell walked. Ed Perini flew out to leftfield, with Jim Kelly making a nice running catch for the second out. Then came the bad luck.

Weird Hop

Jerry Frye, next batter, sent a smash toward third which possibly would have been the third out had not the ball taken a weird hop over Hayworth's head. The ball rolled into left and Erickson raced home with the run that meant the game.

Coed Swimming

Twelve coeds, members of the Splash club, are presenting a demonstration of their aquatic abilities tomorrow night at 7:30, preceding the biennial intramural swimming meet.

Bill Henderson, Faith Adams, and Sibyle Mitchell are chairmen of the formations, and other girls participating in the show are K. D. Durham, Ann Eutsler, Randy Hudson, Corinne Grimsley, Ann Wells, Lib Browning, Claudia Lee, Barbara Poole, and Mary Lou Williams. Advising instructor is Miss Mary Frances Kellam.

All intramural swimmers are requested to be at the pool by 7:15. No changes may be made in the entries for each event.

Rucks, Chambers Share Honors; Two New Records Established

Then the high jump results came in, giving the Tar Heels 11 and 1-7 points and a lead that was never seriously threatened.

In winning the jump event, Joyner hit 6-2, one inch below Moody's record set last year. His victory gained him the Kent Brown Memorial award. Moody, who tallied seven points in the meet with a tie for second in the high jump and a second in the broad jump, was handicapped somewhat by a spike injury suffered earlier in the week.

Liddell Breaks Record bf

In addition to Rucks' new record, one other conference mark was established in the meet. That one came in the two-mile run, where Frank Liddell of VMI pulled an upset by defeating last year's co-champion, Sam Magill, in 9:33.2.

The Carolina distance star led most of the way through the race, at one time holding as much as a 20-yard advantage. But Liddell, who finshed third in the same race in 1947, whittled it down to two strides by the time the sixth lap came around.

Liddell made his bid on the final go-round, passing Magill at the start of the last turn and winning by 20 yards. His triumphant effort gained him the Robert Bronson Hubbard Memorial award, given to the two-mile victor.

Another award—this one the Hendrix trophy—went to the winner of the 880-yard run and here the Magill family was more successful. For Frank Magill, Sam's older brother from VPI, provided a mild upset in withstanding a late spurt by defending titleholder Roger Neighborgall and capturing the half-mile event in the classy time of 1:56.6. Carolina's Julian MacKenzie ran a good race in placing third.

The day's other trophy-winner was Chambers, who made off with the Harry March Memorial award given to the victor in the low hurdles. His winning time of 23.7, while not a new mark, was one of the fastest times of the day.

WAA Picnic Scheduled for Thursday

Tickets to the Women's Athletic Association's annual picnic, to be held Thursday night at 6 o'clock, are being sold for 25 cents through tomorrow by the dormitory and sorority WAA representatives, and all day Tuesday in the physical education office of the Women's gym.

After the picnic, which will follow the softball finals between Chi Omega and Kenan at 5 o'clock on Kenan field, Randy Hudson, president of the Association, will present the intramural cup to the organization which has accumulated the most athletic points during the year in each of the eight intramural sports offered for competition.

Individual plaques will be awarded the various first place winners in each of the sports—swimming, volleyball, basketball, softball, badminton, table tennis, archery, and tennis. The three seniors who have made the most outstanding contributions to the WAA through the year will also be honored.

Krupa Backgrounds Senior Swan Song

By Weddy Thorp

The senior class sang its swan song last night to the sweet swing of Gene Krupa and his orchestra. Special hit with the jazz enthusiasts were the selections of the Gene Krupa trio, which featured the maestro himself on the drums, Teddy Napolean at the piano, and that new man on the sax, taking Charlie Ventura's seat with the combo. The dance went off smoothly and all who attended enjoyed it immensly.

It seems that quite a few seniors missed a lotta fun on Friday. We saw all of six bare feet on the campus, not counting Leroy.

Spring entertaining continues and the picnic idea is taking the campus a mile a minute. Dekes and Pi Phi's CICA's, Chi Psi's, Di and Phi's. . .what have you. . . are all in the swing of the thing.

And speaking of swan songs, here's another. Yours truly's had it, and as of next week Rita Adams, capable ADPi everybody knows, will be your new s'ciety editor. We take this opportunity to wish her lots of success.

Deke-Pi Phi Game Hits 47-47 Deadlock

On last Tuesday afternoon the members of the Deke fraternity were entertained by Pi Beta Phi with a combination picnic supper and softball game.

Sue Walton and Teenie Royal were the captains of the two sofeball teams, which fought to a 47-47 two-inning deadlock, which was called on account of darkness. The most spectacular play of the game was a one-handed running catch of Helen Compton's line drive by Elizabeth Eadey, which she plucked out of the air right over the head of Si Lawrence. Officiating was done by a Board of Referees composed of Tag Montague. Dick Dixon, and Louise Dodson.

The affair was chaperoned by Mama "G", popular house mother of the Pi Phi's.

-Baseball-

Carolina threatened to score in almost every inning, but only in the second was the team able to cash in. Successive singles by Hamilton and DiLorenzo placed runners on first and third, and an error on Black's ground ball permitted Hamilton to score.

Duke also did its scoring in the second, getting two of its three runs at this time. A single by Erickson and Falwell's walk opened the outburst. Perini's hit to right brought in Erickson, and Jerry Frye's hit to left accounted for Falwell. DiLorenzo silenced the Duke bats thereafter until the ninth, at one time striking out four straight batters.

Hayworth and Hamilton each contributed three hits to lead the Tar Heels. Will Hobbs had to safe hits.

Fielding gem of the day was Black's stab of Fred Folger's long fly to center. Black gathered in the ball with a spectacular catch at the hedge, 395 feet distant.

QUARTERLY MEETING

There will be a meeting of all interested in the formation of the Carolina Quarterly staff at 4 o'clock tomorrow, in Roland Parker 3, Graham Memorial. Editor Bill Sessions urges all to attend, both those who have worked with the Quarterly group previously and all who are interested in working next year and the remainder of this year.

Kate Connor Logue Is Feted by Chi O

The Chi Omegas entertained last Tuesday at an informal tea in honor of Kate Connor Logue, who was married last month. The bride was presented with china in her pattern as a wedding gift from the chapter.

The sorority will give a farewell party May 20 for their housemother, Mrs. Norma Capt, who is leaving Chapel Hill in June.

Peggy Egerton has been elected new social chairman, and Bootsie Lyons will go into office at the same time as chapter correspondent.

Society Notes

Two engagements have been uncovered within the last week or so. Rosalind McRae of Phi Mu at Duke will become the bride of Mark V. Barker, Jr., well-known Pi Kappa Phi around campus. The wedding is planned for September after which the couple will return to Chapel Hill while Mark finishes school. Miss McRae is from Sebring, Florida, while Mark's home is in Durham. . . The other engagement is between Gene Ann Lester of Wilson to Harvey Diamond, local TEP from Charlotte. The Tau Epsilon Phi's held their spring formal, incidentally, at the Inn Friday night. Roy Cole was the maestro. . .The Alpha Gams threw one for the Lambda Chi's Thursday night. Toy dogs, colored balloons. crepe paper, animal crackers and lollipops all indicated that the affair was a "baby" party. . .The PiKA's are dreaming this week about their dream girl who will be presented at the annual dance of that name at Carolina Inn next Saturday night. Johnny Satterfield will make with the music for the affair. . .

For its last meeting this year, Le Cercle Francais will have a picnic at Hogan's lake Tuesday evening at 6:30. The group will meet at Caldwell "Y" at 6:30 Tuesday and then will go to Hogan's lake from there.

All persons interested in attending will please be at Caldwell "Y" promptly at 6:30. It is suggested that old clothes be worn as there is to be a softball game before supper.

Sig Eps Have Charlie's Day Tourament

The Sig Eps call it Charlie Henderson day. Every spring all the chapters of Sigma Phi Epsilon in North Carolina get together and hold a softbtll tournament.

Charlie, a classics teacher here, originated the idea and the first tournament was such a success that all Epsilana has awaited it every year since, like the Dogpatch spinsters living for Sadie Hawkins day. This year Charlie's day came off at Hogan's lake. The Davidson chapter was unable to attend this year.

The losers, according to custom, pay for the supper after the games, so the interest was keen along the sidelines as well as out on Hogan's field through both games. Duke, losing to Wake Forest 5 to 7, and State, losing to Carolina 7 to 29, paid.

United Nations Ball Sponsored by CCUN Following Speeches

The woes of war and politics were forgotten by the delegates of the international conference of the CCUN at the dance given in the main lounge of Graham Memorial Friday night.

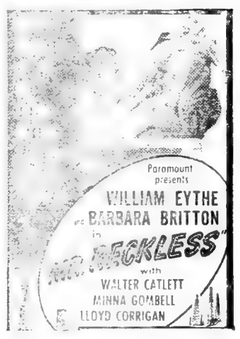
Centering around a United Nations theme, the outstanding decoration for the ball was a large blue and white emblem of the organization.

Roy Cole's orchestra, which has made several recordings of Carolina songs and popular arrangements, provided music for the occasion.

During intermission students attending the dance were given an opportunity to meet the speakers and officers of the conference. The principal speakers were Lt. Col. A. L. Cox, from the office of Air Secretary Symington in Washington, Harding F. Bancroft, associate chief of the division of International Security Affairs of the U. S. State Department, and Dr. E. H. Homlin, president of the Rhode Island Council of Churches.

CICA Slates Gala Picnic To Take Place Wednesday

A gala time is planned at the Carolina Independent Coed association picnic Wednesday. The picnic will be given in honor of graduating members of the organization and the program chairman has announced that an entertaining evening has been planned. The group will leave the Y court around 6 o'clock for the picnic grounds. All members planning to attend are asked to contact Social Chairman Jenny Trott in McIver dorm by tomorrow.



Upon completion of the picnic plans at the regular Wednesday night meeting of CICA, President Betty Long introduced a point system to the association which if adopted will award points to members for participation in social activities, sports, and meetings. Participation in these activities will not be compulsory with the exception of attending meetings.

A formal dance is planned at the conclusion of each year at which time the outing member and the four highest will be named selection, based on the total ber of points earned, remain a secret until announ the dance when the girls presented with appropr wards. Gwen Baber wa point chairman for next when the system will go feet.

BACK TO NATURE is the theme of these two graduating seniors who are taking advantage of Senior Barefoot day by wading in a puddle of water located in front of Graham Memorial. They are "Jud" Hawk from Atlanta, Ga., and Jean Anne Ramsdell from Plant City, Fla. Last Friday dignified seniors stepped down a notch or two by throwing off both shoes and really getting next to that 'ole Carolina tradition.

Oratorical Contest Scheduled Tonight; Eight Will Compete

The Willie P. Mangum contest in oratory will get underway at 8 o'clock tonight in the halls of the Dialectic Senate with eight seniors competing for the coveted award.

Those participating in the contest will be William A. Lane, Morton Seif, Randall McLeod, Marshall Pinnix, John Zucker, William R. Coulter, Charles Hodson and Peter Long.

Previously, the medal has been awarded according to the participation of the contestants in extra-curricular activities, especially elocution, during their four years. This year, the award has been renewed and offered by the Debate council on the basis of a single contest held before commencement.

Established in 1878 by the Misses Mangum in the memory of their father, Willie Person Mangum, class of 1815, the award has been received by many graduates of Carolina who have since been outstanding in politics and civic life both in North Carolina and nationally.

Wesley Foundation Groups to Hear Rhine

Dr. J. B. Rhine, professor of psychology at Duke university, will speak tonight at the bi-weekly supper meeting of the Married Couples and Graduates group of Wesley foundation.

Dr. Rhine, who has been at Duke since 1928, is internationally known for his work in extra-sensory perception. He has conducted many experiments in this field and written several books on the subject, including: "Extra-Sensory Perception," "New Frontiers of the Mind," and "The Reach of the Mind."

HENDERSON CLUB

The Henderson-Carolina club will meet at 7 o'clock tonight in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Movie Of Card Stunts Is Scheduled Tonight

By Herb Nachman

Films of the annual Blue-White game and the new card stunt system will be shown at 8:30 tonight in Memorial hall, according to Norm Sper, head cheerleader.

The movies of the game are in black and white, taken by Dr. O. K. Cornwell, while the card stunt films, taken by the Monogram club, are in full color.

In addition to the Blue-White game itself, the first two scrimmages of the spring practice will be included in the showing. All eight of the card stunts will be shown, including the spelling out of the blue-white pattern.

Requests For Info

According to Sper, several other universities have already written in requesting information regarding the operation of the system and praising the results of the stunts in promoting spirit in the stands. The colleges include the University of Maryland, Wake Forest and Duke.

Sper said that he has been approached by Loring Jones, head cheerleader at Duke, requesting that he point out the functioning of the system to him. Jones told Sper that they intend to use it next fall. Sper said that Jones agreed to "give credit where credit is due."

The first card stunt to be used in the Duke stands will be white on a blue background, spelling out the phrase, "Thanks, UNC."

Needs Artists

In commenting on the stunts, Sper said he was well pleased with the way the trials worked out. However, he said, "I need artists to do the work. I have plenty of ideas for stunts next fall but I don't have the people to express them for me on the drawing board. With five home games scheduled it will be impossible for one artist to do the work necessary to put out the stunts I want."

Sper added that anyone who can do good art work and would like to help with the project, should get in touch with him as soon as possible at 203 Emerson field house.

The card stunt movies scheduled for tonight apparently had a little difficulty arriving here, because yesterday afternoon only one reel of the film had come in, according to the lanky cheerleader. But he felt assured that the other reel would show up in time for the showing at 8:30 tonight.

ORIENTATION COUNSELORS

There will be a meeting of all those who are to be orientation counselors this evening at 10 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

All those selected by the Orientation committee for this job are strongly urged to attend.

Attempts to Settle Planetarium Strike Are Made in Durham

Durham, May 17—Further efforts to settle the current wage dispute within the J. A. Jones Construction company of Charlotte were made yesterday.

A statewide meeting of the North Carolina council of Building and Construction Trades held here at the A. F. of L. Temple has appointed a committee to confer with officials of the company to settle the dispute which has halted construction at several Jones projects in this area.

Difficulties arose last week when hoisting engine operators, cement finishers and iron workers left their jobs Monday after asking the Jones company for a general 25 cents per hour wage. All of the men were members of the A. F. of L.

J. R. Casey, secretary of the Durham council of the trades, said that "the North Carolina council is determined to do all in its power to come to a satisfactory settlement with the Jones Construction company in an effort to prevent statewide difficulties in the building construction field."

Projects of the J. A. Jones company in this area are the new Liggett and Myers cigarette factory, the library addition and new physics building at Duke university, the University of North Carolina Morehead planetarium and the Burlington mills at Neuse.

HANK BEEBE

Harold 'Hank' Beebe Will Present Recital In Hill Hall Tonight

Harold "Hank" Beebe, graduate student in music from Pitman, N. J., will give a piano recital in Hill hall tonight at 8:30.

After four years in the Navy during the war, Beebe came to the University as an English major, studying piano under Wilton Mason of the music faculty. He received his A.B. degree last August and is now doing graduate work toward an M.A. in music.

A member of Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa scholastic fraternity, and Sigma Chi, Beebe is prominent in music activities. He directs a chorus composed of members of Sigma Chi and this year won the men's division of the Valkyrie Sing, broadcast later on the University Hour. Two of his compositions have been heard extensively on the campus: "Tradition," a humorous reaction to Carolina lore, and "Queen of the Alpha Taus."

Sound and Fury Meet Schedules Election

Sound and Fury, campus musical comedy organization, will meet tonight at 7:30 in the Sound and Fury office on the top floor of Memorial hall.

According to Kennedy Gammage, president of the group, officers for the coming year will be elected at the meeting and plans for the summer and fall quarters discussed, together with overall policy matters.

Present officers include Gammage, president; Tommy Thomas, vice-president; Jerry Weiss, treasurer; and Faith Adams, corresponding secretary.

ARA MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Air Reserve association tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the old Air ROTC building behind the Naval Armory. All reserve personnel are invited to attend.

Raleigh, May 17—The executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina took no action today on the three Negro applications to the University Medical and Law schools, apparently leaving the matter up to the state legislature.

According to a statement released by the committee, "The matter of admission of Negro students to professional schools of the University of North Carolina was not considered by the executive committee on a point of order that the matter is beyond the authority of the executive committee and/or the Board of Trustees, under the law."

Governor Cherry, in whose office the meeting today was held, had commented a week ago that, "I don't believe the trustees have any authority to pass on the question. In my opinion, it is a legislative matter."

The three Negro applications which were reviewed by the committee were submitted approximately two months ago by James Walker of Statesville and Harold Thomas Epps of Asheville, law students at North Carolina college in Durham, and Dewey M. Clayton, III, of Timberlake.

Walker and Epps applied for admission to the University Law school on the grounds that North Carolina college is not recognized by the American Bar association. Clayton wishes to enter the University Medical school.

The trustees today also named a new head of the University Department of Mathematics. He is Dr. William M. Wyburn, president of Texas Tech. Dr. Wyburn, who is replacing Dr. Archibald Henderson, will begin his duties at Chapel Hill September 1 at a salary of $8,000 per year.

The board directed Attorney General Harry McMullan and J. C. B. Ehringhaus to draw up a compromise agreement for the $500,000 dispute over the fares over-charged in intrastate rail traffic during the war years.

Winning Students To Be Recognized At Awards Night

The annual Awards Night program, at which students with outstanding records in scholarship and extra-curricular activities will be presented citations, prizes and medals for the year ending, will be held in Hill hall tomorrow night at 7:15.

Following music by the University band, President Frank P. Graham will make a short talk, after which Chancellor Robert B House will take over as chairman for the presentation of the prizes and medals.

Among the outstanding awards to be made are the John J. Parker, Jr., medal for leadership, the Algernon Sydney Sullivan service award, and the Ernest H. Abernethy Publications award, all of which will be presented by Dean of Students E. L. Mackie; the Patterson medal for excellence in athletics, the Foy Roberson, Jr., medal for contribution to team morale in basketball, and other athletic awards, to be presented by Athletic Director R. A. Fetzer; the Kay Kyser scholarships in music and drama, and the Frederick H. Koch scholarship, and Carolina Playmaker mask awards, to be presented by Director Samuel Selden.

UP MEETING

The University party Steering committee will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Graham Memorial.

Phi Assembly Gubernatorial Choice Will Be Decided at Meeting Tonight

The Phi assembly will endorse the man that it considers to be the most capable for the position of governor of North Carolina at its meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Phi hall. This will be the last open meeting of the Phi until the fall quarter.

The bill was reported out by the Ways and Means committee in view of the Democratic gubernatorial primary to be held on May 29. This is the first time in the history of the assembly that a bill to endorse a candidate for the gubernatorial race has ever been discussed.

Bill Duncan, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, said, "This bill will help to bring the problem of selecting a governor to the students and will give them aid in deciding exactly what qualifications a candidate for governor should possess."

Nominations for officers of the assembly for the fall term will be made in an executive session immediately following the regular meeting.

REIDSVILLE CLUB

President 'Ish Moore of the Reidsville-Carolina club announced that there will be a speical meeting of the club at 8 o'clock tonight in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial to discuss plans for a graduation party.

Advisors to Discuss Orientation Program

Second in the series of training programs for next year's student advisors will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounges 1 and 2, according to Teenie Royall, chairman of advisors.

The executive committee, composed of dormitory chairmen and the officers of the group, will meet at 7:30 to discuss problems brought out in dormitory meetings last week.

The completed orientation program will be discussed, and suggestions from each dormitory group will be given. Committees will also be appointed at this meeting.

DAMES TO HAVE SPEAKER

Miss Elizabeth Whitney of Kraft Food company will be guest speaker at tonight's meeting of the Carolina Dames club which will be held at 7:45 in the Pine room of Lenoir hall.

Ferne Hughes Is Drene Girl; To Head for New York June 7

By Doris Thomas

A week at the Waldorf with all expenses paid and limousines calling for you to take you from dinner at the Stork club to a big theater party to which you will wear beautiful new clothes made especially for you—these are things that just don't happen often except in movies or books.

That is, they just don't happen to you or me. But one comely Carolina coed, Ferne Hughes of Rainelle, W. Va., is going to get that week at the Waldorf complete with a newly fashioned wardrobe for her stay and will be, along with three other lucky girls like her, royally entertained.

Ferne, a junior, was one of only two girls selected from Southern college by Compton Advertising, Inc., of New York, for the Drene Shampoo company to endorse this product in a new advertising campaign beginning in the fall.

Ferne was picked after being interviewed, along with a dozen other Carolina coeds in Chapel Hill by Anne Carnahan, New York newspaper woman.

She will go to New York June 7 where she will work for two days, at a rate of $10 an hour, as a model for Drene in the studio of Allan Fontaine. The rest of the week will be spent at theater parties, luncheon at the Stork club and shopping.

Ferne has just received notice of her selection. "I just can't get over it," she said. "If I were from a big city, it wouldn't seem quite as strange, but I'm just a plain small town girl." (She is from a small town, but she's far from plain.)

Ferne's father, Guy H. Hughes is vice-president of the Meadow River Lumber company of Rainelle, W. Va., a town of about 3,000 population. Her mother is the former Ferne Hall of Williamson, W. Va., a coal mining town.

Reynard Alias 'Radar'

Campus Head Dog Disappears; Thought to Be in Hoosegow

By Jim Dickinson

Was Reynard, alias Radar, campus head dog, actually whisked away to jail at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning?

Evolving from that question was a two-fold mystery Sunday as Radar's supporters sought to find out if the chief of dogs was guilty of the crime with which he was charged, that of nibbling a chunk from the leg of an unsuspecting night watchman.

They wondered at the same time if maybe Radar was "taken for a ride" in a conspiracy which would automatically boost George, number 2 dog, into head position.

It all started weeks and weeks ago when Dan the Dog disappeared again in still another yet unsolved mystery. At that time it was necessary to award Dan's post to a dog of proven leadership, poise, responsibility, and peace-making ability.

Radar, boasting a record of seniority and unquestionable canine quality, barely nosed out George and Big'un, the two nearest contenders. Big'un held the number 1 post during the summer session last year in Dan's absence.

Many of George's supporters thought at the time that their favorite was the victim of a dirty deal. The Sunday morning episode, by a similar token, leads several Radarites to believe that foul play took place in the dead of night.

As it stands, George has taken over the driver's seat pending Radar's return. His fans are boasting that Radar "has been taken care of."

Others report that Radar is in confinement for a week or two in a dog hospital as insurance that the night watchman was not "mad-dog bit."

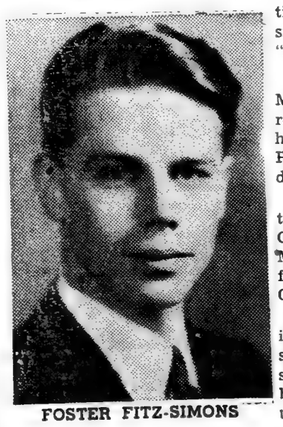
Only one thing remains as dead fact. Radar was gently deposited in the back seat of a police squad car at 1:30 Sunday morning and removed to an undisclosed destination.

Fitz-Simons' Novel . . . . . . Is on Its Way

Filming Of 'Bright Leaf' Well Underway

By Mark Sumner

Foster Fitz-Simons, director of the Carolina Playmaker production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and an assistant professor in the dramatic arts department, has received word that the motion picture version of his new novel, "Bright Leaf," will be completed next spring by Warner Brothers studios. The novel is to be published next fall by Rhinehart and Company.



The novel, with its motion picture version, serve to highlight one of the most interesting backgrounds on record for a college instructor. Fitz-Simons has been a playwright, actor, director and dancer.

He graduated from the University during 1934, and joined the Ted Shawn professional dance company, touring the United States and South America. Previously, he had written a one-act play, "Four on a Hearth," at the University. It was published and proved to be highly successful.

While on tour, he completed a second one, "Road into the Sun," which was also very successful. This gave him the incentive to start a novel he had been planning, and in 1936, he wrote the first page of a long novel based on the tobacco industry and its people in Durham. This was "Bright Leaf," for which Warner brothers in Hollywood paid $75,000.

After four years with the Ted Shawn group, he left to act and to do solo dance work, but in 1938, he joined Mariam Winslow and organized a dance team. For another four years the couple toured all sections of the Eastern United States, playing several times in New York, including a six weeks engagement at the "Rainbow Room."

FOSTER FITZ-SIMONS

He met and married actress Marion Tatum, and in 1942, he returned to Chapel Hill, where he became a staff member of the Playmakers, and teaches acting, dance, and directing.

For two summers he has been the dance choreographer for Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" at Manteo, and he has danced the feature role of The Indian chief, Opowac, in the production.

"The biggest problem in directing 'Cyrano de Bergerac'," he says, "is the large cast of livng scenery—characters who set the background for the leading figures. There are several of these crowd scenes and a battle scene."

"Don't misunderstand," he added, "because that is the kind of directing that I like best."

We Like Music

Appreciative note is hereby taken of the bands resumption of its annual spring Sunday afternoon concerts. Judging by the number of people seated on the lawn around Davie Poplar Sunday, a great many people, both students and townspeople, are glad to see the concerts start again, and from the amount of applause, all of them enjoyed the music presented.

Hubert Henderson, assistant director of the University band, did an able job of directing the musicians usually led by Director Earl Slocum. Another concert will be given next Sunday afternoon at 4:30 and students looking for entertainment will find the shady lawn of the central campus a pleasant place to spend an enjoyable hour in the company of music.

Back to Normal

Finally and at last the University's serfs dwellling in trailers, basements, attics and anywhere else that they can find a vacant cubbyhole, may have a chance to get decent living quarters at a decent price.

Came the tidings last week that the first of the three new dormitories is completed, accepted and ready for occupancy in the summer sessions, and that the other two will be ready by fall. Each of the dorms will house 280 people, giving 840 cellar-dwellers and commuters from the outlying precincts an opportunity to come into town and live like city folks. This, combined with a predicted lower enrollment next year, should provide most students with living quarters within walking distance of classes.

The University at last is "getting back to normal"—although a much enlarged normal, at that.

And Buzzers, Yet

With an aim toward aiding residents of male dormitories in their battle with the terrors of telephone traffic, the University is having a buzzer installed in each room of the new dormitories.

Of course this may be a mere swapping of old troubles for new, because most likely the dorm men will have to work out a system of using a different number of buzzes for each occupant of a room, and then they'll probably need a two-way buzzer so men on the third floor can signal back to the first floor phone whether or not the wanted person is in and will be down to answer.

But it will cut out a lot of running up and down stairs and shouting.

The Home Stretch

It's done it again. The first it refers to examination time and the second one means 'slipped up on us.' Most of us have been coasting happily along, falsely secure in the thought that there is still plenty of time left in the quarter. Suddenly we realize with a jolt that examinations begin two weeks from today.

Now begins the run on the library as the mad rush starts to get all that outside reading done. Now come the nights with late lights burning in the dormitories as the grind goes on to make up for time spent in bridge games, in dating, dancing, dawdling. Now is the time when benzedrine sales go up and beer sales go down.

From here on in it's the home stretch. Put the whip to your horses, and the devil take the hindmost!

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is published daily, except Mondays, examination and vacation periods by the Colonial Press, Inc. During the official summer terms, it is published semi-weekly on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 8, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per college year, $6.00 per quarter.

De-feet And Bloody Stumps

By R. Foo' Giduz

So it is yesterday morning early when we are Mondaily sitting in on the open meeting of the Greater Tar Heel Monday Morning Beer Drinking and Hangover Recovery Society (8-10, Max's). . .And the lads bring up the subject of feet, shoes, and the damnability of 'em all. . .Next year's Seniors have already called for Barefoot Week—yea, even a few staunch Saleeb Stooges of '49 now holler for a Shoeless Shpring. . .

—But all seems not lost yet for this spring. . .It is Friday when Editor Eddie ed dy tor i al ly calls for a genuine peoples' roots and muddy toes movement. . .CC heartily backs up his proposal & calls for immediate and Dedmond-proclaimed barefeet days NOW. . . With no further procrastination and ma-shoe-nation. . . . How's about it, characters?. . . If you're interested just tear off the top of your shoes and send them into the Daily Tar Heel. . .Our victory shall end in de-feet. . .Even if better we should walking around on bloody stumps. . .

Friday was another one of those nights out to the Printshop. . . . Presses ready to roll and there's still a hole in the edit page. . . . Thus come to the rescue no less than ever-ready late-carousing Ed Lainer, our central Records Office Director who is never at loss for words, with his impromptu inspirational second column diatribe "Time Marches On." . . . We welcome Marse Ed to the ranks of we reputationless columnists, and look for bigger and better. . . . Then we turn over to page four for daily cherished reading of the classifieds.—speculate: Just why in the h... does Charlie Stancell advertise for a "Senior with C average to pick up golf balls at Charlie's Driving Range???" . . . Mebbe it's (1) Only such square characters can tell a golf ball from a discarded beer cap; (2) If there's any Senior with such a phenomenal record now, better he should already and instantaneously spending his time in such creative pursuits! . . . (Job still open!)

It does not seem right that no student views were expressed at yesterday's session of the Executive Committee of the Trustees in Raleigh. . . . The group was to take up the matter of current Negro applications. . . . But their decisions (if any) on this question will mean infinitely more than just three admissions or refusals. They should face the whole question of N. C. higher educational segregation squarely, and students' views should be (have been) allowed expression personally. . . . (Pres. Dedmond had hoped for an audience with the group but such was not possible.)

The Question Of Education

By Pete Gerns

"Are you getting an education which you believe to be adequate for your future plans?" Some do and some don't. Theoretical aspects are delt with to the satisfaction of most, but many pointed out that the practical side of an education is being neglected. Let's see how we fare:

"The tools which a man will use in his future work are here; a great deal lies with the student in recognizing the value of these tools; to me the instructors here emphasize what a man will need. Let him be the judge of his needs." Henry I. Gifford.

"I feel that the college education which we receive is inadequate in that there is need of practical experience along with our preparation." Jo Fishel.

"My studies here do seem to me to be adequate to enable me to follow the line of work I intend to enter when I leave here." Ben L. Rouse.

"Law school blends the practical with the educational requirements of the state needed in order to practice law. Altho I plan to farm after leaving school, my law will be of aid in dealing with my tenants." A. M. Britt.

"I agree with Mr. Britt except that instead of farming I plan to work for the Haynes Cotton Mills." Charles Neeves.

"My future needs are all taken care of." Mrs. J. D. Wise.

"There is too much emphasis put on the theoretical side of our education." D. Smith.

"There can be no adequacy of education for future needs in such a short time. The vital material is too vast for such a short time. However, I believe that in such a time of internationalism "time" can be spent in no better way than studying languages and cultures of other countries." Tom Cunningham.

"Our educational system has its faults, true, but I believe the question should be: 'Am I doing my very best with the opportunities afforded me?'. The marbles are on the table, it's a matter of picking them up." Jack Taylor.

"In one course only." Jerry Darden.

"To get an education adequate for one's future plans he would have to know just exactly what his plans would be. Actually education is something that should be broadened everyday, throughout one's life. I do believe, however, that the education I am getting today will be very helpful to me in the future. Otherwise I wouldn't be here." George Daughtry.

"My education will undoubtedly get me a job teaching, but I believe graduate work at a school like this is largely deadwood—footnotes and empty defining, worshipping absolutism, and damming change—entirely out of touch with life in 1948." Ken Macrorie.

"To be successful, a man must be able to fit not only into the business but also the closely allied cultural and social worlds. The broad education now offered by this university is the first step to such successful living." Basil Alexander Wood, Jr.

"We waste entirely too much time on theoretical and unpractical courses, especially languages. More speech classes, general economics courses for everyone. I repeat: abolish language courses as required subjects." Hurschell Keener.

"My undergraduate course is only fundamental to what I'll have in med school, but everything I take, especially sciences, helps. I'm really loaded with science courses. Also, now I can take at least one elective every quarter which will help me in medicine, or others which will give me more of a general education. My present education not only prepares me for a doctor but also for a businessman." Donald Horton.

"I believe that there is too much emphasis on a broad education which leaves too little time for specialization under the present four-year system. I have no quarrel with a liberal education for those who can afford it, but for a great many students it is merely an anachronism dating from the days when the college student was not expected to work for a living." Allen Williamson.

"No Iron Curtain"

By Bill Robertson

In the final stages of the recent war against fascist barbarism in Europe the loud-mouthed red-baiter, Dr. Josef Goe... shouted hysterically that if the Bolsheviks were to continue t... advance an "iron curtain" would descend upon Germany. A l... later, after this vile character had been dumped into the ash... of history, his spirit arose once again as Winston Churchill, s... of a long line of aristocrats, repeated this phrase at Fulton, M... ouri to indicate the Western boundry of "Asiatic" power... Japanese ruling class maintains that communism is a product... "Western Culture.")

But to get back to that monstrous mechanism, "the iron c... tain", there was a time when it was pushed much farther to... East! Like a huge scraper it moved into the suburbs of Sebastop... It worked its way through the rubble—inch by inch. And as the Soviet soldiers retreated to the beaches they picked up the dirt and held it tightly in their hands. Many of them wept and vowed that they would return as they boarded the ships which evacuated them under a hail of fire.

Unfortunately, "the iron curtain" continued its eastward movement until it reached Stalingrad. At Stalingrad was fought the greatest battle of human history. Never was there a battle in which the issue was so clearly drawn—and in such epic dimensions. It was a battle between the advocates of "the master race theory" and the advocates of the brotherhood of man; a battle between mediaevil mysticism and scientific understanding of the course of development of human society; a battle between the past and the future.

The gigantic mopping-up operation which followed the Battle of Stalingrad has liquidated the iron curtain forever. There only remains a "curtain of lies" with which the multi-millionaires and billionaires strive desperately to keep the truth from the American people. (just as earlier the multi-millionaires and billionaires in Hitler Germany did likewise with the German people.) The destruction of this "curtain of lies" is a strenuous task, calling for courage and perserverance. But it is child's play compared to the efforts which were necessary to bring about the triumph of progressive and democratic forces in World War II.

By the way, when Josef Goebbels departed rather hurridly from this changing world, he left behind a stench bomb in his barracks bag. In case you are wondering what happened to it, there is now a picture showing at the Carolina Theatre, entitled, "The Iron Curtain."

The Public Will Decide

St. Paul, Minn. —(UP)— Harold Edward Stassen, 41, is seeking the Republican presidential nomination in 1948 with the same strategy which elected him governor of Minnesota when he was 31—taking his stand on issues and then going to the people at the grass roots level for approval.

Stassen said that given the issues, the public would make the right decisions.

A major tool in his strategy is his own physique, which he drives unsparingly while on exhaustive stumping campaigns. Big from the date of his birth, April 13, 1907, Stassen's six-foot, three-inch frame was conditioned by a boyhood of farm work. His parent truck-gardeners at West St. Paul, Minn., relied on him to carry on when his father, William, was ill for a year.

Opening his political career as Dakota County attorney in 1930, the year after he was graduated from law school at the University of Minnesota, Stassen drew on his farm background in solving depression-born labor strife.

He won an increase in milk prices for farmers who threatened violence, representing them in negotiations after warning he would prosecute them if violence arose. He settled a seething packing house workers' strike with the approval of labor and management.

Youth turned to Stassen when at the age of 28 he formed and headed the state Young Republican League. Youth found a young man whose accomplishments always had come before the age which custom permitted. It found that Stassen was graduated from high school at 14; ran the family at 15; took one college degree at 19 and another at 22, and became county attorney before turning 23.

In 1929, Stassen married Esther Glewwe, a West St. Paul neighbor. They now have two children, Glen 12, and Kathleen, 6.

Stassen was only 30 when he announced, a year before state elections, that he would seek the Republican nomination for governor. Astonished politicians told him: "Too early; why didn't you wait?" Others were to tell him the same thing in 1946 when he announced his candidacy for the presidential nomination.

People deserted in droves from the entrenched Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party. They gave Stassen a plurality of 291,000 votes and in 1938 Minnesota found itself with a 31-year-old governor, the youngest in its history.

Stassen served three terms as governor and made good on his first political promises. He gave the state a labor law that cut strikers' numbers by more than half; reduced the state debt drastically; adopted civil service for selecting state employes, and reorganized governmental administration.

At 33, he keynoted the party's notional convention in 1940, and acted as floor manager in Wendell L. Willkie's nomination. While still governor, he joined the Navy and became a captain under Adm. William F. Halsey, serving in the Pacific.

The war over, Stassen waited only to December, 1946, to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for President. It was almost two years before election time, but he ignored the cries of politicians that he was "too early."

The Gripe Corner

Bearable And Otherwise

By Alice Denham

Everybody on campus, from the famed DTH editorialists to the Archaeology and Arboretum majors, thinks! Oh, yes, they do. When they have nothing else to do, aren't sleepy, can find no one to party with, their mental (more or less) process start clicking. With the rumblings of these mighty minds, lofty opinions are formed on varied and weighty subjects, three-fourths of these pondered thoughts being concerned with gripes, beefs, and what- I-don't-like- about -this-lousy-school. The remaining fourth (fifth would be preferable!) of opinions deals with things about the school that aren't too bad or at least are bearable. I shall, with realization of the lasting intellectual importance of the overwhelming task, endeavor to enumerate a few of these serious and mighty opinions for your consideration and judgment.

GRIPES AND BEEFS:

1. Lines at Lenoir Dining Hall, which force me to drag out of bed at 5:45 a. m. to make that eight o'clock class.

2. Watery scrambled eggs, same place, which I eat only because my mother told me when I was a child that eggs keep you healthy. I'm still trying, Mom!

3. Chapel Hill rain, which is so inconsiderate it soaks our tradition-strewed paths.

4. Lack of dogs at the movie theatres. I really miss them when I go to a show. If dogs were allowed in the theatres, they would undoubtedly understand most of the movies nowadays which are designed for those with a mental age of a four-year-old! And the audience could institute dog races up and down the aisles during the showing of the March of Time.

5. Lack of a nearby ocean to leap into. I suggest circulation of a petition to insall one in the vicinity of the Buccaneer.

6. Telephone booths, because they don't have crossword puzzles or slot machines in them to occupy you while you jestingly play with the dial, knowing all the while in your secret heart that your chances of getting a call through are 100,000 to 1.

7. Athletic endeavor required to reach dorms by coed closing hours, whether at eleven or one o'clock. Only the Physical Education majors are assured of getting there on time.

8. Coffee spilled in the saucer at Lenoir, which makes you wish you had a soup bowl under your coffee cup instead of a poor, shallow saucer.

9. Crowds at formal dances. I suggest the A-F's attend the first hour, the G-L's the second hour, the M-R's the third, and the S-Z's the last hour.

10. Food prices (just to be different).

11. "Game rooms" around the campus, where the boys gamble away their G. I. checks regularly the first of each month. It would be all right if every one could win!

12. Mysterious rooms in fraternity houses, through which only imports may pass.

13. Cliques of all kinds, because they shut off the people in them from necessary and educational contacts with the opinions of outsiders and deny outsiders acess to the thoughts and feelings of the groups.

You Know It . . .
. . . Or Do You?

The answers to Sunday's quiz on campus buildings and objects of interest was omitted from page four by accident. The DTH regrets this error and reprints the questions, with answers below:

1) Where is Senior Walk?
ans.) The Planetarium is blocking it.

2) Is the nameplate bearing the inscription "Senior Walk" polished granit, marble, metal or cement? ans.) Cement.

3) Is the post itself of brick, stone or metal?
ans.) Stone.

4) What is the popular name of Bryant Hall? ans.) Carolina Inn Apartments.

5) Do the same for Wilson Hall. ans.) Zoology Building.

6) And again for Abernathy Hall.
ans.) Old Infirmary, a housing unit now.

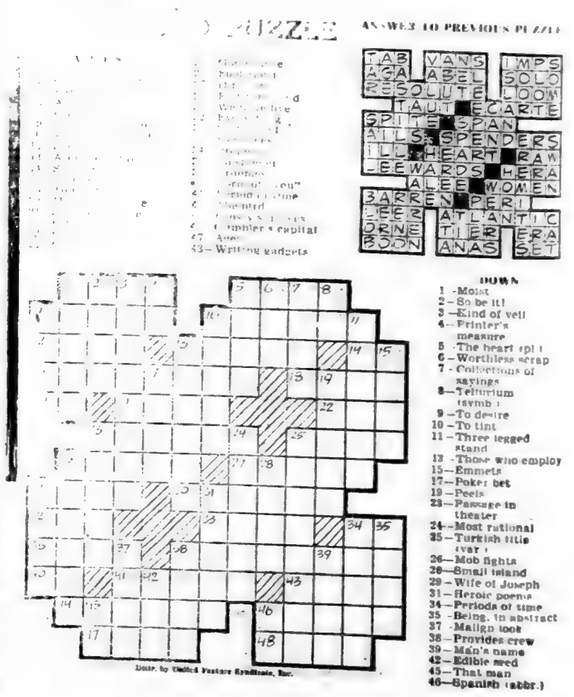
Pit And The Pendulum

On The Side Of The Angels

By Raney Stanford



Newspaper offices are notorious for being on the receiving end of all and sundry who who have crusades to win and worlds to save, and even our collegiate rumpus room is continually struggling under the load of tracts, poop sheets, and pleas to get on the side of the side of the angels.

Among the more intriguing of such items coming in on the postman's back last week was a clever little publication that on first glance would seem to be a comic magazine of the inexhaustible "Superman" category. But on perusal you find that Superman hasn't been between these covers for some time. The thing is entitled "Is This Tomorrow?" and says it depicts "America Under Communism", and off they go to the races. The kiddies will probably lap it up; it stays right in the same style as other mags with the same format, only this time it is the Reds who shoot the preachers, whip the school teachers, burn the books, machine-gun the good and terrormentally deficient; but just the same, all sorts of thought trains start chugging off when you pick up the mail and have "Why Fear Sterilization?" leap out at ize the poor. It is printed by a "Catechetical Guild", an apochryphal outfit that exposes its purposes almost as much when its name is spelled backwards as it does when it is read as written.

All this is based on methods Communists, and for that matter Fascists and Nazis, have used to control peoples. But this manner of presentation is luridly flamboyant and aimed pretty low. "Be American" screams this Guild; don't reason, just get angry, Mac. Hey fellows, how about giving us Superman back, if I remember correctly he used to be a pretty clear-thinking guy. . .

Another set of pamplets that create an ominous note of a different nature are the ones continually coming in labelled "Why Fear Sterilization?" across the front. Now we know this is the work of meritorious North Carolina group called the Human Betterment League, which is trying to get a more throrough and scientific application of the state's sterilization laws as regards to the you. I know there's nothing to be afraid of, why fear it, it says; but just the same. . .

Since our eminent editorialist Sandy Grady has shoved off into the cruel world in search of greener pastures (there was another cliche to go in there but it seems to be misplaced) there is nobody around here to talk with about the merits of Dave Garroway. So I decided to have a go at interesting you in the deal. Mr. Garroway is the clever young man who MC's a musical show over NBC at 11:30 on Sunday evenings, but he first became known for the record show he "jockeys discs" on, as the initiate say, out of Chicago in the middle of the night. This is about the most remarkable record show heard around here, both for the quality of music and for the amazing line of chatter Jockey Garroway gives out with. Any one interested in catching the hassel can tune in just a shade to the left of WPTF's frequency, 670, Mondays through Saturdays, from 12 until 1:30 in the morning. Garroway is the only man on the air that I know who will play a record of Debussy's La Mer", read part of Eliot's Waste Land", and then spin Dizzy Gillespie's "Salt Peanuts". Won't say the show is better than the sack time, but it's among the few better things.

Baseball Team Outlasts Wake Forest, 7-6, To Assure Tie For Big Four Flag

Deac Rally in Late Innings Falls Short Of Tie; Blair Receives Credit for Win

By Buddy Vaden

Wake Forest, May 17—Neither rain nor hail nor charging baserunners could stop Coach Bunn Hearn's Gashouse nine from collecting their seventh Big Four win of the season at the expense of Wake Forest, 7-6, and clinching at least a tie for the Big Four championship title here today.

Ray Blair, who relieved starter Dean Cassell in the second, was credited with the Tar Heel victory, their fourth over the Deacons this year, all of which have been by one-run margins. Losing pitcher was Dale Blackwell.

Carolina took an early lead in the game, which was held up 30 minutes because of a hail and rainstorm, by scoring two runs in the initial frame. However, the Deacons came back in the bottom of the first with two of their own, only to have the Tar Heels go ahead in the next frame. The lead was never again taken away from the Chapel Hillians, but was seriously threatened several times.

Two Runs in First

In the first inning leadoff man Kenny Black singled and was sent to third on a base knock by Jim Hayworth. Frank Jones, the next batter, popped out, but Jim Kelly collected the third hit off Deacon pitcher Dale Blackwell and sent Black across the plate for the first run. Hayworth followed on the next play, when Willard Hobbs reached first on a Texas leaguer.

Wake Forest retaliated in their half of the inning with two runs. Art Hoch, first man up, singled and was driven home by Charlie Kersch, who singled. However Hoch failed to touch second and was called out. On the throw at the plate Kersch went to third. Charlie Teague stepped up to the plate and hit the first pitched ball into deep center field for a home run, scoring Kersch.

Big Third Inning

The Tar Heels went wild in the third inning, scoring five runs on three hits. Hayworth started the inning with an out, but Frank Jones followed him with his first of two hits for the day. Jones hit a long double into right center. Kelly and Hobbs walked to load the bases. And then Blackwell let fly a wild fast ball that hit the dirt in front of the plate. The ball went past catcher Russ Bachelor and all runners advanced, with Jones crossing the plate. Rip Ryan reached first and Kelly scored the fourth run of the ball game on an error by shortstop Art Hoch. Ryan and Hobbs added two more runs to the mounting score when Pappy Hamilton doubled off the sixth pitch of Harry Bowers, who relieved Blackwell after six runs had scored.

The final Tar Heel run, which proved to be the winning margin, was scored by Hamilton on Ray Blair's base knock. The Carolinians were held down to two hits for the remainder of the game by two Wake Forest pitchers, Bowers and Moe Bauer.

Wake Scores

Wake scored once in the fifth and sixth innings, then staged a late rally in the final, scoring two runs. In the fifth, Teague, who walked, scored on Joe Fulghum's double, the fourth extra-base hit of the ball game. In the next frame, Hoch scored on Kerch's infield out after tripling.

And then in the hectic ninth, the Deacons came to within one run of tying up the ball game. Leadoff man Hoch collected his second triple and fourth hit to start things flying. He scored on the next play when Ryan fired a ground ball by pinch-hitter Wrenn over first baseman Hobbs' head. Kersch narrowed the Tar Heels' lead by another run when he scored on Teague's double. At this point of the game Blair gave way in favor of Tommy Andrew, who put the next three men away.

However, before the final inning was over, the Deacons tried in vain to add another run, but Andy Tranavitch preserved the Blue and White lead with a spectacular play at the plate. It was Charlie Teague who tried to even

Halted by Rain, Murals Resume Program Today

Set back by the terrific downpour yesterday, the mural department moves into a big week of activity today with the campus championship in the rifle shooting program and a crucial schedule of softball games.

Kappa Sigma, survivor of the fraternity division rifle competition, will meet the winner of last night's dormitory title match between Alexander and Stacy. This meeting will be for the campus crown.

On the softball scene, many of today's games will decide the winners of several of the four uncrowned champs. Kap Sig 2 and Phi Gam 3 will take to the diamond to fight for the top rung of the number four fraternity ladder.

Pi Lamb 1 and Sigma Nu 1 will battle it out for the right to move into a tie for first place in fraternity league six. Both have a 5-1 record and Phi Delt 2 has completed its slate with a 6-1 mark.

In the other four fraternity loops Phi Kappa 1, Zeta Psi 2, DKE 1, and PiKA 2 have marched undefeated to the top spot.

Emerson and Misfits duplicated this trick in the first two dormitory divisions. A three-way tie exists between Law and Med School and Mangum 2 in dorm league three. None of the teams meet today so a playoff will probably be necessary.

Kovaleski, Bartzen Gain Doubles Crown

By Larry Fox

The experts were right when they seeded Vic Seixas number one in the singles and the team of Tut Bartzen and Fred Kovaleski tops in the doubles of the Southern conference tourney, for Seixas and the William and Mary duo both won championships.

The protracted contest wasn't completed until yesterday when the final two sets of the doubles final were played between Bartzen and Kovaleski and Seixas and Clark Taylor.

Seixas Wins

Seixas defeated Kovaleski in the finals Sunday afternoon to recapture the singles trophy from William and Mary where it had reposed after Gardner Larned defeated Seixas for the crown last year.

The contest went four sets, of which Tar Heel Seixas took the final three; all by 6-4 scores.

Kovaleski started strong in the opening set and jumped to an early, if short-lived, lead in the match by virtue of his ability to outlast Seixas while volleying. The score was 6-3.

Seixas' drop shots were working to perfection in the second canto and he took five straight games, after dropping the first one, to gain a substantial advantage. Seixas had his opponent at set point seven times during the final game before sewing up the canto on his eighth try.

Blistering Service

Seixas used his blistering opening service to gain several points and it was the effectiveness of his overhead smashes and placements that enabled the Philadelphian, ninth-ranking amateur in the nation, to counteract Kovaleski's ability to continue a long volley until the Tar Heel committed an error.

Seixas and Taylor won the first two sets in the doubles play, but the top-ranked Indians showed their championship form and spirit by rapturing the final three sets and the title.

The Carolina pair came out on top in the first round, 6-4, but the second set went 20 games before the Tar Heels took an 11-9 decision. The third canto also went overtime, but this time Bartzen and Kovaleski came out on top, 8-6. They were trailing in the fourth set, 2-0, when it was called on account of darkness.

Indians Take

The Indians took the first three games to take the lead, but Carolina tied it up at 4-4 and then at 5-5. A torrential rain halted play at that point and it was feared that the tournament would have to be carried over until today.

However, the skies cleared and so did W and M's chances of winning the championship. The visitors captured the next two games to move into a 2-2 deadlock.

The final set was almost all Kovaleski and Bartzen. The top-seeded pair jumped into a 2-0 lead and wasn't headed thereafter. Carolina won a game on Taylor's service, but W and M won the next three frames for a

Golfers Face Wake Forest Today In Final Encounter Of Campaign

Carolina's golf team will board up the club house doors late this afternoon after they finish up their 1948 season with a match against the Deacons of Wake Forest at the Raleigh country club.

The locals will be seeking their eighth win of the campaign and something in the way of revenge over the Black and Gold for a 16 1-2 to 10 1-2 defeat the Wake Forest lads inflicted upon them at Hope Valley last week.

Deacs Second

The Deacons were runners-up in the Conference meet at Pinehurst and sport a balanced six that toppled loop champions Duke in a match earlier in the year. At the No. 1 post for the Deacs is Arnold Palmer, the conference medalist, which gives the charges of Coach Jim Weaver an impressive sound on both paper and fairway.

Behind Palmer there are a group of freshman performers—Palmer also falling into that class—who can give any links team in the country a run for the money. Included in that group is Bud Worsham, brother of the famed pro, who had a 69 against the Tar Heels last week.

Combat Power

To combat this power, Coach Chuck Erickson will call upon his own little potent powerhouse that tied State in their outing. It looks like Wayvie Ward, still North-South amateur champion, will be at the No. 1 post with the rest of the assignments somewhat in doubt.

The other five Tar Heels will definitely be Roy McKenzie, Bob Cox, Jack Brantley, Harvey Oliver and Frank Brooks, but the exact position in which the noon day sun will find them, is still to be determined.

Trackmen Look Ahead to Meet With Duke After Successful Defense of Loop Title

Carolina's crack track team are still celebrating this week after capturing their 12th Southern conference track and field championship in 24 tries, but Coaches Bob Fetzer and Dale Ranson aren't showing any optimism over the forthcoming meet with Duke's highly-rated sprinters, set for Friday at Durham.

The coaches were full of compliments for the Tar Heel runners, however, and the boys are still all smiles with another big cup to add to their already large collection.

While the Tar Heels had the title, honors were singled out for others after the meet, with particular praise going to several members of the also-ran teams.

Norman (Scooter) Rucks of the University of South Carolina was proclaimed the sensation of the meet. The young man broke the 440 record twice before the meet was over and climaxed his day's work with a victory in the 220. He also did what was considered some pretty fair running in the one-mile relay.

Then there was Frank Liddell, VMI sprinter who did some fine jogging in outstepping Carolina's Sam Magill in the two-mile with a record mark of 9:33.2, considering that he was overlooked in pre-meet calculations. N. C. State's Charlie Chambers took high scoring honors, 14 points, with two first and a second.

For the Tar Heels, Bill Joyner's outstanding high jump victory was a highlight, and Bob Seligman enjoyed the satisfaction of being the only champion repeater. Dick Taylor's 14.6 effort in the high hurdles also rated among the outstanding performances of the meet.

Taylor again won his service and the eighth game went to deuce before Bartzen exclaimed, "That's it, Frank," and rushed over to clasp his partner's hand.

The tournament, which started Thursday afternoon, didn't affect the team standings in the conference. William and Mary already holds the team title by virtue of its undefeated dual meet record for the campaign.

This marks the third time in three meetings that Seixas has defeated Kovaleski, National Public parks champion.

"The work stoppage in Durham threatens to become a statewide issue,' 'the council said after its meeting yesterday. Delegates from throughout the State attended the session.

After discussing the work stoppage now in effect in Durham because of the wage dispute between the Durham Council of Trades and the Jones company, the North Carolina council designated a committee from among its officials of the Jones company in an effort to settle the differences in this area.

"In the absence of settlement, picketing will continue on all J. A. Jones projects in Durham and vicinity," Casey declared.

Five feet, eight inches tall, weight 128 pounds, Ferne has blue eyes and dark blond hair, naturally wavy. She graduated from Greenbriar Junior college. Lewisburg, W. Va., before coming to Carolina.

At Greenbriar, where she was a member of Sigma Iota Chi sorority, Ferne served as president of the junior class, the Women's Glee club, and of her dormitory, and as representative to the Student council for two years.

At Carolina she is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority and is on the Student council. She is president of the women's Glee club, the Pan Hellenic council, and was elected to Sigma Alpha Iota, music sorority.

A voice major, she is also active in the Chapel Hill Choral club and sings in the Presbyterian church choir. She portrayed "Peep-Bo" in the Playmaker-Music department production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado." She was elected to the Yackety Yack beauty court in a contest held recently with James Street and Betty Smith, authors, as judges. Ferne has been to New York to visit friends, "but I never dreamed I would ever spend a week at the Waldorf," she said.

Dr. A. P. Hudson Corrects Report Regarding New Teacher-Rating Bill

Dr. A. P. Hudson, chairman of the faculty committee on General College instruction, yesterday corrected a misquotation of his statement to the Student Legislature Thursday night during discussion of a bill to set up a system by which students would grade their instructors.

An account of the discussion which was printed Friday morning reported Dr. Hudson as saying that 6,100 teacher-rating scales had been distributed to instructors and department heads by his committee upon the recommendation of the University Board of Trustees.

"I am reported to have said that 'the action had been taken on the recommendation of the University Board of Trustees.' This statement is inaccurate," Dr. Hudson said yesterday.

"What I did say in reference to the Board of Trustees was that the visiting committee of the Board in its report last winter had expressed doubts about the quality of teaching at Chapel Hill. This fact I cited as one reason why the faculty comm.. General College instruct signed the teacher rati.. now in operation among t.. ulty and students.

"I should like to state, I more, that the faculty co.. on general college instruct nothing to do with the in.. of the bill introduced in.. Student Legislature. The.. of the bill, Mr. Miles Smit.. me that he had not even h.. the teacher-rating projec.. sored by the committee.

HOURS AFTER THE BIRTH of the new Jewish state, Israel, fighting men of Haganah were reported in combat with Arabs from Dan to Beersheba, the biblical limits of the Holy Land. Meanwhile, Egyptian troops were said to be advancing inside Palestine on a 50-mile front. A report from Cairo stated that 122,000 Arab troops would take the field: 50,000 Egyptians, 50,000 Iraqis, 12,000 Trans-Jordanians and 10,000 warriors from Syria and Lebanon. The map shows how Arab countries surround the newly-formed Jewish nation. (International)

Class of 1937 Establishes Library Memorial Fund

By Margaret Gaston

In remembering the University and its dedication to the causes of humanity in war and in peace, the class of 1937 charged a 12-man committee last June to devise something which would be a fitting memorial to its classmates who died in World War II, and at the same time serve a useful purpose in the University.

After discussing various projects the committee proposed that its class establish the Class of 1937 memorial fund, the initial installment of which they would present to Chancellor House at the alumni luncheon to be held at its 11th anniversity reunion at commencement this year. The money contributed by the members of the 1937 class would be available to the University library for use in the purchase of books for which appropriated funds cannot be spent.

The library staff and department heads told the committee that certain volumes and collections essential to the library were not available on the open market and were obtainable only by constant searching and prompt action when they were discovered for sale.

Since books by themselves may be lacking in the symbolic qualities desired in a memorial, the committee designed a bookplate for insertion in the books which will be acquired through the fund. The bookplate shows the names of the 16 members of the class of 1937 who were killed in the last war.

Those listed on the bookplate are Jacob Waldo Bond, Winchester, Mass.; John Calhoun Bower, Jr., Lexington; Arnold Breckenridge, Chapel Hill; Bunyan Randolph Cooner, Asheville; George Loris Dover, Shelby; Joseph David Feldman, New York; John Coltrane Fuller, Jr., Lumberton; William Perry Kephart, Greensboro; John Graydon Klingman, Greensboro; Thomas Joseph O'Flaherty, Waterbury, Conn.; Benjamin Franklin Royal, Jr., Morehead City; Sidney Slotoroff, New York; Emmet Robinson Spice, Goldsboro; Edward Vassar Stephenson, Seaboard; Edward William Tankersley, Greensboro; and Henry McGilbert Wagstaff, Jr., Chapel Hill.

With the exception of O'Flaherty, who was a volunteer in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Spanish Civil war, all these men were killed while in service with the American forces.

The Class of '37 is the first University class to establish a memorial to classmates who died in World War II. Officers of the class are Fred H. Weaver, president, Niles Woodbridge Bond, vice-president, and Thomas Eli Joyner, Jr., secretary.

The committee which drew up the memorial to classmates is Ernest Marvin Allen, Jr., Julian Daniel Bobbitt, John vanGaasbeeck Elmendorf, Joseph W. Grier, Jr., John Lewis Gouger, Mary Lindsay Elmendorf, James E. Poindexter, Robert Varley, Henry Wilkins Lewis, who is memorial fund treasurer, and officers of the class.

Pledge Cup Re-Named By Lambda Chi Alpha

The local chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha, at Wednesday night's meeting, dedicated its annual pledge cup to William J. Ballew, late member of the present pledge class who was killed May 1 at an air show in Burlington.

The cup, which is annually awarded to the outstanding member of the pledge class, will be called "The Bill Ballew Pledge Cup."

Ballew, who was a member of the Junior class, was killed when his Marine fighter plane crashed during take-off. His home was in Nebo.

NEWCOMERS CLUB

The Faculty Newcomers club will hold its annual picnic this coming Saturday evening at the Orange church at 6:30. Reservations must be made with Mrs. Wayne Bowers at $3 a couple. For transportation phone Mrs. Gerald Barrett, 5236.

Phi Beta Kappa Sets Initiation For Next Week

The Phi Beta Kappa initiation is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, May 25, at 5 in Gerrard hall. The initiation will be followed by an informal banquet at the Carolina Inn at 6:30.

All members, both student and faculty, are invited to the initiation and the banquet. Any member who attends the banquet is asked to make a reservation by telephoning Miss Mable Mallett at 7681 before 12 o'clock Saturday.

Officers Installed By Pharmacy Group

Jean Snyder, pharmacy student from Hagerstown, Md., has just been installed as president of Kappa Epsilon, honary pharmaceutical sorority. She succeeds Lynn Blanchard of Wallace.

Other officers installed at ceremonies held at the Carolina Inn were Ginger L. Callahan, Asheville, vice-president; Jane Bradford, Greensboro, secretary-treasurer, and Peggy Costner Simmons, Lincolnton, pledge sponsor.

TOWN MEN'S GROUP

There will be a meeting of the Town Men's association this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge 1 of Graham Memorial at 4:30. Plans for a picnic will be discussed. All interested town men are invited to attend.

Students Who Will Graduate in June May Get Regular Navy Commissions

Applications are being received by the Offices of Naval Officer Procurement for qualified college graduates or candidates for degrees in June to be commissioned in the regular navy for training in naval aviation.

Qualified graduates from accredited colleges and universities who pass the necessary aptitude examination and who are physically fit will be commissioned as Ensigns, USN, and ordered to the Naval air station, Pensacola, Fla., for a four-week pre-flight course. Flight training to be given on completion of the pre-filght study will continue for 18 months.

While in training, ensigns will receive full pay and allowances, totaling approximately $290 monthly.

Officers appointed under the new program will sign a contract to remain on active duty for two years after completion of flight training and designation as naval aviator.

This procurement program is open to naval reservists including those now holding naval aviator designations.

Applicants must have reached their 19th birthday and be less than 25 years old on July 1 of this year, according to regulations announced by the Navy.

While applications must be sent to an Office of Naval Officer Procurement, the nearest of which is located at 1400 Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., interested persons at the University may obtain additional information from Lieutenant Commander G. H. Goldsmith, USN, naval aviator on the staff of the professor of naval science, Naval Armory, South Columbia street.

Awards To Be Given At Meeting Tonight

Awards for leadership, service, publications, athletics, intramurals, music, drama and a host of other prizes will be handed out to deserving students at tonight's annual Awards Night program in Hill hall at 7:15.

Awards are made each year to students with outstanding records in scholarship and extra-curricular activities. They will be presented citations, prizes and medals for the year ending this June.

On the agenda tonight is music by the University band, a short talk by President Graham, and Chencellor House, who will preside over the prize-giving part of the program.

Some of the awards which will be made tonight are the John J. Parker, Jr., medal for leadership, the Algernon Sydney Sullivan service award, and the Ernest H. Abernathy publications award, all of which will be presented by Dean Mackie; the Patterson medal for excellence in athletics, the Foy Roberson, Jr., medal for contribution to team morale in basketball, and other athletic awards, to be presented by Athletic Director Bob Fetzer; the Kay Kyser scholarships in music and drama, the Frederick H. Koch scholarship, and Carolina Playmaker mask awards, to be presented by Director Sam Seldon.

Others include the Valkyrie cup to the outstanding coed, various fraternity prizes, women's awards in athletics, and keys to members of the various publications, in the glee clubs and in the University band and orchestra.

Meeting Will Decide Summer Policy of Di

The Dialectic Senate will meet tonight to decide summer policy and to choose its new officers at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West, it was announced yesterday by John Zucker, present speaker of the senate.

Zucker urged all members to attend tonight's session for two important votes. First, the Di will take action on whether to remain active throughout the summer. Then, a new speaker, speaker pro tempore, critic, clerk, sergeant at arms, debate council representative, and chaplain will be elected for either the summer or fall.

COMMISSION CANDIDATES

All candidates for city commission will speak tonight at 8 o'clock in City hall. The meeting is sponsored by the league of Women Voters.

DELTA PHI ALPHA

Delta Phi Alpha, German honorary fraternity, will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to attend.

Chi Delta Phi Takes Three Coed Writers Into Literary Group

Benedicta dos Santos, Virginia Matson and Nina Davis, coeds chosen for outstanding writing talent, were initiated into full membership of Chi Delta Phi, national literary sorority, yesterday at 5 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Immediately following the initiation ceremony, the sorority held its annual banquet at the Carolina Inn, with members of the Duke chapter as guests, and Charles Eaton of the English department as speaker.

Eaton, who is a Carolina alumnus, read some of his own poetry and commented on poetry in general. Following his undergraduate work here, Eaton studied philosophy at Princeton and took graduate work in English at Harvard. He has taught at the University of Missouri and has been on the staff of various writers conferences, among them the one at Boulder, Colorado.

Refunds on Laundry Will Be Made June 2

The University laundry department advises all students using the University laundry that unused credit balances on hand May 25 will be returned to the University Accounting department so that refund checks may be ready for distribution by June 2.

Students who plan to attend summer school and who do not wish their laundry service interrupted during examination and commencement weeks are urged to advise the laundry office, 106 Franklin street immediately, so that unused credits will not be cancelled.

Finance Committee To Ask $8,197 '48-'49 Budget Cut

Publications To Be Sliced $3,000 Amount

By Herb Nachman

The Finance committee of the Student Legislature has recommended a cut of $8,197 in the general campus budget to allow for the present deficit.

Major item in the cut is the amendment which would knock $3,000 off the total $65,717 publications budget. The committee's action removes the entire $2,000 appropriated for the new Carolina Quarterly and cuts $2,000 from the Debate council's original $4,125.

Four other cuts were approved by the committee. They are: Class organizations, $500; Men's council, $375; student entertainment, $250; and Student Legislature, $72.

Tomorrow night, the Legislature will have its second opportunity to do something about the current $4,667.85 deficit in the budget when the committee's recommendation will be introduced under the Montague bill.

The bill was introduced at last Thursday's meeting by Tag Montague, speaker pro tem, and was referred to committee. The bill gave the Finance group authority to recommend such legislation necessary to relieve the deficit.

Montague's bill was introduced following the closed meeting of the Legislature in which the original bill, providing for an increase in the block fee structure in order to relieve the deficit, was defeated.

Yesterday, Jack Girard, chairman of the Finance committee and speaker of the Legislature, announced that the committee had reached its decision.

Girard's report of the committee's findings is as follows:

"In view of the fact that students have the right to administer student fees and stand to lose this privilege if a deficit is incurred, the Finance committee of the Student Legislature feels that a cut if necessary to be able to operate on a sound financial basis.

"We regret that it is necessary to curtail student activities but since no increase in the fee structure has been decided in the Student Legislature there will be no additional funds out of which these activities can be operated."

PRIZE GIVEN

William Siemon, graduate student in philosophy, has been awarded the $25 Buchan prize in philosophy for his paper "An Outline of Ethics."

FRENCH CLUB PICNIC

The French club will have a picnic tonight. All members who desire to attend are requested to meet at Caldwell "Y" at 6:30 tonight.

Reunions Are Planned For Commencement

A large number of alumni from all sections of the country are making plans to return to the University for class reunions which are to be features of the commencement program Saturday, Sunday, Monday, June 5, 6, 7, according to Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders.

The chances are that those who so desire will be housed in one of the new dormitories which has just been completed. Alumni are being urged to come for the opening day and stay through the final exercises, the awarding of diplomas, at sunset exercises in Kenan staidum on Monday, June 7.

Sixteen groups are planning reunions this year, and most of them will hold class dinners on Sunday night, June 6, at 6:30 in Lenoir hall.

The Old Students club, comprising alumni out of the University 50 years or more, will hold its get-together Sunday night June 6, at the Carolina Inn when members of the class of 1898 will be inducted as freshmen of the club. Dr. R. E. Coker of the University faculty heads the club, and P. D. Gold, Washington, D. C., is president of the 50-year class.

Special reunions will be held by the 30-year class of 1918 and in Lenoir hall at 6:30 Sunday night. John S. Terry of New York is president of the '18 class, which will hold its reunion with the contemporary classes of 1919, the 25-year old class of 1923, 1920 and 1921, under the Dix schedule.

J. Obie Harmon, of Raleigh, is head of the '23 class. Judge Sam Cathey of Asheville is vice-president of the class, and Howard Holderness, Greensboro, treasurer.

The classes of 1899, 1900, 1901 1902, 1937, 1938, 1939, and 1940 will also hold reunions under the Dix plan which brings contemporary groups back at the same time. Fred H. Weaver, dean of men, will preside over the dinner for the '37, '38, '39, '40 groups. Dinners for these classes also will be held Sunday night at 6:30.

Chi Phi Fraternity Elects New Officers

The Chi Phi fraternity recently elected six new officers for the college year of 1948-49. In addition, nine men were pledged into the fraternity.

Joseph B. McLeod of Myrtle Beach, S. C., was elected Alpha and congressional delegate.

Other officers elected were Ivon Rolader Jr., Atlanta, Ga., Beta; James M. Green, Winston-Salem, Gamma; Edward K. Anthony, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Delta; David Willis, Sanatorium, Epsilon; and Robert H. Kavanaugh, Baltimore, Md., Zeta.

The new pledges are Douglas Thompson, Earl Fitzgerald, Robert Colley, Robert Bidgood, Francis Kinard, Nat Swan, Stacy Duncan, and Kenneth Archer.

Beauty Here . . . . . . Gone to Dogs

Local Coeds Unimpressed By Cameramen

By Bill Kellam

Take it from friendly Lloyd McCumber, the New York cameraman who's bee nthe object of campus interest for the past 10 days, Carolina's much maligned collection of coeds holds no would-be Jean Peters, the Ohio State university coed who last year made the jump from classroom to Hollywood.

McCumber made the amazing discovery that the local lasses are all home and the-simpler-things-of-life-loving type one sunny day last week. It seems that he was down in the vicinity of the Spencer-AKMcI area for the purpose of shooting some scenes of life around the coed dorms.

Save for the usual crew absorbing sun on the porchtops, the place was deader than a history lecture. So, McCumber sent Bill Sontag, his student guide and handyman, into one of the dorms to recruit a few fems to grace the picture with their presence.

Imagine his amazement when a mere five or six gals finally emerged from their studies to appear in the picture. Campus cynics will be delighted to know that the local institution has so many serious girls.

According to McCumber, he and his assistant, Ted Ramo, will be in the "village" for another two weeks. If the weather is disagreeable, it may be an even longer time before they conclude the shooting.

The result of all their efforts will be a 30-minute feature on the town and the University which will be narrated by Norman Brokenshire, former Chesterfield Supper club MC. The film will be available in both 35 and 16 m.m. film.

Since it will take from three to six weeks to cut and ready the film for showing, the pastorial epic probably won't be ready for showing until sometime in July or August. Plans call for it to be shown at both the Carolina and Village theaters. The Carolina "Opera house" will retain a print permanently while the Merchants association will keep a 16 mm. p rint for its own use.

Until Monday, McCumber had been quite pleased with the weather but the afternoon's hailstorm and cloudburst may slow his work. He had much praise for the cooperation of both the students and townspeople.

"Usually there's a bunch of wise guys trying to ham up the show," he commented. "It hasn't been that way here, though," he added. McCumber mentioned that cloud formations have been excellent and will show up well in the film.

Carolina's canines, apparently fatigued by the heat of the week will make few appearances in the film. The noisy and numerous mongrels got into the act for the first time on Sunday afternoon when McCumber photographed the outdoor band concert.

The film is produced by Don Parrish and the dialogue is written by Mabel Lawrence.

Daylight, That Is . . .

Daylight Kissing on Drake Campus Is Halted by Dormitory Counselor

Des Moines, Ia., May 18—(UP)—Drake university coeds have agreed to stop kissing on the campus—in daylight, that is.

Most of the girls believe the women's dormitory counselor, Leona Anderson, was right in calling a halt to kissing the boys on the dormitory front steps in daylight. Miss Anderson called sorority officers together and asked them to cooperate in stopping what she called the "over-affectionate" conduct of some sorority members.

The girls insist that only a few of the more amorous girls were too public in their necking. Barbara Boreman of Des Moines, president of one sorority, said, "We took it up in a chapter meeting, and all of us agreed that it doesn't look very nice to be clinching on the campus in daylight."

The student newspaper took notice of the situation with this verse:

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
"Who never to date has said,
"Hang the ban and tilt your head."

The Cracks Are Different

On a lazy spring afternoon several thousand young men and women gathered in Memorial Hall to listen to a prominant swing band. The shafts of the afternoon sun streamed through the windows and were like spotlights on the stage. It was Saturday and Gene Krupa was playing. The sounds from his drums cracked sharply, and the students went wild with applause and cheers.

Sharp cracks not too dissimilar were also sounding in the Near East, but there was no applause. There were shrieks, yes — but not of joy or ecstasy. There were screams of hate and death — but not of cheers. The Arab legions were on the march. The Haganah Youth were stepping over the bodies of their own and their enemies trying to fight for time and survival.

Who is right is not the question. WHY and HOW did this conflagration in Palestine and other places begin IS the question we must ask ourselves. When we turned our arms into ordinance and the women stopped rolling bandages, we thought we had won the Peace. So we went home and tried to pick up the frayed threads of our younger dreams and forgot or tried to forget the hours of waiting, the minutes of action and the eternal seconds of death.

The winds bear once more the stench of death and powder fumes. How long will it be before it reaches our nostrils again is now the dominant question among us? Some of us are striving to keep the rank odor from reaching us by working for the only existing instrument that may bring Peace — the United Nations. Others of us close our eyes and hope that the fire will consume itself before it reaches us. Most of us are resigned and say "let it come." A small portion are filled with "uniform" nostalgia.

Something is wrong, Carolina ladies and gentlemen, Academics do not give the full answer to a suicidal world. Perhaps the United Nations — weak as it seems to be — is the answer. Let us strengthen the United Nations by encouraging more people to learn and know about it. Let us cease to scorn and turn to Faith in mankind.

—Lincoln Kan

Well Done, Magmen

Now that the life seconds of their baby are fast ticking away, the members of the Carolina Magazine staff seem bent on making its every appearance better than the last. Their last effort, distributed the end of last week, was one of their best to date, both in content and format.

Using the third anniversary of VE day as a theme the Mag led off with an interestingly informative survey of the thought trends of campus veterans on international, national and local questions. Along the same theme in a three-page color section was presented Sam Hirsch's "Give Us Pause" with background photographs by Robert Capa. Two of the fictional short stories — "Listen: The Banjo" by Sandy Grady and "Escape" by Clarke Stallworth were as smoothly written as will be found in any non-professional publication. Don McKinney's "One Night Stand" got off to a slow start but also wound up as a good story.

Too many students are depriving themselves of much pleasure by approaching each issue of the Mag with a preconceived idea of what they will find inside. They pick it up, glance through it at the titles and illustrations, lay it aside, and never know what they are missing. Those who read it through find it of high entertainment value.

Kerr-Stares

Tarnation's Open Door

By Tom Kerr

One of that noble clan of self-made politicoes holding forth in the legislature found the solution to all of our financial difficulties. Not as a final answer, mind you; but wouldn't it be nice to get that $2,000 underwrite back from the Carolina Quarterly? Suffice it to say his quick-cure bill was killed in committee.

But at the same time let it be known to one and all that the Carolina Quarterly is by no means asleep. Matter of fact we threw in our chips the other afternoon when the new mag had its first meeting. There seems to be quite a bit of interest, but there is room for plenty more.

How would you like to take a crack at building something from the ground up? Straight stuff, there's really a kick in it.

Seems one of our fellow columnists has already put on his black robes and dug his fatigued crystal ball from its hiding place to air a few "startling" predictions about next year's campus presidential race.

Not to start a battle on the editorial page, but from where we sit political battles are but a means to an end. So lets take off on the ends for another nine months, cause we're going to get awfully tired of any year-round political publicising.

By the way, the powers that be, namely Smith and Wharton, are not a bit premature in offering a crushing paw to any lost Tarnation aspirants. Down in their coolest-place-in-town office (next to the men's room, remember) the boys with the perpetual laugh are trying to get the gears shifted for a mothly next year. It's going to take some doing to get over their growing pains and get on a schedule, so they want a little publicity on their wide-open door policy. Catch?

Preview of coming attractions. . .seems someone just got too fed up with the DTH edit page. Result?. . .in the very near future some of the tired scribblers hearabouts are going to have that golden opportunity to retire and devote their precious space to a series of worthwhile political cartoons by Berryman.

Then the write-away editors will be blessed with a new subject for their midnight sessions over the typewriter in critical ecstasy.

So now's the time to get your little postcards out and write Kerr-Stares into oblivion. Not so fast!

You Know It . . .
. . . Or Do You?

By Walter A. Sharafanowich

In the course of our ramblin' round, we seem to giving the preference to the BVPers and GMs—but that won't last long. Either I'll be run out, or June 7 will be here before I can get out of the Quad. Anyway, let's see what you know (or don't) about today's items. Same rules—a tenner rates you a genius, and 7-9 is about a B.

1. The post office has six business windows . . . or has it?
2. There's a marble frame around the door of the postmaster's office . . . or is there?
3. Talking of the postmaster—what are his hours? (They're marked in bright gold on his office door.)
4. There are a few desks scattered around the post office. How many?
5. We know you have to go up the steps to the post office. Catch is . . . how many steps?
6. Now that you've, walked in . . . what is the porch floor made of — cement, granite, brick?
7. And since you've pushed the doors open, how many are there facing the street?
8. All right Observers, how many stepping stones to the flagpole there in front of the P. O.? Three, four, five or six?
9. Is there, or isn't there a weathervane on top of the post office?
10. By what popular name is Howell hall known?

Taft Does Have Feelings

Columbus, O., —(UP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft has had a difficult time trying to persuade the great bulk of Americans that he is not the cold, precise, unfeeling man pictured by his opposition.

But both his friends and opponents give him credit for forthrightness in his views. He does not often hedge on a question.

Taft's popularity rating in public opinion polls was never high and it took probably its lowest slump during the controversial legislative measures he has whipped through the Republican-dominated 80th Congress.

Labor leaders were aroused to fighting pitch for example, over the Taft-Hartley act to put brakes on union organizations. The American Federation of Labor voted $3,000,000 to campaign for the repeal of the act, which the labor leaders call a "slave law."

Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), said that before he would ever reach the White House, we'll see Taft in hell."

Undeterred by such blasts, Taft began stumping the country after the close of the 1947 congressional session. Starting his effort to capture the Republican nomination for president, he tried hard to "humanize" himself and his beliefs.

He joked about the rank-and-file members who picketed his meetings; he posed with girl students at Lindenwood College in Missouri and with politicians in informal scenes at clambake-type meetings elsewhere throughout the country, and he wrote a pamphlet entitled "My Political Credo."

His efforts to reach into the grass roots for support were climaxed when he shook hands and orated on a precinct level during the days before Ohio's primary election. His control over his home state then was challenged by Harold E. Stassen, former Minnesota governor, whose basic political strategy is grass roots campaigning.

Taft's seeming inability to develop the glad-hand technique perfected by such politicians as James A. Farley perhaps may be due to his background. The 58-year-old Ohio senator was born Sept. 8 1889, in Cincinnati, the son of the late William Howard Taft. The latter was President from 1909 to 1913 and was the only man to serve both as President and as chief justice of the U. S. Supreme Court.

The younger Taft was graduated from Yale and Harvard, and was admitted to the Ohio bar. His father's name and his own profession, law, marked him almost at once for politics. He served in the Ohio house of representatives from 1920 to 1926; and in the state senate for one term, 1931-32. Thereafter, he fell into eclipse due mainly to his lack of political appeal.

But in 1938 he ran for senator from Ohio and the sparkle he lacked was provided by his wife, Martha Bowkers Taft, a witty, effective speaker in her own right. They won hands down over a seasoned campaigner.

Barefeet For all

By Larry Berry

Having only the services of a moth eaten ostrich who is continually bewildered at the action of Southern tortoises, I am forced to retrogress to the Carolina campus for inspiration by tradition.

Last Friday the tradition of barefoot day for seniors was accomplished without undue strain on participants. Many withheld from the function because of the fallacious relation between exposed feet and childhood. Of course these same people will bable in an infantile manner at other times, but they cast aside childish habits under the monotonous strain of the classroom.

After enjoying a day of fallen arch splendor and discovering hitherto unrecognized seniors I suggest we set up a barefoot system for orientation and classification. Under the Berry System much of the work of South Building would be alleviated. The first week of every quarter would be used for classification. Following in order of time served the Seniors would go barefoot the first Monday and acquaint themselves with others of their class. On Tuesday the learned Juniors would step forth unsandaled to greet others of their rank. This process would continue through Thursday with General College. On Friday those in a dubious state of mind as to their class could barefoot it up to South Building and be classified. Our candidates for the Masters Degree should go unshod Saturday, with Sunday being reserved for Doctorial aspirants.

This system would bring the class organization up from its low position on campus because everyone would know the members of his or her class. At present students usually have no idea of who is to graduate with them until they reach the platform to receive diplomas.

The point of this is that students should be made to realize their graduation time as an actuality, not a fable!

Who Needs Spankin', Vets, Or Rankin?

Ed. Note— This column reprinted from the University of Southern California Daily Trojan.

What should ye do then, should ye suppress all this flowery crop of knowledge and new light sprung up and yet springing daily in this city, should ye set an obligarchy of twenty engrossers over it, to bring a famine upon our minds again, when we shall know nothing but what is measured to us by their bushel?

AREOPAGITICA—Milton.

Several weeks ago we had the pleasure of scooping the Pelican Rapids daily and two farm journals with the story that some of the people's representatives in Washington were getting irked with certain phases of the educational setup in this country . . .

Evidently some of the self appointed who watch over the welfare of the masses have just learned that "a little learning is a dangerous thing. . . ."

Reading and writing and arithmetic may soon become as unpopular as Sherman and Truman in the south . . . the deep south that is. Although we don't believe the story that some senator wanted to subpoena this "Gutenberg guy" responsible for the printing of such dangerous stuff, we do feel the latest attempts to overhaul our educational system with some tools borrowed from the Middle Ages need to be mentioned. Can't you imagine standing in some cloistered friary trying to unwind the heavy chain from a Man & Civ volume?

No less a personage than Congressman John Rankin has begun to look into the matter. Rantin' John became interested in the veteran when the house veterans affairs committee looked into the GI rackets last week.

When the parley was over, Rankin even suggested scrapping the GI Bill for an outright bonus. Educational benefits should be deducted from the veteran's bonus to discourage him from going to school, Rankin argued. His pretzel-like logic shocked some of his colleagues who apparently forget that south of the Mason-Dixon line it's been an accepted practice for a long time to keep the five-foot shelf at least ten feet away for any "no account."

Rankin was probably sincere. He has been around the Hill a long time and probably was looking into the future. After all, if a veteran received a cash bonus and could thus meet the spiraling cost of living, he could hold his head up. Books could be used as doorstops and formulas would be only something that speculators used on Wall street.

The Pause that Depresses

Prettiest Lab Instructor

By Sam Whitehall

Those characters taking Botany labs are among the luckiest joes on the campus? Why? There is a certain graduate student in Davie Hall who is strictly on the feminine side . . . a little lady named Connor Reed, a resident of Kenan Dorm and a substitute occasionally for any ailing regular lab instructors. First time we discovered the prettiest lab instructor in Chapel Hill was several weeks ago when she was pinch-hitting for the regular teacher who was temporarily residing in the infirmary.

Connor is rather modest about her Botany work, and unfortunately she does not have a regular lab assigned to her this quarter. There are hopes, though, of better things to come. If and when she is re-assigned a regular lab you can expect some twenty or thirty happy-go-labby guys to be just about the most satisfied group of Botany students within the limits of Chapel Hill.

Speaking of ladies, and who doesn't, there is one down on the lower end of Rosemary Street at the Van Hecke residence who is just about the prettiest, friendliest and best-all-around gal that these eyes have seen in quite some time. The catch, of course, is that the lady is a collie dog named Lassie.

Along with nearly every other member of the DTH staff, we have to take our stab at the Legislature and their unprecedented action last Thursday night. We have listened to reasons, excuses and just plain alibis from various sundry members of that august assembly we still cannot find any real valid reason their action. If there had been some advance notice, or if the members had voted on the unusual action in presence of the visitors, it would not have been so hard to take. I suppose that in the middle of the summer, or maybe next fall we, the ordinary folks, will find out just what went on behind those locked doors.

A bouquet of onions also is in the waiting for the poor attendance at the CCUN meetings on campus last weekend. 'Twould be embarrassing to state just how few people did actually show up for addresses Friday night. Some of our international politicians and strategists could have learned a lot if they had heard Harding Bancroft speak on the State Department and the United Nations.

Poltical Speculations: 'Taint right to have a week go by without anyone mentioning the political races next year, so we'll do the honors. Had to eliminate Joe Leary from next year's potentials, so we will substitute Charlie Loudermilk.

This corner will still bet, however, that when the race goes into its final stretch next Spring, Dortch Warriner's name will be among those racing. Also Lindsay Tate. Some are inclined to take the young Lady's announced intention of running as a joke, but we firmly believe that she is serious. Bob Hennesee's campaign got off to a roaring start last week when he came out for abolition of segregation. The catch is that Hennesee is talking about segregation between sexes, not races.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Gas Lobby Is Winning Out

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—IT LOOKS as if the nation's gas bill was going to be boosted after all. After first taking a defeat, the gas lobby, by some slick parliamentary sleight-of-hand, later scored a victory which may affect every housewife using natural gas.

The public is aware of the fact that the Senate Commerce committee first slapped down the Moore-Rizley bill by a 9-to-4 vote. This bill would have taken $75,000,000 annually out of the pockets of Gas consumers.

But what the public doen't realize is that most features of the bill could be administered into law by the Federal Power Commission, now split 50-50 on the Moore-Rizley principles. Commissioners Nelson Lee Smith and Harrington Wimberly have lined up with the natural gas lobby, but commissioners Leland Olds and Claude Draper have vigorously opposed the big pipeline owners. This means the fifth commissioner, Thomas Buchanan, now waiting confirmation by the Senate, holds the balance of power.

As a member of the Pennsylvania Public Commission for eight years, Buchanan carried on a fearless fight against the big power and gas interests. Now they are moving heaven and earth to block him from taking a seat on the Federal Power Commission.

Here is how they have been able to do it so far, inside the Senate Commerce Committee:

After voting down the Moore-Rizley bill, the committee took up Buchanan's nomination. Routine approval was expected, since favorable hearings already had been held.

BUT SEN. OWEN BREWSTER. Maine Republican and a friend of the utility interests, started setting off parliamentary bobby traps. He moved to send the nomination back to a special subcommittee for further study. This would have delayed action until after November—when a Republican president, if elected, could pick his own man.

"This," protested Pennsylvania Democratic Sen. Francis Myers, "is just subterfuge to delay this nomination so it will never reach the calendar or else come up too late."

A rollcall vote was taken, and to everyone's surprise Chairman Wallace White, Main Republican, sided with Myers. Stunned, Brewster, also a Maine Republican, blurted out: "You gave me your word this morning!"

"When you talked to me very briefly over the telephone this morning at my house, I was not fully conversant with the facts," explained White, who has a reputataion for upholding the public interest. "I assume the blame for the misunderstanding."

WHITE ADDED THAT BUCHANAN "shouldn't be opposed on political grounds." Whereupon Brewster came back with another parliamentary trick—a motion to rule out proxies. Since the only two proxies were held by the Democrats for Sens. Tom Stewart of Tennessee and Ernest McFarland of Arizona, this would have given Brewster a majority. However, all his tricks to sidetrack the nomination were overthrown—temporarily.

At this point, Senator Ed Martin, Pennsylvania Republican, was permitted to make a statement before the committee. Under pressure from the power and gas lobby, Martin had obediently brought in two witnesses against Buchanan at the original hearings; but, under cross-examination, their testimony had backfired.

Now Martin claimed he had been "approached by several senators from other states" who wanted him to "talk to several people" as possible witnesses. In other words, he wanted more time to go out looking for witnesses. Martin admitted that Buchanan is a "man of integrity," but opposed him nonetheless.

Backing up Martin, Indiana Republican Homer Capehart resurrected Brewster's motion for a special subcommittee to study Buchanan's nomination.

Caught in this dilemma, Myers agreed not to object to further study by a subcommittee, provided a time limit of two weeks was set for reporting out Buchanan's nomination. He wrung out this concession from Brewster, but the utility-minded senator from Maine won the final round. He was able to load the subcommittee with two Moore-Rizley supporters—Homer Capehart of Indiana and Albert Hawkes of New Jersey.

MISSISSIPPI'S UNREFORMED REBEL Cong. John Rankin, was seen over-looking a statue of General U. S. Grant the other day in the Capitol's hall of fame.

The Rats Have It

Women and their handbags have nothing on the collections found in rats' nests, Hamilton M. Warren, chairman of the National Committee for Rat Control and vice president of National Carbon Co. of New York, pointed out today.

In one rat's nest under a New York City tenement, wreckers found an empty lipstick tube, a religious medal, a skate key, a celluloid teething ring, a belt buckle, a shoe horn, several books of matches with all the match heads eaten off, a penny, a dime and three quarters.

Several rat's nests have yielded up folding money. In Worchester, Mass., rats were using $25.00 in small denomination bills for nesting material; they stole the money from a bank after effecting entrance to the vault through an open pipe. When the old Civic Repertory Theater in New York City was torn down, the wreckers discovered a rat's nest constructed solely of dollar bills, 17 in all.

Seixas Tops Sedgefield Seedings In Yearly Tourney Opening Today

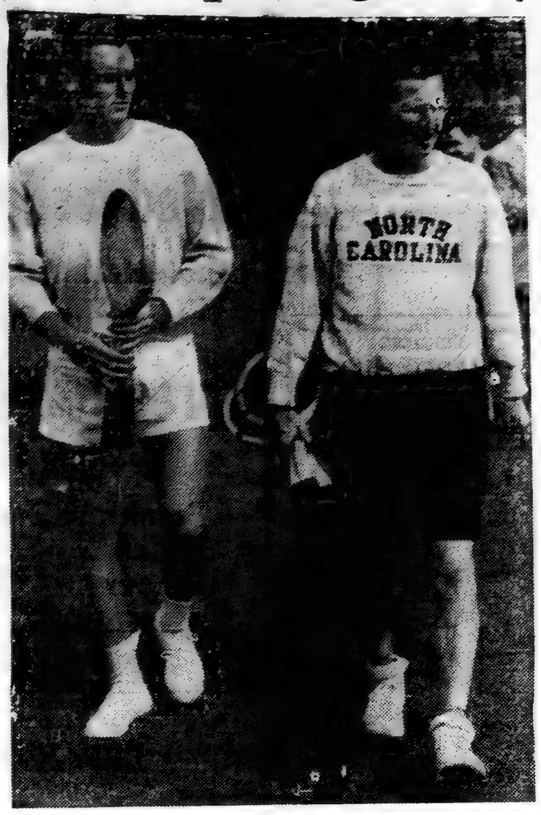
Savitt From Cornell Second in Rankings

Vic Seixas, Carolina's Southern conference singles champion, will be seeking further laurels today when he leads a contingent of Tar Heel racquetmen in the second annual Sedgefield Inn tennis tournament at Greensboro today.

Seixas, who is the defending champion in the Gate City event, again has been accorded top honors in the tourney seedings. His chief opposition will come from Dick Savitt, Cornell, and Vinni Rurac, touring Romanian netter. Savitt, seeded second, was the only player able to defeat Seixas in singles competition during the past season.

Taylor Is Fourth

Clark Taylor, who performed at the number two position for Carolina this past season, is the fourth-ranked player in the event. Despite a loss to Bobby Doll of William and Mary in the conference meet last weekend, Taylor is still regarded as a major threat. He lost to Seixas in the Sedgefield finals last season.



Other seeded players are Randolph Gregson, Winston-Salem; Don Leavens, Washington; Hubert Barrier, High Point; and Buddy Adair, Washington.

Nine players representing the University of North Carolina are entered in the event. In addition to Seixas and Taylor, Heath Alexander, Don Skakle, Ray Morris, Bert Ingram, and Les Dameron from the Tar Heel varsity will participate. Bob Luxunberg and Paul Keenan, both members of the Carolina freshmen outfit, will also see action.

42 Players Entered

A total of 42 men have entered the event, according to Tournament director Doc Marshall.

Pairings call for ten first round matches and 22 byes. In this event, as in the Southern conference tourney last week, top-ranked Seixas certainly was not lucky on the draw. He was placed in the same bracket with third-seeded Rurac. In the conference meet Vic had to defeat the third-ranked Bernard Bartzen before getting to the finals against the second-seeded player.

A MAJOR PORTION of the credit for the successful tennis season that Carolina's Tar Heels have just completed must go to Vic Seixas, left, and Clark Taylor. Seixas, team captain and number one netter, recovered from a siege of glandular fever in time to become the conference singles winner. He teamed with Taylor to gain the runner-up position in doubles play.

Pi Phi Mermaids Splash Off With Top Swimming Honors

The mermaids of Pi Phi splashed off with top honors in the coed intramural swimming meet held in Bowman Gray pool Monday evening.

Scoring 31 points, Pi Phi was an easy victor in defense of the tank title gained last year. A close battle for second place was won by Chi Omega with 24 points, one more than the Tri Delt score. ADPi with ten, Alpha Gam with four, and Smith with three rounded out the team tally totals.

Individual scoring honors were captured by Randy Hudson, who registered 15 1-3 points towards the Pi Phi total. Miss Hudson, who has won several AAU swimming events, was first in the backstroke and breaststroke races, then stroked a speedy breaststroke leg on Pi Phi's victorious medley team.

Close behind Miss Hudson in individual scoring was Barbara Lynn, Tri Delt mermaid who registered one first and two seconds for 14 points. Other first places were gained by Pi Phi's Bill Llody, in the 50-yard freestyle distance, and the Chi O relay quartet of Helen Bouldin, Frankie Johnston, Bootsie Lyons and K. D. Durham.

Prior to the meet, the Splash club, coed swimming organization, presented several aquatic ballet formations. Lib Browning and Sibyle Mitchell appeared in a comedy duet, while those taking part in the other two formations were Faith Adams, Miss Durham, Ann Eutsler, Corinne Grimsley, Miss Hudson, Bill Henderson, Claudia Lee, Barbara Poole, Ann Wells and Mary Lou Williams.

Golfers Lose To Wake Forest In Final Match

Palmer Bests Ward In Tilt at Raleigh

Raleigh, May 18 — The Carolina golf team just missed closing its 1948 season with an upset victory here today when it lost by the narrow margin of 15 1-2 to 11 1-2 to the potent Deacons of Wake Forest.

It was the Tar Heels' fourth loss of the season against six wins and a single tie to State in a year that saw the Blue and White entry finish fourth in the defense of its 1947 conference title.

Arnold Palmer, the loop medalist in the recent tourney at Pinehurst, finally bested Tar Heel ace Harvie Ward in their third meeting of the season. The match was close, still being alive when the pair reached the 18th where Palmer exacted final victory.

The Wake Forest star was the low man for both teams carding a one-under-par 71 which was two strokes better than Ward could do.

Carolina got most of its points in the second foursome where Jack Brantley and Frank Brooks combined talents to capture all but a point and a half of the nine points offered. Brantley and Brooks both had 73's, matching Ward's card which Bob Cox, playing at the No. 5 position for the Tar Heels, also succeeded in doing.

The summary:

Brantley (NC) halved with Harris, 1 1-2—1 1-2. Brooks (NC) defeated Agner, 3-0. Best ball to Carolina, 3-0.

Hyatt (WF) defeated Cox, 2 1-2—1-2. Beam (WF) defeated Oliver, 2-1. Best ball halved, 1 1-2—1 1-2.

Tickets for Dates

Students will have an opportunity to purchase season tickets for Carolina's home football games for their dates at regular prices next week, ticket director Vernon Crook announced yesterday.

Applications will be accepted at the Athletic office May 24-29 for the 780 tickets which will be in section 13. They will sell at the full retail price of individual tickets for the five home games.

The arrangement is being made to protect students from game sellouts and to make it possible for them to bring dates to all of the games. By the time the students return to Chapel Hill in the fall, it is probable that such games as Texas, Duke and LSU will be sold out.

Magic Number Now One For UNC Flag

The magic number in the Big Four pennant race is now one and if the Duke Blue Devils defeat State college this afternoon, it will be up to the Tar Heels to win the bunting for themselves with a victory over the second-place Devils in their Saturday clash.

Carolina now has a two-game lead over Duke in the race with only two contests left to play and a loss by Duke or a win by Carolina will clinch the pennant for the local baseballers. At present they are assured of at least a tie for the top spot and they could back into the pennant if the Wolfpack upsets the Devils.

The Tar Heels moved into their favored position by virtue of Monday's 7-6 win over Wake Forest. Carolina moved into an early lead in the contest and then dug in to halt a ninth-inning rally by the Deacons.

Save by Tranavitch

Andy Tranavitch, freshman backstop, saved the decision for Carolina when he erased Charley Teague on a rough play at the plate. Teague was out by quite a distance and, while attempting to dump Tranavitch, the scrappy keystoner dented Trany's skin with his spikes.

Jim Hamilton rushed in from his second base position and started swinging at Teague. That precipitated a general melee with players and fans pouring out onto the field. No one was injured in the battle and all of the players were allowed to remain in the game.

Hamilton Leads

Hamilton and Paul Livick of Wake Forest have moved into the lead in the local loop batting race. Both men have marks of .429 as of Monday, but will have to participate in their remaining games to be eligible for the title.

Hank Smith, of Duke, is third on the list with a .400 average compiled mainly in pinch-hitting

Dormitory Rifle Title

Alexander dormitory proved to be the sharper shooting rifle team by downing Stacy Monday night in the finals of their division, scoring 745 points as against 623 for the losers.

By virtue of the win the victors moved into the all-campus title match with the fraternity division titleholder, Kappa Sigma.

Jayvees Drop 1-0 Duel to Greensboro

Greensboro, May 18—One run with two out in the ninth inning broke up a scoreless pitching duel and gave Greensboro high school a 1-0 victory over the North Carolina junior varsity crew here today.

The Whirlies collected the winning tally on three hits in the final frame to avenge an earlier defeat by the Tar Babies. Whirlie catcher Beasley set up the score with a single, the third hit off losing pitcher Ed Gaston. Thomas, the winning pitcher and next batter, also singled, sending Beasley to third. However, Thomas was put out trying to take an extra base. Then, with two away, third baseman Gates singled to score Beasley and end the ball game.

The Tar Babies, who collected only four hits, one of them a double, were never able to bunch more than two hits. In the third frame Zero Allen singled and Don Ward followed with another one-baser.

But the Blue and White attempt was thwarted when Allen was put out trying to reach third, for the second out. Stan Goodman closed out the inning with a grounder to third.

The defeat was the fourth of the season for the Tar Babies in 13 starts.

Next scheduled game for Coach Henry House's crew is set for Saturday with Duke at Coombs park.

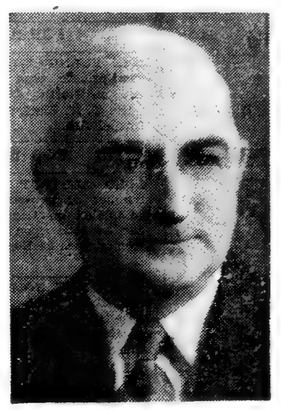
CHARLES M. JOHNSON



FOR GOVERNOR

SUBJECT TO THE DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY — MAY 29

CHARLOTTE—Charles M. Johnson, who owns and uses one of the best minds in the State—he ought to be Governor—wants more "home rule" for North Carolina. That is, less from Raleigh and more from the local units—the cities and counties!

He ought to get a universal hand of applause for taking the initiative in a matter of so much importance as this to the preservation of the principle of local self-government.—Charlotte Observer.

SCOTLAND NECK—As a candidate Mr. Johnson will measure up to the standard set by those who have been Governors of North Carolina in the past. He is an able and intelligent public administrator, and in other capacities has proved his value to the commonwealth . . . He is thoroughly familiar with North Carolina and the problems of the State as a whole.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

WILMINGTON—Of all candidates, the sound and insistent voice of Mr. Johnson is the only one to prompt some early relief for the farmer on his road problem. He is the first to offer a genuine long-range rural highway improvement plan. Mr. Johnson has demonstrated his ability to place a great state issue in its proper light and then propose a sound remedy. This is just one of the many outstanding qualifications which make him the man best fitted to be North Carolina's next Governor.—Sunday Star News.

WINSTON-SALEM—Aid for North Carolina schools has found a stout champion in Charles M. Johnston . . . One of the ablest and most efficient officials North Carolina has ever had.—Journal and Sentinel.

IT'S EXPERIENCE THAT COUNTS!!

Charles M. Johnson, through direct contact has worked with, and for, the following categories of North Carolina citizens:

FARMERS: Was born and reared a farmer on a farm near Burgaw in Pender County.

TEACHERS: Member State Board of Education, Chairman Teacher's and State Employee's Retirement Commission—Recently instrumental in having Teacher Load reduced.

University, Congressional Libraries Are Working On Microfilm Project

By Agatha Adams

Up on the top floor of the library an $1,800 camera, a photographer, and a historian are working together.

The camera is owned by the Library of Congress. The photographer is Peter L. Long, of Beaufort, S. C., who graduated from the University in 1948. And the historian is Dr. W. S. Jenkins, of the Political Science department of the University, director of the cooperative State Documents Microfilm project, which the Library of Congress and the Library of the University initiated back in 1941.

The goal of this project is to unearth and microfilm the complete official records of every state and territory in the United States, and to make these records available for any one who wants to use them.

Long and Dr. Jenkins are now busy microfilming many of the rare and scarce volumes of state documents which the University Library in Chapel Hill owns. Dr. Jenkins' almost unique distinction of having both a law degree and a doctor's degree in political science make him exceptionally well qualified for directing this tremendous undertaking.

Important Part of Project

The work now being done in the library is only a small segment of the total project. But Dr. Jenkins thinks it is an important one. "There is enough material in this library to keep us busy for three months," he said, "and there are not many collections of which that is true."

He ought to know. Since 1946, when the project could be taken up again after its interruption by Dr. Jenkins' term of service in the Navy, he has travelled nearly 50,000 miles, and has photographed 875 rolls of films, totalling approximately 1,750,000 pages of documents and manuscripts.

He unquestionably knows more about American state documents than anybody else in the country. It is due to his constant industry and his knowledge that it has been possible to bring an enterprise of such scope within reaching distance of completion. Dr. Jenkins hopes to be able to finish it within a year, though he feels that, like any true research project, it has opened up other lines of investigation which should be continued.

How did little mining communities, back in the early nineteenth century, cut off from all authority, govern themselves? Is it natural for men so isolated to get together and make some sort of compact by which they must abide? What sort of laws ruled the Five Civilized Indian tribes, the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks and Seminoles? What was the Spanish government of Texas like? What happened to such vanished and forgotten states as Deseret and Jefferson?

The answers to these and many other fascinating questions in American history can be found in the tremendous body of source material which is now being built up through the State Documents Microfilm Project. The purpose has been to gather on microfilm all of the legislative documents, of all the colonies, states, and territories, including House and Senate journals, session laws and statutes, and collected public documents, both executive and legislative, issued by authority of the legislatures.

To Fill Gaps

In the case of published documents, the effort has been directed toward filling in the gaps in the collection now in the Library of Congress. But much of the material which Dr. Jenkins has discovered in his search has never been published, being in manuscript form and therefore generally inaccessible. All of this will now be available to any library which wishes to purchase positive film from the great pool of records on negative film deposited in the Library of Congress.

THE BODY ABOVE which seems to be sitting on the backs of a couple of elephants was supposed to advertise bathing suits and Good Housekeeping Magazine. Since there are no houses in the picture, we will not say anything about Good Housekeeping, but we are glad to print the picture of the bathing suit. Not bad, huh?

Jack McComas and Teague both dropped from their top positions during the past week. McComas is now down to .368 while Teague is batting .350. State college dropped in team hitting, also, from first to fourth.

Many Students Receive Awards For Work, Achievement, Service

Eller, Johnstone, Evans, Brenengan Take High Honors

Students who have made outstanding records in scholarship, extra-curricular activities, and other fields of endeavor during the year were presented prizes and medals in recognition and appreciation at annual Awards Night exercises in Hill hall last night.

The awards were announced by Chancellor Robert B. House, who presided, and congratulations were extended by President Frank P. Graham. Heads of the various departments made the presentations.

The Awards Night program, established a number of years ago through the efforts of Prof. Albert Coates, was again directed this year by Prof. Oliver Cromwell of the Physical Education department.

Preceding the presentations, he University Band, under the direction of Prof. Earl Slocum, played several selections.

The John J. Parker, Jr., medal for leadership in student government went to Thomas R. Eller, Jr., Salisbury; the Algernon Sydney Sullivan awards for service to the student body, to Ruth B. Evans, Fort Knox, Ky., and Wayne K. Brenengan, La Crosse, Wisc., and the Ernest H. Abernethy publications Award, to Eugene H. Johnstone, Birmingham, Ala., presented by Dean E. L. Mackie.

The DKE trophy for general excellence in scholarship and athletics, to Sigma Chi fraternity, presented by Howard W. Walters, Ocala, Fla., president of DKE; Valkyrie cup to the outstanding coed from point of service and praiseworthy activity, to Barbara Cashion, Leesburg, Fla., presented by Dean Katherine Carmichael.

Authority On Civil Rights Will Speak Here Tonight

The much-discussed Civil Rights report of President Truman's Civil Rights committee will be the subject of a talk this evening by Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Atlanta woman who, along with the University's President Graham, helped draft the document. Mrs. Tilly will speak in Hill hall at 8 o'clock under the sponsorship of the University and Chapel Hill chapter of the American Veterans committee.

Before her work on the controversial report which caused the president's proposing a civil rights program and "revolt" of many Southern politicos, Mrs. Tilley had attained much prominence with her educational and religious activities. She was the first woman trustee of Weslyan college ,and served as the chairman of a Southern area conference on the cause and cure of wars, the secretary of the Southern Association of Women for the Prevention of Lynching, and in 1945 she directed a mobilization conference for 16 women's organizations.

She is currently the secretary of the Christian Social Relations and Local Church activities, Southeastern Region, for the Methodist chuch, is on the board of directors of the Commission of Interracial Cooperation, and is the field secretary of the Southern Regional council.

At a southeastern women's convention in her home town of Atlanta May 1, she was chosen "Woman of Achievement in the South in World Peace."

Local AVC chairman George Tindall said that Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., another member of the Civil Rights committee, had notified the meeting's sponsors that he would be present at tonight's discussion if it was possible, but as yet the AVC heads had not heard from him.

Following Mrs. Tilly's talk, there will be an informal reception in her honor in the lounge of Graham Memorial, chairman Tindall said.

Last Legislature Meeting of Quarter To Decide Fate of $8,197 Slash Bil

By Herb Nachman

Tonight the Student Legislature will go into its last regular session of the spring quarter with the problem of solving the current $4,667.85 budget deficit still on its hands.

Tuesday, the Finance committee under Jack Girard announced that a cut of $8,197 is necessary if student activities are "to be able to operate on a sound financial basis."

The Montague bill, which provided for the Finance committee to decide on necessary action to relieve the deficit, was introduced at last Thursday's meeting and will be re-introduced tonight along with the amendments which came out of the committee.

Cuts Provided For

If the bill passes the Legislature tonight, the following cuts will go into effect: Publications, $3,000; Carolina Quarterly, $2,000 (their total appropriation); class organizations, $500; Men's Council, $375; student entertainment, $250; and Student Legislature, $72.

The original bill, introduced last week by Tag Montague, speaker pro tem of the Legislature, provided that the Finance committee recommend such legislation deemed necessary by the group to relieve the deficit. A provision of the bill however, was that in the event that the necessary funds were obtained by action of the Board of Trustees that the bill would become invalid. Montague introduced his bill following the closed meeting of the Legislature in which the group killed the proposal that would have raised the block fee structure to cover the deficit.

Dedmond Comments

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, commented yesterday regarding action the Legislature may take on the bill. "I do not expect to stand in the way of the Legislature's decision on the matter," he said.

Visiting Playgoers Planning to Be Here To View 'Cyrano'

Many spectators from communities nearby are expected to atend the performances of Edmond Rostand's romantic drama, 'Cyrano de Bergerac," which is being presented by the Carolina Playmakers as their annual outdoor production in the Forest theater.

"It looks as though we will have the largest out-of-town attendance of the past several seasons for this production," John W. Parker, business manager, said last night.

Leading Man in Play Receives Appointment

Frederick Johnson, graduate student who is to play the leading role of "Cyrano" in the Carolina Playmaker production of "Cyrano de Bergerac," which opens tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Forest theater for a three day run, recently received word of his appointment to the staff of the famed Dock Street theater in Charleston, S. C.

Johnson's wife, Frances Moore Johnson, will also serve on the staff of the Charleston theater when it opens for the winter season next fall. Both will be assistant directors, according to a statement released in Charleston by Sidney H. Spayde, director of the theater, and Johnson will act and direct, while Mrs. Johnson will teach dance and art.

Byrnes, Truman, Taft Discussed By YWCA Group

Jimmy Byrnes, Harry Truman and Robert Taft were discussed as possible presidential candidates by the YWCA Public Affairs committee at its meeting Monday.

In discussing Jimmy Byrnes, Anne Wells spoke of his family background, his political career, and the possibility of his becoming the next president of the United States.

She told the group that he was not being considered as a candidate, but that he would be capable of the job. His age, his one-time affiliation with the Catholic church, and his birthplace were the three main barriers between Byrnes and the White House the speaker pointed out. She also considered Byrnes disappointment in not getting the nomination for vice-president in 1944 as a reason why he would not accept the nomination were he offered it.

She concluded that there was no doubt of Byrnes capability in view of the fact that he had 38 years of experience behind him, but that she did not think he would be seriously considered for the Democratic nominee for president.

A discussion of Truman was next on the agenda. Jean McKeithen considered all phases of his political, civilian, and military life. She enumerated Truman's many vocations before he stepped into the White House. And she pointed out that the now famous Truman committee was directly connected with his nomination to the vice-presidency in 1944.

In discussing Truman's career, Jean considered his choice of cabinet members and his inflationary tendencies. Truman hopes to adopt a middle road, she continued, between the Republican Taft and the third party man, Wallace. She also mentioned his tendency to change his mind on many matters, but she thought this showed that he was thinking through things. However she did say that his readiness to admit that he was wrong was not a wise political move.

Bunny Davis discussed Robert Taft's qualifications for the presidency. She based her talk on an article by Felix Marley which appeared in Life magazine February 9 of this year. Bunny considered Taft in the light of his family background, his education and his political life. She discussed Taft's so-called socialistic

Contestants Drop Out Of Mangum Contest

The reason the contest failed to go through as scheduled was due to the action taken by the Debate council which declared one of the contestants for the medal ineligible. The council reported Pete Long as ineligible to compete for the medal since he completed the requirements for his degree at the end of the winter quarter just passed.

John Zucker was the first of the contestants to protest the council's action. At the meeting at which the contest was to take place Tuesday night in Di hall, Zucker protested the decision and then withdrew from the contest. Following Zucker's action, the other six contestants, Bill Lane, Morton Seif, Randall McLeod, Marshall Pinnix, William Coulter and Charlie Hodson did likewise.

According to an unofficial source, Tom Eller also protested the ineligibility of Long and declared that if the contest was held without Long's participation, the matter would be carried to the Student council.

However, Blanton Miller, chairman of the council, upheld the decision of the group and announced that since there were no contestants there would be no contest. Miller's decision was announced after Bill Lane suggested that the contest be held unofficially. No action was taken on the proposal.

Miller's final decision was that the Debate council would meet again to re-consider the eligibility of Long.

Eleven New Faculty Appointments Are Approved by Trustees' Executive Group

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees approved a list of new appointments to the faculty of the University and also approved some promotions, resignations and leaves of absence at its meeting in Raleigh Monday.

Appointments beginning September 1, 1948, are as follows:

Dr. Walter H. Hartung, A. B., Ph. D., a native of Minnesota was chosen as professor of pharmaceutical chemistry. Dr. Hartung taught as an assistant professor at the University of Maryland and the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Dorothy C. Adkins, B. S., Ph. D., resident of Ohio, was named to the post of professor in the Department of Psychology. Dr. Adkins worked as an assistant in statistics and general psychology at Ohio State university, as research associate at the University of Chicago, chief of research for the Social Security board in Washington, and as chief of test development for the U. S. Civil Service commission in Washington.

The Commerce school received a new member in Dr. Dan M. McGill, A. B., M. A., Ph. D., who was appointed as a Julian Price Associate Professor of Life Insurance. Dr. McGill is a native Tennesseean and he is serving as an associate professor at the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Frank W. Klineberg, B. A., Ph. D., Californian, was approved as assistant professor of History. His experience includes being a teaching and research assistant at the University of California and a field entomologist with the California State Department of Agriculture.

The Department of Economics and Commerce was given an associate professor of Accounting in Dr. Lloyd F. Morrison, A. S., M. B. A., Ph. D., native of Ohio. He was a teaching fellow at the University of California, instructor in Accounting at Ohio Weslyan, and a teaching fellow at the University of Michigan.

Dr. E. Maynard Adams was appointed as assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy.

Phi Gubernatorial Candidates Debate Hears No Vote Due to Lack of Quorum

The Phi assembly met Tuesday night for a hot discussion of gubernatorial candidates. However, at 10 o'clock the meeting was adjourned following a roll call showing a lack of a quorum.

Gran Childress, a visitor to the group, summed up the candidates saying, "There is one man who is a dreamer; one who is a machine man and either doesn't know what he believes or is afraid to say if he does; one who staunchly stands for the farmer; one who is firm in his desire to raise the pay of the veterans; one who constantly controdicts himself with different planks in his platform; and several who are just running."

Graham Jones, in speaking for Mayne Albright said, "We lag behind in many things. Only the naive would say that our state has gone as far as it should. I believe Albright has the qualifications necessary to lead our state." Jones then reviewed his previous record, mentioning the fact that Albright was an excellent wrestler.

Bill Duncan asked Jones "With whom do you expect Albright to wrestle?"

Jones answered "I expect Albright to wrestle with all the corrupt politics and political machines in this state." He ended by stating that "We can expect the graveyard to be voted again next election for the machine man nominated."

Bryan Griswald countered this statement by saying "In my opinion of graveyard voting, there are many there who are just as capable as many of the people who vote now." He then brought out the qualifications of Charles Johnson and ended by declaring "Mr. Johnson has shown his capability by his excellent work as treasurer of this state."

Four new members initiated into the assembly were Pete Burks from Charlotte, Page Dees from Greensboro, Fred Newton from Danville, Va., and Bernard Plemmons from Luck.

Five Meals Daily . . . . . With Brawny Women

Icelanders Lead Utopian Life

By Sam Whitehall

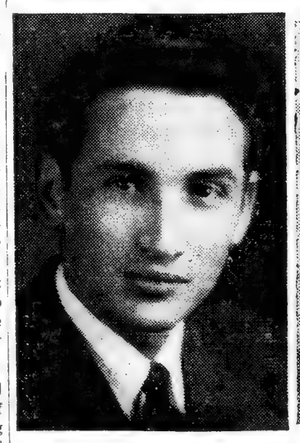
Utopia remains as yet undiscovered but word reaches these diggings of a paradise where men are the "weaker" sex and folks eat five meals per day.

Furthermore, says Dulla Jonsdottir, special student from Iceland, in her country all members of the same family have different last names. Her father's last name is Jon and a brother is named Jonsson. The postman is the most overworked citizen in the nation, she says.

Dulla, who came here to take courses in English and art, says her home is a winter wonderland almost every month in the year. The summers there are "nice" but the mercury never tops 70 degrees. Vacationers rate an occasional dip in the ocean, but low temperatures habitually chase bathers into the country's many warm springs, says Dulla.

As evidence that womenfolk of Iceland can hold their own with men in the brawn department, Dulla relates, "There is always snow in the mountains, and everybody takes part in the winter sports. Oftentimes the girls outshine the boys in the same athletic event."

Dulla is gradually becoming accustomed to the eating habits here, but readily admits the good old Icelandic fashion of five meals daily holds more attraction for her appetite.



"A quaint custom of ours is the serving of coffee from 3 o'clock until 4 in the afternoon—one of the five daily meals. Our big meal is at noon and a cold meal is served at night."

The school structure in Iceland, according to Dulla, is basically the same as in America, the exception being that Spanish is not taught there. The Icelandic school is called the "Gymnasium" and a six-year school period coincides with high school and junior college set-up here.

After graduation the student attends junior college for two years and then goes off to the University at Reykjavik, a city of 40,000, she says.

The dress custom of Iceland is largely the same as that of Denmark, that country having controlled the small island until 1918, says Dulla.

In festival time the Iceland girl dons her black tam with long black tassel. Next she pulls up a pair of black hose and steps into her black skin shoes. Then, same as in America, she wiggles into her long black skirt. Lastly, she tops off her apparel with an (no, not black) apron of many colors.

Vickie Missing!

Vickie, soft-eyed and friendly Cocker spaniel pup belonging to Graham Memorial Director Bill Shuford is missing!

Bill is on vacation in Florida, and Vickie has been spending the time with friends in Victory Village. She wandered off yesterday morning, perhaps in search of her master, and has not been seen since.

She is a small, black Cocker, with brown muzzle and front feet, and used to be seen all over GM with Bill. She's about six months old. Anyone who can distinguish Vickie from the usual run of Chapel Hill dogs is asked to call the GM office, 9881.

Dynamite Close Up

Whether or not you think black men and white men should work, study, and play unsegregated, you should be in Hill hall tonight. Mrs. M. E. Tilly will tell about the report of the President's committee on civil rights — the report that is dynamite today. She and President Frank Graham were the two southern members of the committee that wrote it.

Is it just another survey? Well hardly. Southern senators have threatened to revolt from the Democratic party because the President has asked Congress to put some of its proposals into law. It discusses segregation in education, which is being argued and fought out in courts all over the country right now. It discusses segregation in travel, which came right here to Chapel Hill a year ago, not as a paper read in seminar, but as a sock in the jaw for a student who talked to a colored woman standing by a bus.

Do you argue with your friends every day about civil rights? What facts do you know about the rights of Indians, Jews, Negroes — poor rich, and middle class — in the North, West, East, and South?

Are you going to study, perhaps, the rights of the European peasant in 1250 and not bother to get the facts about the rights of your next-door neighbor, your brother, or yourself?

Mrs. Tilly is not here to try to get you to vote for someone, she represents the people. She was chosen by the President of the United States to study America and tell you about it. Walk over to Hill hall tonight at eight o'clock and learn something about the state of your union.

— Kenneth Macrorie

Straighten It Out

With the Legislature meeting again this Thursday, and with the financial troubles still foremost in the minds of our fifty representatives, it seems an opportune time to clear up one of the trouble spots that added to the confusion this year.

There wasn't much said about it, but Tarnation ran into difficulty in its budget just before elections this year. The Publications board came to the rescue and got the situation all straightened out as far as they were concerned, but the newly elected editors immediately realized that they were coming in on the tail end of a yearly budget. With the fiscal year not ending till June 30, the new editors had to put out one more issue with what was left.

Under this system there is the possibility that in future years some indescretions or errors on the part of the editor may fall on the shoulders of his successor.

To remedy this situation, we offer two possible plans, Either the fiscal year for Tarnation be made to fit the editorial year, or the editor be bound by law to divide his budget proportionately among the year's issues, thus insuring a new administration one less headache. Undoubtedly both of these suggestions can be attacked, but the situation still remains and some remedy should be found.

New Negro Application

By R. Foo Gidux

The Trustees refusal to consider the Negro applications on former Governor Ehringhaus' point of order now leaves the whole works hanging in a quandary . . . Although the Trustees action was definitely to be expected on either that point of order or some other easy-to-grasp, legally correct side issue . . . What Gov. Ehringhaus actually brought out was that a law passed during Gov. Hoey's administration in 1939 provides for allowing the trustees of N CC or A&T to set up graduate courses in nearly any field not already available . . . (State Council could provide emergency funds.)

— So where do we go from here? . . . To the courts probably . . . Eventually . . . Lily-whiters and independent progressives alike grant this is an inevitable step . . . But progress won't move forward completely on fear or its own inertia! . . . And incidentally, another Negro student, James H. Henderson, of Vance County, has signified his intention of applying for the UNC Medical School in the near future . . . News of a second Negro medical aspirant was officially released Tuesday. (Making a total of four applications on file now, two for med and law each.) He is James E. Thomas of Raleigh.

— The situation took a new twist in Alabama recently when a white student living near Tuskegee applied for admission to the famed Negro school . . . For straight, square-shooting valuable low-down on the worx you should most certainly hear Mrs. Tilly's report on Civil Rights tonight . . . (And that's no plug! . . . just a sufficient word to all wise guys.)

And another . . . Keep your eyes and ears peeled for a whirlwind visit to UNC next week by "Challenger" Mayne Albright . . . As a part of a 150-mile cross-state motorcade on that day . . . First three days of next week "Challenger" motorcades will run from Nashville to Greenville, Ayden to Wilmington, and Elizabethtown to Clayton successively . . . With the biggest one passing through CH later . . . Yeh, and some would-be governors of the worthy Phi Assembly rilly got worried over the situation Tue. nite. A measure was on the floor to endorse one of the Democratic gubernatorial aspirants . . . Boiled down practically it was Albright Challengers vs. Johnson Machinators . . . Now from CC's seat in the rear it looked pow'ful like some of the Machinators were getting worried about the way things were going, and so forced tabling of the bill . . . (Albrighters certainly didn't support it.) . . . Challengers got it back off the table . . . More attempts to parliamentarily kill the bill . . . Restless Assemblymen had to leave . . . Quorum was called . . . Adjournment . . . yuk.

Composers Set Up Berlin Scholarship

By Jack Gaver

United Press Correspondent

New York (UP) — In honor of the sixtieth birthday of Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein have established a music scholarship in his name at the Julliard School of Music.

"Because of our high professional regard and our great personal friendship for Irving Berlin, we can think of no better way to honor him on his 60th birthday than to send a New York public school graduate through Julliard School of Music in Irving's name," the producer-songwriter team announced.

The scholarship will cover a full course in composition for a minimum of four years. The first award will be made this fall through a competition plan that will be announced later.

The outstanding thing about Bing Crosby's recent New York visit was that he showed up at his birthday party, given by Paramount, impeccably clad in suit and necktie. He also arrived on time, which is more than most visiting Hollywood stars do at their parties.

One Man's Angle

Why The Naive Believe

By Kennedy Gammage

Communism has an appeal for two types of people; the naive and the frustrated who believe that communism is basically interested in the poor and the workers. This appeal would not last long if they should come to know the philosophy or the practice of communism, resulting in the chaos and confusion created by a "dictatorship of the proletariat." Then they would reject it as opposed to right, reason, and decency. Perhaps that is why the Communist Party has such a rapid turnover, reaching as high as 40 percent in a few years. At one time, those who liked the Nazis joined the party because the Soviets made a treaty with the Nazis. Later when the Soviets broke with the Nazis, the Nazi-lovers left and others joined.

How is it possible that such a system, long since rejected scientifically and now proved erroneous by experience could spread so rapidly in all parts of the world?

The explanation lies in the fact that too few have been able to grasp the nature of communism. The majority instead succumb to its deception, skillfully concealed by its most extravagant promises. By pretending to desire only the betterment of the condition of the working classes, by urging the removal of the very real abuses chargable to our present economic system (and Heaven knows, we are far from perfect, though not as far as the Communists would have us believe), and by demanding a more equitable distribution of the world's goods (including U235), the Communist takes advantage of the present world-wide economic crisis to draw into the sphere of his influence even those sections of the populace which on principle reject all forms of materialism and terrorism. The objectives sound entirely legitimate, and are undoubtedly so; and these partial truths are skillfully presented according to the dictates of time and place to conceal, when necessary, the hideosities, horrors, and inhumanities of Communist principles and tactics. Thus the Communist ideal wins over many of the better-minded members of the community. These in turn become the apostles of the movement among the younger intelligentsia who are still to immature to recognize the basic errors of the system. In this manner, the Communists take advantage of the lack of orientation with regards to imperfections of various systems of government in order to burrow into the universities, where they bolster up the principles of their doctrine with pseudoscientific arguments.

So much for the naive. Perhaps we can discuss the frustrated lads later. But, be they naive or frustrated, they're here; take a good look about you . . . or better still, follow your edit page of the Daily Tar Heel. You can't miss them. They yell too much.

No Letters, Just Columns

By Bill Buchan

After Barron Mill's feature pointing out the obvious faults of Graham Memorial as a student union building, little has been done in advancing the move for a new building. The original plan for the student union building called for two other extensions, including an auditorium for students use and that was for a regular size student body of some 5,000 in number. It would be a constructive move if some organization on campus, or the Alumni Association could start a program for a new building. The present Graham Memorial could be turned over to the Alumni Association as a permanent gathering place for former students returning for a visit to the campus. It's a worthwhile project, just needs the proper backing to get it started.

It's interesting to note the absence of letters to the "Write Away" column during the past few weeks. If more than three letters arrive in a week it is really unusual. Either the readers approve of what they see in the DTH or they are not interested enough to protest. Even our habitual contributors, about four, have either given up their fight or don't have the time. It all means something or other, I suppose.

Everybody is talking about these last two weeks and settling down and studying and passing all the courses with a high grade. The best way to accomplish such a goal is for the cancellation of all proposed parties. (Take that knife out of my back) I'm serious, especially about these Monday night affairs. Five little girls from WC made the trip down here last Monday night to take in a Carolina get-together out at Hogan's. From what they tell me, I understand the ladies had an unusual evening, the hard part about it was that they had to return to Greensboro. It must be leap year when they start coming 45 miles, five strong, for a party.

The Carolina Quarterly seems to really be on its way of becoming a reality. Editor Bill Sessions is working hard to find people to join the staff next year. With proper cooperation from the student body, the literary quarterly should materialize into a magazine that UNC can be proud of.

Prices And The University

By Gran Childress

In the May 11th issue of the Daily Tar Heel there appeared and advertisement sponsored by the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, Inc. in which they attempted to tell students certain facts about the so-called Umstead Act.

I would like to point out a few things which have been overlooked by previous writers, advertisements, platforms, and other propaganda.

The University runs many and varied organizations which are primarily for the benefit of students—or so they say. To cite examples: Lenoir hall, the Scuttlebutt, Carolina Inn cafeteria (to a certain extent), Spencer dining hall, the Infirmary dining hall, the Book Exchange, the YMCA soda fountain, and others. It is the duty of and the business of these organizations to supply the students with their goods at the lowest possible cost and all, or at least most of them, are supposedly non-profit businesses that are trying to make money.

In contrast to the above organizations we have the Chapel Hill and Carrboro merchants. They too have a purpose and I do not intend to argue which of the two is most wholly holy. These organizations are operated by men who are private enterpizers and who have as their main purpose the making of money and profits as a business and as a livlihood.

They like the students primarily for their money and not for any moral or ethical reason. My only contention is that they make too much by virtue of the fact that the former group of organizations—cited at the beginning—allow and create the means for their higher profits.

Now, let us go back to the first group of organizations—remember, those who are here for the sole purpose of helping the student get goods at low prices. What do they do? Let's take the Book Ex. They sell their books and cokes and supplies as high and sometimes higer than the merchants in town who have taxes to pay and oftentimes higher wholesale prices. The merchants in Chapel Hill make a profit but don't think that the University businesses never make one and most usually a larger one, in particular the Book Ex. and Y. Now it would be fine if the profits made by the Book Ex and Y were given back to the purchasers on a pro rata basis. But this isn't the case. The profits are sunk back into the North Carolina General Fund and don't help the students at all. Remember; these profits, which aren't supposed to be made at all, never benefit the students at all—.

Now back to the merchants. The University sells goods at too high prices in order to make their unjustified profits. The merchants price their goods high enough to make a profit, and sometimes they are lower than University prices — and they pay taxes too! The whole situation leads to one of competition between the merchants and the school.

The Umstead Act does not say that the university cannot sell meals, rooms, books, school supplies, and other things of this general nature at a lower price than merchants — it is the power in South that says this obviously. The merhcants are able to sell at such high prices because of the competition that the University businesses take upon themselves to supply and the student's pocketbook is paying the bill to both of them because of numbers of students, lack of space, lack of facilities, et, al.

Until the people that determine the policies under which the University's business establishments operate realize that they are not supposed to operate those businesses to prove their capitalistic adaptability the prices will remain high; not only in Lenoir hall, the Book Ex, the Y, etc., but also in the businesses of Chapel Hill and Carrboro by virtue of the help tendered them by the former's high prices.

Flotsam For Your Jetsam

By C. Renyoz

Our nomination for the best story of the week is the one about a certain Carolina Gentleman who celebrated his 21st birthday last week. On Wednesday before the Germans his folks deposited $1000.00 to his account because he had never smoked or drank. On Sunday following the Germans he took his car home, but forgot to take the bottle out of the glove compartment. The funny part is that it really was his roommate's bottle, but you should have heard him trying to explain!

We see by the papers that female "mashers" have become so aggressive in Pueble, Colorado that police have issued a warning to young men who must walk the streets alone at night.

The situation came to light when a young man reported to officers that two women emerged from an alley and tried to "force their affections" on him. The man said that when he resisted both women attacked him. During the resulting confusions, he lost three dollars.

Well, it IS Leap Year, but three dollars is three dollars!

Bulge Was Epic, Too

Dear Editor

It is time that some one took the podium in favor of the decadent, multimillionnaired, fascistic United States. If we are to believe Mr. Robertson's column of Tuesday, we are the most horrible race of people in existence. This column, entitled "No Iron Curtain" expresses the view that Russia can do no wrong and the U. S. can do no right. Mr. Robertson tore at my heart strings when he pictured the retreat of the Red Army to Stalingrad and how they fought so valiantly to save the world. What, Mr. Robertson, made the battle of Stalingrad so much more epic than the battle for Metz or the Bulge? What was there so much more heroic about the Russian soldier's fighting than an American soldier's fighting? Why, Mr. Robertson, must you always sling mud at the capitalistic west and praise the communistic east? Could it be that you can't get a passport to Russia?

Let us examine the case. Has the capitalistic west helped liberate any countries like Romania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Bulgaria? Did we hold Mr. Stalin up at Yalta by saying that we would have to have a few countries as sop or we would have to leave the war?

No one is saying that the United States is perfect. Many people in this country also think that we have not done all that we could to help the UN. Maybe we, too, think that there are too many Wall street bankers on Pennsylvania avenue. We may not agree on all the faults that the U. S. has but, unlike you we will not agree that Russia has the answers. Are you ready to say, Mr. Robertson, who has told the most lies? Are you prepared to say who is responsible for sabotaging the peace of the world? You yelp about the Iron Curtain and we agree that the picture would have been better if the shaded emotion had been left out, but what really hurt you was the fact that Hollywood dared to put the Canadian spy plot on the screen, wasn't it? Think how nice it would be if you were in Russia. You would never have to look at such a bad movie. To be exact, Mr. Robertson, according to the past record, you wouldn't be able to see any movies or anything else because you wouldn't last ten minutes in the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics if you started spouting off about the Russian Government. That, sir, is where your whole argument for Russia breaks down. When people loose the right to stand up and criticize their government they are through. Freedom, contrary to your line of thinking, can't be bought at any price and that includes all the wonderful things that come with a communistic government.

In And Out Quarterly

Editor:

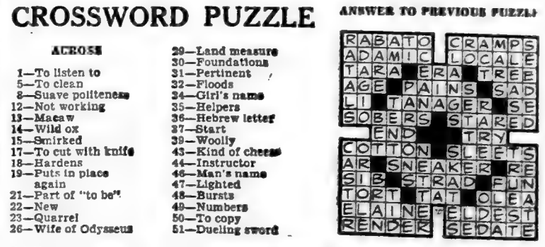
The Student Legislature, in theory, is supposed to represent the students. Our student government is modelled on that of the United States; however, it has become a mockery this term.

I wonder how the new editor and business manager of hte Carolina Quarterly feel today, for within the eight days that they have held office the legislature has brought up two bills that would cut out the Quarterly's underwrite. This is not a great show of confidence.

Last term almost 1,500 students signed petitions requesting that a quarterly be established, yet the legislature will not include their magazine in the budget.

The Carolina Quarterly does not expect to use the whole $2,000 underwrite, on the contrary, it expects to repay the whole sum. The money is to be used, if at all, to produce the first issue; after that it should be self sufficient. The money is an underwrite to be paid back, and it is not a grant. With a budget of $100,000, this small sum should not be eliminated.

Perhaps the University of North Carolina is to be judged solely on its football teams, its humor magazine, and its big dances—I hope not. A University is primarily a place of learning, and if creative writing and the other arts are to be squashed, it cannot hope to maintain its place of leadership.



This is about the fifth time that the Quarterly's underwrite has been brought up by the legislature—how many more times will this farce be played?

If the Legislature eliminates the underwrite now, there will be many students who will not forget it when the next election is held.

State Victory Gives Tar Heels Big Four Crown

Only Three Contests Remaining on Jayvee 1948 Baseball Card

Only three games remain on the schedule of Coach Henry House's jayvee baseballers before they hang up their togs for the 1948 season.

The Tar Babies will be attempting to make it five out of six over the Duke Blue Imps of Duke Saturday in Durham. In five previous meetings the lads from Chapel Hill have come out on top four times.

The rained out game with State will probably be played Monday or Tuesday while the last game on the slate will be with the Wolfcubs next Wednesday.

Bill McGinn is due to do the chunking against Duke while Charlie Garganus should be behind the plate. Otherwise the lineup should be the same.

In their last outing the juniors suffered their fourth loss of the season, dropping a 1-0 pitchers' duel to the Whirlies of Greensboro high school. The Gate City crew pushed across a single tally in the bottom half of the ninth to win the ball game.

The jayvees have won nine contests thus far this season.

Tar Heels Face Duke Runners Tomorrow in Finale at Durham

A 4-1 record for the season and a victory over Duke will be the objects of the Carolina track team tomorrow afternoon when the Tar Heels move over to Durham to run their final dual meet of the season.

The Blue Devils will probably enter the meet favorites, although Carolina won't be out of the running by any sizeable margin. In the words of Coach Dale Ranson, "This meet looks to be the most even one of those we have run all season."

The Tar Heels already have three victories in dual meet competition against one defeat in addition to triumphing in the Conference outdoor meet.

Opened With Loss

They started out the season by losing to Georgia Tech, but came back to defeat Virginia, State college, and Navy, in that order. The conference victory came last week and served to reverse Maryland's one-sided win in the Carolina relays which inaugurated the outdoor season in Chapel Hill.

Duke, which finished third in the loop classic, has most of its strength in the short and middle distances and some of the field events.

Carolina's big hope will be to outscore the Blue Devils in the distances, the hurdles, and the remaining field events by a big margin and pick up as many points as possible in the other events.

Miller-Magill Duo

Jimmy Miller and Sam Magill will be carrying the main part of the Carolina burden. The two distance men will be doubling in the mile and two-mile runs and should be good for 16 points between them if they run one-two in both races.

The high jump will probably be another event in which Carolina will rack up a majority of the points, if not all of them. Jack Moody, Bill Joyner, and Doug Smith could finish in that order. Doug Ausbon will be the only Duke threat in that event, but it is very improbable that he will outjump Moody.

Joyner currently holds the Conference title with a leap of 6'2". Moody hit over 6'3" to capture the indoor crown and has jumped 6'4'.

Carolina has two other Conference champions entered in the meet. Bob Seligman holds the discus title and he will be favored to cop that event tomorrow. Dick Taylor wears the high hurdles crown and will probably win also.

Duke has two champions entered, too. Jim O'Leary, who finished second behind Seligman in the discus, is the shot put champion and will probably triumph tomorrow. The Conference javelin champion, Don Dunham, goes to school in Durham.

Seixas Drops Out of Sedgefield Tourney; Clark Taylor Wins

Clark Taylor, the faithful second man in the Carolina tennis lineup, marched to an easy two set victory in his opening round match at the Sedgefield Inn tournament held in Greensboro yesterday.

The Tar Heel star, seeded fourth in the preliminary ratings, was the only seeded player to advance from Carolina. Vic Seixas, recent Southern Conference singles winner, was not scheduled until today. However, the big racquet weilder for the Blue and White will not take part at all in the meet.

Seixas and Coach John Kenfield decided upon the advice of several doctors not to allow Seixas to compete in the best interests of his health. The doctors stated that the recent seige of glandular fever had sapped too much strength from the handsome captain of the netmen.

Four more of the original entry of nine were forced to default due to scholastic conflicts. They were Ray Morris, Charlie Rice, Bert Ingram, and Don Skakle.

Heath Alexander was the only other Carolina man to stay unbeaten as he also turned in an easy two set win. Bob Luxemburg, a freshman from New York, won an easy win his first time out but in his second match of the day he was eliminated in a close fight.

The summary: Taylor (NC) over Fleming (HPC) 6-2, 6-2; Alexander (NC) over Craig (WS) 6-3, 6-0; Luxemburg (NC) over Kirby (D) 6-3, 6-1; Barrier (HP) over Luxemburg (NC) 9-7, 6-3; Wesley (D) over Wilder (NC) 7-9, 6-2, 6-4.

Booters End Spring Practice on Friday

After almost a quarter of concentrated labor, spring soccer practice will end Friday with a practice game against a group of South American students from State college.

Game time will be at 4 o'clock and it will give Coach Marvin Allen a preview of his material for next season. Coach Allen refused to predict any outcome of the contest.

Wolfpack Scores 9-4 Triumph; Puts Blue Devils Out of Race

Raleigh, May 19 — North Carolina State College pulled one of the major upsets in the current Big Four baseball series here today by defeating Duke, 9-4, thus giving the University of North Carolina the loop crown for the first time since the league's inauguration. The Dukesters, who previously had had a chance to tie the high flying Tar Heels for the title, were held scoreless until the ninth inning by Wolfpack pitchers Holding and Edwards.

State collected two runs in the third and fourth frames and added four more in the fifth. And then, just to play safe the hard-hitting Wolfpack nine added one more in the eighth, while Duke was unable to score in the first eight frames. However, in the final stanza, the Blue Devils started a late rally, but it was too short and too late for they were unable to overcome State's nine run lead. But the Durham crew did manage to push over four runs before the game was ended.

It was Pitcher Al Curtis' first Big Four loss in five starts. Previously the big freshman moundsman was leading the circuit with his expert pitching ability. Holding was credited with the victory.

State scored in the third after two outs on two singles, an error and a wild pitch. They added two more in the next frame on two walks, two hits, and a passed ball by catcher Sires. The score was doubled in the big fifth on a home run by Bill Fowler with one on and two more runs came in on three singles and a wild pitch.

WAA to Present Cup After Softball Today

The All-Sports cup presented by the Women's Athletic association to the coed organization which gains the most points in sports throughout the year, will be awarded this afternoon at the WAA picnic, by Randy Hudson, WAA president.

All coeds are invited to the picnic, which will be held behind the Women's gym immediately following the softball finals at 5 o'clock. Tickets are 25 cents, and all food will be provided.

This is the second year for presentation of the cup, and the winner will not be announced until the time for presentation. Pi Beta Phi was last year's winner.

Plaques to the organizations winning individual tournaments will also be awarded. These include the basketball plaque, won by Town Girls; volleyball, Pi Phi; table tennis, Carr; Badminton, Spencer; and swimming, Pi Phi.

Winners of the archery and tennis plaques are still to be determined and Kenan and Chi Omega will compete this afternoon in the finals of the softball tournament. The contest will take place in Kenan Stadium.

Spring Cage Drills Will Close Saturday

Three weeks of Spring basketball practice will be concluded Saturday afternoon when Coach Tom Scott sends the candidates for positions on the 1948 team against a squad composed of 1948 seniors.

Leading next year's hopefuls will be Norm Kohler, Nemo Nearman, Coy Carson, John Tsantes, Dan Nyimicz and Charlie Thorne. The graduating team will number among its members Bob Paxton, Fred Swartzberg, Johnny Dillon, Tee Thorne, Roger Scholbe, King Cole and Marx Nathan.

A full-length practice game is planned for the closing session. It will start at 1:45 o'clock.

Sarah Walker Wins Coed Archery Meet

Shooting into the bull's eye enough times to push her score right up to 405 points out of a possible, but highly improbable, 648, Sarah Walker, versatile Kenan athlete won an easy victory over Alpha Gam's Jean Somervell and Pi Phi's Jane Rogers, who placed second and third with 326 and 300 points, respectively, in the intramural coed archery tournament which took place yesterday afternoon and the day before on Kenan field.

Carolina's Gift . . . . . . To Umpire Ranks

Murray Doing Fine In Piedmont

By Bob Goldwater

"No, they haven't run me out of the Piedmont league. I'm just visiting the Hill between series." That's the way Frank Murray, Carolina's gift to the umpiring ranks, explained his presence in town for a three-day visit early this week.

In his second year of calling the close ones in professional baseball, Murray, who completes requirements for his Master's degree from the University in the fall, is a former arbiter in Big Four play. And in his opinion the four-team circuit ranks among the fastest college leagues in the country.

Good Ballplaying

"I've been seeing some good ballplaying up in the Piedmont too," Murray went on. "There are a good many former major leaguers around the loop. For example Pinky Higgins, the ex-Red Sox third-baseman, is now managing the Boston farm at Roanoke. And Vinnie Smith, the former Pirate catcher, is playing for Richmond."

Murray finds little difference between college and professional ball—from an umpire's standpoint, that is. "It's probably a little harder to call college games," he finally decided after a little deliberation.

"There're many more players trying to act smart in college ball, especially when they're playing at home. And the umps take more from college boys than from professional ballplayers before giving them the heave-ho."

Speaking of players being tossed out of games reminded the Gibsonville native that he bounced his first player just last Saturday night. "He'd been bickering all during the game, kept making references to my eyesight every time he turned around to complain. After all, an umpire can take just so much," he smiled.

All at Night

Murray found one more difference between the games he used to call in college and his present position in the Piedmont. "All the games up there are played at night, except for Sunday contests. The lights aren't too bright in some of the parks and its really a strain on the eyes. Afternoon ball is much better."

Baseball isn't the only sport in which Murray serves as an official. He's also handled a good many basketball games in this section and hopes to do some refereeing in the Southern conference next season.

"I'd like to continue calling both sports," he asserted, "but baseball will still be my favorite."

Results of Poll On Negro Students Will Be Released

Partial returns of a poll among graduate students on the admission of Negroes to graduate schools here will be released at a meeting tonight of Students for Democratic Action.

The group, meeting at 7 o'clock in Horace Williams lounge, will also elect new officers.

SDA began the poll of graduate students two weeks ago, but returns are not yet in from several departments. The political action group is taking the poll to furnish factual background for discussion of applications to the UNC law school made recently by three Negroes.

Retiring officers are Bob Lindsay, chairman; Bud Dutton, vice chairman; Meg Healy, secretary; Bill Grier, treasurer.

HOUSING NOTICE

These students are now eligible for dormitory rooms. If they do not contact the housing office by Saturday their deposits will be refunded and their applications cancelled:

'Factotum,' New Literary Mag Goes on Sale on Campus Today

The first issue of Factotum, a new literary magazine, will go on sale today at Lenoir hall, Ab's bookshop, and at other points on campus, according to O. B. Hardison, Jr., one of the magazine's editors.

Norman Foerster's "Wanted: A New Literary Movement" and contributions by Charles Eaton, English faculty member, will be featured in this issue.

Other than Hardison, the new mag is being edited by Paul Ramsey and Harvey Honig and its issues will feature short stories, articles and poems. The mag is intended not as a competitor but as a supplement to the Carolina Quarterly and its success depends upon sales, said Hardison.

"Although our main area of distribution will be Chapel Hill, we have outlets in California, Boston, New York and Washington," he said.

Other contributions in this issue include short stories by Morty Seif and Paul Ramsey and poems by J. C. Davis and Don Justice. Featured also is a critical article by Hanford Henderson, "The Burlesque in Haywood's Johan, Johan."

ARMSTRONG IS SPEAKER

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, will deliver the commencement address at Angier High School tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. George Carr, who is an almunus of the University, is principal of the high school. Armstrong will return to Chapel Hill directly after the commencement exercises.

Special Session Called To Continue Budget Talk

Di Resolution Condemns Debate Council Actions

The Dialectic Senate has condemned the Debate council. The special resolution was introduced and passed on the floor of the senate in Wednesday night's meeting by Charlie Hodson who said that the bill was necessary mainly because of the council's decision to bar Pete Long from participation in the contest for the Willie P. Mangum medal in oratory.

Hodson said that the bill was introduced for several reasons besides the decision of the council which resulted in the withdrawal of the other seven contestants from participation.

Long was declared ineligible to participate in the oratorical contest by the council. The council gave as its reason for the decision the fact that Long had completed the requirements for his degree last quarter and therefore would not be eligible to compete for an award offered only to seniors.

Hodson's bill is as follows: "Be it resolved that the Senate of the Dialectic Literary society condemns as venial and contrary to the interests of good debating at the University of North Carolina, (Section 1): The recent policies and actions of the Debate council of the University.

"(Section 2): Until such time as the Di judges that these policies have changed for the better the Debate council shall be denied (1) the support of the Di, (2) that this bill, although passed in an executive session, should be released to the Daily Tar Heel.

"(Section 4): Be it further resolved that the Dialectic Senate go on record as wholeheartedly supporting its representative to the Debate council, Miss Merle Stevens, in her attempt to correct these abuses."

The Debate council decided yesterday afternoon to relinquish the sponsorship of the Willie P. Mangum oratorical medal to "private auspices under the administration," according to a member of the council.

In commenting on the bill, Hodson enumerated the reasons for the action. "One of the reasons for the bill was due to the fact that the council ousted G. A. Barrett of the Economics department as one of its advisers and coaches in the middle of the season against objections of members of the Varsity Debate squad to put in a new man from the Law school who was more to their liking," he said.

Another reason Hodson pointed out was in regard to the decision against Long. "He was not notified until the last minute by the council and requests of contestants were ignored," he pointed out.

A further reason for the resolution, according to Hodson, was based on the contention of many debaters that the council is at present made up mainly of people who have not participated in any forensic activity for over two or three years and that the majority of the council is unqualified to serve in their positions.

He also asserted that a small but powerful group from the Law school have seized control of the council and are seeking to perpetuate their stay in office, giving no opportunity to younger people in the forensic field who are doing the actual debating and carring on forensic activities.

CHAPIN TO SPEAK

F. Stuart Chapin, head of the Department of Sociology at the University of Minnesota, will be the speaker at the Alpha Kappa Delta seminar Monday at 2 o'clock in room 407 Alumni building. The subject of Dr. Chapin's address will be "Experimental Sociology." The public is cordially invited to attend.

Clothing Drive Ends With 1,200 Pounds Estimated Collection

An estimated 1,200 pounds of clothing were collected during the CRIL-sponsored clothing drive for overseas relief last week.

Men's dorms turned out best with Stacy and Whitehead topping the list. The Carolina Inn Apartments ran a close second in the large contribution. Faculty units did well although some W. Cameron and N. Columbia houses have not yet contributed.

Collection was made Tuesday with the cooperation of the Building department which furnished truck and driver.

Sorting of the clothes into various age groups and types began yesterday in the Baptist church basement under the direction of Bill Shrago. Hillel will be in charge of packing all clothing.

Those houses that didn't turn in clothing Tuesday are urged to take articles by the Baptist church. If there were boxes missed during Tuesday's collection a phone call to the YMCA office, 7732, will insure their being picked up.

Official figures on the total amount collected will be available next week.

Jerry Weiss Elected Sound and Fury Head

Jerry Weiss of Chase City, Va., was elected President of Sound and Fury in the organization's spring elections Tuesday night.

Weiss, who is also secretary of his fraternity, Pi Lambda Phi, has served in the capacity of Treasurer of Sound and Fury during the past year. He succeeds Ken Gammage as president.

The other new officers are Faith Adams of Coral Gables, Florida, vice-president; Mark Barker of Durham, treasurer; and Doris Weaver of Four Oaks, corresponding secretary.

Pete Strader and Ben Kistler were appointed advisors to the Executive cabinet. They have done outstanding work with Sound and Fury in the fields of directing, acting, and writing. Pete was the co-author (with Ken Gammage) of this year's fall production, in which he also acted and directed.

AN ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF A DRESS REHEARSAL of the Carolina Playmakers' top outdoor production of the year, "Cyrano de Bergerac," to be presented in the Forest theater tonight, tomorrow and Sunday at 8:30. Director of the play, which climaxes the season's activities, is Foster Fitz-Simons of the Playmaker staff. The production is to be played on three revolving stages, one of the most ambitious staging jobs ever attempted in the Forest theater. The players cartooned above are, left to right: David Samples, Joliet, Ill., as "Christian;" Frederick Johnson, Chico, Calif., as "Cyrano;" Eleanor Woodson, Coalwood, W. Va., as "The Duenna;" Gloria Gunn, Reno, Nevada, as "Roxane;" Phyllis Isenhour, Charlotte, as "Flower Girl;" A. E. Westover, III, Merchantville, N. J., as "Rageneau;" and Martin Jacobs, Greensboro, as "Bellerose."

'Cyrano de Bergerac' Opens Run Tonight; Marks End Of Thirtieth Playmaker Season

By Mark Sumner

Thirty years of theater activity will be focused tonight on the out-door Forest theater when the Carolina Playmakers' production of Edmond Rostand's play, "Cyrano de Bergerac," opens for a three-day run.

The widely popular romantic drama, which tells the story of the swashbuckling swordfighter with the long nose and a passion for falling in love, will begin at 8:30.

Students and faculty members of the dramatic art department have been working for the past two months to make the play an outstanding success and a true climax of the Playmakers' 30th birthday. Foster Fitz-Simons, author and professional dancer, is director of the play.

Staff costumer Irene Smart and students Martin Jacobs, Mary Jo Cain, and Sue Davis have completed 80 costumes for the play, while Mrs. Davis and Sam Hirsch have spent the past two weeks working out special make-up for the large Forest theater requirements.

One of the most interesting features of the production is the method of using revolving stages to carry the five sets of scenery needed. The scenery consists of a theater set, a pastry shop set, a house with a balcony, a battle scene, and a convent. The scenery pieces are mounted on three revolving stages, the largest of which is 22 feet in diameter, and the revolving stages are in turn set on special concrete tracks. The scenery and revolving stages was designed by technical director Lynn Gault, and built under the supervision of graduate student Gorden R. Bennett.

Most production problems are made more acute by out-door staging, and the high intensity lighting necessary is from special portable instruments. Graduate assistant Edgar Garrett is serving as master electrician.

Even the acting must be greatly intensified, and many of the 40-member cast are playing as many as four parts. The leading role of "Cyrano" requires an almost constant high-level acting job of two and one-half hours.

The leading roles will be played by Frederick Johnson as "Cyrano," Gloria Gunn as "Roxane," and M. David Samples as "Christian." Featured players include: Marty Jacobs as "Bellerose," A. E. Westover, III, as "Rageneau," the comical pastry cook, Eleanor Woodson as the "Duenna," and Claude Rayborn as "Ligniere."

Colbert Leonard plays "Flanquinn," Nat White will appear as "Brissaille," and Edsel Hughes portrays "Le Bret." Phyllis Isenhour will act the "Flower Girl," Millie Howard plays "Lise," and Andrew Griffith appears as "Capuchin."

James Geiger will play the "Citizen," Sidney Shertzer acts "Valvert," Charles Morel is "Champagne," and Irvine Smith is "De Guiche." Walter Sharafanowich as "Montfleury," and Mac Shaw as the "Cut Purse" complete the featured list.

$3,000 Loan Offered By Publications Board

By Chuck Hauser

A special session of the Student Legislature was called for Tuesday night by Speaker Jim Godwin as the legislative body adjourned at 10:40 last night after having accomplished nothing in its efforts to absorb a $4,667.85 budget deficit for the coming fiscal year.

Godwin stated just before the group adjourned that the first piece of old business to come up in the Tuesday night session would be a bill introduced about 10:20 by Bill Jernigan which called for a 10 per cent slash for all accounts in the budget and rebates to some of the organizations.

The original budget cut bill to be brought to the floor last night was the Finance committee recommendation for the following slashes: $3,000 from publications, $2,000 from the Carolina Quarterly, $2,000 from the Debate council, $500 from class organizations, $375 from the Men's Honor council, $250 from student entertainment and $72 from the Student Legislature.

Publications Board President Bill Carmichael, III, got the privilege of the floor to speak on behalf of publications. He protested the $3,000 slash on the Publications board as "extremely unfair" and went on to give a financial report on all publications operating under the boards jurisdiction.

Carmichael pointed out that publications would break even this year, even though they had voluntarily absorbed a $2,200 cut caused through mistakes when the general campus budget was drawn up. If a $3,000 slash was thrown on top of this, the board president pointed out, it would cause a possible reduction in the number of issues of Tarnation and the Daily Tar Heel next year, the possible doing away with syndicated DTH features such as Drew Pearson, Li'l Abner and the crossword puzzle, along with the United Press wire, and some possible reduction in the size of the Yackety Yack.

As a solution to the problem, Carmichael proposed a plan whereby the Publications board would loan the the Student Legislature $3,000 on a non-interest-bearing note payable in two years. The money would come from publications surplus, out of which the newspaper, magazine and yearbook could not themselves operate and remain on a sound financial basis.

The majority of the law-makers seemed to oppose the loan plan, even after the efforts of Legislator Al Lowenstein, who took the floor for a good 15 minutes in an effort to convince them that the loan was both financially sound and advantageous to the Legislature.

Former Finance Committee Chairman Ernie House then gained the privilege of the floor to attack Lowenstein's views, saying that the very principle of starting a series of loans in student government was fundamentally wrong. He pointed out that it was bad business policy to operate on a deficit, and that above all, the Legislature should operate within its budget.

Substitute bills and amendments were brought to the floor several times as the Legislature went into the parliamentary form of the committee of the whole to thrash out the financial difficulties, climaxed by Bill Jernigan's 10-per-cent bill, after which the body adjourned until next Tuesday.

Jernigan's bill stated that after each organization in the budget was slashed 10 per cent, the Debate council would get back $578.50, the literary quarterly $300, the class organizations $300, the Men's council $666, publications $6.000 and Graham Memorial $2,100.

Sessions Announces Two New Assistants For Quarterly Staff

Priscilla Moore and Roy Moose have been appointed as assistant editors of the new Carolina Quarterly for next year, according to an announcement yesterday by Bill Sessions, newly elected editor of the publication.

Miss Moore, a rising senior from Tryon is president of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and has been a member of the Coed Senate and Pan-Hellenic council. She has served on the literary staff of the Carolina Magazine this year and also on the Yack staff.

While attending Converse college in South Carolina, Miss Moore was assistant editor of Concept, a literary magazine. She transferred to the University of Chicago and attended classes there for a while before coming here. She is a member of the YWCA cabinet and has served as executive secretary of the Quarterly since its beginning.

Moose, rising senior from Mooresville, is an English major and a student of Phillips Russell in novel and short story writing classes. He is 25 years of age and served for four years in the Army Air Forces during the war, part of that time in the Italian campaign.

He was a staff member of the DTH during his freshman and sophomore years and for a time was president of the University Veterans association. He has been a member of the Student Audit board and has contributed to the Carolina Mag for three years.

Sessions was selected by the Quarterly's Faculty Advisory committee and publications board last week as the mag's first editor for the 1948-49 year, and Emily Sewell was chosen as business manager.

The quarterly will be published for the first time next fall and a program is now underway for obtaining funds for the first year's publication. The magazine will strive to be self-supporting through the medium of donations and subscriptions.

PHI BETE BANQUET

Any member who plans to attend the Phi Beta Kappa banquet Tuesday night at 6:30 at the Carolina Inn is requested to make a reservation by telephoning Miss Mable Mallett at 7681 before 12 o'clock Saturday.

McLeod Will Head Summer Activities Of YM, YW, Hillel

Ed McLeod, rising junior from Maxton, was elected chairman of the Coalition cabinet for summer activities of the YM, YW, and Hillel foundation, formed at a meeting of representatives of the three groups last week.

The cabinet will plan activities of a social and religious nature for students here in summer school, with particular attention to those students here only for the summer.

Mrs. Tilly Charges States Are Protecting Lynchers

By Jim Dickinson

Mrs. E. M. Tilly declared last night that local and state governments have shown great laxness in protecting the civil rights of individuals, and called for Federal legislation to stop "the infringement upon the rights of 140 millions of people."

Mrs. Tilly, a member of President Truman's Committee on Civil Rights, addressed a capacity crowd in Hill hall under sponsorship of the American Veterans committee. George Tindall, president of the AVC, presided at the meeting and Robert Nelson, student pastor of the Methodist church, introduced the speaker.

"Lynching still remains as the most serious threat to the civil rights of our people," said Mrs. Tilly in charging that local and state officers have repeatedly "protected those persons" guilty of lynching crimes. She charged that only a small percentage of the agressors "have even reached court."

She said the Committee on Civil Rights was formed in order to uncover the discrimination against "minority groups, including Jews, Negroes, Indians and Japanese-Americans." She stated her belief that President Truman will go down in history as a great advocate of civil rights.

"The right to vote should be the basic privilege of all individuals," said Mrs. Tilly in upholding the proposed anti-poll tax bill.

She backed President Truman to the limit in a discussion of the 10-point plan for civil rights. She said she could not understand the "reason for the Southern revolt," and stated that several of the Southern legislators and governors at the meeting in Tallahassee had not "even read" the President's civil rights plan.

When asked in an open forum session why Truman, a strong advocate of civil liberties, had appointed Kenneth Royall to a high position in military affairs, Mrs. Tilly replied, "I'm not Truman's appointed protector. Don't make me answer for his sins, please."

WALLACE CLUB

The Wallace club will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial. Members and others will hear a report on Wallace's recent speeches and his role in the proposed peace talks.

Revolution Medal Will Be Presented In Parade Today

The Sons of the Revolution medal will be presented to Midshipman Graham Ladelaw Smith in a dress parade on the intramural athletic field at Duke University this afternoon.

The medal is an annual presentation of the Duke chapter Sons of the Revolution in connection with awards to ROTC at State college and NROTC at Duke and UNC.

New Dormitory 'A' Solves Problem Of Where to Put Seniors' Families

By Sam Whitehall

"Where am I going to find a place for my folks to stay?" is a common question received about this time each year by various University officials, as graduating seniors realize late in May that they will be getting their diplomas within a week or two.

Well, the boys in South building have the problem solved this time. There's an empty brick building just this side of Woollen gymnasium with the smell of fresh paint still hanging in the halls. It's known as Dormitory "A."

One of the three new dorms being constructed beside Alexander, "A" has just been completed and will be ready for occupancy this summer. But University officials decided that they could solve the problem of housing seniors' families during commencement time by giving the brand new building its first baptism under fire and putting the mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers and grandparents up in the bright rooms of the most modern building on the Carolina

Lowest, Laziest Order of Kalvyries Fraps Nine Coeds, Lone Housemother

By Helen Highwater

As the mystic haunting strains of the Dickie Bird Song whined through the darkness, nine coeds and one housemother were frapped last night into Kalvyries, campus honorary for non-contributing and un-interested women.

Mrs. Sedalia Gold, Pi Beta Phi housemother, went through the same secret ordeals as did the student candidates, seniors Anna Black, Liz Nash, Chris White, and Hank Hopkins, and juniors Jean Williams, Gladys Cottrell. Kit Finney, Charmian Griffin and Hunter Bell.

Third spring frapping of the group, it is the first time that juniors have been admitted to the exclusive organization, which is limited to 98 per cent of the coed enrollment. Thus far, frapping has been confined to the Pi Phi house, since the members are to unenergetic to visit other establishments.

Only those girls who possess the important qualifications stipulated by the organization are considered for membership. Chief among requirements are the three E's—no effort, no energy, no en-

Toward Fascistic Control

On Wednesday the House of Representatives passed the Mundt-Nixon bill, a bill ostensibly aimed at suppression of the Communist party in the United States. This bill is now awaiting action in the Senate, where it is not expected to pass. The following statement concerning the bill was drawn up by three members of the Graduate Students association of the University of California and printed in the student newspaper of that university. Since this statement is extremely applicable to the bill's effect upon our University we are reprinting it here.

"We are calling the attention of every student and faculty member to one of the most subversive pieces of legislation ever discussed in the halls of Congress. This is the Mundt-Nixon Bill, HR 5852. It has already been condemned strongly for its violations of civil liberties by conservative newspapers such as the Los Angeles Times and by the leaders of all political parties. Nevertheless, considering its potential effect on our campus, we believe it is not as well known or has it received the attention it deserves.

"The bill was developed by the Un-American Activities committee of Thomas and Rankin, Mundt and Nixon. The bill calls for extraordinary powers to be given to the Attorney General of the United States, and his subversive control squads. Under the loose construction of the bill any one who does not conform exactly to the policies and practices of the administration would be liable to investigation, subject to fine and imprisonment up to ten years.

"The interpretation of a provision of the bill on 'the dissemination of propaganda calculated to undermine established governments and institutions' would not be in the hands of the judiciary, but in those of such organizations as the Thomas committee.

"The Tenney committee would follow it on a statewide level. Under this any graduate student or any faculty member whose thesis or research is challenged by a Thomas or a Rankin or a Tenney could be accused of 'disseminating propaganda'. Any student who supports proposals for low cost housing, for abolishing the poll tax, for Palestine partition, against the draft and UMT could be investigated and sentenced to fine or imprisonment because of the similarity of his proposals with those of the Communist party or 'communist fronts.'

"There is no provision in the Mundt-Nixon bill that would safeguard any student or any citizen against false or biased testimony or provide for proper hearings under rules of evidence. Judicial prerogatives are usurped.

"The Nazi principle of 'guilt by association' prevails in this bill and could be used without limitation against the president of our University as well as against supporters of independent political action who, among innumerable others, have been smeared by the Thomases and the Tenneys.

"Only those who pass the definition of 'loyalty' set down by the Un-American Activities committee might be immune. The definition of loyalty of a distinguished historian such as Professor Commager of Columbia, is abandoned.

"Professor Commager has said that 'loyalty is devotion to the best interests of the commonwealth and may require histility to the particular policies which the government pursues, the particular practices which the economy undertakes, th eparticular institutions which the society maintains.' The editors who write the Daily Californian stating that 'this is the kind of loyalty that must survive, in spite of legislative committees and red baiters' would be liable for prosecution under the Mundt-Nixon bill.

"Yet we believe that the measure, if its implications are known to the people, will be defeated. It it true that today anyone who dares to call attention to the attacks upon our basic institutions and the Bill of Rights may be subject himself to barrages of hysteria in the place of honest debate on the issue. This is the price we must pay to keep and extend our academic and other freedoms, to stop the book burnings being kindled by the enemies of the free human spirit in Congress today.

"We call for open debates and open public hearings and the use of our democratic rights by every student and faculty member while these rights are still available."

William Tells

Spring Can Drop Dead

By Bill Payeff

As my father once told me, exemplifying all his wonderous sagacity: "after winter comes spring, son." I've never forgotten that treasured bit of information from his trembling lips. And on my own I deduced that after spring comes summer, bringing with it multitudes of little girls and whatever those other things are called, scurrying around college campuses with blankets and lukewarm beer and scanty apparel. Beach parties flourish, picnics prosper, romance blossoms. Things come out of their winter hiding places. Squirrels and dogs bask in the sunshine, and I write home for handkerchiefs. It's a long story . . .

In 1927, my father was busily engaged in expectorating the seeds from green persimmons with a loud, whirring noise when I sneezed rather violently. Several physicians were called in. After Dad examined them, they examined me, stethescope, Roschach, etc., to the glee of my mother and the consternation of the landlord. "You have hay fever, my boy, hopelessly and helplessly. I wish there were something we could do but mercy killings are illegal in this state. Perhaps if you tried to cross Franklin Street at high noon . . ."

"Or registered for Statistics, Son!" exclaimed my father, not wishing to see me suffer. Mother just giggled. She's been doing just that since the boll wevils absconded with her favorite fox hound.

"I'll never give in, gentlemen," I said with a stiff upper lip which made it awfully difficult for me to speak. "Someday Medical Science will perfect a cure, the sneezer's panacea. Until then . . ."

"Gesundheit!" cried the doctors.

"Gesundheit!" I echoed with bravado.

Many years have passed since that quaint little scene in the Sand Hills. High school, the war, when I served as a Red Cross Doughnut Girl, the tears of joy on VD Day, rehabilitation, education, Carolina, allergy tests. In 1947 I published my famous book: "I Sneezed My Way Through General College." I'm single today because every time I get ready to propose the object of my affection has on "A Hot Afternoon in Haw River" or some other perfume which launches me into a frenzy of sneezing.

The Climax came, however, in the summer of 1946 in Dr. Craig's English 50 class. Occupying a strategic position on the first row, I would sit calmly until Dr. Craig began his: "But, soft! What light through yonder window breaks." Warn't no light what broke. War me! I blasted forth at the most inopportune moments in Hamlet, Macbeth, Othello. I co-starred in every play. I was the trumpet and the flourish and the sounds of thunder in King Lear. I was the rain and the wind on the heath. I rode with Hotspur and appeared unannounced at Agincourt. Finally Dr. Craig suggested that perhaps I had done sufficiently well to pass the course without coming to any more lectures and that I should go somewhere else instead. Now where was it he suggested I go?

Anyway, I became notorious. I picketed florist shops and depolinated flowers in the Arboretum, burned ragweed in great pyres for the remainder of the quarter. In my time here I have sneezed away three Paleolithic fossils, sneezed twice under the radical for Dr. Brauer, and thundered my way completely through Faust. And I ain't even graduated yet!

Some soldiers got boxes of food from home during the War. I got Kleenex and handkerchiefs. Some guys pitch woo in spring and summer. I pitch used mouchoirs into the laundry bag. Leave us face it. I ain't happy in the summer and spring, and I ain't happy in the fall and winter, thinking about summer and spring. As my father once told me . . .

Erupting Financial Volcano

Charles O. Long

The campus financial volcano, fter rumbling and smoking for he past three weeks, finally .rupted Thursday and the hot lava is still flowing. Searing and burning everything in its path, it has to date cut out the literary quarterly, half of the University Debate Council and a slice off of publications. All of the above listed cuts are now in the form of a finance committee recommendation acted on by the Student Legislature Thursday nite. Facing a deficit for the coming year the Committee headed by Jack Girard felt apparently that the only thing to do was cut and cut big. It didn't seem to matter to them that the student legislature is under a verbal and moral contract to support Varsity debating on the campus. The Spotlight predicts however, that though the Debate Council takes a cut, as it should, it will not be fifty percent. Unknown to most, the Council has some very strong friends in the Legislature.

The second cut came to the Literary Quarterly. The committee will recommend the withdrawing of the two thousand set up to under-write the newest campus mag. Proponents of the Mag are yelling foul play all over the place and unless the Committee can prove the underwriting unconstitutional then it would seem that they have a "slight" moral obligation to go through with at least a part of the pledged sum.

The third cut went to the Publications with a recommended three thousand dollar whack. The Tar Heel immediately came back with the threat that they would have to cut out Li'l Abner and the cross word puzzle, and possibly Drew Pearson's column. Wonder how popular the legislature would be when that happens.

The entire matter seems to boil down to the fact that the finance committee has played the bull in the china shop. They looked around for something to whack on and came up with some good solid cuts. To some casual observers it would seem that a ten per cent whack across the board, graduating it where it seemed more necessary, would have been a more equitable solution. There is one thing certain however, and that is that the legislature sitting at the present time is going to have to begin showing a more mature judgment if it is to keep the respect of the campus.

Typical of its actions was last week's secret session to discuss financial matters. When the time came for the session there was no formal vote. Mr. Montague, presiding officer, in his rustic fashion merely declared the Legislature in secret session and ordered the visitors and the fourth estate out of the hall. Pledging the members to secrecy, in a manner reminddful of a certain society with headquarters in Georgia, President Dedmond proceeded to give the boys and girls the low down on campus finance. The meeting by all legal standards known was legal. The meeting by all precedence known to legislative bodies in this country stank. Proponents of the secret meeting claimed that the nature of the business justified closed doors. Maybe the issue did justify secrecy but, in that case it should never have gone to the legislature. This point was countered with the opinion that the legislature was about to pass a very damaging bill and had to be stopped. In other words certain people in our government had set themselves up as the judicators of what is good and bad for the campus to know. If anything transpires on this campus which affects the student body they have the right to know about it and no one has the right to arbitrarily decide what they should or should not know. So far as we are concerned, secret meetings should never be held and the legislature should take action to see that they are not held in the future.

Old Marriage Psychology

By Pete Gerns

"Should Men Beat Their Wives?" Perhaps you think they should, and then again you may not. When Andy Cornish suggested this question for this column he wasn't kidding. Perhaps some girls want to take revenge on him. His address: St. Anthony's.

"Only in self-defense." G. L. McGill.

"If they have a good enough reason—but why marry a woman you may have to beat, anyway?" Hilda Sharkey.

"Only if they are of the nagging type, and then horrible torture should be devised as just punishment." Stan Croner.

"In one word—No!" June Gilbert.

"Yadamrite!! Not only on Fridays but any other time they step out of line." Mike Loftus.

"If a man beats his wife then who in the world will keep house, cook, etc?

P. S. Did you ever see a man at 8:30 a. m. who can't find his shirt, breakfast, etc?" Ruby Arnold.

"But definitely. The cave men did and they had no more trouble with their wives. A gentle club wrapped neatly around the wife's head might even cure her headaches." Jack Sharpe.

"Yes, if his wife is bigger than he is and threatens to take the wind out of his sails. It gives the husband a sporting chance. They say the woman is the weaker sex, but I have an uncle who received two broken ribs and a fractured skull when his wife threw him down the basement steps. Yes, a man must beat his wife in self-defense." L. M. Sneed.

"No. They should get a divorce if they can't live together like normal human beings." Nina DeBerry.

"Yes. Why not?" Ike Rolader

"In moderation. Moderation but broadness should be the goal. Mr. Sharpe's cave man observation is more significant than might be realized." Bob

"Certainly not. Can wives be that much of a nuisance?" Emanuel.

Rachel Taylor and Gay Williams.

"Those wives who can't cook, can't keep house and raise young 'uns should be beaten. Also they should stay away from bridge parties and gossip sessions and accept the consequences." Jim Amos.

"When a man comes in, tired out after a hard day's work who else can he beat?" Bill Bragaw.

"It just depends. Some women deserve it, but so do some men!" Dee Oakey.

"An obvious answer to an obvious question — treat'em rough and they'll love you. Based upon such time tested philosophy, my marriage has been an overwhelming success." Ed Davenport.

Results of the presidential balloting will be announced in next Tuesday's column.

Write Away

Under Mundt Bill

Editor:

A careful study of the Mundt Bill convinces me that if it should become law, reformers and left-wingers who advocate changes in our government in the direction of socialist "regimentation" will do so at their own peril.

But surely not if we propose such changes as amendments to the Constitution? one may ask.—That will not save you my progressive friend. See section 4 (a) of the Bill, which makes it unlawful in any manner to attempt to establish a totalitarian dictatorship under foreign control.

But we do not want to establish such a totalitarian dictatorship you protest.—You err, comrade. All you Communists, through your world-wide revolutionary movement, intend to establish a communist totalitarian dictatorship in all the countries of the world. See section 2 (3) of the Bill.

Wait! Wait! you howl. We are not communists!—Really? Then how do you explain the fact that you have contributed to strike funds, have incited racial strife by advocating equality for Negroes and have spread propaganda calculated to undermine established government? These typical communist methods are covered, I believe, by section 2 (6).

But these acts are not illegal and do not prove us to be Communists.—All right, let's examine you by the incriminating criteria of section 3 (3). You express anti-capitalistic views; you agree with the Soviet Union that member-nations of the Security Council of the UN should contribute equally to a world police force; you have been seen talking with a Communist. There is no need to go on; only some of the ten criteria need be considered. You can certainly be found to be Communists, whether you are or not. But why should you mind: if you will cease advocating social and political reform, you will not be molested. Of course you will have to register with the Attorney-General as a communist political organization; you cannot hold Federal jobs; you cannot obtain passports; and you must make an annual report to the government of all money received and expended.

In short, if you feel (as I do) that such fascistic legislation is outrageous, you had best start working against it.

Robertson's Raving

Editor:

I should like to take this opportunity to say that the raving of one Bill Robertson are an abomination in the face of intelligent citizens of this nation. While he attacks a phrase coined by the late Dr. Joseph Goebbels, he practices the principles of the same person; viz., that the bigger a lie is the easier it will be to make a few people believe it, and, if one shouts it long and loud enough, most of the people will believe it.

Could it be that the intellectual horizons of Mr. Robertson's mind are so narrow that he can write of nothing but the faults of our socio-economic system while, at the same time, he exalts that of the Russians? This person, for one, tires of hearing the same old record played over and over again.

I am not so concerned with the fact that Mr. Robertson, who seems to me to be a typical seeker of notoriety, was foolish enough to fall for communist propaganda (the Russian brand of which is neither Marxist, nor Leninesque, nor even true communism, but a repugnant form of totalitarianism), as I am with the number of others who, either thought ignorance or desire for personal gain at the expense of a small minority, might also embrace the false and impractical political-socio-economic system of communism, the philosophy of which robs man of the very things which make him human and, at the same time, give him value, i. e., his personality and his soul.

Mr. Churchill and a great many other "aristocrats" fought either on the home front or on the battlefield to make it possible for persons like Mr. Robertson to have the freedom of speech with which he slanders them. I wonder how long he could criticize the government and economic system of Russia if he were in that country or any of the countries behind "the iron curtain," the existence of which he denies.

The activities of Mr. Robertson, and other Communists like him only serve to stir up class hatred and intolerance which weakens our government at home and, therefore, serves to embarrass and discredit it abroad. Can it be that Mr. Robertson is such a messiah (Nay, he would have to be the Messiah Himself.), that he can achieve the "brotherhood of Man" in such a manner? We can will never gain an objective that will be beneficial to anyone, save the demagogue.

Tar Heel Trackmen Complete Dual Meet Season Against Duke This Afternoon

Carolina Strength Rests in Distances, Hurdles, High Jump

By Larry Fox

Carolina's track team will be aiming to close out its dual meet season in grand fashion this afternoon when the Tar Heels meet Duke over at Durham beginning at 3:30.

The Blue Devils will probably be favored to cop the event, but Carolina has a very good chance of coming out on top in the season's finale. A delegation of tracksters will run in the IC4A meet next week, but the Duke contest will ring down the curtain on the 1948 outdoor campaign.

A quartet of field events will inaugurate the festivities at 3:30 with the discus, broad jump, and mile run getting off half an hour later. The remainder of the running event will be held at 10--minute intervals.

Counting on Magill, Miller

Sam Magill and Jimmy Miller will be carrying the main burden for the Tar Heels along with Bob Seligman, and the corps of hurdlers and high jumpers who will score most of the Tar Heels' points.

Magill and Miller will both double in the mile and two-mile and should take the first two places in those events over the weak Duke distance entries. This will probably be Miller's last race in Carolina livery.

Bob Seligman will be defending his Conference discus title this afternoon. He will face his main opposition in Jim O'Leary, who came in second in the discus last week. O'Leary set a new record in winning the shot put with a toss of 50' 7". He will be favored to triumph in that event today.

Dick Taylor, Bob Morrow, and Hunter Heggie will be carrying the Blue and White standard in the low hurdles. The same trio will compete in the high hurdles along with Ted Schultz. Taylor is the Conference champion in the 120-yard highs. Bill Scupine and Bob Baer are the top timbertoppers for the Devils and both are running their final race for the Durham institution.

The Tar Heels should shut out Duke in the high jump with Jack Moody and conference champ Bill Joyner heading the Carolina list. Doug Smith also ought to place in the event. Doug Ausbon, Duke basketball captain, will compete in this event in addition to running in the dashes and a leg on the relay team. Ausbon will wind up his college cinder career today.

Barrel-chested Roger Neighborgall will be running his last meet for Duke this afternoon and the Blue Devil great, who has won three individual titles, will close out the meet today when he runs the anchor leg on the mile relay team. Neighborgall will also run in the 440 and 880 and will be favored to triumph in both events.

Outfielders for Big Four Champs

Eight Players in Home Finale Against Blue Devils Tomorrow

Eight members of Carolina's baseball team will be making their last appearance on Emerson field tomorrow when the Tar Heels, already Big Four champions, will face Duke in an attempt to even the four-game series in the last home game of the season. The Blue Devils are currently holding two decisions out of three over the local crew.

Jim Hamilton and Jim Hayworth, co-captains of the 1948 squad, Kenny Black, Frank Jones, John Gregory, Dallas Branch, Emmett Cheek, and Buster Stevenson are the eight men who will not be back next year.

Seeking Conference Title

With the Big Four crown already tucked away, Coach Bunn Hearn's squad will be seeking to gain the Southern conference title. However, whether or not the Chapel Hillians can take the title depends on the outcome of other games in the loop. Maryland is currently leading the circuit with a 4-1 record and will play VMI this afternoon.

Vinnie DiLorenzo, probably the best left-hander in the Big Four, has been named to start for the Tar Heels in the Duke contest. Although two of his three losses this year were to the Dukesters, DiLo did stop a Blue Devil rally when the Chapel Hillians copped a 6-5 decision. However, Frank Robinson was credited with that win.

Curtis To Pitch

Al Curtis, freshman workhorse for the Devils, will probably face DiLorenzo on the mound. Curtis, who pitched only five innings of the Duke-State game Wednesday, but was credited with the loss, has a 4-1 pitching record thus far this season.

Soccer Squad Plays Practice Game Today

Carolina students will have their first chance to see the 1948 edition of the soccer team this afternoon when they play a group of South American students from N. C. State in a practice game at 4 o'clock on the intramural field.

This will be the last day of Spring practice for the booters and it should be an important test to determine their strength for next year. Coach Allen has been driving his charges rather hard through fundamentals and scrimmages.

Several new faces will be seen among the returning squadmen from last year. Allen would not praise any individual, but rather the efforts of the entire group.

Chi O Wins Coed Softball Tourney

Behind 11 runs after two innings of play in the finals of the coed intramural softball tournament yesterday, Chi Omega unleashed a terrific batting assault to erase the deficit and gain a narrow 16-15 victory over Kenan dorm yesterday.

Kenan started strong its first time at the plate and tallied 11 big runs before the Chi O's even got a chance to bat. Chi O countered once in their half of the first and once more in the second. The Kenan softballers scored twice in top of the second to make the score 13-2.

Holding Kenan scoreless in the next two frames, Chi Omega got back into the ball game by pushing a total of ten runs across the plate. The dormitory lassies increased their lead by two in the fifth, but a four-run rally by Chi O cemented the victory and the championship. The winning run was scored by Barbara Ann Covington before anyone was retired.

K. D. Durham did the chunking for Chi O and Sarah Walker and Elsie Lee shared the mound chores for Kenan.

Kappa Sigs Record Top Rifle Scores

Concurrent with the opening of the intramural softball playoffs, it was revealed that the Kappa Sigma rifle team posted the highest individual scores of the tourney in defeating Alexander dorm for the campus championship Tuesday night.

John Gambill, high scorer for the winners with a mark of 252 points, was the high man for all participants by the narrow margin of one point over his teammate, Earl Spaugh, who recorded a mark of 251.

High scorer for the losing dormitory entry, Alexander, K. P. Lindsley fired the high total for the dormitory division with a 249 point total.

Other members of the winning fraternity foursome were Conway Rose and Warren S. Perry, Nick Sowell, Bob Payne, and Bob Blankenship completed the losing quartet.

In the opening round of the title playoffs the action was thick and fast as four games were reeled off. The battle of the Grad schools, Med and Law, for the title of League three was taken rather easily by the medicine men 12-5. They jumped off to an early lead and sewed things up with four runs in the sixth to win going away.

Emerson came from behind with a big seven run rally in the sixth frame to edge by Lewis 1 to move into the finals of the dormitory division. They trailed 14-9 before their outburst.

Feature game in the fraternity play saw Zeta Psi bang out a 2-0 victory over Pi Lamb on the strength of some sparkling no-hit pitching by Sam Mordecai. He twirled some neat ball over a six inning route.

PiKA 2 set down Phi Gam 3 in the tightest tilt of the day 6-2.

Cage Drills End

Coach Tom Scott will send his Carolina cagers through their last regular day of spring practice this afternoon as the end of the training season draws to a close.

Tomorrow afternoon a regular, full-length scrimmage will be staged between the prospective candidates for the 1948-49 team and members of last season's outfit. This game will get underway at 1:45 in order not to interfere with the Duke-Carolina baseball game.

Alexander Pulls Upset In Sedgfield Tourney

Greensboro, May 20 — Heath Alexander of the University of North Carolina pulled a major upset here this afternoon when he defeated fifth-seeded Randolph Gregson in the second round of the Sedgefield Inn Tennis tournament.

It took the full three sets for the Tar Heel to defeat his opponent, who holds the Gulf Coast and the Arkansas singles championships. Alexander took the first set after a hard struggle, 6-4, but fell before Gregson easily in the second canto, 6-1.

Alexander, who played in the sixth position for the Carolina varsity tennis team, took the final set, 6-3, and thus advanced into the third round where he will probably meet Vinni Rurac, Rumanian singles titleholder.

Alexander's backhand was working well this afternoon and if he continues his heads up play he stands a fair chance of advancing to the finals.

Clark Taylor, number two man on the Carolina varsity, moved into the quarterfinals this afternoon by virtue of his straight set victory over Norman Wiley. The scores were 6-2, 6-4.

Wiley had defeated Paul Keenan, a member of Carolina's jayvee net squad, earlier this afternoon in the second round, 6-3, 6-1. Les Dameron, who also wielded a racquet for the Tar Heel juniors, lost his second match in straight sets. Buddy Adair of Washington, D. C. defeated Dameron, 6-3, 6-1.

Doubles play in the tournament will begin here tomorrow with the combination of Dick Savitt, of Cornell, and Rurac seeded first. Savitt was the only player to defeat Vic Seixas during the regular season. But for doctor's orders, the two would probably have met in this tourney. Seixas was ranked first, but was forced to withdraw due to his recent illness.

Taylor and Dick Covington of Washington, D. C. are seeded second in the doubles action. Alexander and Duke Wilder are teaming up in an all-Carolina doubles pair.

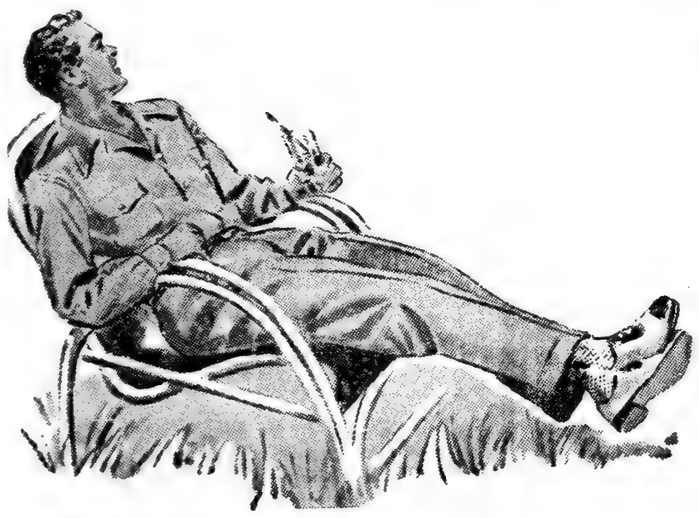
Seven Awards Given To Mural Standouts

Seven intramural awards for general excellence and outstanding achievement in athletics were presented to University of North Carolina students and campus organizations at the annual Awards Night yesterday.

George Byrum, Edenton, and Boo Walker, Charlotte, received outstanding intramural managers awards in the fraternity and dormitory divisions, respectively. The Chi Psi rifle trophy went to Hugh Jenkins, Gastonia, manager of Kappa Sigma rifle team, who also was the recipient of the Reserve Officers' Association all-campus rifle trophy.

B. K. Grow, Jr., Raleigh, received the Kappa Sigma track trophy for the Sigma Chi fraternity, and the Intramural Debate trophy went to Dortch Warriner, Lawrenceville, Va., and Marshall Pinnix, of Oxford, representatives of Whitehead dormitory.



The annual Delta Kappa Epsilon award for excellence in intramural athletics and scholarship was awarded the Sigma Chi fraternity, presentation being made by Howard W. Walters of Ocala, Fla.

Other athletic awards included the presentation of the Patterson medal for excellence in athletics to Jim Camp, football star from Schoolfield, Va., and the Foy Roberson, Jr., award for contribution to team morale in basketball to Taylor Thorne, Rocky Mount.

Court Suits Predicted On Negro Admissions

Raleigh, May 20—An attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People predicted yesterday that one or more suits will be filed soon in federal district court in an effort to compel the state to open graduate schools at the University of North Carolina to Negro students.

At a meeting held here Monday, the University's executive committee declined to consider applications from five Negroes, stating that it was powerless under the law to do so.

Herman L. Taylor of Raleigh, head of the North Carolina Legal committee of the NAACP, said that conferences are now under way leading up to the proposed suits. He said that he had talked with James Robert Walker of Statesville and Harold Thomas Epps of Asheville, Negro law students at North Carolina college in Durham, who have applied for admission to the University Law school; and with James E. Thomas of Raleigh, who has applied for admission to the Medical school.

However, Taylor said that he did not know Dewey M. Clayton, III, of Timberlake, Route 1, who has applied for admission to the Medical school, or James H. Henderson of Vance, who has notified University registration officials of his intention to apply for the Medical school.

The attorney was conferring here with some of the students involved in the matter.

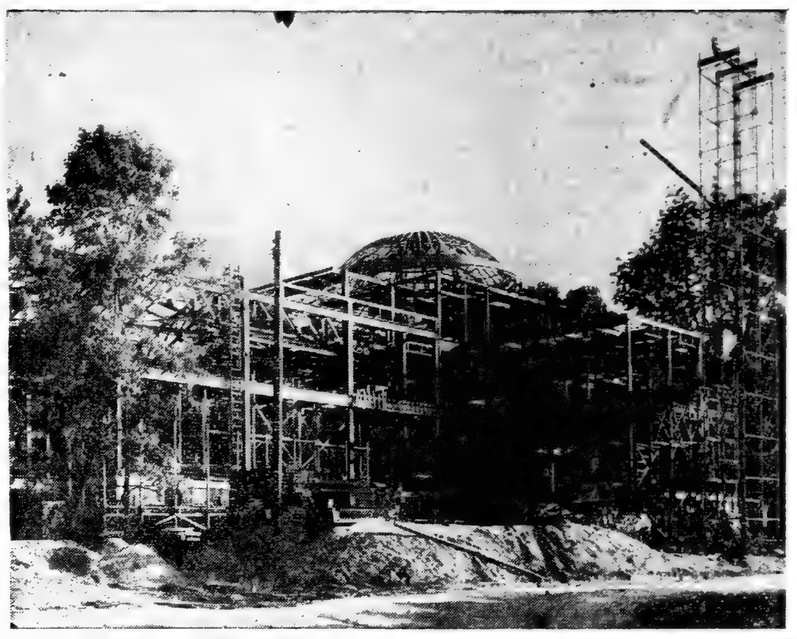
ADA Will Make 'Factual Report' On Candidates

"Factual reports" on the candidates seeking the Democratic nominations for the various state and county offices in the May 29 primary will be made at a meeting of the Chapel Hill chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action to be held in 105 Caldwell hall at 8 o'clock next Thursday night.



The purpose of these reports will be "to acquaint any voters interested enough to attend the meeting with the records and qualifications of the several candidates for each office rather than to advocate the election or defeat of any particular candidates," the announcement said.

"Emphasis will be placed upon the candidates for the less prominent offices since the average voter is already likely to be more familiar with the records and promises of the candidates for the major nominations."

The meeting will be open to the public and all citizens are invited. Members of the Durham chapter of the ADA are also invited.

The reports are being prepared by a committee of which Walter Spearman is chairman. C. B. Robeson is president of the Chapel Hill chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action. Fletcher Green is the vice-president, and Henry Lewis the secretary-treasurer.

Planetarium Strike Settlement Made As Laborers Return To Construction

THE MOREHEAD PLANETARIUM was back on its way toward completion yesterday morning as union laborers began coming back to work following a tempoary settlement of the A. F. of L.-Jones Construction company wage dispute. The men had been on strike for 11 days. Above is a picture of the building in its present stage of construction, just as the strikers left it a week ago last Monday. More workers are expected back on the $2,000,000 job this morning, according to union officials. When completed, the building will house the $75,000 Zeiss projection instrument and John Motley Morehead's $250,000 art collection. (Photo courtesy Durham Herald)

Union Will Accept 12, One-Half Cent Temporary Raise

By Jim Dickson

The 11-day-old strike at Morehead planetarium ended at 7:30 yesterday morning as A. F. of L. union workers returned to their jobs here and at other J. A. Jones Construction company projects in this area.

An agreement was reached late Thursday at a meeting in Durham between union officials and E. J. Kratt, vice-president of the Jones company, wherein striking cement finishers and hoisting engineers would receive a 12 1-2 cents per hour wage increase.

Iron workers are accepting the 12 1-2 cents increase pending further negotiations between Jones company representatives and J. A. Downs, national union executive, who was expected to arrive in Durham yesterday.

About half of the 125 workers involved in the planetarium walkout returned to their jobs yesterday. A company supervisor said many of the workers "probably haven't heard about the agreement" and said the full crew is not expected until today.

The walkout occurred on May 10 with hoisting engineers seeking a 37 1-2 cents per hour pay boost and other unions striking for 25 cents per hour increases.

Jones projects other than the planetarium which resumed normal activity yesterday include a Liggett and Myers cigarette factory in Durham, the new library addition and physics building at Duke university, and the Burlington Mills project at Neuse in Wake county.

Jewish Planes Raid Arab Legions; UN Peace Moves Suffer Set-Back

Palestine, May 21 — (UP) — Today the Jews threw their infant air force into the Palestine fighting in an effort to turn the tide of battle.

The Jews report that their planes raided strong points of the Arab legion northwest of here and returned to their base unharmed. Meanwhile, reports on ground fighting indicate that the outnumbered Jews are in a desperate position. Arab sources claim that 4,000 Jews are almost encircled in the old walled section of Jerusalem.

A late report from Haifa indicates that the big port city will soon become another battle-zone. British troops are reported to be getting out earlier than expected and 5,000 young Jews were called up today for special defense projects.

United Nations efforts to bring a quick and easy peace to the Holy Land suffered a serious setback today. The UN Truce commission reported that there can be no Palestine peace unless a World Army is sent into the Middle East.

In an urgent cable to the United Nations Security council, the commission reports that it has battled against terrible odds to bring some semblance of a truce in the current war. However, it reports that its members have been fired on and injured and efforts to bring peace have failed.

The commission told the council that it has two alternatives, to use force or be prepared for an Arab-Jewish fight--to-the-finish.

State Briefs

Albright Says He Is Positive He Will Be In Primary Runoff

Raleigh, May 21 — (UP) — Gubernatorial Candidate Mayne Albright said today he is positive he will be one of the two candidates in a run-off primary.

He said people all over the state expect a close vote on May 29 and that new evidence of mounting support from all points in the state was revealed at the state convention yesterday.

The young candidate said flatly that he would not even discuss throwing his support to any opponent in case he runs third in the primary. He said he will run better than third and does not have any intention of hitching his campaign to any machine or other candidate.

Scott on Surplus

Roxboro, May 21 — (UP) — Candidate for Governor W. Kerr Scott said today that he is against issuing a single state bond until the state's huge surplus has been put to work. He said that taxes now piled up in banks without interest should be used for the purposes for which they were collected. Scott said he not only is against issuing bonds, but he believes there is no need to increase taxes in order to pay for increased state servics.

Forest Fire

Asheville, May 21 — (UP) — A 3,000-acre forest fire was raging out of control today in Buck and Rich Mountain forests. The forest service completed a fire line around the racing flames and issued an appeal for 500 volunteer fire fighters. Officers said several summer homes have been burned. The flames roared to within half a mile of the resort community of Cedar Mountain before they were slowed. Forest service officers said this was the 42nd day without rain and that green timber was burning as if soaked in gasoline.

ERP Tobacco

Rock Mount, May 21 — (UP) —Senatorial Candidate J. M. Broughton stated today that the fact that tobacco has been included in the European Relief Program should assure a strong demand and fairly high price for the 1948 season.

He said that foreign demand together with the substantial acreage cut will remove within the next year or two the surpluses which have threatened the whole price structure in past seasons. Broughton warned, however, that the promise of good tobacco prices must not interfere with development of a more diversified farm program in the state.

AQUINAS CLUB

The Aquinas club will conclude its social program for the year at a Trinity Sunday Communion breakfast tomorrow morning following the 8 o'clock mass at the Carolina Inn.

All Catholic students are reminded that this will be the last Sunday to make their Easter Duty and all are urged to attend. Reservations may be placed with Andy Lavin in Everett dormitory or Rudy Troper in Old West.

Bob Perry Is Elected New Sigma Nu Prexy

Bob Perry, graduate law student from Greensboro, was elected Commander of Sigma Nu fraternity for the coming year at the chapter's annual elections held last Wednesday night.

Other officers elected for the year were: Bill White, Lenoir, lieutenant commander; Carl Worsley, Tarboro, recorder; Ward Peacock, Chapel Hill, treasurer; John Spinks, Jr., Winston-Salem, reporter and alumni contact officer; Emmett Jacobs, Lynchburg, Va., marshall; Robert Crinshaw McDaniel, Salisbury, sentinel; Jess Dedmond, Cliffside, chaplain; and Jimm Manning, Asheboro, historian.

Perry served in the Navy V-12 unit at the University for two years prior to going overseas, where he served on Guam for six months. He returned to the University after being discharged and completed his undergraduate work in the School of Commerce.

After taking over the commander's chair, Perry presented a gift to outgoing commander, Elton Forehand, representative of the chapter's appreciation of his outstanding work during the past year.

Perry stated that his primary goal during the next year would be to push plans for a new game-room which can be used advantageously after football games and dances. The new wing is expected to reach completion in 1950.

Debate Council Answers Charges In Di Bill Condemning Policies

Sociology Survey Being Conducted On Town Matters

Forty-five students in Sociology 174 are conducting a poll in Chapel Hill this weekend, to ascertain the opinions of citizens on several questions of local interest.

The sampling plan is similar to that used by the well-known poll conductors on the national scene; but this poll will reach a larger proportion of the population than are able to reach in any given area. About one-eighth of the names of adults in the community (including the suburbs) were taken at random from the recent census cards, and will be interviewed by the students.

SQUARE DANCE TONIGHT

There will be a square dance at the Presbyterian church tonight at 8 o'clock. Mountain music will be featured, for "running sets" and western style "squares."

Specific Replies Are Enumerated In Council's Statement

The Debate council replied yesterday to charges made by members of the Dialectic Senate when the Di resoultion was passed Wednesday night condemning policies and actions of the council this year.

According to a statement released by James Taylor, executive secretary of the council, the body felt that some reply should be made to the "irresponsible charges levelled at this body in a report emanating from the Dialectic Senate in executive session."

A spokesman for the Debate council announced last night that William B. Aycock, faculty representative and adviser to the Debate council, had resigned due to "pressing work in the Law school." The council appointed Professor G. A. Barrett of the Commerce school to replace Aycock.

"It is unfortunate that such statements were made in closed session without the benefit of any official explanation of the actions of the council," the statement said. "The actions of the Debate council have at all times been open to the fullest scrutiny of the student body or any member thereof, and, upon request, a complete and accurate explanation of any decision of the council will be made to any student organization."

The council stand went on to answer specific charges which were listed in yesterday's Daily Tar Heel. The statement answered each charge separately:

"(1) Only three contestants, not seven as reported, withdrew from the Willie P. Mangum oratorical contest.

"(2) Mr. Barrett was not 'ousted' from the Debate council. The council has the highest regard for his ability and integrity.

"(3) Faculty advisors were elected at the meeting following the election of student members. The debating season was over; not "in the middle of the season" as reported.

Student Deadline June 1 for Filing Aid Applications

All students who wish to hold scholarships, part-time jobs or to receive any other forms of financial assistance through the University Student Aid office for the coming summer sessions or the coming school year must file an application for aid on or before June 1.

Students who are now working or who are holding scholarships and who have filed applications previously will be required to file a supplemental student aid application. Those students who have never filed an application, whether they are now working or not, must file a complete student aid application before any assignment will be made to them.

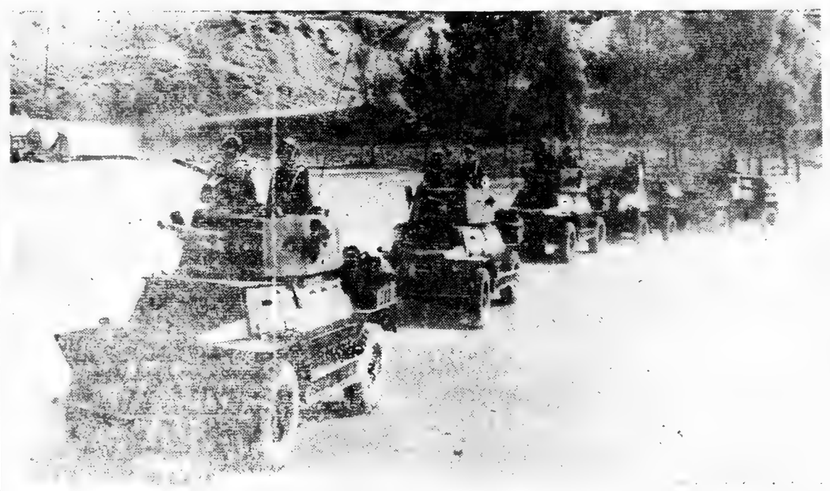
Applications may be obtained in the Student Aid office, 302 South building, at any time during regular office hours. Applications must be filed on or before June 1. Each student will be notified by letter of the action taken on his application around July 1.

Religious Week Plans Will Be Made Monday

Seventy-five representatives to the committee for Religion in Life Week will meet Monday in th upstairs lobby of the YMCA to formulate plans for the religious emphasis week which will take place next January.

Jim McAllister, chairman of the group said yesterday that a statement of the purpose for the week would be made at this opening meeting. Following will be the introduction of committee chairman who will in turn outline the responsibilities of each of their groups: program, classroom appointments, organized houses, worship, hospitality, publicity, and finance.

Following a short report on last year's religion week program, Bob Barrus, acting secretary of the YMCA, will give a brief talk on the possibilities of Religion in Life Week next year. Plans for securing speakers for the CRIL-sponsored event will be discussed.



Seven Intramural Prizes Are Given To Organizations on Awards Night

Seven intramural awards for general excellence and outstanding achievements in athletics were presented to University of North Carolina students and campus organizations at the annual Awards Night Tuesday.

George Byrum, Edenton, and T. E. Walker, Charlottee, received outstanding intramural managers awards in the fraternity and dormitory divisions, respectively. The Chi Psi rifle trophy went to Hugh Jenkins, Gastonia, manager of Kappa Sigma rifle team, who also was the recipient of the Reserve Officers' Association all-campus rifle trophy.

B. K. Grow, Jr., Raleigh, received the Kappa Sigma track trophy for the Sigma Chi fraternity, and the Intramural Debate trophy, went to Dortch Warriner, Lawrenceville, Va., and Marshall Pinnix, of Oxford, representatives of Whitehead dormitory.

The annual Delta Kappa Epsilon award for excellence in intramural athletics and scholarship was awarded the Sigma Chi fraternity, presentation being made by Howard W. Walters of Ocala, Fla.

ARMORED CARS OF KING ABDULLAH'S Arab legion are shown maneuvering near the Palestine border. Recent communiques from Haganah headquarters have reported such motorized units rolling out of Trans-Jordan to attack frontier towns or to join in assaults on vital highways. One report told of artillery and infantry units spearheaded by the cars. This British-trained army is the most efficient of the Arab forces. (International)

Air ROTC Gets Annual Inspection; Results May Be Ready in Two Weeks

The Air ROTC unit of the University received its annual general inspection on Wednesday, May 19.

The inspection was conducted by inspector general, Colonel J. B. Buck, 14th US Air Force headquarters, Orlando, Florida. Assisting Colonel Buck in the inspection were: Lt. Col. George Williams, air inspector, 14th US Air Force headquarters, Col. A. A. McNamee, Florida military district, Jacksonville, Lt. Col. J. A. Cook, 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, and Lt. Col. O. D. Lysought, Birmingham, Alabama.

According to Captain Holmes, public relations officer for the University Air program, these inspections are made every spring at colleges and universities where the program is in operation, for the purpose of rating the schools on their efficiency in adapting the program to their regular curriculum. It usually takes two weeks or more for a school to receive its rating after the inspection has been completed Captain Holmes added.

The group arrived early Wednesday morning and inspected Major Freer's class in meterology and Technical Sergeant Hill's class in automatic weapons. The unit's records and administrative procedure were also inspected during the morning.

At one o'clock the group was officially welcomed to the University by Chancellor House. Colonel Buck expressed his appreciation for the cooperation that had been shown by all concerned in.

Civil Rights - A Timid Program

We dropped by Hill hall last Thursday evening to hear Mrs. M. E. Tilly, a member of the President's committee on Civil Rights talk under the aegis of the American Veterans Committee, and we think we learned a few things.

We heard how conservative, how logical, the civil rights program proposed by President Truman really is, and what the need for these and many more such measures is. Mrs. Tilly said that if the Southern old-liners hadn't stormed off in such a hurry, progressive leaders and many Negro groups would probably have censured the President for presenting such a "timid" program.

She thinks this Southern "revolt" is unreal, a superficial reaction that will not last, but looking at the headlines this week about the actions of Democratic conventions throughout the South, we wondered if Mrs. Tilly conceives of the monumental ignorance of the real significance and worth of the President's proposals. For how many are aware of these things?

Looking around the hall as she spoke, we noted the fairly large audience that had gathered to listen. And we marked the faces — the familiar faces.

For those people there were, with scattered exceptions, the same vitally interested group that goes to most of these and similar sessions about the campus. Their unflagging interest is to be praised, but those Mrs. Tilly was really talking to were you and me, fellow. And you were not there. This isn't so praiseworthy, for this subject is one that vitally involves us all, especiall in the South. Maybe next time you'll make it, huh? Yeh, I know, you'll think about it tomorrow.

On Freshmen Leaders

We had a pleasant chat with one of the Freshmen BM OC's last night and we were rather surprised at his attitude.

To be rather blunt about it, it seems that he feels that the freshmen are not ready for Student Government, because they are not mature enough and have not wholeheartedly supported the ventures of the Freshmen leaders. In the words of our Freshman leader they are not ready for participation in our campus life or our campus government. They are too young and they don't know a good thing when they see it!

Fortunately for us the exact reverse has been evident to our eyes. This year's Freshmen class has far surpassed many of their predecessors in brilliance, activity and leadership. Carolina certainly has hope for the future if we continue to have the calibre of Freshmen that we have had since the war.

The criticism of this particular freshman may have been brought about by many factors. One of which is that our new Freshmen leaders have become, perhaps too dazzled by their importance in their association with the upper class wheels and have forgotten their own folks. Another factor may have been the fault of the upper-classmen in purveying too much of our "veteran cynicism" to the freshmen who were not so fortunate as to have been selected to represent their class. No matter where the fault lies, this fact is evident and that the Freshmen leaders are disappointed in their own class-mates — for not voting, for not backing them etc.

But truly, have the Freshmen forsaken their leaders or have their leaders forsaken the Freshmen class? Who has bowed down to the upper-class idol and have thought they themselves were one of the chosen because they have been smiled upon? Is it not possible that their associations within activities of all kinds alongside veteran campus wheels have so turned their heads that they no longer deign to mix or look to the interest of their own?

It is our hope that the rising freshman class will remember this short diatribe when their new freshman class comes to Carolina next fall. For then the present class will be the upper-classmen!

Party Party Party

We learn with disapproval that the Grail, one of the leading organizations on campus, is having a party. We always labored under the delusion that the campus looked up to such groups as the Grail and the Golden Fleece for leadership and to set a good example of the proper way to behave and live under a student government and in a campus community. It was very disappointing to us yesterday afternoon when someone revealed that the Grail was sponsoring a party at Sparrow's Pool. We should be able to expect better things from a supposedly outstanding group of leaders. It's not the party that bothers us, naturaly, but the least we can expect from one of the outstanding organizations on campus is that they have a WET party.

Group Poop

He Claims We Got It

By Raney Stanford

(Note: This article will come to you coherently through the kindness and munificence of the Almighty, because only He can take credit for anything constructive accomplished by the writer or the night proof-readers.)

"The best brains of all go to Graham Memorial."

This is the conclusion you should come to after reading a survey of college newspapers written by Armand Scwab, Jr. for the latest issue of Varsity magazine. After much laughing up the sleeve at the "typical" campus paper with its dull announcements, jumbled make-up, gossip columns, and "keep off the grass" editorials; he somehow comes to the conclusion that "collegiate journalism has shown itself to possess tremendous vitality. On the whole it is the healthiest, livliest, and hardest-thinking element in college life today—and its undergraduate editors include. . .some of the most talented young men and women in the country."

Varsity cites the University of California's Daily Californian, the Harvard Crimson, the Daily Princetonian, the University of Texas' Daily Texan, and the Syracuse Daily Orange as "professional, mature publications." O. K. gentlemen, we ain't bitter. After all, fame is nothing, really. . .

These papers were chosen because of their colorful news and feature presentations, and columns and editorials that "mean something", is the way it is put.

In explaining what it is to "mean something", the author goes into the question of subject matter for college papers and quotes one student journalist as saying national and world events "don't concern college students." Well, even if we aren't mentioned by Varsity, we feel a little different about that over in this corner. We think little enough about goings on in the world as it is, and if there is some way to bing to each the concern of all, maybe we have done a little something. For everthing concerns us—O. K., sit down, I'm not going to drag John Donne in here, you get the gist.

The article also delves into the controversial questions of policy control and finances. The writer says that in getting material from one editor he had to write him at his home address to keep him from getting into trouble with the college administration. Now around here we are notoriously free from such difficulties. Some have even said we are infamously free from them. Anyway, we are practically only subject to the rulings of whatever common sense and good taste we can scrape up. This has its disadvantages as well as its advantages, for after all, we are rank novices at the game, and many's the time we can use a little experienced advice. It's a personal opinion here that this paper should be in technicalities supervised by the Journalism department, while still using all interested talent on the campus, and retaining policy control in the hands of the student editors. But I better get out of here, the ice is getting thin.

In finances, quite a portentous subject right now, Varsity notes that "financial independence is apparently the only basis for editorial independence." and points out the Yale Daily News, with its own building and separate subscription methods as the ideal set-up.

In regards to the paper's content, Scwab comes to the conclusion that looks sound from here, that its main problem is staff skill interest. Which goes right straight to campus interest. Every year the Daily Tar Heel starts off with a bustling mob of people, who melt away most amazingly as soon as the Yackety-Yack has taken its staff photos for the year book. It's your paper, and if you don't like it, come down with your head on and your pencil in your hand and change it.

Big Cheer For Factotum

It has been some time that we, who have watched an idea grow to reality, have waited for Factotum. And now that this privately owned little mag has hit the campus, we take pause to read it as a book, an artistic unity, so to evaluate it.

Yes, we think those behind this publication deserve a rousing hand for realizing an idea, for working hard for that realization. Editors Ramsey, Hardison, and Honig have done a job. But also we must consider Factotum as literature, to criticize it, and to forget that its very publication is noteworthy.

Taken as a whole, you really can't miss for thirty-five cents. Factotum, as a literary magazine is a real success. Incorporating the works of sixteen writers and poets, established and aspiring, it presents a nice balance.

In their foreword, the editors make it known that they intend to publish again, only when quality of work permits. Judging from this first issue, their ideas of quality are sound yardsticks, for rarely do we find Factotum slipping, and then only from the heights to higher ground. The general quality of the work here printed is well above not only what was to be expected, but also above what we find peddled about as literature in our time. In several spots this magazine rings the bell, and rings it hard.

About the time you get warmed up to the magazine, you come across several poems by J. C. Davis, a teacher of romance languages in Washington. Mr. Davis here offers two beautiful sonnets on love. The first of these is only to be bettered by the second, which will go down in our little black book in indelible ink. We could hardly get past page seven, for this sonnet on a dead love is a gem, beautiful in thought, perfect in word usage, and poignant in its figures. This poem takes top honors among much that is tops.

Close behind it comes a short story by Morton Seif on an overworked subject, but subtly yet forcefully done. Mr. Seif takes four pages to usher you into the presence of the anti-Semitic issue with grace and alarming insight. None of the sock-em-in-the-jaw Gentlemen's Agreement cathartic, this is a subtle story laid in any town, dealing with young people, young love, and an old prejudice. Gregory Peck doesn't feel it all over the screen, and make you feel it, Mr. Seif lets you feel it as a hand caressing the cheek that it suddenly slaps.

Editor Paul Ramsey comes in for praises on his short story, "Swimmer, Go!" which as an atmosphere piece seems to capture perfectly its boys and girls at a swimming pool. It's not too many years back for most of us to remember, and Mr. Ramsey appears to have remembered vividly. For this story takes us right out of eight-o'clock classes and beer parties to the days we spent splashing in and flirting around the local pool.

Editor O. B. Hardison also comes through with a nice little sonnet called "Of Time and Moods" which merits a couple of re-readings at the least.

To round out the issue are several quite good poems by Laura Paris and Charles Eaton. Mr. Eaton turns out his usual fine but not brilliant lyrics, while Miss Paris really shows her talent in a choice five-line work.

Also included are a number of other good poems and a critical essay.

You really can't go wrong on Factotum for thirty-five cents.

Sheep? We Don't Know Any

By Dan Sapp

Those who have complained about village maintenance should have seen the maintenance men going to work Monday afternoon when the big rain came. They were out and about before the fain stopped falling, digging out drainage ditches and being generally helpful.

The council is still working at the community center project and plans are moving forward at a great rate.

The outdoor recreation problem in the village is being handled individually it appears. One enterprising citizen has cleared a spot of ground and set up a badminton court, and everybody is familar with the Jackson circle horse shoe center. Recently a horse complete with saddle, bridle, and other horse-like assessories was seen in the village, but we under stand that he was imported and is not a permanent resident.

The dog question is still raging fiercely. From what we gather, dogs are considered personal property only if taxes are paid on them, this has significance. Someone also brought up the problem of sheep, which as far as we're concerned isn't any problem at all as we don't know any. They were brought up, however, to prove a point which is concerned with what is to be done with dogs in the village, some of which are honest respectable tax paying dogs and some of which may not be. The council is and has been working on a solution and a workable set of regulations in respect to the dogs.

As a post-mortem on an item appearing in last week's column we had no intention of pointing out any one family as an offender in connection with the appearance of private lawns. If we left that impression and caused embarassment we are sorry.

You Missed A Good'un

Students who did not attend Hank Beebe's recital on Tuesday night missed an excellent performance. His program included music from classical, romantic and modern schools. He demonstrated both good technique and expression. More students might gain a really liberal education if they would attend some of the varied programs presented here.

The Pan-Hellenic council is making an attempt to improve the method of sorority rushing. The sororities should be congratulated for their attempt to correct unnecessary complications and decide on a fairer system of rushing. Maybe the IFC should take note.

Competition for the Willie P. Mangum medal was brought to a standstill as a result of disagreement within the Debate council. It is admirable that such an award has been set up again. If the Debate council is unable to agree, the plans should be carried out by some other group or individual.

The Y. Cabinet has big plans for a retreat just before school starts in September. Junior girls and all interested students are invited to camp with them at Camp Betty Hastings in Winston-Salem. Detailed plans and date can be obtained at the Y.

Welch Is Sophomore

Editor:

In regard to the letter "Adventure on a Bus" by Ed Welch in the Daily Tar Heel of May 15, we wish to make a statement to Mr. Welch.

It is evident, Mr. Welch, that you are a sophomore. We mean the word "sophomore" literally: "Soph" from the word "sophos" meaning "wise" and "more" being derived from the word "moron." Mr. Welch, you are a wise moron. The basic principles behind your viewpoints are wise, but your behavior on the bus was moronic. Such stupid actions do nothing except agitate a problem which cannot be solved overnight. To try to make trouble by disobeying the representatives of the company on whose buses you are riding and not complying with the requests of policemen who are representatives of your government is a very poor manner of solving any problem. Yes, we have a race problem here in the South, but such as you will never contribute one particle to its solution. You and your kind only serve to build tension and pressure between the two groups involved. When this problem is solved, it will be done by the common everyday citizen and not by a bunch of radicals. Mr. Welch, you are merely an agitator.

The Negro is not ready for such things as you advocate. The time will come when the Negro will be on an equal footing with the white man, but it will take time. It will take time for the Negro to become better adapted for the changes that occur and time for the white man to get ready for acceptance of the Negro. It will be a process of evolution and not revolution.

We repeat, Mr. Welch, this problem cannot be solved overnight, and you are stupidly agitating a problem that deserves more intelligent treatment.

Three Red Sweaters

Editor:

Attention: Mr. Robertson

Dear illustrious columnist (?)

We just happen to have three (3) bright red sweaters which we will kindly donate to you when you decide to wend your happy way back to Russia. If your supply is sufficient, we will donate these to the clothing drive, trusting that they will arrive in the hands of the underprivileged in Italy. We would like to propose a name for your column. Why not call it Pink Elephant; it's all a dream anyway. We also have a dull red necktie for editors who permit such tripe to clutter up the editorial page day after day.

If you do not have sufficient personnel capable of writing editorials of interest to the majority of the student body, give us more of Foo's asininity and crossword puzzles, which are at least amusing.

We are waiting with anticipation to see if you have the intestinal fortitude to publish this, which we seriously doubt.

Blue Hair Is Out

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood (UP)—Max Factor, makeup expert, hopes that Loretta Young's reign as queen of Hollywood is going to put a damper on those women who keep running to him for a smoky-blonde hair dye.

Miss Young, top actress of the year, is a medium-brownette. Factor can tell them firmly now. And they wouldn't want to be out of step, would they, hmmm?

"Four of the five actresses nominated for this year's Academy Award had dark hair, and the fifth, Dorothy McGuire, is a dark blonde," Factor pointed out. "I was very glad to see this. I hope it will encourage women to stick to natural hair-shades."

Too many ladies were crying for that gray-blue hair color that Lana Turner originated and Betty Hutton made popular.

"Very, very few women look good with it," Factor said dubiously. "Even Lana isn't wearing it any more.

"You have to have unusual blonde coloring and an ethereal complexion to look good with blue hair. Most of the women who want it, however, are sallow and pudgy.

"If nature had intended people to have smoky hair, she would have made some that way."

Factor has seen through his many years in Hollywood how the choice of an Academy Award winner influences women's hair styles, makeup and clothes for the next year.

Carolina Tracksters Top Duke, 81-50; Baseballers Meet Blue Devils Today

Local Thinclads Close Dual Meet Season With Top Performances in Four Events

Durham, May 21 — Coach Dale Ranson's high-flying Tar Heel tracksters proved here today that they were the true Conference champions by defeating Duke, 81-50, in their final dual meet of the season. One University record fell and three were tied as the Carolina speedsters copped ten first places to win the meet by a sizable margin.

Bob Seligman, Tar Heel weight man, had a good day today as he added four and one half inches to the old University shot record. Jim O'Leary, who recently broke the Conference record with a throw of 50 feet, seven inches, seemed to be off his mark and placed second to Seligman.

Pole Vault

The old record was tied in the pole vault when Henry Hickman, Rusty Russell and Duke's Bowles tied for first with a vault of 13 feet.

The Tar Heels did unexpectedly well in the dashes as well as in the distance races. Ted Schultz added five points to the Carolina cause as he breezed through a ten seconds 100-yard dash. Don Nelson, running in the 220, turned another mighty fast time for five points as he went the distance in 21.1 seconds. That time is the standing Conference record.

Shultz Ties Record

Ted Shultz turned in another conference-tying time in the low hurdles when he turned in a 23.5 seconds time for the 220 yards.

The Tar Heels swept the mile event, one of their strongest events. Jimmy Miller and Mark Burnham crossed the tape together as they turned in a time of 4:32.8. Julian MacKenzie followed right behind, placing third.

It was another clean sweep for the Chapel Hill squad in the high hurdles, with Dick Taylor leading the way. Following Taylor for second and third place points were Bob Morrow and Hunter Heggie. Winning time was 14.8.

Magill Wins Two-Mile

It was the same story in the two mile run as Sam Magill, Chuck Herty, and Dick Hunt crossed the line in that order. Magill finished the eight laps in 10:23.6.

Duke collected their few first place points in the 440, javelin, and 880. Roger Neighborgall, making his final appearance for the Blue Devils, completed the 880 in 1:58.8.

It was the Tar Heels best showing of the year, as several men bettered all their previous times and distances. Nelson, Schultz, Seligman, Hickman, and Russell all made their best showings of the year in downing the Dukesters.

Track Summary

Shot put — Seligman (C), O'Leary (D), Gardiner (D). 48' 5 and one-quarter inches. (New University record).

One-mile run — Tie between Miller and Burnham (both (UN C), MacKenzie (C). 4:32.8.

High jump — Tie for first between Moody (C), Saunders (C), Colvin (D). 6'1".

Two-mile run — Magill (C), Herty (C), Hunt (C). 10:23.6.

Broad jump — Moody (C), Ausbon (D), Bridge (D). 22'2".

220-yard low hurdles — Shultz (C), Scupino (D), Heggie (C). 0:23.5.

Pole vault — three-way tie for first between Hickman (C), Russell (C), Bowles (D). 13'0". (Tied University record).

Mile relay — won by Duke (Grisso, Davis, Young, Neighborgall). 3:22.7.

Final score: UNC 81; Duke 50

Fifteen years ago today — The Tar Heels defeated Duke, 2-1, for the Southern conference baseball championship title.

Squad Scrimmage Ends Cage Drills

Carolina's graduating basketballers will bang the hardwoods of Woollen gym for the last time this afternoon starting at 1:45 when the retiring veterans face the 1948-49 candidates in a wind-up scrimmage of spring drills.

Coach Tom Scott will send a total of 15 returning men against the squad of seven seniors and one old timer who will form the veteran team. This outfit will have 1948 Captain Bob Paxton, Roger Scholbe, and Fred Swartzberg at the forwards, John "Hook" Dillon at center, and Taylor Thorne, King Cole, Marx Nathan, and Don Anderson at the guards. Anderson was a member of the 1946 Tar Heel team that won national honors.

Against this group of polished performers Scott will throw the best of his remaining lettermen from the past season and a crop of newcomers. Nemo Nearman, big pivotman, will probably start at center for this unit to be supported by well-tried Coy Carson, Dan Nyimicz, and Bill Miller.

Booters End Spring Practice With 2-1 Victory Over State

In what was strictly a practice match the University of North Carolina booters edged out a group of foreign students from State College, 2-1 in a soccer tilt on the intramural field yesterday.

The meeting, which was primarily for practice on the part of both groups, brought to a close the spring workouts for Coach Marvin Allen's future hopefuls.

State's eleven, all of whom were foreign students, displayed plenty of skill. Had they worked out together more often they could probably have captured the game. They show the lack of co-ordination among them that comes from lack of group practice but they also showed a distinct mark of ability and spirit that was hard to check.

State and Carolina had both scored when in the third period Tar Heel center forward, Dave Ferebee, came through with the winning boot.

One of the standouts for the winners was goalie Dave Sobel who saved the day for Carolina on more than one occasion with some nifty defense work in the cords.

Frank Nelson starting left fullback also looked good. Allen used about 35 players in attempting to gather dope on potential standouts for next year.

DiLorenzo to Hurl In Final Home Tilt For Tar Heel Nine

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels, Big Four champions for 1948, will perform before the home crowd for the last time this season when Duke's Blue Devils do battle with the locals on Emerson field at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

A win by State's Wolfpack over Duke on Wednesday eliminated the Devils, last team with a mathematical chance of overhauling the Carolina outfit, from further consideration for the Big Four championship. So actually the game today will have no significance on the title chase.

But the Tar Heels have a strong revenge motive which will prevent any possible letdown in the team play. Duke has defeated the Carolina entry in two of three meetings this season, and both losses were of the heartbreaking variety. Duke rallied for five runs in the ninth and then pulled a triple play to beat Carolina, 6-4, in one contest. A bad hop on a ground ball enabled the Dukes to take their second decision, 4-3, in the last game between the two clubs.

Vindicative Vinnie

Vinnie DiLorenzo, Tar Heel starting hurler today, possibly has the greatest reason for wanting to win over Duke. The stylish Carolina southpaw was the victim of the two Blue Devil victories this season, and he hasn't been able to gain a decision from Duke in his three seasons at Carolina.

Although the game will not alter the Big Four standings, it could play a vital role in determining Carolina's chances for a bid to the NCAA baseball tourney. Reliable reports have been circulating throughout the state this week that the Tar Heels would be invited to praticipate in this event, and a win over Duke would go a long way toward making the bid more secure for the Chapel Hill nine.

Make Decision Sunday

The NCAA selection committee will meet on Sunday, in Greensboro, to make its choice to represent the Southern District in the tourney. This committee is composed of Jack Coombs, Duke baseball coach who is head of the committee; Burton Shipley, of Maryland; and Bernie Moore, commissioner for the Southeastern conference. Their selection will be announced Sunday.

The Carolina baseball squad, in a team meeting on Thursday, voted unanimously to accept the bid if it came.

The Tar Heels have one more game remaining on their schedule after the Duke encounter. On Wednesday the team will travel over to Raleigh for their season finale with the State Wolfpack.

Starting for Carolina today will be Andy Tranavitch, catcher; Will Hobbs, first; Jim Hamilton, second; Rip Ryan, shortstop; Jim Hayworth, third; and in the outfield Jim Kelly, Ken Black, and a third fielder yet to be chosen by Coaches Walt Rabb and Bunn Hearn.

Out for Revenge

VINNIE DILORENZO, Carolina's highly-regarded lefthander, will have ample motive for revenge when he takes the mound for the Tar Heels against Duke on Emerson field today at 3 o'clock. DiLorenzo was the losing pitcher in a pair of close games with the Devils earlier in the season.

Taylor Reaches Semi-Finals In Sedgefield Net Tourney

Smooth stroking Clark Taylor, Carolina's star entry in the Sedgefield Inn tennis tournament in Greensboro, captured a three set match in the quarter-finals yesterday to move into a semi-final tilt with Cornell's Dick Savitt.

Savitt who inflicted the only defeat of the year on Tar Heel captain and newly crowned Southern Conferences singles champion, Vic Seixas, will meet Taylor for a final round berth at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The Carolina netter will have quite a match on his hand as was demonstrated yesterday afternoon by the tanned star from the northern New York university. He easily brushed aside his opponents in third round and quarter-finals tests without much trouble.

Taylor was forced to match shots for three sets before taking the win over Buddy Adair of Washington, D. C., by a 6-3, 2-6, 6-1 margin.

Heath Alexander, another of Coach Kenfield's locals, defeated Dick Covington, also of Washington in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. In his quarter-final meet, however, the opposition had just too much class and he fell before the volleys of Vinni Rurac of Romania, third seeded player in the tourney.

Bob Atwood of Richmond will take the courts in the other semi-final tilt of the afternoon against the foreign star. Final round play will be held Sunday afternoon to decide the new champion who will take the crown away from Seixas, unable to take part in this year's competition.

Jayvees Encounter Duke Juniors Today

Coach Henry House's jayvee nine will face Duke's juniors for the sixth and final time today when they journey to Durham to try and exact season victory number ten. Thus far this season the Chapel Hill juniors have won nine games in 13 outings, four of the wins coming at the expense of the Blue Imps.

Lefty Bill McGinn, mainstay of the Junior pitching staff, has been given the go-ahead from Coach House to start on the mound for the Tar Babies.

One change has been made in the starting lineup. Billy Walsh, hefty catcher, has been shifted to right field. Although Walsh is somewhat slow in the pastures, he makes up for it with his powerful throwing arm. He showed up well in yesterday's practice, often tossing balls to the plate on the fly from deep right field.

Charlie Gurganus, who has been out most of the season due to an injury incurred behind the plate, will again be back in his regular spot covering home.

Jake Carter, Stan Goodman, Joe Brookshire, and John Senter will make up the starting infield. Outfielders slated to start are Zero Allen, Don Ward and Walsh.

In previous contests with the Blue Imps, the Tar Babies dropped the first one, 8-5, but came back in fine style to cop the next four. The second game saw the local crew take a 6-2 decision, followed by a pair of 9-7 triumphs

PGA GOLF TOURNEY

St. Louis, Mo., May 21—(UP)—Two of the favorites—Defending champion Jim Ferrier of San Francisco and Lloyd Mangrun of Chicago—were eliminated in second round matches today in the PGA championship here today.

Ferrier was defeated by Masters champ Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, New York, 1-up. Mangrum bowed to Henry Ransom of Ravinia, Illinois, 3 and 2.

Scholastic Track

The elite of North Carolina's scholastic track and field teams will converge on Fetzer field here this afternoon for the annual State High School Athletic Association championship. Field events will begin at 2:30 p. m.

Durham high school, perennially one of the best in Carolina track circles, has been installed as favorite. The Bulldogs won last year's championship by rolling up 35 points to second place Charlotte Central's 31 and 2-5 mark. Needham Broughton, Raleigh, placed third with 28 1-2 points.

Eleven schoolboy teams will be on hand for the event. Preliminary trials will get under way at 11:15.

Coed Tennis Tourney Goes to Third Round

Ten racquet-swinging coeds have surged into the quarter finals of the intramural tennis tournament, which must be played off by the middle of next week.

Third-rounders are Lucille Arnott(McIver) vs. K. D. Durham (Chi O); Nancee Black (Alderman) vs. Jane Morrison (Pi Phi); Lib Browning (Smith) vs. Sarah Walker (Kenan); and Becky Holton (Alpha Gam) vs. A. B. Pope (Tri Delt).

FLANKED BY MARSHALS of the Soviet Union, Premier Joseph Stalin is shown in this most recent photo from Moscow as he reviewed Russia's famed May Day parade from the tribune of the Lenin mausoleum in the Red capital. A recent personal suggestion by Stalin for "peace talks" with the U. S. has been rejected by the State Department in Washington. Charging that Russia has constantly blocked agreement on all vital world issues, the U. S. State Department has recommended the U. N. as the place to settle differences. (International)

'Spike' Nelson Ends Two Years as Head Of Wesley Group

Reverend Robert "Spike" Nelson will complete his two-year term as Wesley foundation director today. President Frank Graham is scheduled to speak at the group meeting tonight at 7 o'clock over which Rev. Nelson will preside for the last time.

Under the direction of Rev. Nelson, Wesley foundation has grown to command a new interest and enthusiasm among students. One of his accomplishments during his stay has been the organization of a young married and graduate group.

"Spike" will leave tomorrow with his wife, Pat, on a two-week vacation with their parents in Illinois before their departure for Germany, where they will spend the summer in a work camp with the American Friends Service committee. They also plan to attend the Amsterdam conference of the World Council of Churches in September. He will begin a study under the famous theologian, Emil Brunner, at the University of Zurich in Switzerland in October.

Rev. Nelson is a graduate of Depauw university, where he was awarded a medal for combined achievement in athletics and scholarship. Later he enrolled in Yale Divinity school and there received numerous honors

A Man's Home . . .

Bucharest, May 22 — (UP) — The government of Romania decided today to take over the royal holdings of former King Michael — on the grounds that he has been working against the interests of his homeland since his abdication. When government agents get around to checking up on the former king's castles, they'll have quite a job on their hands. In all, Michael had 159 castles — each complete with turrets — in his name.

DR. E. W. TIMBERLAKE, Jr., professor of law at Wake Forest college will be the guest speaker at a banquet to be given by the University of North Carolina student Masons organization, the Brazen Pillars, Monday night, May 24, at the Carolina Inn at 7:15 o'clock.

Shelton to Appear At Fiction Meet

Tom Shelton, active campus hypnotist, will be featured at the regular meeting of the Carolina Science Fiction association tomorrow night at 9:30 in Roland Parker lounge 3 of Graham Memorial.

Shelton has caused much excitement at various places on the campus by his impromptu exhibitions of hypnotism. Monday night he will discuss and demonstrate his fascinating art.

All members of the association are urged to attend, as this will be the last meeting of the school year; also anyone interested in hypnotism or science fiction in general is cordially invited.

Scholarship Awards Given to Students By Alpha Chi Sigma

The Rho chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma, professional chemical fraternity, has recently announced the winners of its annual scholarship awards. These awards are given to underclassmen who have done outstanding work in the Department of Chemistry. Selection is made by a scholarship committee composed primarily of faculty members.

Selected this year as the most outstanding underclassman was Harley Y. Jennings, senior from Schoolfield, Va. He received a cash gift of one hundred dollars.

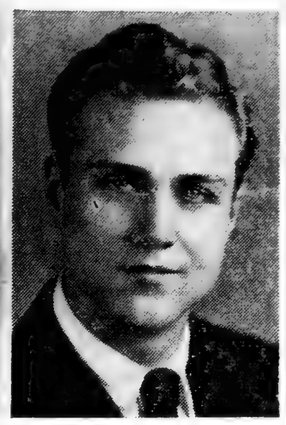
The junior award, a year's membership in the American Chemical society, was won by Leland C. Ellis.

Sophomores Tom Hosick and Richard Johns were awarded chemistry reference books of their choice for their outstanding work. Their names will also be engraved on a bronze plaque in the chemistry library. H. C. Fordham, T. H. Crowder, and D. E. Sobel were chosen as outstanding freshmen and received copies of chemistry handbooks.

The sponsoring of these awards reflects one of Alpha Chi Sigma's aims, the advancement of chemistry as a science and a profession. Through the national chapter the fraternity also supports the annual pure chemistry award of the American Chemical society.

TMA Plans Picnic At Hogan's Friday

The first official social gathering of the newly re-organized Town Men's association will be a picnic at Hogan's lake next Friday night, John Van Hecke, president, announced yesterday.



All non-fraternity and fraternity men living in town but who do not actually live in their frat houses are eligible to attend the picnic and join the TMA. Tickets will be sold in the "Y" on Monday and Tuesday at $1.50 each. This amount will include the cost of the picnic and membership in the association. Men paying the $1.50 will be listed and sent a membership card as soon as the cards are printed.

There will be no extra charge for dates, Van Hecke added.

State Political Roundup

Anti-Truman Feeling Revealed At Raleigh

By United Press

The big news in North Carolina politics for the week took place Thursday, and for once, the normal run of campaign speaking took a back seat.

Thursday was the day North Carolina Democrats gathered in Raleigh for the state Democratic convention. The meeting went off smoothly compared to conventions in some other Southern states, but it had its outbursts of oratory against President Truman and his civil rights proposals.

Political campaigners took time out from obvious stumping to attend the convention, but the politicking went on, and the minute the convention was over, the candidates hit the road again to fight for ballots in the primary next Saturday.

Before the state convention started, most observers thought the civil rights issue would be left in the background. It very definitely came out in the open —but the convention finally decided to send its delegates to the national Democratic convention with a free hand. They are uninstructed — they can use their own judgment in whether or not to support Mr. Truman.

Keynote Speaker William T. Joyner struck the theme for the Democratic meeting when he said that racial problems should be worked out at home — but should not cause a break in the national party.

Joyner said nothing could be so ineffective as a revolt against the national Democratic party. He urged state party leaders to work out their differences over civil rights within the party, and he warned that a revolt against the party and Mr. Truman could result only in aid to the Republican party.

The convention followed the advice given by Joyner, but the Democrats saved their applause for the fiery and off-the-cuff speech made by former governor and Senator Cameron Morrison of Charlotte.

Morrison was called on to speak for a few minutes. But as Governor Cherry said later, "When Cam starts speaking, he just can't seem to find terminal facilities."

White-haired, 79-year-old Morrison roared out against President Truman, the man he calls the "accidental president." Morrison was elected a delegate-at-large to the national convention and vowed he would never vote to renominate Mr. Truman. He spoke bitterly of the civil rights proposals and kept the audience staggering between applause and laughter.

'Challenger' Coming

"The Challenger," now famous trailer field headquarters of R. Mayne Albright, Democratic candidate for governor, will roll into Chapel Hill next Thursday leading a motorcade of Albright supporters in a cross-state tour of revisits and street corner speeches.

The motorcade will arrive on Franklin street promptly at 9:30 and Albright will speak briefly from "The Challenger." For the next 30 minutes or so the caravan will stop on campus and around town before moving on to Greensboro, Lexington, Asheboro, and Concord for the remainder of the day.

Degree Applicants Will Meet May 31

All degree candidates will meet in Memorial hall at 5 o'clock on Monday, May 31, to receive instructions for the two academic processions to be held during commencement week, according to an announcement by S. A. Stoudemire, faculty marshall.

According to Stoudemire, "The procedure is fairly complicated, and it is highly important that the majority of degree candidates attend. Some seniors are out of town but are planning to return and take part in graduation exercises. It is not necessary that they return for the May 31 meeting, but they should make certain that some friend attends who can explain to them the part they are to play in the procedure."

Robinson Is Elected To TEP Presidency

Wally Robinson, senior from Brooklyn, N. Y. was elected Chancellor of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity Wednesday night. Robinson succeeds Ben Josephson as head of the fraternity's Omega chapter.

Two brothers were also elected to the Executive committee in the balloting last week. Malcom Fleishman, Fayetteville; and Jerry Levin, Charlotte are the two new members of the group.

Final Concert of Symphony Orchestra Scheduled for Hill Hall This Afternoon

The University symphony orchestra, conducted by Earl Slocum, will present its final concert of the year this afternoon at 4:30 n Hill hall.

The orchestra, composed of students, faculty and townspeople, furnishes accompaniment for the Chapel Hill Choral club and the light operas presented by the Music and Drama departments.

Today's program will feature a composition by the well known North Carolina composer, Lamar Stringfield. His "Negro Parade" was written while a resident of Chapel Hill. Mr. Stringfield, who founded the North Carolina symphony orchestra is now conductor of the symphonette of Charlotte, North Carolina.

Other numbers on today's program will be Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major, the overture "Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart, the waltz from Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" suite, "Pavane," by Maurice Ravel, and "Praeludium" by Jarnefelt.

The concert is free of charge and the public is invited.

English Author To Begin Weil Lectures Tomorrow

RICHARD HENRY TAWNEY, professor of the University of London, will deliver the first of the series of Weil lectures tomorrow night in Gerrard hall. Two more lectures are slated for the same time and place on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Tawney's general theme will be "Social Democracy in England."

Social Democracy In England Will Be General Theme

Richard Henry Tawney, well known British lecturer and author and professor of economic history at the University of London, will give the first of the annual series of Weil lectures on citizenship in Gerrard hall tomorrow night at 8:30.

The second and third lectures are scheduled at the same time Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Taking "Social Democracy in England" as his general theme, Professor Tawney will discuss "The English Approach to Socialism" tomorrow night. He will speak on "Policies and Methods" Tuesday night, and continue with "The Prospect for the Future" Wednesday night.

Laski Gets Published

Among outstanding speakers delivering the series have been Felix Frankfurter, Herbert Agar, Dorothy Thompson, Clarence Dykstra, T. V. Smith, Charles A. Beard, William Bennett Munro, William Allen White, Roscoe Pound, Edward Alsworth Ross, Henrfy A. Wallace, Harold Laski, and Walton Hamilton. Laski's lectures on "Democracy in Crisis" were later published in a book by the University of North Carolina Press.

Established at the University on a permanent foundation through the generosity of the families of Sol and Henry Weil of Goldsboro, the Weil lectures were inaugurated in 1914 with the then ex-President and future Chief Justice of the United States William Howard Taft as the lecturer.

Born in Calcutta

Professor Tawney is well known in the United States and specifically in Chapel Hill where he lectured in 1941 while on a visit to President Frank P. Graham, who is a former student of his at the University of London. He was born in Calcutta, India, and was educated at Rugby and at Balliol college, Oxford.

He has been professor of economic history in the London school of Economics of the University of London since 1914, after having taught the same subject at the University of Glasgow and in Oxford university.

Now at Chicago

Professor Tawney holds honorary doctorates from the Universities of Manchester, Paris and Chicago, and is a Fellow of the British academy and a member of the American Philosophical society. He is now visiting professor at the University of Chicago.

In addition to his academic activities he has served England in many public capacities, including membership on the consultative committee of the Board of Education, the Coal Industry commission, the Cotton Trade Conciliation commission and as advisor to the British embassy in Washington in 1941-42.

Sellars Elected SDA President

Charles Sellars, graduate student of Charlotte, was elected president of Students for Democratic Action at the organization's last spring quarter meeting Thursday night.

Other officers elected at the meeting were Tom Parninson, vice-president; Maude Thomas, secretary, and Dewey Hinkle, treasurer. Nat Williams, Bill Greer, and Al Lowenstein were elected as members-at-large on the Executive committee.

A partially completed report concerning the admission of Negro graduate students was made by the SDA Opinion Poll committee. The entire content of this report will be made known to the entire campus as soon as the statistics have been compiled.

Barrus Picks Group For 'Y' Summer Work

Bob Barrus, acting secretary of the YMCA, is formulating a coalition cabinet for the summer to survey the religion needs on campus during the summer months.

A program will be designed which will be participated in by people of all faiths. First meeting of the cabinet was held Tuesday in the Y. Others interested in working with the group during the summer may do so by getting in touch with Bob Barrus, or Mrs. Betty Rose Dowden, secretary of the YWCA.

The two academic processions which are scheduled during commencement are the Baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, June 6, and the graduation exercises Monday afternoon, June 7.

U.N.C. Commencement Plans Released; Cleland to Give Baccalaureate Sermon

Riveters Finish Work . . . | . . . Strikers Return to Jobs

No Sleep For Weary As Planeteers Head Back To Morehead Job

By Bill Kellam

Several weeks ago, rapidly rising Morehead Planetarium's pneumatic woodpecker let fly its final rivet-pounding raps on the steel framework. Comparative peace and quiet reigned over the then busy construction site and surrounding area.

A few days later, all the union workers who were employed on the project laid down their tools and began the strike which ended Friday.

The cessation of the riveting marked the completion of an important phase in the construction of the building. The passing of the noise also meant extra hours of class and dorm reposes for hundreds of sleep-hungry students. Now the ex-workers are probably getting plenty of sleep, too.

The tenants of the nearby dorms and classrooms had been having it pretty rough while the riveting team was at work. Not only had the students been roused from their slumber at the break of day, but they even found that they were no longer able to catch a few extra winks of sleep in the classrooms of the buildings within earshot of the planetarium project.

Before the work was halted, the Jones' boys were ready to finish laying the concrete floors for the second story of the building. They had already poured the first floor and part of the second.

The installation of the extensive network of subfloor plumbing for the machine and rest rooms had delayed the pouring of the floors of these rooms which will be located beneath the planetarium.

The floor of the vault, located under the main entrance, also has yet to be laid. The vault will house the valuable items on view in the ground floor exhibit room. The exhibit room, which is on the ground floor and is directly beneath the rotundra, will be flanked by class rooms.

The steady rise of the brick walls has brought carload after carload of artificially aged red bricks pouring into Chapel Hill. Granite is used in the main entrance steps and the base which runs the perimeter of the building, however. The six columns at the entrance, the name plate on the side of the planetarium, the entrance facings, and the odd trimmings are of limestone.

The lifting into place of the ponderous granite foundation blocks would have seemed to have been quite a problem but the carefully cut blocks, some weighing five tone, were easily swung into their niches by the construction company's mobile crane.

The derrick, mounted on the rear of a powerful diesal tractor truck, has a lifting capacity of nine tons. Thus the puny granite pebbles proved to be easily moved obstacles.

On entering the planetarium through the front door, visitors to the planetarium will find themselves in the most impressive part of the building. The circular main lobby will be two stories high and, forming a circle to support the curved ceiling, will be a ring of 16 columns of polished marble.

The outside passage around the columns, onto which the various offices, reception rooms, stairs, and elevators will open, will be lighted by 16 recessed lights. This type of illumination will be used almost exclusively throughout the building.

Lighting the 1000 pound glass chandelier which will hang from the center of the rotundra ceiling, will be a system of neon cove lights which will be placed in the recess atop the columns. A similar chandelier will hang in the third floor cafeteria, directly beneath the dome. The cafeteria can be reached by an elevator and two flights of stairs.

Acording to head electrician F. G. Brown, a boxcar load of conduits will be used to hold the maze of wiring necessary to light the building and to operate the planetarium. In addition to the mass of lights, a 30 and a 40 horsepower electric motor will be used to operate the air conditioning system, and approximately 15 one-fourth, two or three horsepower motors will be scattered throughout the planetarium to operate exhause pumps, humidifiers, and other such equipment.

A battery of 18 searchlights will be used to light the polished stainless steel planetarium half-globe. The lights will be located on the floor beneath the center of the globe. The seats will be circled around the lights.

Another feature for visitors will be the tile-floored terraces, located on the roof of each of the wings of the rotundra. The terraces are on the same level as the cafeteria and can be used as outdoor dining space. The dome will have a copper roof.

In addition to formerly being satisfied with the progress of the work, construction Lawrence Bass commented that he was especially pleased that there had been no serious accidents on the job. Although a number of workers had stepped on stray nails, there were no other hurts except the usual minor cuts and bruises.

Ruth Haynes Makes Chapel Hill Visit

Ruth Haynes of New York, program secretary of the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students, visited here this week meeting with interested students and townspeople to inform them of the committee's activities. She also explained programs that could be used on local campuses for the entertainment of foreign students.

This committee is prepared to meet the students when they arrive in New York, obtain temporary hotel rooms, arrange tours of New York city and nearby points of interest, route students to their college or university, assist them in making friends in America, and to provide various additional services upon individual request.

I Met A Man

I met a man once who said:

I missed out on my college days. You see, I didn't enter into it quite all the way. I never really got acquainted with a professor. Or even a text book. Not seriously. I never learned the thrill of digging fossils on a mountain side. Or working until dark over a test-tube. Or getting on the trail of something in the library and searching it down feverishly for hours. I told myself that people who did that sort of thing are queer. I complained about the classes. I could learn more out of school, I said. I slid through some way without ever letting my mind grow curious. And, it's funny, but do you know I feel kind of regretful now whenever I talk to a scholar. Or go in a library. Or wander through a museum. I missed out on all that. And I find myself wishing I could go back to college and live those days over again.

I met a man once who said:

I missed out on my college days. You see, I didn't enter into it quite all the way. Working my way through school took all my time, or I told myself it did. The fellows used to go bumming around at night and sometimes they'd ask me along, but I never went. I always told them I had to study. It seemed to me a lot of foolishness, the way the used to hang around the college drug store, or loiter on the library steps, or go to snake dances or rallies. I even missed the football games. Froth, I called it. Wasted time! I was in school to study. And, it's funny, but do you know I turn away now every time I see a group of college men gathered in a drug store or on a corner of the campus. And every time I see two old college chums slap each other on the back and say, "Remember the time that we . . ." I gulp a little because I missed out on all that, and I find myself wishing I could go back to college and live those days over again.

I met a man once who said:

I missed out on my college days. You see, I didn't enter into it quite all the way. I was afraid, I guess. I wanted to try for a part in the school play once, but I didn't. I intended to. I went up to the room the night they were reading the parts, but I didn't go in. There were so many there who could do better than I, and I turned away and went down the hall. I wanted to try for the football team, too, but I told myself I was light and turned away from the practice field. And, it's funny, but do you know I can't go to see a football game now, or hear one on the radio, and I can't go to see a college play, because I see myself out on the field or on the stage, and I might have been if I hadn't been afraid. And I find myself wishing I could go back to college to live those days over again. — Reprinted from the Bucknelian, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.

Looking At A Convention

By Bill Bucham

Yours truly went over to Raleigh Thursday afternoon to take a look in the Democratic convention and observe the big state politicians in action. The show was worth the trip to Raleigh.

While the professional politicos are not too different from our budding genius' of the Carolina campus, they are more polished, their handshake is a little firmer and their "Ah'm from Wilkes County" line is a little more practiced.

'Course I might be prejudiced but from where I was watching, the Sir Walter Hotel was "Johnson, Johnson, Johnson". There were too many "Broughton" pennants waving from every available nook in the hotel, but in Durham County's reception room for Bill Umstead, the air was anything but unhappy or pessimistic. While all concerned will admit that the race for senator is going to be the closest of the lot, both sides claim that victory will be theirs. Umstead's forces, however, were more than encouraged over the "pick-up" that the senator's following has had in the past week.

Incidentally, in answer to a point blank question, "Are you for the Mundt-Nixon Bill?", Senator Umstead quickly replied that he is against it, which is certainly a good sign.

Following an uncle through the maze of the hotel lobby and in and out of the various headquarters and reception rooms, I shook hands with cousins, brothers, sisters-in-law of candidates, and various county managers of all sorts and shapes and variety. Also went up five rings higher on the ladder of "I know so and so, he's the governor or senator of what-have-you" by being introduced once more to Governor Cherry and to the next governor — Johnson, naturally. Senators Hoey and Umstead, who I am confident will remain a senator, Speaker of the House Pearsall, Tom Watkins and Bob Rankin, Johnson and Umstead's right hand men. It was interesting to listen to various representatives from various counties throughout the state and discuss the way the races were going in their county. The story was repeated time and again. Johnson by 65 per cent, or Johnson by 70 per cent and an occasional county that would be Scott 65 per cent. No where along the line did I hear any mention of Albright, except that he would be a good man for governor in 1952 or 1956 — and he probably would.

"The Grand old man" of the party made a fine appearance at the convention—Cameron Morrison, of course. He wasn't actually scheduled to make an address but he made one anyway that was far and above all the others — though persons in some quarters said that the speech would have been in better taste back in 1900 or 1870.

Although we got in Raleigh a little late, the lobby of the hotel was packed and jammed until after five o'clock. Then the various reception rooms for the evening began to empty and were soon deserted. The political battles were still carried on upstairs in the various suites, however. The delegates there were mainly politicians, who do not necessarily represent the little people who vote, but as one happy soul sputtered as he staggered out of the elevator, "this is not a state convention, this is a Johnson convention," and so it was. Among the other Carolina students milling around the lobby and brushing shoulders with the "greats" were Miles Smith, Russell Johnson, Bob Hennessee, Lincoln Kan and John Dees.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Feud In Truman's Cabinet

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—A SIGNIFICANT argument has broken out inside the Truman Cabinet—with Secretary of Defense Forrestal in the middle.

At a Cabinet meeting two weeks ago, Forrestal suddenly suggested that the President appoint a special commission to investigate the nation's oil resources. This comes under the Interior Department, which made an oil survey last summer and was the first to warn the nation of the impending oil and gasoline shortage.

However, without consulting Secretary of the Interior Krug, Forrestal blurted out in Cabinet his demand for a new oil survey, this time under his own military-controlled National Security Resources Board.

Not much more was said in Cabinet, but later other Cabinet members began comparing notes and accusing Forrestal of raiding their departments. They don't like Forrestal's constant drive to put civilian duties under his brass hats.

One such instance nearly occurred the other day when Senator Ed Moore of Oklahoma asked Forrestal for a statement on the Moore-Ruby Bill, which would increase the nation's natural gas bill by about $75,000,000.

At first Forrestal seemed to think that the Moore-Ruby Bill would spur gas and oil production and a couple of his experts started looking into it. Hearing of this, however, Senator Francis Myers, Pennsylvania Democrat, called his friend. Myers marched over to see Forrestal, demanding to know what he was doing.

Myers didn't mention it, but it's highly significant that Forrestal's banking firm had financed one of the companies which stood to make a big profit from the Moore-Ruby Bill—Texas Eastern Gas Transmission Company. This is the outfit which bought the Government's Big Inch and Little Inch pipelines through a loan floated by Forrestal's old Wall Street firm.

After Senator Myers' call, the Secretary of Defense dropped the Moore-Rizley Bill like a hotcake. But he is still anxious to take the oil-survey job away from his colleague, Secretary of the Interior Krug.

THERE WAS A TIME when the President of the United States never dined out. This was the fixed rule in the Coolidge and Hoover eras; for if he dined out once, he slighted a lot of other people who wanted him to grace their dinner tables. Every foreign embassy, for instance, would like to invite the President to dinner, which would mean, plump, out all the time.

Warren Harding, of course, didn't follow this rule. He loved to dine with Ned McLean and other cronies. Roosevelt also ignored the rule—but only three or four time a year. About once a year he drove out to Sumner Welles' home in Maryland and more frequently visited Princess Martha of Norway. But aside from this, he dined in the White House where his dinners were important opportunities for getting together with people.

With Harry Truman, however, it's different. President Truman dines out so much that people wisecrack that it looks as if Mrs. Truman hasn't got a cook.

Truman loves getting away to parties and small dinners. The other evening, for instance, a sleek, black Cadillac pulled up in front of the modest home of William M. Boyle, Jr. in Washington, and out stepped the President of the United States, his Press Secretary, and their daughter Margaret.

The occasion was a family-style dinner given by the man who was Truman's assistant when he was first elected to the Senate. Now Boyle is back in private law practice.

Margaret talked to the Boyle children about music, while the President talked to Boyle about helping him campaign for re-election and possibly as successor to Gen. Sullivan.

VARIOUS PEOPLE PLAYED important backstage roles in switching President Truman away from his earlier Forrestal-dominated position against Palestine. One was Eddie Jacobson, Truman's old haberdashery partner in Kansas City, who was rushed to Washington by Frank Goldman of Lowell, Mass., head of B'nai B'rith. Together with Maurice Bisgyer of the same organization, they had several talks with Truman.

Another who talked with the President just one day before he recognized Israel was venerable Congressman Sol Bloom, New York Democrat, who advised:

"Jump in fast with recognition, Mr. President. Don't wait for Russia and her satellite states to recognize. They are sure to do it, but don't let them do it first."

Next day Truman acted. In fact, he acted so fast that he had to tip off the Jewish Agency to send him a request for recognition so he could act on it. They hadn't even had time to make a formal request.

On Records

Levant Is Striving

New York — (UP) — Although Oscar Levant is not the terrific piano player his uncritical radio listeners fondly imagine, he is a better one, when he is really trying, than his unhumorous critics aver. He clearly is striving in his recording of Grieg's concerto, supported by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony under Efrem Kurtz. The result is impressive without being exactly overwhelming (Columbia; four 12-in., alb.; offered in both plastic and shellac.)

For giving this much hackneyed work a pristine freshness, he merits unstinted praise. The essential rhythms have a pleasing unfettered quality under his fingers and he holds back from emphatic, devil-may-care expositions of the thematic sequences. But there is a monotonous narrowness of dynamics and the first movement is a little messy due to excessive deliberateness. On the odd side of the set, he gives a credible performance to Rachmaninoff's prelude in E-Flat Major.

Greig has been neglected by the record makers for some months, but now Columbia is issuing, along with the concerto, a new recording of the Peer Gynt Suit No. 1 and of the Homage March from "Sigurd Jorsalfar." The former is played by the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy in its extremely competent manner, yet devoid of oomph. (Two 12-in., alb.). But the performance of the march by the Halle Orchestra under Constant Lambert is sumptuously grand. (12-in., single.)

Sir Thomas Beecham and his Royal Philharmonic are back among the newest records, this time with one of the most distinctively original and beguiling works of Frederick Delius, whom Sir Thomas has made his personal composer. It is "Brigg Fair: An English Rapsody." As unlikely as is may sound, the reviewer makes bold to assert that it is a performance without a flaw. (RCA Victor; two 12-in., alb.)

Leonard Warren, Metropolitan baritone, "undertook a group of shanties, but he didn't think it necessary to take off his shirt.

Review Of Cyrano

"Outstanding Production"

By Thomas Bruce

The Carolina Playmaker production of Edmond Rostand's drama "Cyrano de Bergerac," which was presented for the first night of a three day run in the Forest Theatre Friday night, was well received by an enthusiastic audience of 1,000 persons. The play, in spite of several serious errors, is undoubtedly the outstanding production of the Playmakers' thirtieth year.

The play tells the story of the original Cyrano, a sword[illegible] and poet with a tremendous nose. Cyrano, because of his sensitivity about the nose, fights numerous duels, winning fame in the world of men, and loging among the world of women where he finds love.

Director Foster Fitz-Simons deserves praise for his excellent handling of the crowd scenes and for the general smoothness of the production, but in many sections he allowed the actors to speak too much time over their poetic speeches, and that tended to slow the production down. In several spots the actors seemed to be half drugged with fatigue because of slow pace. However, these spots were few, and the general tendency of the play was to gather suspense and power as it moved along.

Director Fitz-Simons might have done more cutting to improve the pace of the play, as it ran very late, and the stone seats were very hard.

Among the actors, Frederick Johnson gets top honors for his portrayal of the lead, "Cyrano." He is the driving figure of the play, and his characterization is a fine example of acting sustained over a long period. If he tended to lose the subtlety of many lines, it can easily be blamed on the difficult ecoustics problem in an out-door theater.

Gloria Gunn as the feminine lead, "Roxane" turned out a creditable performance, but M. David Samples as "Christian" seemed a little too effeminate in his portrayal.

Irvine Smith as "De Guiche" did an excellent job in a supporting role. He was careful and consistent, and his work showed a great amount of polish. James Geiger (playing two roles in an entirely different way), A. E. Westover, III, as the comical cook "Ragueneau," Claude Rayborn as the drunken "Lagniere," Edsel Hughes as "Le Bret", and Sidney Shertzer (also playing more than one role) topped the field of supporting actors. Millie Howard as "Lise," the pastry cook's unfaithful wife, and Eleanor Woodson as the "Duenna" also deserve mention.

The settings for the five different scenes include several striking artistic features, such as the balcony window, the convent statue, the high arched door for the battle scene, and the whole set for the first act.

The much publicized revolving stages speeded up the production, but why did Designer Lynn Gault use the intermission to change the scenery on the main stage? Theoretically, revolving stages are used to speed scene changes, or where that is impossible to keep the technical crew out of sight during the changes.

Irene Smart's costumes were brilliantly colorful and historically correct. She and the costume staff added greatly to the overall success of the show, but Ed Garrett's lighting was rough-edged, as though the operators were not sure of themselves.

Rostand's play was a wise choice, mingling laughter with sadness, set in the period of the famous Three Musketeers. Although it suffers from a tendency to over-act on the part of the cast because of the transition from indoor to outdoor staging, the excellent blocking of mass and individual movement more than [illegible] up for it.

If you plan to see the play, be sure to take along something to soften the stone seat ledges, and a coat will be useful unless the weather warms up.

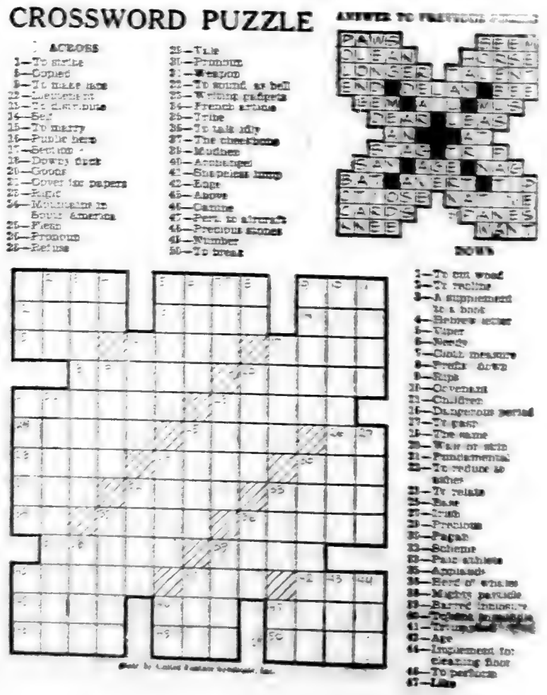
Warren---Constant Victor

Sacramento, Cal. —(UP)— Earl Warren, California's big, white-haired governor, enters the Republican national convention strictly as a "favorite son" candidate. He controls but 81 delegates, the delegation from his home state.

Warren did not seek delegates in other states and made no formal campaign. But, after his election and re-election, in California as governor, he had no opposition for the state's delegates.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur specifically disowned a move to put his name on the California ballot. Harold Stassen considered entering the California primary but did not follow through.

Warren's vote-getting ability in his home state was first demonstrated when he won the governorship in 1942 from a Democrat, Culbert L. Olson, in 1942, although three out of five of the state's voters were registered Democrats.



His re-election in 1946 made state history. He won the Republican nomination easily and also captured the Democratic nomination. His general election victory over nominal opposition from a prohibition candidate was a formality.

Warren, in fact, has never lost an election. He started winning them in 1926 when he was elected district attorney of Alameda county, which contains the city of Oakland on the east side of San Francisco Bay. He was re-elected in 1930 and 1934 and won a reputation as a racket-buster and prosecutor of corrupt public officials.

Warren is informal and hearty in his public and private dealings with people, and doesn't stand on dignity.

A special seat was reserved for him at the noted tournament of roses parade in Pasadena last New Year's Day. Officials were disturbed when he failed to arrive and started looking for him. They found him peacefully sitting on a curb watching the parade.

Pi Phi Coeds Take "All Sports" Honor At Picnic Meeting

By Sally Woodhull

Pi Beta Phi was awarded the women's "All Sports" cup for the second consecutive year at the WAA picnic Thursday night. Randy Hudson, president of the Association, presented the cup and made other awards to individuals and organizations.

Betsy Ann Barbee, Bill Lloyd, and Marshall Spears were awarded blazers as the three seniors who had contributed the most to the Association during the past year.

Bracelets were awarded to Carolyn Driver, K. D. Durham, and Bill Lloyd, and numerals and monograms were awarded to girls who had participated in sports during the year. Randy also awarded the plaques to the organizations which had won tournaments in various sports.

"Minnie at the Bat"

Following supper served by the WAA, a skit entitled "Minnie at the Bat" was presented by Doris Beasley and Patsy McNutt, and guests, including Dean Katherine Carmichael, Mrs. Betty Dowden, and Twig Branch, were introduced.

Town Girls were awarded the basketball plaque; Pi Phi, volley ball; Chi O, baseball, as a result of the defeat they had just given Kenan; Spencer (Doris Beasley), badminton; Kenan, (Lila Peck Walker), archehy; Pi Phi, swimming; Carr (Mary Ruth Davis), table tennis.

Win Monograms

Monograms went to Betsy Ann Barbee, Ruth Evans, Ruth Byrum, Janet Crinkley, Scotty Dellinger, Mary Goodwin, Marshall Spears, and Carolyn Driver.

The following girls were awarded numerals: Doris Beasley, Helen Bouldin, Elizabeth Browning, Nancy Carter, Helen Crockford, Elizabeth Eaddy, Bill Henderson, Becky Holton, Charlotte Johnston, Sally Lee, Margo Martin, Donnie McDonald, Jo McMillan, Jane Morrison, Marina Moseley, Barbara Poole, Jean Ann Ramsdell, Nan Robinson, Nancy Tucker, Sarah Walker, Myrtle Westbrook, Chris White and Ellen Wilson.

Lead Locals on Offense and Defense

Shown above are JIM KELLY (left) and JIM HAYWORTH, who turned in some timely hitting yesterday in Carolina's 10-8 victory over Duke. Kelly went two for four and batted in a brace of runs while Hayworth weighed in with three safties and an equal number of RBI's. In addition, both turned in spectacular feilding gems to aid the Carolina cause afield.

Savitt Drops Taylor in Semis; Opposes Rurac at Sedgefield

Greensboro, May 22 — The University of North Carolina's last hope in the men's singles section of the Sedgefield Inn tennis tournament, Clark Taylor, was eliminated in the semi-finals today by Dick Savitt.

Taylor, who plays number two for the Carolina varsity, could capture only three games as the Cornell star swept to a straight set victory, 6-2, 6-1.

Savitt will face Vinni Rurac of Rumania tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the finals of the tournament.

Rurac gained the final bracket by defeating Bob Atwood of Richmond this afternoon in the minimum of two sets by identical 6-3 scores.

Several doubles matches were also played today and the participants in the finals were decided. It will be the team of Rurac and Savitt, which is top-seeded, against the second ranked duo of Taylor and Dick Covington.

The latter pair reached the finals by defeating the all-Carolina combination of Duke Wilder and Heath Alexander in the semis. Taylor and Covington captured the match in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2.

Previously in the afternoon, Wilder and Alexander had downed Randy Gregson and Arnold Sloan, 7-5, 6-4.

Rurac and Savitt dropped Karl Sprige and Buddy Adair in the semifinal round with little difficulty, 6-2, 6-3.

This is the second time this year that Savitt has emerged victorious in a match with a member of the Carolina team. Earlier in the season he defeated Vic Seixas, ninth-ranking amateur in the country, in a dual meet between Cornell and Carolina.

This was the only defeat suffered by Seixas in the entire campaign and he had hopes of reversing the verdict in the Sedgefield tournament.

Blows by Cheek Aid DiLorenzo to Break Long-standing Jinx

By Dick Jenrette

Carolina's Tar Heels, who usually don't have to rely on a heavy batting attack to win their games, reversed the procedure at Emerson field yesterday to outslug the Duke Blue Devils, 10-8, in a Big Four contest which evened the season series between Duke and Carolina at two games apiece.

The three-man NCCA committee for District three which is headed by Jack Coombs of Duke will meet in Greensboro this afternoon to pick the teams to compete in the regional playoffs to be held in Charlotte. The winning teams will then compete in the eastern playoffs.

The affair was the final home appearance of the season for the Tar Heels, who last week clinched the Big Four championship. Although the game had no bearing on the standings, it made the Carolina chances for a bid to the NCAA baseball tourney seem a bit more secure. It also kept the Tar Heels at the front of the Southern conference race, and they now have but one more loop game remaining, that being against State in Raleigh on Wednesday.

The selection committee for the NCAA meets in Greensboro today to render its choice to represent District 3 in the tourney. Carolina is conceded to have the best chance for the bid.

Vinnie's Revenge

Vinnie DiLorenzo, Carolina's ace lefthander, had rough going on the mound against the Dukes yesterday, but he managed to weather the attack to post his sixth triumph of the season against three setbacks. Although DiLorenzo probably wasn't particularly proud of his work, he still had the satisfaction of beating Duke—a feat he accomplished for the first time in three years.

Coach Jack Coombs' Blue Devils jumped into an early 5-0 lead, largely achieved on Stu Erickson's home run with the bases loaded, and appeared on their way to another win over DiLorenzo. But the Tar Heel bats awoke with vengeance in the third inning, and after four frames of play, Carolina had taken the lead at 6-5.

Carolina batted all the way around in the third inning. Jim Hamilton started Al Curtis, Duke hurler who was charged with his first defeat, down the path to the showers by reaching first on a walk. Emmett Cheek's single, his first of four hits, and DiLorenzo's base on balls loaded the bases.

Texas Leaguers

Two Texas League hits, which fell just in front of the uotfielder, were rapped out by Ken Black and Jim Hayworth, and each produced a run. Frank Jones went down swinging, but cleanup batter Jim Kelly unloaded a single to left which produced two more runs. Curtis retired the next two batters to preserve a 5-4 Duke lead.

But Carolina was still in a rallying mood. With one down in the fourth, Cheek lined a tremendous triple—over 500 feet distant in right center—to place the tying run on third. DiLorenzo promptly singled him home and scored himself a few minutes later on Hayworth's one-baser to left, giving the Tar Heels the lead at 6-5.

Two more runs in the fifth boosted Carolina's lead to 8-5, and what turned out to be the winning run was scored in the seventh when Rip Ryan walked, stole second, and came home on Cheek's two-base blow to left. The charges of Coach Bunn Hearn and Walt Rabb added an insurance run in the eighth apparently to assure victory.

Duke and its jinx on DiLorenzo weren't so easily put aside, however. A hit on error, a double by Hancock, Bill Bergeron's single, and another two-base hit by George Clark pulled Duke to within two runs of a tie. DiLorenzo forced Ed McCarthy to

Jayvee Diamond Tilt With Duke Cancelled

Due to unforeseen circumstances, the scheduled baseball game between the Carolina and Duke jayvees yesterday afternoon at Durham was cancelled.

This would have been the sixth and last meeting of the season between the two clubs. In their five meetings thus far, the Tar Babies have come out on the long end of the score five times.

On Monday the Housemen will travel to Raleigh to tangle with the Wolfcubs of State in a game that was postponed on the 13th The season officially ends on Wednesday when the Capital City lads will journey to Emerson field.

Durham Retains State School Track Title; High Point 2nd

Durham high school repeated as State Interscholastic track champions at Fetzer field yesterday afternoon by amassing 43 and one-half points against runner-up High Point, which notched 23 and one-half. It was the Bulldogs' third consecutive title.

More than 200 schoolboy athletes took part in the annual carnival which saw Needham Broughton high of Raleigh and Reynold's Black Demons from Winston-Salem finish in a two-way tie for third place honors with 19 points. Charlotte Central picked off fifth position with a 17 point total followed by Greensboro Senior High, 14 and one-half; Burlington and Curry High of Greensboro, five points apiece; Statesville, four; and Asheville accounting for a lone 3 and one-half.

The Bulldogs of Coach Roger Neighborgall were presented a permanent gold trophy. L. J. (Hap) Perry, executive secretary of the High School Athletic Association, announced a new policy of presenting the permanent trophy in lieu of a rotating award as has been the custom in past years.

Durham collected four first places on the performances of Bobby Byrd. one-mile and discus; Lewis Berry in the shot put; and a baton-passing quartet's winning time of 3:36.1 in the mile relay.

Talmadge Henry, chunky Greensboro Senior High sprinter turned in the top performance of the afternoon by running the 220-yard dash in 22.9. Henry's time was just five-tenths of a second short of the meet record equalled by Jimmy Cain of Raleigh in 1947. There were no new records set yesterday.

Durham salted the meet away after eight events when the Bulldogs had rolled-up 24 and one-half points.

Cage Hopefuls Top Grad Quint, 57-49, In Practice Finale

The old adage "practice makes perfect" proved itself yesterday as Coach Tom Scott's candidates for next year's edition of the White Phantoms successfully subdued a last quarter rally and started one of their own to defeat a seven-man squad composed of graduating members of last year's cage squad, 57-49.

The regulars had no trouble in taking the Grads and were ahead from the starting whistle. Scoring was held down to a bare minimum during the first half. Only 20 points had been scored at the end of the first period, with the UNC squad out on top by a 12-8 count. At the end of the half the hopefuls led the Grads, 21-16.

Grads Rally

With seven minutes left to play in the game, the Grads got hot and scored eight points before the other crew could score. But their attempt was stymied at that point and the regulars put on a blistering attack that lasted until the final whistle.

Coy Carson, who will undoubtedly see lots of action next year, led the scoring for both teams with 13 points. Bill Miller, on the UNC team, was close behind with 12. Bob Paxton led the older crew with 11. Norm Kohler, Fred Swartzberg, and John Dillon each scored 10 points. Roger Scholbe followed with eight markers.

MRS. PAGE WINS

Birkdale, England, May 22—(UP)—America's women golfers—winners of every Curtis cup match since the series with Britain open-en in 1932—continued their monopoly on the international prize today by gaining a 6 1-2 to 2 1-2 triumph.

Singles victories for the U. S. team went to Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Chapel Hill, N. C., Grace Lenczyk of Connecticut, Dot Kielty of California, and Polly Riley of Texas.

Annual WAA Picnic Termed Big Success

By Rita Adams

Poets have their licenses: so why can't women enjoy the same privilege? If you Carolina gentlemen will pardon us for a few lines, we'll discuss the pro's since there seem to be no con's, of the Women's Athletic association picnic Thursday afternoon.

For the first time in many-a-coed's career at Carolina she got together in a blue-jeaned, informal way with dozens of other coeds from every organization on campus. The picnic, which is a non-profit annual affair, is one of the most successful unifying movements sponsored during the year. It gives the gals a chance to let their hair down and gossip with everybody over hot dogs, onions, and cold cokes.

Plenty of Onions

Yes, the arrangements for the party were planned down to the n'th degree, what with Thursday night usually that date-less day, tagged a "week-night," when coeds can eat all the onions they want. Negotiations with the weather-man provided sun a-plenty on the terrace behind the Women's gym, where approximately 200 coeds propped themselves against trees and stretched out on patches of grass.

Our hats are off to the WAA for a job well-done; and here's hoping more campus organizations latch onto such a splendid idea.

Share Your Party

Maybe we should be saying "hello" before we say "goodbye," but better late than never. This job of helping everybody share your parties and other social doings is new; but let's grin and bear it and have fun working together on it. Check?

The Alpha Delta Pi's celebrated their Founder's day last Monday night with a banquet at the Carolina Inn. Active members of the Beta Upsilon chapter entertained the Chapel Hill alumnae as their guests.

After Fran Angas spoke to the group about the "Little Things We Remember about Sorority Life," Kathryn McMillan, next year's president presented her predecessor, Margo Martin, with a gold compact.

Phi Gamma Delta Elects Officers

Several students were pledged recently to Epsilon chapter of the Phi Gamma Delta and a newly elected cabinet was installed by retiring president Tom Stratford.

fly out to deep center and then got Erickson on a grounder to third to end the game.

Catcher Cheek, with a triple, double, and two singles, was the big man in the Carolina offensive department. Co captain Hayworth also contributed three hits. Both boys drove in two runs. Kelly, who had two singles, also batted in a couple of runners.

The fielding gem of the afternoon was turned in by Kelly, the leftfielder for the locals. Jim Made a great running catch of what appeared a sure hit by McCarthy in the seventh inning. He received a good round of applause for his play.

A surprisingly large Saturday afternoon crowd of 5,000 was on hand to witness the meeting of the two old rivals.

The Tar Heels now have an 8-3 won-lost record for the Big Four season.

Viverette Is PiKA Prexy

Joe Viverette was elected president of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity for the summer months at a meeting held Wednesday night. Other summer officers are Tom Weaver, vice president; Charlie Smith, treasurer; Ducky Neal, dining room manager; and Ted Wall, house manager.

The PiKA's also pledged seven new men on Wednesday night. They are Walter Allen, Asheville; Robert Williams, Lumberton; R. J. Hardison, Williamston; Sam Calvert, Managua, Nicaragua; Jack Worsham, Ruffin; and Roy Gunter, Lumberton.

NROTC LANDS

Hogan's lake was invaded Friday, May 14, by sailors of the local NROTC unit and their dates. Anchored at a fire on the hill running back of the lake, the future admirals used the site as a base for extended operations which lasted from 7 until 1 o'clock.

KA's of Big Four Stage Large Party

Carolina's KA's joined with those from Wake Forest, Duke and State college to stage a party at Crabtree state park Saturday afternoon, May 15.

Roughly 100 men were present at the stag affair which started about 2:30 in the afternoon and lasted far into the night.

Chief activities included softball, swimming, and plain conversation. Large quantities of refreshments were consumed by the four chapters which before ending the party are reported to have resolved to make it an annual affair.

Trustees Plan For Inspection Of Dormitory

The Building committee of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees, headed by Collier Cobb, will inspect dormitory "A" of the new group of dormitories Friday afternoon in order to decide whether its stage of completion is suitable for housing the parents and alumni who will attend the commencement exercises.

Director of Operations J. S. Bennett reported that most of the furniture is already in dormitory A and that the balance of it will probably be in sometime this week.

Bennett stated that visitors for commencement will also be placed in other dormitories that have vacancies, and of these visitors, the girls will be assigned to vacancies in the girl's dorms.

Dormitory A will be used for summer students after the commencement, Bennett announced, and he said that the other new dorms can be completed in 30 days, but since they will not be used for students this summer the date of completion will be extended in order to provide time for a more satisfactory finishing job.

Chilean Professor Will Teach Here

The Philosophy department has announced that Prof. C. Finlayson of Chile will be a visiting professor for the fall quarter.

Professor Finlayson will offer two courses: Ibero - American Social Thought which will be available to advanced undergraduates and graduates either as Philosophy 178 or Sociology 178. A knowledge of Spanish is desirable but not a pre-requisite. Five hours credit, to be given at 10 o'clock.

Seminar in Aristotle, Philosophy 304. Graduate students who desire to take this course should consult Prof L. O. Kattsoff. Three hours credit, hours to be arranged.

Finlayson holds degrees from the Catholic university of Chile and the National university of Mexico. He has taught at universities in Chile, Columbia and this year at Harvard. He is the author of four books and about 100 articles on philosophy, sociology and literature.

PI MU EPSILON

Guy Phillips Accepts Job As Education School Dean

THE NEW DEAN of the School of Education which will replace the Department of Education is Guy B. Phillips, former professor of education and director of the summer session here. Phillips replaces Dr. Carson Ryan.

New School Head Is Replacement For Dr. W. C. Ryan

Guy B. Phillips, leader in public education in North Carolina for many years and professor of education and director of the summer session at the University since 1936, has accepted appointment as dean of a School of Education which will replace the Department of Education here, according to President Frank P. Graham and Chancellor Robert B. House.

Professor Phillips replaces Dr. W. Carson Ryan, who recently asked to be relieved of administrative duties and who will continue as professor of education. Dr. Ryan has been granted a leave of absence as Kenan professor of education and will begin work August 1 with the U. S. Department of State, with headquarters in China.

Head Since 1941

Dr. Ryan had headed the department since 1941 when he came here from a period of service with the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching. He is widely recognized as a leader in the field of public education and has served on many national and international educational commissions.

The Executive committee of the Trustees at a recent meeting voted unanimously to create the School of Education and to tender the appointment to Professor Phillips after receiving recommendations from President Graham and Chancellor House who based their recommendations on reports received from a special faculty committee, from deans and other faculty members, and from the State Department of Education, teacher training institutions and many leaders of the public schools in North Carolina.

Faculty Committee

The faculty committee, named by Chancellor House, was composed of A. K. King, associate dean of the Graduate school; W W. Wells, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; C. P. Spruill, dean of the General College; and Dr. R. E. Coker, former head of the Department of Zoology and now Director of the Fisheries Research institute.

President Graham said that Chancellor J. W. Harrelson and Chancellor W. C. Jackson are now working on problems of personnel for the Education departments of State college at Raleigh and the Women's college of the University at Greensboro. Schools of education will be created at both institutions. At present leadership at the Women's college is invested in Dr. Dennis H. Cooke, head of the department, and Dr. Franklin McNutt, director of graduate studies and associate dean of the Graduate School. At State college Dr. Kirkland of the University of Tennessee was recently named head of the department to succeed Dr. Leon Cook who had been acting head.

Statement by Graham

President Graham said the basic considerations in the establishment of a School of Education were:

"1. Continuous and systematic attention to the details of plan-

Playmaker Tryout Is Slated Today For Two New Plays

Public tryouts for the 124th bill of student-written plays will be held this afternoon in the Playmaker theater. The tryouts, which are open to all students and Chapel Hill residents, will begin at 4 o'clock.

The two new plays chosen for production are "Close Quarters" by Catherine McDonald and "Channel Fever" by Robert Rolnik, author of the recently successful comedy, "The Binkle Plan." "Close Quarters" is a comedy based on life in the UNC trailer camp, and Rolnik's play is an experimental mood piece.

Gloria Gunn, who recently appeared as "Roxane" in "Cyrano de Bergerac," will direct "Close Quarters," and Gorden Bennett, assistant technical director who was formerly with the Barter theater of Virginia, will direct "Channel Fever."

Kai Jurgenson, assistant professor, is general supervisor for the experimental bill of plays. He stressed the fact that all students are welcome to try out for parts, or to do technical work, whether they are members of the dramatic art department or not.

SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish club will present an informal talk by Dr. Federico G. Gil on "Popular Latin American Music," illustrated with records from his private collection at its meeting tonight in Caldwell "Y" No. 3. The public is invited.

Library Troubleshooters

'Not as Busy as We Look' Is Slogan for Reference Workers

By Bill Kellam

Every so often most members of the student body find themselves stuck with the task of producing a research paper. Writing the thing is hard enough but your troubles really begin when you find that you often have to hunt up the answers to such classic questions — you usually can't finish the paper till you answer them, either — as those calling for the Greek names of the ancient Egyptian months, or an explanation of the significance of the red band in the coat of arms of the city of Ulster, or the amount of competition the Santa Fe railroad would have in the Southeast.

Tracking down these obscurities would mean hours of effort for most students. Fortunately for those who are foot and eye-weary, though, Miss Georgia Faison, the University refernce librarian who holds forth at the reference desk under the University Library rotundra, and her staff are very glad to help bewildered scholars find such elusive answers.

Many frustrated students don't know that this time saving service exists. Miss Faison asserted when queried about the duties of her staff that there is a staff member present at all times whose sole duty it is to help people find the answers to any type of question that they may have.

Miss Faison declared that she hoped that every student would feel free to "take our noses out of the books in which we put them during our spare time" so that we may help them. "We're always glad to help anyone and we're not as busy as we appear," she added.

The staff members will also be glad to straighten out garbled footnotes, to identify quotations, or to show those interested how to use the various periodicals and card indexes.

So next time that you find yourself all fouled up in your research work, drop by the reference desk and have one of the troubleshooters help you get everything straightened out.

Weil Lecturer Says Socialism 'Natural Result'

Presenting a first-hand picture of events leading up to the present social democracy form of government in England, Richard Henry Tawney, noted British lecturer and author, said last night that "the advent to power of a Socialist government was the natural result of two wars and of the developments which had taken place in the period between them."

Tawney, who is professor of economic history in the University of London, delivered the first of the annual series of Weil lectures. The second and third lectures will be given tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 in Memorial hall.

In his lecture last night Professor Tawney discussed "The English Approach to Socialism." He will discuss "Policies and Methods" tonight, and will conclude tomorrow with predictions as to future trends.

Established at the University on a permanent foundation through the generosity of the families of Sol and Henry Weil of Goldsboro, the Weil lectures were inaugurated in 1914 with the then ex-president and future chief justice of the United States William Howard Taft as the speaker.

Outlining the background of British socialism, Professor Tawney said tonight that western Europe was "confronted by two distinct, though connected, problems.

"In the first place, a modern war resembled a dangerous surgical operation, and England, in common with other European countries was engaged in grap-

Weathers Elected As Head of Band

Bynum Weathers of Shelby has been elected president of the University band for the coming year. James Rogers and Harold Andrews have been elected vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively.

Five new appointments have also been made to administer the band for the coming year. They include Jim Moore, business manager; Clay Crisp, editor of "Band Notes;" Robert Hawkins, publicity manager; Ed Litaker, librarian; and Kenneth Stroup, assistant librarian.

Keys were awarded at the last business meeting to 20 men who have completed nine quarters as members of the band.

UNC Gets $276,000

Raleigh, May 24—(UP)—Yesterday's compromise settlement in Wake county Superior court has resulted in the University of North Carolina becoming $276,000 richer.

N. C. Attorney General Harry McMullan said the money is due because two years ago three railroads charged passengers within North Carolina too much money for their tickets in violation of a ruling of the State Utilities commission.

McMullan says the State has agreed to settle for about one-half of the amount it sought from the railroads.

Budget Problem To Be Decided Tonight

Jernigan Slash Measure Scheduled As First Item of Special Session

Bill Jernigan's plan for correcting the general campus budget deficit will come to the floor of the Student Legislature for discussion tonight, as that body convenes in special session for the last meeting of the school year.

A deficit of $4,667.85 for the operation of the 1948-49 budget is the problem which members of the Legislature and other students have been trying to solve for several weeks now. The Finance committee of the legislative body recommended an increase in the block fee structure as the most practical solution of the matter, but legislators vetoed this in closed session a week and one half ago.

The Jernigan bill would slice $5,097 off the budget for the coming year. The cuts the member of the Finance committee proposes are: Publications—$1,-571; class organizations — $500; literary quarterly—$500; judicial branch of student government—$766; Debate council—$1,000. Appropriations for all other items in the budget would be reduced 10 per cent. Falling under this ruling would be the executive and legislative branches, the Interdormitory council, the Student Entertainment fund and the Carolina Forum.

According to H. A. Kear, Student Activities fund accountant, a surplus of approximately $1,100 will be left over from the 1947-48 budget, provided that no further expenditures are made this year and expected returns are made of unexpended appropriated funds by the organizations which hold them. The unexpended appropriated funds plus the unexpended unappropriated funds from the Legislature's general fund will aid to lessen the budget cuts which must be made on campus organizations operating out of student fees.

The Finance committee of the Legislature met yesterday afternoon in Graham Memorial to continue their discussion of the budget slashes, but decided not to present a new bill to tonight's session.

The special session was called last Thursday by Speaker Jim Godwin after three hours of discussion on the budget bill had resulted in no solution to the problem. At that time he announced that the first item of business of tonight's meeting would be Jernigan's proposal.

Hudson to Deliver Phi Bete Address In Gerrard Today

A. P. Hudson, of the English department, will deliver the Phi Beta Kappa address this afternoon in Gerrard hall at 5 o'clock. Following the initiation there will be an informal banquet at 6:30 at the Carolina Inn. All members, both faculty and students are invited to the banquet.

Hudson will talk about "The New Year's Shoot," which is a custom of issuing in the new year, and seeing out the old. He will trace it back to records of the German speaking people who settled in the Yadkin and Catawba basins, beginning about the middle of the 18th century. From that place and time he will trace the custom to the Rhineland and Moravia in the 17th century.

He expects to play a recording of the "speech crier's" sermon, made by an old man who has participated in this custom for over fifty years.

Hudson's account of the custom will appear soon in "Southern Folklore Quarterly," and later in the "Frank C. Brown Collection of North Carolina Folklore," of which he is one of the editors.

OUTSTANDING BILLS

All persons holding bills against student government are asked to present them at once, according to Jack Girard, chairman of the Finance committee of the Student Legislature.

DEBATE MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Debate council and of all varsity debaters this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge 2 of Graham Memorial, according to Earl Fitzgerald, council president.

Largest Mag Of Year On Printing Presses

Will Be 48 Pages; To Be Dedicated To Thomas Wolfe

The largest Carolina Magazine to be published this year went on the printing presses yesterday and Editor Fred Jacobson stated that he thought the publication would be ready for distribution by this weekend. The final issue of the magazine will climax a 104-year tradition at the University.

A dedication to Thomas Wolfe, one of North Carolina's most famous authors will be contained in seven pages of the current issue.

This being the 10th anniversary of the author's death the issue will feature bibliographies of books by Wolfe and about Wolfe. Contributors for an article recalling Thomas Wolfe include President Graham, Paul Green, Wolfe's sister Mrs. Wheaton, and J. M. Roberts, Wolfe's school teacher and other friends of the author.

The issue will contain an original portrait of Wolfe by Betty Ann Mills which has never been published before. Miss Mills had made a sketch of Wolfe before his death and since that time has painted the portrait with the help of pictures given her by Mrs. Wheaton.

New Yackety Yack Will Arrive Late; Students Must Give Mailing Address

The 1948 Yackety Yack will be late this year, arriving at the University June 14, according to Business Manager Dick Gordon. Plans have been made to mail the Yacks to students who will not attend summer school.

Students who have been here three quarters, beginning the fall quarter, are requested to print their name and the address to which he wants the year book mailed on a gumed label which will be placed in the main lounge of the Y-building tomorrow through Friday. A box will be provided for the labels after they have been filled out.

Hours in which the students may fill out this information are today from 12 to 5 o'clock, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 to 5 o'clock, and Friday from 9 to 1 o'clock.

For every quarter a student is not in school, beginning with the fall quarter and ending with the spring one, the student will pay $1.50. Students not under the block fee covering publications will pay the full cost of the Yack, $4.50.

The year book will be delivered to summer school students beginning June 14.

Lab Theater Group Will Give Comedy By Student Author

Graduate student Mildred Howard, Glasgow, Ky., is the author of the full length comedy, "Mr. Luck," which is being presented tomorrow and Friday evenings at 8:30 by the Laboratory Theater of the Carolina Playmakers in the main lounge of Graham Memorial.

This is Millie's first full length play, although she has written two one-act plays and several radio scripts. It is the first original script and the first modern comedy to be presented by the Laboratory group. No admission will be charged.

Millie, who played "Lise," the pastry cook's unfaithful wife, in the recent Playmaker production of "Cyrano de Bergerac," came to the University last fall. Before that she had attended Bethel Woman's college in Kentucky, and worked with the Pit Playhouse, Pittsburgh, Pa., the Keene Summer theater in New Hampshire, and the Wharf theater in Provincetown, Mass.

"Mr. Luck" is a light comedy centering around a little black cocker spaniel. The scene takes place in a Kentucky home at the present time. The play is being directed by Eleanor Ringer, and Louis Stevens is stage manager. Chuck Morel is handling the properties, and Betty Young is designing the lighting.

Pharmacy Students Elect New Officers

The Pharmacy school has elected the following officers for the coming year: John Hood, Kinston, president; Harry Wilson, Asheville, vice-president; and W. W. Jordan, Raleigh, secretary-treasurer.

Officers for the Student Branch of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical association are Bill Forrest, Winterville, president; Jim Boyles, Cherryville, vice-president; Nina Mosely, Warrenton, secretary; Bob Phifer, treasurer; and Kelly Turner, Speed, representative to Men's Honor council.

COED SENATE

The last meeting for this year of the Coed Senate will be held at 7 o'clock tonight in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Speaker Fran Angas urges that everyone be present as all the business remaining on the calendar of this year will be terminated at this time.

Golf, Beach, Peace . . . | . . . While Whippoorwills Call

Comely Coed Boosts Beer Garden

By Jim Dickinson

A rendezvous where whippoorwills call and draft beer is served in frosted pitchers by the cutest car-tender this side of California.

That's a brief description of Charlie's Drive-In-Range as told by Charlie Stancell, owner and operator of a "beachyfied beer garden" and adjoining driving range, at which golf balls are sold by the bucketful.

And besides, says Charlie, ex-cheerleader and dry cleaning broker (girl's dorms), there's hilltop parking grounds boasting a steady breeze which brings the nocturnal chant of crickets and bullfrogs to supplement the whippoorwill's refrain.

The Drive-In-Range, just outside Chapel Hill on the Durham road, includes a 10-by-12 foot building leading into a beach-like arena of tables, benches, and multi-colored umbrellas imbedded in a 4-inch layer of sand.

Charlie thinks he has about the "uniquest" spot in these parts in the double-feature presentation of frosted beer and golfing facilities.

Joy Blumenthal, comely Carolina coed, is the "rare portion" whose smiling countenance is seen in car-tending duties. Her charm plus the frosted beer creates ample assurance that the customer will be back another night.

CHARLIE STANCELL

The driving range is a novel addition wherein the customer buys himself a bucketful of golf balls and tees off.

Tommy Shineman, who Charlie says is a senior with a "C" average and knows the difference between a golf ball and a coke cap, stands 300 yards down the green and spends his time retrieving the balls.

Charlie says he dreamed up the idea for his beer-golf haven one day when it dawned on him that there's nothing to do in Chapel Hill except drink beer or go to the movies.

"Some folks don't exactly cater to movies," he says," and that's where I come in."

Strangely enough, Charlie has one steady customer who neither likes beer nor golf clubs. She is a middle-30's lady who parks for a while every night or so "just to hear the soothing refrain of the whippoorwills."

A wreck-a-week occurs at the narrow bridge just below the Drive-In-Range, says Charlie, but a sign is being prepared which should alleviate future crack-ups. It will read, "Drive in at Charlie's and avoid impending doom at narrow bridge."

Peace and quiet and lawfulness is the usual watchword at Charlie's beer nest. Last week, however, reports reached Charlie that one person had been charged with "driving drunk at Charlie's Drive-In-Range."

FINAL EXAMINATION SCHEDULE SPRING QUARTER, 1948

Something Must Be Done

For more than a month now the question of what to do about the budget has been puzzling a number of people hereabouts. The problem arose with discovery that errors in the budget would leave, on paper, an $11,000 deficit for this year. The finance committee immediately dug into the situation and found that through absorption of part of the deficit by publications and through unexpended balances in the general fund and in the Student Government, Yack and Interdormitory council appropriations, the budget will balance this year.

This still left the problem of stretching an estimated income of $100,000 for next year to cover appropriations amounting to $103,000. There were three alternatives — raise student fees, borrow money, or cut appropriations. All of them had disadvantages. The Finance committee has worked long, hard and intelligently toward an acceptable solution. The Legislature, to the best of its limited understanding of the situation, has conscientiously but futiley struggled with the dilemma. The executive branch of Student Government has added its bit to the general confusion. Since publications receive two-thirds of the Legislature appropriations and therefore stand to come out on the short end of any deficit, the Publications board has also taken a direct hand in the deliberations.

Both the Legislature and the Publications board are trying to work in the best interests of the student body, but each has its own ideas as to the solution which will serve those interests best. Friction between the two bodies has resulted. Hard names have been called and hard feelings have arisen. Nothing has been accomplished.

Tonight the Legislature meets in special session to consider again the problem of the budget. So far it has voted down bills to increase fees, to borrow money and to cut appropriations. Tonight Bill Jernigan of the Finance committee will introduce another bill to slice the budget. This bill is not the best solution to the problem, but in light of the measures already turned down, it is the only one with a chance of passing the Legislature. Something must be done and done tonight. Every organization on campus cannot suspend its operations indefinitely while the legislature quibbles. Publications will neither back nor oppose the bill, but since it is imperative that some action be taken immediately, this might as well be it.

Report from the Editor

About a month and a half ago when we took over the editor's job we said that no drastic changes would be made immediately. They haven't been. Gradually, however, changes have been made with the intention of giving you a better paper. We have concentrated chiefly on the editorial page, leaving the news and sports pages in the capable hands of Managing Editor Chuck Hauser and Sports Editors Bill Carmichael, III, and Bob Goldwater.

In appearance, Page 2 has undergone an almost complete revamping. Column rules — the black lines between columns — have been eliminated so that the added white space gives a cleaner look and easier readability. The masthead and editorial columns have been condensed from three columns to two, to give more space to other reading matter. The Berryman cartoon has taken the place of Bill Mauldin, who stopped drawing.

Content, too, has been changed and rearranged to give more balance and variety. Drew Pearson and the Berryman cartoon cover the national scene with United Press furnishing biographical sketches on all the presidential candidates in preparation for the coming election. Charlie Long keeps an eye on campus politics, Larry Berry writes about campus problems, Pete Gerns surveys campus opinion, and Dan Sapp covers Victory Village. Coeds have been introduced on Page 2 with the appearance of Lindsay Tate and Alice Denham. R. Foo Giduz with his jargonesque Carousel and Raney Stanford, Bill Buchan and Tom Kerr contribut four different types of general columns, touching upon everything from the REDiculous upward. The battle of the ideologies goes on with Bill Robertson on the left and Ken Gammage on the right. Bill Payeff and C. Renyoz add a dash of humor, while Walter Sharafanowich's question box combines with the crossword puzzle and Li'l Abner to compete with professors. Samples of thinking at other colleges are presented in frequent reprints from their publications, and Write Away is always open to any student who wants to get something off his chest.

The edit page is not yet what we would like it to be. It probably never will be, but we'll keep trying. Improvements will be made in the rest of the paper, too. Big plans are awaiting realization, and if we have as good a staff next fall as we have now, you can look forward to the best Daily Tar Heel ever published.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is published daily, except Mondays, examination and vacation periods by the Colonial Press, Inc. During the official summer terms, it is published semi-weekly on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 8, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per college year, $3.00 per quarter.

Check Mayne On Thursday

By R. Foo Giduz

Well everythings was going along pretty normally and then a young lady came into the office and took a heady look at the typewriter C.C. was pedaling (and peddling). . . . "Is that machine any good or is that the one you write your column on?" she quaintly inquired. . . . (gospel . . .)— Thus cheered on the scribe fourth estatedly crept upward to new ultimates in DTHaranguing!

Good buddies, if you haven't met Mayne Albright, the Raleigh gubernatorial "Challenger," you can check up on him Thursday morning, right around the end of 9 o'clock classes in the Y Court. . . . In Chapel Hill as part of a cross-state motorcade that day . . . And that's no less than a 1924 Model-T Ford now making the town rounds carrying the yellow All Bright with Albright placard. How fittest there the slogan, "Hitched to No Machine!" . . . Things are domestically happy around GM once again. . . . Since an alert Airport road Dogface student returned Boss Bill Shuford's errant cocker spaniel "Vickie." . . . Staffers and advertisers note: He read it in the Daily Tar Heel!

You characters who will be Seniors in quarters henceforth will do so well to remember Sociology 62 at reg. time. . . . That's the "Marriage" course where they really get down to the unvarnished brass tacks of the subject . . . Interesting if not significant point one prof made about it . . . In the 20-odd years "Marriage" has been taught at UNC never has any report of an unsuccessful marriage come back from a student who completed the course. . . . (And it's plenty of work!) . . . It's nothing like the well-known double indemnity wife insurance, but as one coed sed . . . "A few blushes now may pay off later. . . ."

Maybe you're all quandried up for the summer . . . Then it might be in order to suggest school in a foreign country for the next month or so. . . . Most foreign countries are crying for American students, and expenses will generally run a little below CH. . . . South of the border in Mexcity is a great center for American summer school studes and has several Yanqui colleges now. . . .

The big news last Saturday, May 22, was that the NAACP would take the four Negro applications to UNC grad schools to federal courts—soon . . . which sounds like a healthy note of progress. For it was exactly one year before, on May 22, 1947, that NC received one of its nastiest racial black marks in several years. . . . The day of the Northampton county-Godwin Bush lynch scare. . . .

You Know It . . .

By Walter A. Sharafanowich

1. You all know about the tradition of the Confederate Soldier and his Gun . . . well, which way does it point? Towards BVP? South Building? Graham Memorial? Franklin Street?
2. Is his blanket slung over his right shoulder, his left shoulder, or does he have none?
3. Where's his thirst-quencher? Left side? Right side? None?
4. Is his hat brim turned up at the left side? The right side? In front? In back? Not at all?
5. This one should be easy for all you hurry-up-and-wait Lenorians — which of the dining rooms has grey walls?
6. Why the name Green Room in Lenoir?
7. What insignia is impressed in the entrance hall floors?
8. Of what material and shape are the lamps at Lenoir?

Making Summer Pay Off

By Tom Kerr

By the way, what are your plans for the summer months? Are you going to take off for home and that job on the farm or in the city? Or are you going to depart for fresh fields of endeavor? Maybe you are just going to rest the old vacation away on the beach somewhere. Not a bad idea.

Frankly we intend to find ourselves a few square feet on some sunny California strand and seriously work on that tan. But we think vacation ought to mean more than that. What's the catch?

Well you don't have to be making a fortune or subjecting yourself to summer school to keep you from remembering the summer as an alcoholic dream. As a matter of fact there's no better time to organize your thoughts and your actions and put a little direction in that old chaotic life.

Straight stuff, about the time we begin to catch our breath, say a couple of weeks after school, we're going to concoct some mad scheme to make the summer pay off. Haven't really thought about it yet, but it's not to hard to examine that little jem, your's truly, and fine a few unpolished surfaces. So maybe this is going to be the summer we do a little polishing.

What are we talking about? Well, just what do you know about current events, or can you dance as well as you would like to, or maybe a little Shakespeare under the belt wouldn't hurt before Dr. Taylor's course next fall, or you might be able to put a little swimming agility to use sometime. Just a few random ideas.

Yes the summer is going to be a vacation, but there are a lot of places we've always sort of felt inadequate; it really wouldn't be a bad time to spot those old inadequacies and even do something about them.

So when next we stroll through the Y court, come football season, we are going to look back on vacation sort of contentedly, knowing it wasn't just wasted time, and we are a little better person.

This Changing World

Frightful Contradictions'

By Bill Robertson

In last Thursday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel there appeared two articles which aroused our interest. Fully conscious of the limitations of space, we shall try to indicate the path to the solution of the problems puzzling the authors of these articles.

In an article entitled, "Why the Naive Believe," Mr. Kennedy Gammage states "communism has an appeal for two types of people; the naive and the frustrated. . . ." Is it correct to say that ALL sympathizers with communism are "naive" and "frustrated"? The answer is that such a statement does not correspond to the facts. But that is not all. To idly dismiss a world-wide movement, embracing hundreds of millions of people by speaking about "naivete" and "frustration" is to ignore the social CAUSES of that movement. It is to stop the investigation just where it ought to begin.

Of course, there are "naive" and "frustrated" Communists. But, first of all, it must be admitted that there are not a few people, other than Communists, who are naive and frustrated in our society today.

By "naive" we mean lacking in a full understanding of the laws of social development in general and the contradictions of capitalist society in particular as they are revealed by Marxist-Leninist science. (At least, it must be admitted that the Communists are in a better position to study and master this science.)

By "frustrated" we mean lacking in the means to achieve their personal happiness every day in the week. (At least, it must be admitted that an outlook of "democratic optimism" gives real aid to the development of personal happiness from day—especially when that outlook is being confirmed by the facts of history.)

The other article, by Mr. Charles Long, while attacking us, admitted that "there are too many Wall street bankers on Pennsylvania avenue." We assure that if he follows up that "lead" and makes a thorough investigation of our present economic system, he will understand WHY there are Wall street bankers on Pennsylvania avenue.

The question before us is not a question of the "goodness" or "badness" of individual capitalists and working people (although we have ideas on that subject). Rather, it is the question of a system, which inevitably produces frightful contradictions between the interests of the majority of the people and the interests of a minority of multi-millionaires and billionaires who own and control the sources of wealth.

As we have already explained to Mr. Long in a private conversation, limitations of space do not permit us to discuss all of the questions raised in his article, much less all the other questions raised in the Daily Tar Heel by people who have taken an interest in our articles. However, we do not wish to ignore the question of the foreign policies of America and the Soviet Union.

In this connection, we should like to point out that American big businessmen today are openly talking about how "war hysteria," and the contracts it will bring, will delay an economic crisis. At the same time, Communist leaders all over the world are openly talking about the fact that there will be no third world war. (We refer the reader to an article of ours entitled, "Common-ism — Democracy," in the Saturday, May 8th issue of the Daily Tar Heel.) This is an extremely interesting fact and we urge all readers to consider it carefully before passing final judgment upon the future of mankind.

As for ourselves, we have the greatest confidence in that future and, above all, that of the American people. As an expression of this confidence we wish to append the following lines of poetry to our article. These lines were written on Leyte Island in 1944, when the outlines of our bright future were not so clear as they are today:

Sing America! Sing a new song!
Sing with a voice, majestic and strong!
Sing of your purpose, Sing of your youth!
Sing of your visions of freedom and truth!
Sing of the past that has molded you!
Sing of the future, and the infinite new!

The Campus Forum

Stassen Tops Poll

By Pete Gerns

During the last two weeks Campus Forum polled the student body on presidential preferences. Fourteen candidates and three parties were printed on the ballot, with space given for write-in votes. During this period a total of 658 students sent in their ballots, 14 of which were discounted because of either illegibility or non-conformance with the rules. Of the 644 voters, 380 were veterans.

High man leading in all votes cast was Harold Stassen with 216 votes, closely followed by Arthur Vandenberg with 192. Stassen also captured the Democratic vote with 104, ahead of Eisenhower who received 48. Truman tied for third place with 20 votes. Stassen and Vandenberg fought it out to the finish for the Republican vote with Stassen emerging victoriously with 80 ballots over Vandenberg's 72. Vandenberg led the field of independent candidates with 98 votes. Stassen polled 32 in this category.

The choice of party preference ranged all the way from Democratic to Socialist: Of the 644 ballots cast, 240 showed Democrat party preference, 197 Republican, 165 Independent, 34 Progressive, 4 Socialist, 2 Progressive Republican, 1 Southern Democrat (Dixiecrat), and 1 New Dealer.

The following tabulation shows the candidates in alphabetical order. Five candidates, Dr. Graham, Norman Thomas, George Marshall, Jimmy Byrnes, and Eleanor Roosevelt, were write-in candidates. They were led by Dr. Graham with 12 votes. Joe Martin, Speaker of the House of Representatives, was the only name on the ballot who did not receive any votes.

Candidate	Total	Dem.	Rep.	Prog.	Ind.	Soc.	Prog. Rep.	Dix.	New Deal
Ellis Arnall	8	8	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
James F. Byrnes	2	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

Total Votes Cast	644	240	197	34	165	4	2	1	1

This is how veterans voted regardless of party allegiance: Stassen (116), Vandenberg (108), Eisenhower (40), Dewey (32), Wallace (28), Truman (12), Douglas (10), Graham (8), Byrd (4), Marshall (4), MacArthur (4), Thomas (1), Saltonstall (1). Arnall, Byrnes, Mrs. Roosevelt, and Warren did not get any votes in this division.

The female vote was very light, with the majority going to Stassen.

Campus Forum takes this opportunity to thank all students who contributed to make this poll successful. It is due to their cooperation that this balloting could be held.

Letter Was Childish

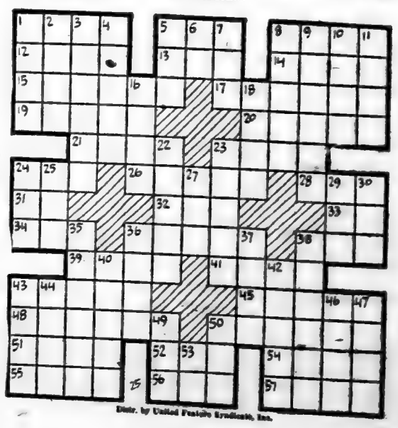
Editor:

To the authors of "Three Red Sweaters":

I was amazed Saturday to see that some of my friends had signed their names to such a letter as "Three Red Sweaters"; I thought they were big boys now.

I say that we cannot be too careful in screening official Russian propaganda—our government has set us an excellent example here. But an undignified lash at a fellow Chapel Hillian seems to me to be carrying things a bit far.

I wonder if those undersigned know Bill Robertson? He is certainly one of the most idealistic (and I think mixed-up) young men I have ever met. But it is precisely for this reason that I have no fear he will ever, as a mature man, take orders from Soviet Russia.



It should be obvious that Mr. Robertson and I are philosophically, politically and religiously opposed, but I still feel that the letter in question is an unwarranted bit of childishness.

Carolina To Take Part In Three NCAA Tourneys

Hearnmen Gain District Three Playoffs; Netters, Golfers to Play in California

Carolina athletes will take part in at least three post-season tournaments sponsored by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, according to announcements made here this weekend.

The Tar Heel baseballers, Big Four and Southern conference champions, have accepted an invitation to participate in the district three regional eliminations scheduled for Charlotte June 10-12. The invitation was tendered Sunday by NCAA officials meeting in Greensboro and assistant Coach Walter Rabb immediately accepted. The team had voted for an affirmative answer earlier in the week.

Tennis and Golf

Carolina will also have three tennis stars representing the University in the NCAA tennis championships at Los Angeles June 21-26, while one golfer, Harvie Ward, will carry the Blue and White hopes in the collegiate golf classic at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., starting June 26.

Those entered in the racquet tourney by Coach John Kenfield are Southern conference singles champion Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor and Heath Alexander. Seixas, the nation's ninth ranking amateur, was runner-up in last year's event, dropping a five-set finals to William and Mary's Gardner Larned. Now at Rollins college, Larned is not eligible to compete this season.

Four in Playoffs

Also named along with Carolina in the regional baseball playoffs were George Washington, third-place finisher in the Southern conference, and Georgia Tech and Alabama, both among the leaders in the Southeastern conference.

Alabama and George Washington will clash in the first game of the tourney, a twilight contest slated for 6 o'clock on June 10. The Tar Heels battle Georgia Tech that same evening in an arc-light affair.

Winner of the regional eliminations will represent district three in the eastern championships scheduled for Winston-Salem June 15-18. The eastern victor will then meet the winner of the western division at Kalamazoo, Mich., in a best two-out-of-three series starting June 24.

Carolina may also enter several men in another NCAA championship event, the track classic set for the University of Minnesota campus at Minneapolis.

Trackmen Prepare For IC4A Games

Cheered by their brilliant and unexpected 81-50 triumph over Duke at Durham last Saturday, Coach Dale Ranson's track crew, Southern conference champions, began preparations yesterday for the 72nd annual IC4A championships to be held at Randall's Island in New York on May 28-29.

Although the regular season is closed, 10 of the Tar Heel aces have been tentatively entered in the meet. Coach Bob Fetzer and his aids will decide early this week whether all of those entered will participate.

Those scheduled to represent Carolina are Henry Hickman, pole vault; Jack Moody, high and broad jumps; Bill Joyner, broad jump; Sam Magill, mile run; Julian MacKenzie, mile run and 880; Bob Morrow, high and low hurdles; Don Nelson, 220; Bob Seligman, shot and discus; Ted Shultz, low hurdles; and Dick Taylor, high hurdles.

Nelson turned in a sparkling 21.1 time to take the 220 in the Duke meet, tying the Southern conference record, and Shultz turned in another conference-tying time of 23.5 to win the low hurdles.

Date Ticket Offer Closes This Week

Students who will worry how to get that weekend date into the football games come September can solve their problems with a trip to the Gym this week.

For down at the Athletic ticket office a limited number of season tickets are being placed on advanced sale for the benefit of students who get left out in the cold during the July ticket rush.

The tickets are in Section 13, which will be adjacent to the student sections and are priced at the full retail value.

Sales will conclude this weekend, so all students who wish to take advantage of this offer had better act today. Response thus far, has been extremely light.

Softball Finals Scheduled Today

The fraternity and dormitory titles in the horseshoe competition were taken yesterday by Sigma Nu 3 and the Mud Dobbers respectively as the final week of intramural play opened.

Sigma Nu captured both doubles matches from Sigma Chi to assure the victory despite a defeat in the singles. The Mud Dobbers dropped the first games in both doubles matches but came back with some sure slinging to take two straight wins and the doubles titles. Coupled with an easy singles victory, the wins were good for a 3-0 shellacking of the Locals.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock the two winners will take to the pits to decide the all-campus title holder in what should be a tight battle.

Final round tilts will be held in both the fraternity and dormitory divisions in softball this afternoon with the winners copping their loop crowns. In the fraternity game PiKA 2 will meet Zeta 2 for the top spot. The Misfits tangle with Emerson for the remaining title.

In the three contests held in softball yesterday to determine who was to move into the final competition, two games were decided by tight pitching and the other was taken by a heavy hitting outfit.

The Misfits jumped off to a first inning three run lead thanks to a triple, a single, and Bill Spiegel's homer. They sewed the game up tight in the next frame with four more runs to win going away over the Med School, 10-4.

PiKA 2 moved into the finals by edging out Chi Phi 2 with one run in the last inning to win 3-2. In another tight tilt Zeta 2 squeezed by Phi Kap Sigma, last year's all-campus champ, with two rallies in the last two innings good for a 4-3 victory.

Jayvees Defeated, 3-2, by Wolfcubs In Close Pitchers' Duel at State College

By Mel Horowitz

Driving in two runs with a clean single in the bottom half of the fifth, Buddy Livingston of State proved to be the difference yesterday afternoon as the Carolina jayvees dropped a 3-2 decision to the Wolfcubs in Raleigh.

It was strictly a pitcher's field day as there were only nine hits in the contest and several of them were of the scratch variety. The Tar Babies collected but five bingles from the offerings of Owens, while the A & M school put their four safe blows to good advantage.

Don Ward versatile leftfielder of the Housemen was top man at bat for the visitors with two for four. He also scored both the Carolina runs

Starter McGinn

Starter Bill McGinn was tabbed with loss and he was forced to retire in the sixth with a sore arm after giving up all of the Wolfcubs' hits and runs. He pitched well and had it not been for loose fielding only one tally would have crossed the plate. Reliefer Ralph Brake didn't allow a hit in the two and 1-3 innings he worked.

Ace Owens of State, however, stole the show with a classy pitching job. He gave up only five hits and struck out eleven Tar Babies.

The jayvees drew first blood in the top of the first when they put together a single by Ward and a one bagger by John Senter to push across a marker. Ward got into scoring position on an error by the centerfielder.

Held Scoreless

Although they were held scoreless from then to the ninth inning when Ward's second hit of the day, an error, passed ball, and safety by Ed Lamb sent Don scompering across the plate. The Tar Babies threatened in the second. Charley Gurganus opened the canto with a single and was followed by Joe Brookshire's lone hit of the day. However, the Tar Babies dodn't have the punch to drive in a tally.

State picked up a run in the fourth on Hank Lixingston's walk, Buddy Livingston's one bagger, a fielder's choice, and an error. Burge opened the home half of the fifth by getting on first on Senter's error. This was followed by a sacrifice, a single by Owens, a wild pitch and Livingston's hit, which caused two Wolfcubs to trot home.

Loop Rule Clinic Here on Thursday

A rules clinic for all Southern conference football officials will be held in Kenan stadium on Thursday afternoon, the football office announced yesterday.

The one-day school will bring together the loop watchdogs for an afternoon's session on the practical basis to get acquainted with the 67 changes that will appear in the fall sport next season.

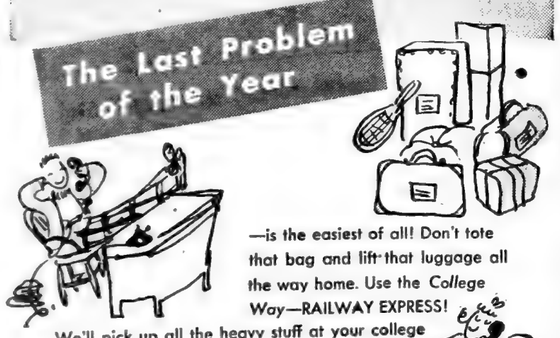
To similate general battle conditions for the drill, Coach Carl Snavely will call on some thirty of his charges to be on hand to demonstrate the school. The following players are asked by the gray-haired mentor to be dressed and on the field by 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Whites: Justice, Hayes, Hartig, Clements, Powell, Fowle, Mitten, Stiegman, Flamisch, Knox, Sherman, Bauer, Romano, McDonald, Highsmith, McLane, Logue, and Cooke.

Alternates: Bunting, Koontz, Norcross, Hansen, Wardle, Bernot, Spurlin, Marczyk, and Washington.

Any of those listed above who can not for any reason take part in the clinic should call the Football office.

There will be four major changes discussed among the 67 infractions up for demonstration. A training film will proceed the field drills.



POOL SCHEDULE

Mechanical difficulties held up yesterday's opening of the outdoor swimming pool until this afternoon, weather permitting.

A new schedule of hours has also been released. Monday through Friday and Sunday the pool will be open from 2-5. Saturdays the pool will be available for use from 1-5.

Playoff-Bound Diamondmen Drill For Season's Finale Against State

By Larry Fox

With the Big Four and Southern conference championships under their belts, the Tar Heels began prepping for tomorrow's regular season finale with State and the regional playoffs of the NCAA tournament next month.

The "Gashousers" clinched the league title Saturday when they downed Duke in a wild and wooly 10-8 fracas. The Blue Devils jumped off to an early 5-0 lead, but the locals came back to double up the score on the Durhamites. Even so, Carolina had to withstand a ninth-inning rally to take the decision.

Vinnie DiLorenzo went all the way to record his first victory over Duke in his two years of Big Four pitching. Emmett Cheek was the big gun in the Tar Heel attack that afternoon with four safeties in as many attempts. One of his blows landed in the midst of the diamond in the southwest corner of Emerson and went for three bases. It was easily the longest hit of the season in the Chapel Hill park.

VMI Helps

Virginia Military Institute did the Tar Heels the greatest service of any team in the loop when they knocked off Maryland Friday. The Terps had a 4-1 record in league competition and a victory over the Cadets would have won them the pennant regardless of the efforts of Carolina.

EMMETT CHEEK

VMI, lodged in 14th place in the league standings, bounced up to paste a 12-3 defeat on the Old Liners and drop Maryland out of contention for the title.

Carolina still has one more game on its schedule before ending the regular campaign. The Tar Heels travel to Raleigh tomorrow to face the Wolfpack of State college.

Safe in First

The game will affect neither team's standings in the conference. Carolina is safely set in first place while the Wolfpack is resting in 11th spot.

Washington and Lee, which was also a contender for the SC championship until late last week is in second place with a 10-4 league record. George Washington, a participant in the NCAA playoffs is third and Maryland is fourth.

The Colonials have a 7-3 slate for loop play. Next in line is VPI with a 6-4 mark

Two neighboring schools, Wake Forest and Duke, rest in the sixth and seventh positions. Wake Forest has a 9-6 record. Duke has played the most conference games of the 16 teams, 19, and has won 10 of them.

Batting Practice

Regular batting practice and defensive play situations were emphasizen in yesterday's workouts. Just about everybody got a chance to do some chunking to the batters.

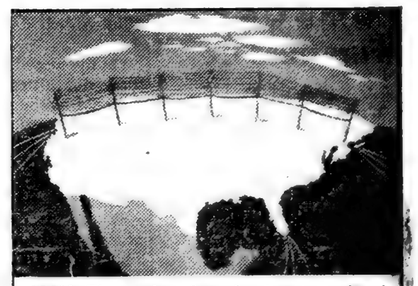
Buster Stevenson was first on the mound followed by Claude Crocker, Dean Cassell, George Whitted, and Tommy Andrew.

While Cassell was pitching, Coach Walter Rabb had him practice fielding bunts with first and second base occupied and making the play at third. Cassell's hook showed some of its old zip as he caught some of the batters flatfooted in the hitting cage.

Rurac Wins Sedgefield Singles Crown

Vinnie Rurac, Mulhenberg's colorful fellowship student from Romania, showed great form in defeating Cornell's Dick Savitt for the second annual Sedgefield Tennis tourney singles championship in Greensboro last Sunday.

Savitt dragged the contest out to the full five sets before giving way to the Romanian star. Rurac won the first set, 7-5, but lost the second, 1-6. He came back to win the third, 6-2, only to lose again in the fourth, 2-6. However, Invincible Vinnie showed his real power in the final, defeating Savitt, 6-4, for the title.



In doubles play, the combination of Rurac and Savitt proved superior to that of Taylor and Dick Covington, of Washington, D. C. The title went to Rurac and Savitt as they copped the first two sets of a three set match, 6-1, and 7-5.

Some telephone numbers you ought to know

516,500—It takes this number of men and women to operate the twenty-two Bell Telephone Companies. Each operating company is responsible for furnishing telephone service within its own territory.

26,000—The number of people who are employed in the Long Lines Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It is their function to provide Long Distance and Overseas service.

131,400—This numbers the employees of the Western Electric Company who manufacture, purchase and distribute equipment and supplies for the entire Bell System.

6,000—That's the number of people in Bell Telephone Laboratories. Through research and development they constantly improve this country's telephone service—already the finest in the world.

2,100—That's the number of people in the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Through advice and assistance, they coordinate the activities of the entire Bell System.

In all, there are some 682,000 men and women in the Bell System. As this country's communications service is expanded and improved, opportunities will grow still greater. There's a future in telephony.

'The Gay Philosopher' Is Missing From Wall

By Sam Whitehall

"The Gay Philosopher" is missing and the owner is offering a reward for its return and no questions asked.

According to reports, "The Gay Philosopher" is a painting which previously hung in Nash study hall. The portrait is owned and was painted by Jack Camp, English major and art minor. It is a 40 by 60 inch reproduction of the original by Major.

Camp is offering a $25 reward for any information leading to the recovery of the painting. A description of the portrait, according to Camp, is as follows:

"It is framed in a five-inch gilt frame. The picture is of a middle-aged, jovial man with a brown hat and red coat against a green background." Camp says he first missed the painting at noon Friday.

The janitor in the building reported that it had been gone for about two weeks. Camp said the picture was not for sale and he had refused two offers already. He pointed out that he had spent between 30 and 50 hours on the reproduction and that "I must have it back, no questions asked."

A complaint has been lodged with the local police department.

Student Out On Bond After Arrest In Valuable Stamp Collection Theft

By Herb Nachman

The theft of a stamp collection valued at between $2,000 and $3,000 landed Edward C. Haake, senior from Richmond, Va. in the Chapel Hill jail yesterday.

Haake was arrested by Officer W. D. Blake of the local police department, shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Haake was heading toward town from the airport where he is employed as a night watchman. According to chief W. T. Sloan, Haake posted his own bond of $700 and was released about 3:30 yesterday afternoon after making a full confession of the crime. The preliminary hearing will be held here in Recorders Court next Tuesday.

The valuable collection of American stamps was allegedly stolen by Haake from Robert Rossfield, a recent graduate of the University. Rossfield said the stamps were stolen from the trunk of his 1948 Oldsmobile on the night of May 5.

Having no definate evidence, Rossmield said he decided not to take action until Haake tried to sell the stamps. Rossfield informed the Chapel Hill police and descriptions were sent out to cities throughout the North Carolina, Virginia and as far north as Washington, D. C. to be on the lookout for the stamps and Haake.

Sunday, Officer Blake reported word had been received from Richmond that some of the collection had been sold to a dealer there. Rossfield went to Richmond immediately to identify the stamps. Later, the warrant was served on Haake by Officer Blake.

According to Rossfield, the trunk of his car was broken open with a crowbar while he slept and the stamps were removed. Rossfield said he suspected Haake all the time but didn't have enough evidence to accuse him. Police reported they investigated the car but that no fingerprints of value were found.

ning, organizing, and administering a broad and comprehensive program of teacher education on both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

"2. Increasing research activities on the part of the staff and more research facilities and opportunities for both the students and staff.

"3. A well articulated program of educational services for the schools of North Carolina and the region."

Special Studies Made

President Graham said that creation of the Schools of Education at each of the three institutions of the threefold University, replacing departments in operation since 1933, was in line with special studies made by the University of the problems of teacher education and leadership for the public schools and the special study now being made by the North Carolina Education commission appointed by the last General Assembly. This commission, which was allotted $50,000 by the General Assembly, had an additional $100,000 by the Knapp foundation through the cooperation and leadership of President Graham. The University president expressed "deep appreciation to members of the Commission and to its counsel of experts making the survey."

To Include More Services

He said it "will be the purpose of the University to expand its offerings to include more services to the public schools of the state and region. This will call for new staff members selected to provide the type of leadership required. Reorganization of the program will take several months of study and investigation.

"The School of Education will continue to be closely allied with all the departments of the University and will serve as a directing agency for the improvement of teacher education."

Dean Guy Phillips is a native of Randolph county and was educated here and at Columbia university. He began his teaching career in the Raleigh high school in 1913 where he followed Frank P. Graham as an instructor in English and athletic coach. He subsequently served as superintendent of schools at Oxford, Salisbury, and Greensboro.

Served During War

At the University of North Carolina, where he has been since 1936, he has served as professor of education, director of the summer session, director of the Teachers Placement bureau, and during the war he served as executive officer of the College for War Training.

For many years he has been prominently identified with the educational leadership of the state, having served as president of the State Education association, as member of Governor McLean's Committee on Negro Education, as executive secretary of the Governor's Commission on Education in 1938, and as organizer of the State School Board association which he has served as executive secretary since 1937.

"In the second place, even when those difficulties were overcome, it would not be either possible or desirable merely to restore the pre-war social order. It would be necessary to work out a new synthesis, which would do justice both to the values of the liberal era and to aspects of life to which that era had too often been blind. Great Britain was engaged on both tasks at once."

BERNARD H. ANDERSON

Dr. Anderson Given Post in Department Of Biblical Study

Dr. Bernard H. Anderson of the Department of Religion at Colgate university has accepted appointment as associate professor of biblical literature in the Department of Religion on the James A. Gray foundation here, according to Chancellor Robert B. House and Dr. Arnold Nash, head of the Department of Religion.

Dr. Anderson's appointment is the first one on the Gray foundation which was established here last year.

Regarded as one of this country's promising young biblical scholars, Dr. Anderson is now engaged in writing a commentary on the Book of Esther and has already published a number of articles in learned journals.

He received his B. A. degree at the College of the Pacific in California in 1936 and his B. D. and M. A. degrees at the Pacific School of Religion. He held the Two Brothers fellowship at Yale university in 1945 when he was awarded his Ph. D. degree by that institution.

Dr. Anderson will come to Chapel Hill in June and will teach in the first term of the summer session. He will give lectures on "The Making and Meaning of the Old Testament," The Making and Meaning of the New Testament," "Varieties of Religion in American Life and Culture," "Christian Tradition from Augustine to the Present Day," "The Prophets of Israel," and "Jesus and the Gospels."

Mexico Planners Will Meet Today

Students interested in or already planning to attend summer school in Mexico City or thereabouts are invited to meet together this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Purpose of the session will be to make travel arrangements and discuss the schools and accommodations in the Latin capital. At present there are two American summer school colleges in Mexico City as well as a number of other GI accredited institutions in other parts of the country.

Wilkinson Schedules Talk For Tomorrow

John Wilkinson, Republican candidate for the United States senate, will give an address in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Wilkinson, a University graduate of 1931 and prominent attorney of Washington, N. C., is appearing here under the auspices of the Young Republicans club and the Carolina Political union.

A meeting of the YRC will be held in Graham Memorial today at 1 o'clock to discuss plans for a dinner to be held prior to the speech. Students desiring reservations are asked to attend the meeting.

Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, political science professor, will introduce the speaker. Bill Hipple, YRC president, will preside.

Wilkinson's address will concern his policies as a senatorial candidate and will include a discussion of the Mundt-Nixon bill now before Congress.

The senatorial aspirant now serves as vice-chairman of the national Young Republicans club and president of the state Young Republicans club.

Phi Beta Kappa Initiates 57 Seniors, 26 Juniors

Yesterday afternoon in Gerrard hall 26 juniors and 57 seniors and graduates were initiated into the Phi Betta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity. Following the initiation A. P. Hudson, of the English department, delivered the Phi Beta Kappa address at a banquet at the Carolina Inn.

In Hudson's talk, "The New Year's Shoot," he dicussed the custom of issuing in the new year, and seeing out the old. He traced this custom back to records of the German speaking people who settled in the Yadkin and Catawba basins, beginning about the middle of the 18th century. From that place and time he traced it to the Rhineland and Moravia in the 17th century.

The speaker played a recording of the "speech crier's" sermon, made by an old man who has participated in this custom for over 50 years. Hduson's account of the custom will appear soon in "Southern Folklore Quarterly," and later in the "Frank C. Brown Collection of North Carolina Folklore," of which he is one of the editors.

To be eligible for Phi Beta Kappa a student must make an average of 92.5 on a three or four-year basis. On a two-year basis a student must have a 94 average.

The president and vice-president of the organization succeed to the position by virture of their average. Lewis Howard Thacker, of Greensboro, is president of Phi Beta Kappa for next year, and Joseph Freeman Jones of Winston-Salem is vice-president. Thacker has an average of 96.63, and Jones' average is 96.38.

Initiation was conducted by officers of the organization, who are John M. Simms, president; Robert Coulter, vice-president; Hilda Frances Lawrence, recording secretary; and Dean E. L. Mackie, corresponding secretary and treasurer. Last year 22 juniors and 47 seniors were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa.

Banquet Session Of Local Masons Hears Timberlake

"No man has the right to claim that he has a monopoly of the truth," said Dr. E. W. Timberlake, Jr., professor of law at Wake Forest college and past grand master of the Masons of North Carolina, speaking to the University student Masons organization, the Brazen Pillars, members of University lodge No. 408, and their guests at a banquet held at the Carolina Inn Monday night.

"If we believe our brother to be in error," Dr. Timberlake said, "it is both our right and our duty to correct his error, but we may not hate him nor persecute him nor deny him the same right that we claim for ourselves."

The banquet marked the conclusion of the first five months of activities since the club's organization in January. Members of the University lodge commended the group for its work.

The club entertained 22 boys from the Oxford orphanage Saturday at the Carolina-Duke baseball game at Emerson field and at a picnic supper following the game.

DELTA PHI ALPHA

Delta Phi Alpha, German honorary fraternity, will initiate new members in a ceremony to be held at 7 o'clock tonight in Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial.

Former President of Student Body Expresses Opinion on Mag Banning

A letter has been received by "Spike" Saunders, alumni secretary, from Garland B. Porter, president of the Carolina student body in 1922, regarding the abolition of the Carolina Magazine.

According to Porter, "I incline to the view that no one student body should be empowered to abolish the magazine which has lived longer than any one of those students will probably live and which have hardly reached the vantage point of enough years and experience to condemn a publication that has served as a stepping stone to some important members of society and the literary world."

Porter, who is connected with the Southern Advertising and Publishing company in Atlanta, was president of the UNC student body in 1922.

In his letter, Porter goes on to say, "I note that the final issue will be dedicated to Thomas Wolfe, one of my esteemed fellows at Chapel Hill. Bear in mind that the Magazine meant something to Tom as itself, not as a thing to kill and memorialize him in so doing. I think it is a sad commentary on the literary activities of the students if they cannot engender enough interest in their publication to keep it alive, and if it is money they lack, I will be willing to aid in that.

"Will you please let me know the losses it incurs in a year? I will undertake to sell some advertising into the publication, at no cost to the publication, and it might be possible to save it even yet. There will be another stu-

Laboratory Theater To Give 'Mr. Luck' In Graham Memorial

Tonight at 8:30 the Laboratory Theater of the Carolina Playmakers will present the first of two free performances of Mildred Howard's original full length play, "Mr. Luck," in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. The play will be presented again tomorrow night.

Director Eleanor Ringer says the true leading role in the comedy is Mr. Luck, a small black cocker spaniel, played by Bonnie who is owned by Barbara Malone.

Cast Listed

Betty Gwyn Finley will play Frances Taylor, and Bob Barr, who has appeared this year in "Saint Joan," "An Enemy of the People," and co-author of "Sweep it Clean," will play Dr. Taylor. Edna Dooley, recently in "Fashion" and "The Inspector General," will appear as Mrs. Taylor, while Pat Palmer, comedy star of "Sweep It Clean," will play Lois Taylor. Margie Cameron will play Carolyn Taylor, Ellen Smith will portry Mary Lloyd Taylor, and Mac Shaw, recently in "Cyrano de Bergerac," plays J. Hubert. George Upchurch, also a member of the "Cyrano" cast, is Joel.

Murray McCain will appear as Timothy Thistlethwaite, and Danny Hughes, also a "Cyrano" cast member, will portray Baskin Sims, the local politician and newspaper owner.

First Original Show

The full length comedy will be the first original play to be produced by the laboratory group, and it is the first modern comedy to be staged by the company since its organization two years ago.

The scene of the play is the Taylor home in a small town in Kentucky. It centers around Mr. Luck, a small dog, who is the bone of contention in the Taylor household.

TWO MORE ISSUES

The last issue of the Daily Tar Heel for the spring quarter will be published Friday in order to give everyone (including staff members) a chance to study for exams. The newspaper will return at the beginning of the first summer session, on a bi-weekly basis which will continue until fall.

Three Tons of Clothing Sent From Chapel Hill for Overseas

Three tons of clothing has left Chapel Hill since January for distribution among needy people in Europe as the result of the two CRIL-sponsored clothing drives for overseas relief.

First of the two drives, conducted in January, accounted for 1,700 pounds of clothing, while the remaining 4,300 pounds was collected during the drive just completed. The majority was sent to Church World Service in New Winsor, Maryland, for packing and shipment overseas. However, small amounts are being sent personally by the various religious groups.

Typical Family

Typical of Europeans being helped is the family of Alfred Wagner, 36-year-old former prisoner of war, now living in the French zone of Germany. Wagner's release after 37 months as a prisoner of war in the United States and 13 months in England as a prisoner, was followed by a three month search for his wife and children.

Before the war the family had a farm in the province of Pommern, Poland, which had been in Wagner's family for 220 years. They lost the farm as well as all other possessions during the war. Wagner now works in a drug-store.

Last Name Needed

In his letter to the local YW CA he said that while at Camp Robinson he had met a man from Chapel Hill whose Christian name was Henry Robert. The former prisoner of war would like to get in touch with the man but is unable to find out the Chapel Hillian's last name.

Several boxes of clothing, linens and toilet articles are being sent to the Wagner's by the YW CA as well as toys for the two little girls ages five and seven and the son aged three months. The YWCA plans to sent additional boxes of clothing and other articles next fall.

TMA Meeting Today Will Discuss Picnic

There will be a meeting of the Town Men's association this afternoon at 4:30 in Roland Parker lounge No. 1 in Graham Memorial.

Final plans for the picnic at Hogan's Friday night will be discussed. All town men who have signed up for the picnic are urged to be there.

Tickets for the picnic are still on sale at the "Y" through today. Anyone who is not a town student but would like to go will be charged $1. The other $.50 is the membership fee.

YACK STAFF

All people interested in working on the 1949 Yackety Yack are asked to come to a meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Yack office, Graham Memorial.

Five University Students Given Grail Scholarships

Five students have been awarded scholarships by the Order of the Grail, it was announced yesterday by the University Scholarship committee, headed by Dean D. D. Carroll of the Commerce school.

The scholarships were awarded for the year 1948-49.

The five winners are: Edward Albert Bryant, Lenoir; Jacob Lewis Cross, Lexington; John Edwin Duke, Goldsboro; Rufus King Hayworth, High Point, and Merle Marie Stevens, Forest City. Harvey M. Brinkley, Jr., Durham, was named first alternate in the event one of the five students should not use his or her scholarship.

From time to time since the establishment of these scholarships, the Grail has been able to add to the original endowment from net receipts from dances given for the welfare of the entire student body. The scholarships are awarded on a basis of high scholastic record, participation in outside student activities and contribution to the welfare of the student body, and need for earning part of University expenses.

Friday Last Day To Fill Out Form For Yack Mailing

Students have until Friday to give their mailing address at the Y-building for forwarding the 1948 Yackety Yack, which will be distributed June 14.

Students who have been here three quarters, beginning the fall quarter, are requested to print their name and address to which he wants the year book mailed on a gummed label which will be placed in the main lounge of the Y-building. A box will be provided for the labels after they have been filled out.

Hours in which the students may fill out this information are today and tomorrow from 9 to 5 o'clock, and Friday from 9 to 1 o'clock.

For every quarter a student is not in school, beginning with the fall quarter and ending with the spring one, the student will pay $1.50. Students not under the block fee covering publications will pay the full cost of the Yack, $4.50.

The yearbook will be delivered to summer school students beginning June 14, according to Business Manager Dick Gordon.

Commissions Offered In Regular Air Corps

Former Air Force personnel and other veterans and non-veterans who desire regular Air Force commissions upon graduation or at a later date may obtain application blanks at the Air ROTC office, according to an announcement by Lt. Col. C. J. Galligan of the Air University United States Air Force.

The survey now underway, said Galligan, is designed to supplement a program started several weeks ago for determining the interest and qualifications of students desiring Air Force commissions.

Applications should be turned in not later than June 5. Applicants who did not qualify for the previous program are encourage to apply at this time.

Loudermilk's Bill Provides Solution In Special Session

By Chuck Hauser

It took two special sessions and some parliamentary chicanery to do it, but the Student Legislature finally got the 1948-49 campus budget balanced last night.

The legislative body convened shortly before 8 o'clock, adjourned at 9 o'clock, reconvened at 9:01 and adjourned at approximately 9:35, a balanced budget and several other bills comfortably under its belt.

Loudermilk Bill Passed

The convene-adjourn-convene routine merely helped to expedite matters, legislators pointed out, so that all business could be disposed of yesterday evening. The result of the confusing rigamarole was the passage of a budget bill written by UP Legislator Charlie Loudermilk, with the aid of Thurman Williams, Ed Davenport and Len Butt.

The measure, called a "very satisfactory compromise bill" by Publications Board President Billy Carmichael, was favorably reported out of a Finance committee meeting held only a few minutes before the Legislature first convened for the special session which Speaker Jim Godwin called last Thursday night.

The bill was brought to the floor in the Finance committee report made by Chairman Jack Girard. It calls for the following cuts in the 1948-49 budget: Publications — $1,500, Debate council — $1,500, literary quarterly — $500, Men's council — $750, class organizations — $500, entertainment supplement — $500, Legislature — $72.

To Be Restored

Article 2 provides that if additional funds are available to the Legislature next year, the original budget will be restored as much as possible.

The Loudermilk proposal was substituted for the slash bill first brought to the floor last week by Bill Jernigan. Jernigan's bill was pushed out of the way for the new measure soon after the lawmaking body began its business of the evening.

The new cut bill, after the Legislature was adjourned and another special session called, passed the body by a vote of 32 to 7, with 5 persons casting no vote and 6 reported absent from the meeting.

Roll Call Vote

The roll call vote on the budget-balancing measure went as follows:

YES (32)—UP (23): Barnes, Benbow, Benjamin, Black, Boren, Butt, Cornish, Davenport, Duke, Girard, Knight, E., Knight A., Leary, Leonard, Loudermilk, Mitchell, Nance, Ogburn, Rodman, Sharkie, Smith, Williams, Yarborough; SP (5): Baker, Farris, Kerr, McNutt, Washington; CP (4): Cofield, Jones, Rosser, Talley

NO (7)—SP (6): Alexander, Allen, Alisbrook, Lowenstein,

Oldest Alumnus

George McCorkle of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, oldest living graduate of the University, has made reservations to attend the 154th commencement exercises here June 5-7. Formerly a resident of Newton, Mr. McCorkle for many years was an attorney with the Federal Trade commission in Washington. He has made his home with a daughter for several years.

Now 91 years of age, Mr. McCorkle will observe the 70th anniversary of his graduation this June.

Pianist, Soprano Joint Recital Is Set for Tonight

Samuel Andrew, piano student from Albemarle, and Hilda Frances Lawrence, soprano from Asheville, will give a joint recital in Hill hall tonight at 8:30.

Miss Lawrence, who will be accompanied at the piano by Richard Rancourt, Waterville, Me., will sing, "Sento nel core," Scarlatti; "la Chi vuol la zingarella," Paisiello; "Se tu m'ami," Pergolesi; selections from "Don Giovanni" and Die Zauberflote" by Mozart; "Nell," Faure; "Romance and Mandoline," Debussy, and "Chere nuit," Bachelet.

Andrew will play "Partita No. 3 in A minor," J. S. Bach; "Sonata No. 23 in F minor," Beethoven; and two etudes by Chopin.

William Fitzgerald, New Bern, clarinetist, will give a recital in Hill hall tomorrow at 8:30, and Miss Anne Brown, Raleigh, pianist, will appear in recital Sunday afternoon at 4:30.

Hillel Foundation Schedules Banquet

A banquet and concluding religious service has been set by the Hillel foundation this Friday evening according to Ira Antin, retiring president of the organization.

Delicatessen will be served at a buffet supper to be held at 6 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 1 and 2. Services will begin at 7 o'clock.

Following the banquet, Hillel keys will be presented by Mrs. Lillian Rosenberg, the foundation's advisor. Officers for the coming year will also be installed.

All members and Hillel friends are invited.

VETERANS NOTICE

All veterans will receive their leave pay on July 1, according to Col F. Carlyle Shepard, veterans adviser. Col. Shepard warned, however, that all veterans must notify the VA of their change of address for the summer by filling in an address form at either 111 Peabody or 316 South building.

Final Meeting of Carolina Quarterly Will Plan for First Issue Next Fall

The Carolina Quarterly staff will hold its final meeting of the year in Roland Parker No. 3 at 3 o'clock this afternoon, according to an announcement by Bill Sessions, editor of the new literary magazine.

Sessions urges the attendence of all members of the staff and also those students who are interested in joining the Quarterly's editorial and business staffs.

Participating in today's meeting will be the Faculty Advisory committee, the Finance committee, and the editorial and business staffs of the Quarterly.

Sessions will preside at the meeting and addressing the meeting will be Emily Sewell, business manager, and the Quarterly's newly appointed assistant editors, Roy Moose and Pricilla Moore.

The meeting will hear plans for the summer and early fall activities of the magazine's staffs and committees. The Finance committee is expected to report on its work to date and to announce plans for securing donations to support the Quarterly. A program is now underway for selling subscriptions to the magazine on a statewide basis.

The Quarterly's editors, with the advice of the Faculty committee, will set forth plans for publishing the magazine's first issue next fall.

Stassen Is It

A poll of student preferences for the next president of the United States, printed on this page yesterday, showed what similar polls in colleges throughout the nation have already reported. Stassen and Vandenberg are the students' choices, and all other candidates are trailing far behind.

In analyzing the results of the poll it must be remembered that only about one-tenth of the total student body registered their opinions. That some of those who took part are undoubtedly below the voting age must also be remembered.

Coupled with results reported at other colleges, however, the poll does seem significant in some aspects. Here, where a majority of students are Southerners and Democrats, the poll can be interpreted either as a tendency among students to vote for the man without regard to his party, or as a definite trend away from the Democratic party. The first of these interpretations is probably the more nearly correct one. The liberal sentiment among students here would normally align them with the liberal policies of the Democratic party rather than with the more conservative Republicans. Former expressions of opinion have indicated that Truman's stand on civil rights, currently perturbing southern governors, would have little effect upon the vote of Carolina students. And in placing Stassen at the head of the list the students have voted for a Republican who is supposedly a liberal.

One interesting feature of the poll is that in spite of all the noise raised by the Wallace club here, Henry polled only 42 of the 644 votes and ran a very poor fourth in the balloting.

Unofficial Ambassadors

The call of beaches and mountains is sounding, the last few days of classes are rapidly slipping by, and in another week most of us will be headed back to the cities and hamlets for vacations or for jobs.

For three months we will be rid of Carolina — but Carolina will not be rid of us.

Wherever we go we will be unofficial but important representatives of the University. People will be asking what the heck is going on up here, and it will be our job to tell them.

From reports drifting back here it seems that some people's views of the University and its students are just a wee mite distorted. We are just a bunch of commies, or playboys, or husband-hunters, or gamblers or drunkards. In fact, there isn't one single student in the place.

Just because it sounds absurd, don't think we won't be asked about it. Remember, those people are on the outside and all they know is what they hear. And it's much more fun to believe a good story than the dull truth.

Here are a few things to muse over:

The people who make the loudest noise are usually a minority.

Although Bill Robertson has been firing weekly salvos from the left wing heavy artillery, Write Away has yet to receive one letter supporting his views while almost daily it carries letters opposing them.

Studying goes on seven days and nights a week, while dance weekends come at most only once or twice a quarter.

Consideration of these few items will give a much more active perspective of the University.

Apologies to the Grail

Our apologies to the Grail for the editorial "Party Party Party" in last Saturday morning's paper which pointed out that the Grail was holding a dry party. Taking into consideration the Grail's widely-known reputation for upright campus leadership, the editorial writer employed the literary device irony in which the meaning is the exact opposite of the literal sense of the words. Intention of the editorial was to show that the Grail was again showing the way by holding a party at which alcoholic beverages were conspicuous by their absence. It was a good party, too.

Second Try For Dewey

By United Press

Albany, N. Y. —(UP)— Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who seems to thrive on political setbacks, has his second chance to become President of the United States.

New York's 46-year-old governor's whole political life has been sprinkled with as many defeats as victories, but he always comes back stronger than ever.

Dewey won his first major political victory in 1935, when he was elected New York County district attorney over powerful opposition from Tammany Hall. His work in breaking-up rackets brought him Republican nomination for governor the following year.

The popular Democratic governor, Herbert H. Lehman, who had served many years as governor and lieutenant-governor, gave Dewey his first serious licking. He trimmed the young prosecutor by 60,000 votes.

In 1940, Dewey's political future was staggered again when the late Wendell L. Willkie stampeded the Republican national convention and took the party's nomination for president. Dewey had the most delegates when the Willkie boom broke loose.

Most political leaders counted Dewey out after that but he bounced back by winning the governorship over Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., Jim Farley's hand-picked candidate. Again, Dewey was considered for national honors.

The governor served two years of his four-year term in the executive offices at Albany, when Republicans meeting in Chicago almost unanimously selected him to stop the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. Roosevelt was re-elected by 3,000,000 votes and again Dewey apparently was headed for the political scrap-heap.

Two years later, Dewey pulled himself up again and was re-elected governor over former Sen. James M. Mead, a New Dealer by the largest majority ever given a gubernatorial candidate in New York state. Dewey was on the comeback trail.

A mid-west vacation with his family in 1947 quickly became a Dewey-for-president boom. GOP leaders from all sections called on him to pledge support. But his political stock began slipping during the winter months of 1947-48, so Dewey decided to come out openly for the nomination. He picked three state primary elections to test his strength—New Hampshire, Wisconsin and Nebraska.

Dewey took the New Hampshire primary from Harold Stassen and political experts again were giving him top place. But along came Wisconsin, and Dewey took a terrific drubbing by Stassen and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Again the political reporters wrote "finis" to Dewey's public career.

Stassen followed up the Wisconsin victory with another stinging blow to Dewey's candidacy by running away with the Nebraska "popularity" primary. But Dewey refused to stay down.

"I have had more political life in my 46 years than most people have in a lifetime," Dewey remarked.

But that has been Dewey's whole concept of public life. One defeat is only temporary.

Polecat, Maybe?

Reading, Pa. —(UP)— Genealogists delving into the history of Reading and Berks County, Pa., for their bicentennial anniversary this year, have been puzzling over a curious epitaph recorded here.

The inscription reads: "Here lies the clothing of the living Anne B. . . .," and has the researchers bewildered to explain why anybody would want to bury the clothes of a living person.

With an eye to current styles in women's fashions, one genealogist hazarded the unscientific opinion that Anne B's husband may have taken the drastic step to express his displeasure with 18th century female dress.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Try the Back Door, Harry

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—THE PRESIDENT HAS resorted to new strategy in handling White House callers.

For some time, Washington observers were amazed at the number of visitors President Truman saw daily. But now the calling list has tapered off. The official list released every morning shows only a handful of visitors.

What most people don't know, however, is that there are five separate entrances to the White House, and in recent weeks Truman has been fooling the press. While regular White House correspondents wait in the lobby of the executive offices watching for presidential visitors, various private callers slip in other doors. Sometimes as many as 25 will flow into Truman's office unnoticed. They come in through various side doors, sometimes even the distant east wing, and are then spirited around the back through the rose garden and in to the President.

In recent days, Truman has held numerous significant confabs, none listed. He has seen Joe Keenan, head of the A.F. of L. Political Action committee, British Ambassador Lord Inverchapel, French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, and various Zionist leaders including Chaim Weizmann, new president of Israel.

Some old senatorial friends also drop around to see Truman at breakfast. Others come in after breakfast, but before the press arrives. Ed. Flynn has been in twice lately, unnoticed. Former Judge Sam Rosenman is again a White House regular using the east gate, as is George Allen, the old court jester.

Note—another new favorite Truman rendezvous is the presidential yacht, the Williamsburg, where he holds stag poker parties with old buddies, sometimes sleeping on board and walking back to the White House early in the morning before most people go to work.

PRIVATE LEO CHRISTENSEN was convicted by a U. S. military court in Japan last year of raping a Japanese woman in front of her son, deliberately running down a Japanese boy with his motorcycle, and beating up a Japanese man.

He was given the death sentence for rape, murder, and assault.

Then his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lars Deloy Christensen of Iona, Idaho, appealed to Senator Henry Dworshak, Idaho Republican and a staunch Isolationist. Dworshak succeeded in reducing the death sentence to three years hard labor and a dishonorable discharge.

Later, Dworshak went to bat again, got a parole for Christensen. He is now a free man. However, the man who raped a woman, killed a boy, and beat up a civilian isn't satisfied. He now wants an honorable discharge, and Senator Dworshak has been asked to get it for him.

THE SENATE SMALL BUSINESS committee is ready to blow the lid off a fantastic racket in forged export licenses that has flourished under the nose of the Commerce department.

Goods cannot be shipped abroad today without a license from the Commerce department. Yet counterfeit licenses for shipping flour, lard, and other foodstuffs to Latin America have been sold to businessmen at black-market rates. Two alleged forgers—Tom Quinn and his nephew, Jack Quinn—already have been arraigned in New York.

Yet even after Jack Quinn's arraignment, he was able to obtain licenses from the Commerce department for shipping 1,000,000 worth of goods, mostly to Cuba. This amazing deal was approved, even though the Commerce department had been notified of Quinn's arraignment and of the Senate Small Business committee's investigation.

The full scope of the forgery scandal was brought out last week in secret hearings. One witness, Harry Levey of New York, vice president of Haro Products Co., testified that he had paid $28,000 for 14 licenses that turned out to be forged. It also developed that customs declarations had been forged as well.

The spurious licenses cover not only foodstuffs, but possibly steel, which has been exported far beyond existing quotas, investigators learned. Forgeries also have been uncovered in the shipment of streptomycin to the Philippines.

Poop For The Group

Thespians and Hucksters

By Raney Stanford

Much love to the Playmakers for closing out their year with a skillfully done production of Rostand's classic "Cyrano de Bergerac". In barely a month, Foster Fitz-Simons, William Ayers, et al, have taken an immensely complicated piece and presented it with excellent craft and showmanship. It was a happy choice of someone's to drop the little-known Elizabethan comedy, "The Shoemaker's Holiday" originally planned for the Forest Theater and substitute Rostand's justly-popular-but little-played drama.

Many observers complained that the show seemed overlong but I think they haven't realized how much its effect depended on one man, Frederick Johnson in the leading role of the romantic poet and vagabond. Mr. Johnson went through one of the longest and most difficult roles still seen on the stage, and I marvel at how he got it all down with such finesse. It was a stupendous job, and if the show dragged, it seemed, at least here, to be due to the difficulties of Mr. Johnson in portraying all the many sides of Cyrano, the man with a soul of a god in the body of Harlequin. But the second act speech to Le Bret (Edsel Hughes) was superb. . . .

Happened to be standing in a certain record shop downtown the other day, waiting for the exuberant huckster on clerking duty to finish tabulating the loose cash in my jeans, and I overheard Stan Kenton's new album of "progressive" music. Progression, I says, was never like this. There is much worthy of note among this set of discs, but the majority of it just leaves you wondering.

Among the more trivial things I wondered about was what instrument a "bongo" might be. I have a sneaking suspicion that it's probably a beer crate, strung tightly from top to bottom with closely-spaced piano wires, into which rocks are dropped at irregular intervals.

This ain't my theme, June baby. . . .

Speaking of this certain record shop which shall be nameless of course, the selling technique on display there is simply amazin'. As I was leaving the establishment, I noted some pictures pasted on the inside of the glass door. They depicted various and sundry people in scarves and canvas aprons wandering around looking like they were all rather embarrassedly playing in Republic's "Two-Gun Vengeance In Old Tyrol." So, with my naturally nosy, curiosity, I asked the clerkin' man, "Hey, what are these?"

With no hesitation whatsoever, he came bouncing from behind the counter, rubbing his hands together: "They're a quarter apiece."

When I got my breath back I queried as to how much the glass in the door sold for, and then fled. He was going back to the back of the shop, but whether to get a ball bat or a tape measure I'll never know.

Write Away

Reviewer Criticized

Editor:

This letter is a formal protest against a type of writing which appears from time to time in the pages of the Daily Tar Heel. Headed "Review of Cyrano," this type was represented again Sunday, May 23. I admit that in the interest of truthful reporting such articles passing for dramatic reviews should be late henceforth for what they are—certain opinions expressed by various members of the Daily Tar Heel staff. They are not reviews and still less are they critical analyses. Occasionally praise has been offered where praise is due, and some obvious weaknesses have been pointed out, but none of them have shown more than a smattering of ignorance of the hard work, the sweat, the drudgery, or the sometimes superb teamwork which makes or breaks a show.

To begin with, Mr. Bruce observes that "Director Fitz-Simons might have done more cutting to improve the pace of the play as it ran very late, and the stone seats got very hard." Had Mr. Bruce taken an actor's copy of "Cyrano" in his hand, he would have noted that pages and pages had been deleted by Mr. Fitz-Simons in an effort to cut the length of the play and make it better coherence and dramatic impact.

Secondly, Mr. Bruce offers the remarkable criticism that Director Fitz-Simons "allowed the actors to spend too much time over their poetic speeches, and that tended to slow the production down." Director Fitz-Simons allowed the actors too much time? Rather, say that Rostand allowed it. Why not say Hamlet spent entirely too much time mouthing about the consummation devoutly to be wished when he should be getting on with his revenge on King Claudius?

Thirdly, Mr. Bruce's report of the portrayal of Cyrano and Roxane by Frederick Johnson and Gloria Gunn is as follows: in the case of Frederick Johnson, "his characterization is fine example of action sustained over a long period." In the case of Gloria Gunn, she "turned out a creditable performance." Dave Sample's Christian he found to be merely "effeminate." Now part of a drama critic's job is to tell his readers how the actors handled their parts, and why this handling was good or bad. Mr. Bruce made no mention of Mr. Johnson's enunciation, which was remarkable for its clarity and resonance, or the reading which he gave Cyrano's lines. He was blissfully ignorant of the fact that in the play Christian is effeminate, and that the part is a very difficult characterization to make believeable. And when Mr. Bruce says that the supporting characters deserve "mention," he is begging the question.

Fourthly, in praising the setting and costumes, Mr. Bruce might have commended the smooth work of the properties and stage crews, who worked under almost insurmountable handicaps of dark backstage haphazardly stacked with mountains of scenery.

In point of fact, Mr. Bruce's review of Rostand's "Cyrano" read like a re-hash of a tennis match or a football game. Not just anybody with an opinion is qualified to criticize drama; it takes work, research, and careful observation and sensitivity to equip one to give an opinion worth the paper it is printed on, and if the aspirant to the position of critic is unwilling to take this trouble, he ought not to set himself up as an authority.

I feel sure that somebody who knows something about drama and the theater can be found to write about the Playmaker productions on the campus, for they truly deserve better treatment.

Mary Louise Kelly

(Ed note: The reviewer, who has been in theatre work for ten years, directed and managed a summer theater for three summers. The write-up of "Cyrano" was a review, not a criticism.)

Water Cost Is High

Editor:

The city of Raleigh charges $8.80 for an adult season ticket to its swimming pools. This covers the entire period that the pools are open—from mid-May through early September. The University of North Carolina charges $4.00 per summer session for a student wife to use the university swimming pool, which, incidentally, was constructed by the Navy and donated to the University. It costs $8.00 for a student wife to use the pool during the course of two summer sessions, from June 10 through August 28—a price that is comparable to that charged by the Raleigh pools.

The University Athletic association has shown its willingness to allow student wives to attend athletic events at a cut rate by charging only $10.00 admission for all University sponsored events during the three regular quarters. It seems that the administration could follow a similar course and make a special swimming rate for wives of students. It is the least they could do.

Tips on Knitting

Copenhagen, Denmark, May 25 — (UP) — Lots of American women carry their knitting almost everywhere. But an elderly woman in Copenhagen, Denmark has gone the busy knitters in the States one better. She has been doing her knitting in the ladies' lounge of the city's largest department store for almost a year.

It seems that the lady did more than keep busy with her knitting. She also reached out her hand for tips each time the door was opened.

Baseball Team Ends Regular Season By Opposing Wolfpack In Raleigh Today

Andrew Will Pitch For Tar Heel Nine

By Larry Fox

Although today's game with State college at Raleigh marks the end of the regular season for Carolina's baseball team, the Tar Heels still have a long road to travel; a road which may culminate in the NCAA championships at Kalamazoo, Michigan, next month.

The Tar Heels have already sewed up the Big Four and Southern conference championships and will be out for their third win in four meetings with the Wolfpack. Game time at Devervaux Meadow is 3:30.

State took the first decision by pounding Vinnie DiLorenzo from the box for an 8-1 victory. DiLorenzo came back the next time out, however, and pitched no-hit ball for 10 and two-thirds innings before winning in the 11th, 1-0. Carolina took the next decision, 5-3.

Andrew to Pitch

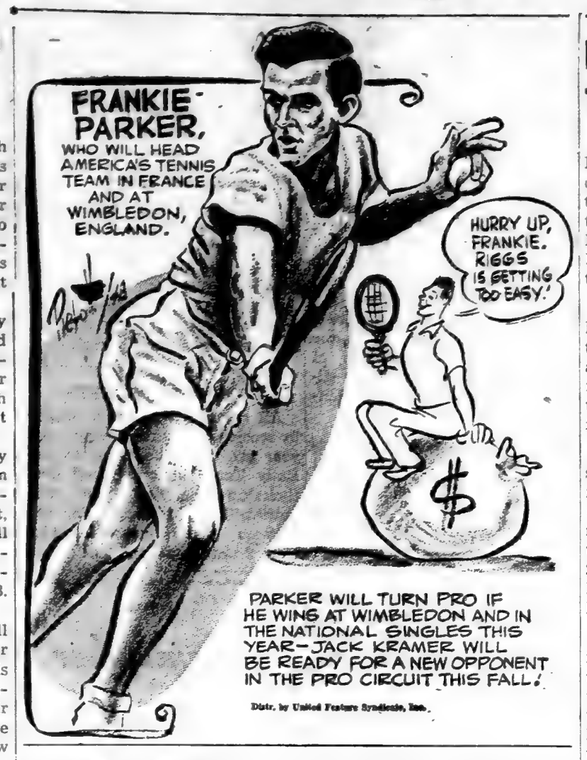
Slim Tommy Andrew will start on the mound for the Tar Heels. He will be seeking his third victory of the campaign against two losses. Both Ray Blair and Dean Cassell will be in the bullpen ready to relieve Andrew if the righthander gets into any trouble.

Ernie Johnson will probably get the nod from Coach Vic Sorrell. This will be Johnson's last game for the Wolfpack. Johnson has a 1-1 record with Carolina thus far this year. The Wolfpack workhorse was the victor against the Tar Heels the first time the two outfits met and was tagged with the loss when DiLorenzo pitched his masterpiece.

Johnson Effective

Johnson has pitched good ball against Carolina, allowing a total of two runs to be scored in 20 innings of work. The adjective workhorse really applies to the tricky righthander, for early in the season when State had played four Big Four games, Johnson had each decision.

Leadoff man Kenny Black will be out to cement his lead in the team batting race. Black has a .333 mark as of May 21, to lead the regulars. He also leads in runs with 17, and hits with 27. In addition, Black has batted in 10 tallies; a very creditable total for a leadoff man.



Kelly Second

Jim Kelly is next in the race with a .313 average. The chunky leftfielder leads in the important run-batted-in department with 16.

Will Hobbs has a .340 mark in 16 games, six contests less than the other regulars.

Three pitchers are sporting the highest averages on the squad. Frank Robinson is leading the pack with .466. Dean Cassell and DiLorenzo both have .400 averages.

Robinson is also top among the pitchers with a 4-0 slate. Blair has a 4-1 record while DiLorenzo is next. DiLorenzo has the most decisions, eight, of which he has won 5.

PICK UP YOUR GEAR

Students who will not be in summer school for either of the two sessions had better clear their baskets of any personal equipment before leaving for the summer.

The basketroom will dump the baskets at the close of the second session so students should pick up their sneakers and other athletic gear.

Carolina's Jayvees will attempt to supply a successful conclusion to their 1948 baseball season today when N. C. State's junior baseballers journey to Chapel Hill to meet Coach Henry House's locals. The game will be played on Emerson field starting at 4 o'clock.

The Tar Baby nine has a record of nine wins and five losses thus far this season and will be gunning for victory number ten this afternoon. The game will be the second meeting between the two clubs in three days. On Monday the State outfit was victorious over Carolina, 3-2.

Fourth of Year.

The contest, fourth of the season between the State and Carolina junior varsities, will see the Raleigh club trying to gain an even break with the Tar Babies. Carolina won the first two games, 9-4 and 7-4 before losing on Monday. Coach House's Carolinians also will be out to snap a two-game losing streak. Before State took their measure this week, Greensboro high had blanked them 1-0 prior to that game.

Either Ed Gaston or Ralph Brake is scheduled to take the mound for the Tar Babies. Brake saw relief duty against State this week but probably will be ready to go today. Gaston probably will get the call if Brake is not the

Hogan Tops Turnesa To Win PGA Tourney

St. Louis, May 25 — (UP) — Bantam Ben Hogan added his second Professional Golf association title to his long string of trophies this afternoon when he defeated Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N. Y. in the finals of the PGA tournament this afternoon, 7-6.

Hogan was at his best today as he rapped out a sub-par 65 on the morning round to move into a four hole lead, which he never relinquished. In fact, his advantage was never less than those four holes.

Hogan expanded that lead to six on the 21st of the 36-hole match, and Turnesa, who upset Claude Harmon in the semi-finals, rallied briefly. Turnesa cut the margin down to four by the 27th, but couldn't keep up with Hogan, who turned in some of his best shots of the day.

Hogan took the 28th with a par four as Turnesa three-putted and then went six-up on the 29th with a 21-foot putt for a birdie two. The hotshot from Hershey, Pa., by way of Texas, closed out the match on the next hole with an approach that left him 30 inches from the cup. He sank the putt for a birdie three and the championship.

Turnesa's defeat broke the hearts of six other golfing Turnesa brothers, who had hoped that Mike, the third in the family to reach the PGA final, would be the first to take the championship. Joe Turnesa was whipped by the great Walter Hagen in 1926 and in 1943 Sammy Snead knocked off brother Jim in the finals.

CERTIFICATES READY

All students who took the senior lifesaving course sponsored by the Athletic department recently may pick up their certificates by contacting swimming Coach Dick Jamerson at Woollen gym, it was announced yesterday.

Monogram Elections

Election of new officers and initiation of new members will top the agenda of the Monogram club meeting scheduled for 7 o'clock tonight in 304 Woollen.

President Bill Pritchard also announced that a party would follow the regular meeting. Several kegs of refreshments will be on hand for the festivities which will be held on Fetzer field. If it rains, the party will transfer to the gym.

Mud Dobbers Capture Mural Horseshoe Title

By Bill Gallagher

While the Mud Dobbers were pitching their way to the all-campus title in horseshoes, the PiKA's and the Misfits batted their way to the top of the two softball loops and will meet in the all-campus tilt this afternoon.

For the Mud Dobbers it was a rather easily won match, by a 3-0 count over the Sigma Nu quintet of horseshoe slingers who were no test for the dormitory champs. The winners dropped both the first games in the doubles play only to come surging back to take two straight games and both matches for the doubles title. Meantime, their singles man was recording a straight two set victory.

The members of the winning team are Richard Bennett, Charles Bailey,, Lester Couch, Coy Lewis, and Charles Loudermilk. Hardy Thompson, Leo McDuffey, Bob Weant, Bill Harrington, and W. A. Klinburn did the chunking for the losers.

In the softball finals of the dormitory and fraternity leagues, the Misfits edged Emerson, 3-2, and PiKA 2 defeated Zeta Psi 2, 5-2.

The Misfits scored once in the first on hits by Bernie McKiernan and Billy Spiegel. They racked up another tally in the second frame on two walks and a hit by Bill Miller.

Emerson got back into the game in the fifth with a two run rally that tied the score. The game-winning run came across in the next inning when Spiegel came through with his second hit of the game and scored on a safety by Charlie Reagan, who went the route for the winners on the mound.

Reagan pitched some nice ball in letting the losers down with four hits. Fred Sherman was the heavy hitter for Emerson with two hits, two fielder's choices, turns at the plate.

Zeta jumped off to a quick two-run lead in the first inning on two hits, two outfielder's choices, and one PiKA error. PiKA came back to tie it up with three hits in the next frame.

The winners pushed over the deciding run in the fifth inning when, with a man on second after a hit and a sacrifice, pitcher Charlie Smith smacked out a single to drive in the winning run and help take his own game.

Smith went the distance and after allowing the losers two runs in the first permitted only 20 men to come to bat in the last six innings. To insure the victory, the PiKA's added two more runs in the sixth to win without too much trouble.

Batting laurels for the day went to PiKA Si Philips who connected for a homer, one other hit, and scored two runs. Dave Mackie also collected two hits and two runs for the winners.

Grid Squad to Act Changes in Rules

Carolina football players will become movie actors tomorrow in the making of a training film in connection with a one-day clinic for Southern conference grid officials.

The officials will meet in Kenan stadium during the afternoon and take the role of spectators while a picked group of gridmen run through the right and wrong way of 67 rule changes that will appear in the game next fall for the benefit of the camera man.

The film will be made with sound and a script will be on hand to supply the player-actors with any needed cues. The purpose of the movie will be to clarify changes for players and officials alike.

The following men are asked to report on the field in uniform at 3 o'clock: (Anyone unable to attend should notify the football office.)

Justice, Hayes, Hartig, Clements, Powell, Fowle, Mitten, Stiegman, Klosterman, Szafaryn, Rubish, Bunting, Koontz, Norcross and Hansen.

Wardle, Bernot, Maceyko, Flamisch, Knox, Sherman, Bauer, Romano, McDonald, Highsmith, McLane, Logue, Cooke, Spurlin, Marczyk and Washington.

COED IN FINALS

K. D. Durham, playing for Chi Omega, swung into the finals competition of the coed tennis tournament by defeating Jane Morrison, Pi Phi, last week, 6-2, 6-3.

In the other bracket of semi-final play, victors of which will be decided this week, are Lib Browning vs. Sarah Walker and B. A. Pope vs. Beckie Holton.

WAIVERS ON JACKIE?

New York, May 25—(UP)—A New York newspaper, The Daily Mirror, has reported that the Brooklyn Dodgers have asked for waivers on their star infielder, Jackie Robinson. The story is flatly denied by club secretary Harold Parrott.

Dates' Season Ducats Are Still Available

This weekend will be the last chance for students to buy tickets for their dates under the plan being operated by the Athletic association.

A limited number of season tickets are on sale now for the Tar Heel's five home games and can be purchased by students for the regular prices charged for individual ducats. This will be the last chance for students to buy football tickets until the middle of July.

The tickets are in Section 13, which is right next to the student section. Those students with long arms will be able to hold hands with their dates during the ball game.

A JOB..an Education..and a FUTURE for the 35 RIGHT YOUNG MEN

First, let us tell you who we are. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane are brokers in securities and commodities, as well as underwriters and distributors of security issues.

We think it's pretty important what people do with the money they save—so important that the job of helping them with their investments should be handled only by men who are equipped for that work by character, intelligence, and thorough training. The same holds true for men who help move our great commodity crops to market. For qualified young men, we think there's a real opportunity in the investment and commodity business.

Three years ago, we organized the first class in the Merrill Lynch Training School for approximately 30 carefully selected young men. We hired them to go to school under top-flight teachers for six months. Then they took jobs in various of our 97 branch offices, most of them in or near their old home towns.

The Training School was a success. Six classes have now graduated, and a seventh is in session. Almost 200 men (and two women) have completed the course, and almost uniformly they have rolled up excellent selling records. Some of them have already advanced in the home or field offices.

Because they have made good, we are organizing an Eighth Training School Class.

In this class, beginning August 2 in New York City, we will give the course to the 35 best men (or women) we can find.

These people will be paid while they learn. The rates of pay are varied on the basis of marital status and working (or military) experience. (Average for current class: $270 per month).

On successful completion of the course, each of these people will have a good job and, we hope, a good future.

If you would like to be considered for admission to this course, we obviously have to know a good deal about you. For instance, as a starter, we want the following information:

1. Name, address, age, marital status
2. Experience, working and military
3. Educational record (degrees, courses of major interest, grades)
4. Extracurricular activities and interests
5. Why do you think you would be interested in a career in the securities business?
6. What do you consider would represent success when you have reached the halfway mark in your business career?

If you would like to apply formally for admission to the Eighth Merrill Lynch Training School Class, write down the answers to these questions, plus anything else you'd like to tell us about yourself, and bring them to me or mail them to me before July 9th.

Woman Who Gives Hand Signal Means 'Danger,' Says Whitfield

By Jim Dickinson

"When women drivers give hand signals it means 'danger,' and the person driving behind must be on his guard," said Judge Henry Whitfield in Recorder's court here yesterday.

Judge Whitfield used the expression merely to emphasize the fact that the majority of drivers, male and female, are overly careless in the giving of hand signals.

"People just don't give the right signals," he said. "If you didn't watch the signals, you'd all be in your graves in about two days."

The case being tried involved an accident on Pritchard street in which Wilbert Farar, Negro, was charged with reckless driving and ploughing his pickup truck into the rear of another truck driven by Leonard A. Smith, a University employee, as he was turning into the driveway of his home.

Smith's attorney said, "Drivers haven't become so rushed thus far that they haven't time to slow down a little to determine which way the car up ahead is going to turn."

Farar's attorney stated that Smith had given the "wrong signal" and contended that his client was not guilty of "anything."

Judge Whitfield, after hearing testimony that the brakes on Farar's truck worked successfully only "after being pumped twice," found the defendant guilty of traffic violations and sentenced Farar to the payment of court costs.

Other cases on the docket were:

Janette M. Broadway, speeding, nol pros.

William Y. Folger, driving drunk, jury verdict not guilty.

Wade Riggsbee, drunkenness, $5 and costs.

Bill Fisher, New York, driving drunk, nol pros.

A. C. Mangum, improper brakes and improper license, $10 for improper brakes charge, prayer for judgement on license charge.

David Watson and Tom Watson, breaking and entering and assault on a female(Margaret Norris), prayer for judgement and payment of $20 damages to W. M. Slack, owner of property.

Harold W. Shaw, Jr., unlawful riding of four on motor bike of capacity for two, one-half costs.

Mrs. O. M. Powers, passing school bus, costs.

Willie J. Beeson, running through red light, costs.

Eugene Watson, Negro, drunkenness, costs.

Henry L. Harris, Durham, disorderly conduct, confined to Orange county jail for one month to work on roads, suspended on condition that defendant not be found in Chapel Hill for 12 months and payment of costs.

Lowenstein Is Delegate

Other business taken care of by the Student Legislature last night included a bill to advance $100 out of next year's budget to the Carolina Forum to use for operating expenses at the present time. Another bill authorized Al Lowenstein to attend the meeting of the National Students association in Madison, Wisconsin, early next fall. Lowenstein will travel at his own expense. Power was also given to the president of the student body to appoint further delegates to the convention if the quota will permit.

The Legislature approved a long list of executive appointments duting the special session last night, including members of the Student Audit board, the Elections board, the Budget committee, the Orientation committee, the Dance committee and the Student Entertainment committee.

Veterans Checks To Go Out June 1

Checks for the extra 15 days granted veterans registered for the spring quarter will cover the period June 7-22 and will be mailed on July 1. These checks will be sent to the last address the veteran reported to the VA.

If any veterans wishes his check sent to his home or any address other than the one to which his June 1 check was sent he should notify the VA, Vocational Rehabilitation and Education section, Nissen building, Winston-Salem, N. C., before June 5 over his own signature. Forms for making this change of address are not necessary but may be secured from No. 319 Peabody building or No. 315 South building.

Veterans who are in school now and have pre-registered for summer school, and who did not refuse the 15 day extension in June, will receive continuous pay for the break between the spring and summer terms. In addition, a 15-day extension of subsistence will be automatically granted at the end of the summer session, unless the veteran expressly requests that this not be done. Any person not desiring this 15-day extension must refuse it either at pre-registration or 30 days prior to the expiration of the term.

Attention is called to the fact that the 15-day extension is deducted from the total period of ligibility, thereby reducing the period by that amount.

ALBRIGHT ON BONUS

Raleigh, May 25—(UP)—The war veteran candidate, R. Mayne Albright, today directed his attention to his fellow veterans.

Albright said he is personally in favor of a state bonus to veterans of World War II, but he aid he is convinced that "most veterans" want the question of bonus payments submitted to the people in the form of a referendum.

Albright pointed out that up to the present time no group of veterans and no veterans' organizations has made a ny move toward a bonus. He said that is why he has proposed submitting the bonus issue to the voters, and he said he believes the voters would approve a generous bonus for the state's servicemen.

The Raleigh candidate has added that it would not be within the powers of a governor to establish a bonus or to say how much or in what manner it might be distributed.

YM Planning Pre-School Camp For Benefit of New Freshmen

In order to help freshmen answer the questions as to why they are coming to college and what they should try to get out of college experience, the YMCA will hold a short pre-school camp for selected members of next year's entering class.

Camp Haines, near Winston-Salem will be the scene of the two and a half day session, and John Brockmann will act as director. Business manager is A. C. Mangum, and Fred Thompson and Bob Goodwin are co-chairmen of the Program committee. Charles Fox is chairman of the Freshmen Work commission of the Y cabinet, under whose direction the camp is being planned.

In addition to faculty and administrative leaders who will speak to the group, upperclassmen members of the Y cabinet will take part in the program as discussion leaders. The camp is planned as a supplement to the orientation program freshmen receive on campus. It will attempt to answer the more fundamental problems of the college career, rather than acquainting new students with the set up of the Carolina campus and its activities.

A fall program under the direction of Bill Craft has also been set up. Similar to the present Freshman Friendship council, it will consist of weekly meetings of the freshman discussion groups and social functions.

DORM KEYS

Manager of dormitories, Bill Smith, has requested the cooperation of all students who will leave school permanently or for the summer to leave their dormitory keys at his office in the basement of South building immediately before leaving school.

PUBLICATIONS KEYS

All students who are supposed to receive publications keys this year are urged to come to the Daily Tar Heel office and pick theirs up as soon as possible. The news office will be open for this purpose today and tomorrow from 2 until 6 o'clock.

State Department Is Denounced in Senate For Radio Programs

Washington, May 26 — (UP) — The Senate rocked today with angry charges that individual tates have been "slandered and libeled" by the State department's "Voice of America" broadcasts. The broadcasts to foreign countries are aimed at giving what the State department calls a "true picture" of life in a democracy.

Many senators, normally staunch administration supporters, joined in denouncing the State department for what they called "this terible blunder . . . this downright tragedy."

For example, Senator Millard Tydings (D—Md.) suggested it might be, as he put it, a "calculated attempt to belittle and betray the United States."

It all started when GOP Senator Homer Capehart of Indiana began reading excerpts from a Voice of America series on the "History and Characteristics" of various states' broadcast in Spanish to Latin American countries.

The series, said Capenart, depicted Texas as "founded in sin" and inhabited by a "completely different race than the rest of the United States." It said a Spanish settler with 600 cows made Texas the center of the cattle-growing industry.

Another broadcast, Capehart went on, said the oxcart is the "symbol" of the spirit of Alabama and that "in no other part of the United States has the colored race struggled and suffered so much as there."

One broacast described Nevada as "a land of cowboys" and added, "Its two principal cities are in competition. In Las Vegas they get married and in Reno they get divorced."

Another called Pennsylvania's Quakers a "social problem" because they refuse to take oaths in court or perform military service.

TUESDAY CLASSES

A notice released by Chancellor House's office yesterday stated that regular classes will be held through Tuesday morning and that exams will begin that afternoon.

MAYNE ALBRIGHT and his pretty wife Frances are shown standing beside their trailer, "The Challenger," in which they have been touring the state in Albright's "Take-It-to-the-People" campaign for governor. They will arrive in Chapel Hill at 9:30 this morning and will go to the postoffice where Albright will make a short talk. Shortly before 10 o'clock "The Challenger" will head up by the Y court.

Charlie Long Chosen Carolina Forum Head

The newly organized Carolina forum, which plans to bring a program of top notch speakers to Chapel Hill next fall, has elected Charlie Long of Thomasville chairman for the coming year.

According to Long, the organization has already met four times. Tuesday's panel meeting ended with the election of the following officers, in addition to Long:

Herb Alexander, Waterbury, Conn., vice chairman; Banks Talley, Bennettsville, S. C., secretary; Pete Gerns, Canton, Ohio, treasurer; Herb Mitchell, Asheville, publicity director; Jake Wicker, Sanford, coordinator; and Edie Knight, New Orleans, La., arrangements director.

The group has already drafted part of an operational charter since money has been appropriated by the Student Legislature to begin operations immediately. Long said yesterday that he is contemplating a trip during the middle of June to procure speakers for next fall's program.

Long also said that the complete draft of the operating procedure for the group will be ready in the near future for distribution to all campus organizations. "We are looking forward to a complete program of noted speakers for the fall quarter," he said.

It was also pointed out by Long that the group will function during both summer sessions and that any suggestions or requests for speakers should be addressed to Herb Alexander, acting chairman, Carolina Forum, room 211, Graham Memorial.

Clarinet Recital Slated Tomorrow

William Fitzgerald, senior from New Bern, will present a clarinet recital in Hill hall tomorrow at 8:30.

Fitzgerald studied clarinet for four years with Donald Smith before entering the University and has studied under Glen Haydon here.

In addition to his work with the band and orchestral instruments, Fitzgerald has also done solo tenor work and has been an accompanist in the Music department here. He was soloist in the band concert this year and sang in a formal recital last year.

He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha, music fraternity, the University band, orchestra, Glee club and Choral club. Miss Edith Turpin, graduate assistant in piano in the Music department will be Fitzgerald's accompanist. Miss Turpin, since graduating from Vassar in 1945, studied piano under Ralph Lawton at Wesleyn conservatory in Macon, Ga. and more under Robert Casadesus at the Fontainebleau School of Music in France.

Albright to Arrive Here This Morning With 'Challenger'

By Roland Giduz

In his last major campaign swing before Democratic primary elections on Saturday, R. Mayne Albright, UNC alumnus and Raleigh gubernatorial candidate, will roll into Chapel Hill at 9:30 this morning for a brief stop in part of an all-day cross-state motorcade.

The motorcade leaves Raleigh at 7:30 this morning and will proceed to Durham for a 20-minute stop at the courthouse there. Chapel Hill Albright-for-Governor supporters will meet the "Challenger's" caravan at the city limits at 9:30 and lead the parade to the postoffice where Albright will make a brief talk.

Proceeding around the block to Cameron Avenue, the motorcade will again stop briefly in the Y court. This will be timed to coincide with the 10 o'clock class change. Candidate Albright will speak briefly from his trailer-headquarters "The Challenger," and students, faculty, and townspeople will have a brief chance to meet and question him.

Student supporters of Albright have urged all eligible voters in Saturday's primary to take advantage of this final chance to meet personally one of the gubernatorial candidates. During the campaign Albright and Oscar Barker, Durham gubernatorial aspirant, have been the only ones of the six Democratic gubernatorial candidates to publicly appear in Chapel Hill. In early April the two appeared on the same platform in Hill hall under sponsorship of the Carolina Political union.

Leaving Chapel Hill, after adding a number of local supporters to the auto motorcade, the caravan will proceed through 10 more towns during the remainder of the day. Stops will be made at Burlington, Asheboro, Thomasville, Lexington, Salisbury, Statesville, Mooresville, Kannapolis, Concord, and finally Greensboro and Raleigh tonight.

Graduating from here in 1931, Albright returned for graduate work for several years, and was later director of Graham Memorial for one year. The young World War II veteran is a member of the state bar and was for seven years director of the state Unemployment Compensation commission.

Ann Brown to Present Piano Recital Sunday

Ann Brown of Raleigh will present her senior piano recital Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in Hill hall.

Miss Brown began her musical career at Meredith college where she was a student two years before entering Carolina. She has studied under Dr. William Newmann here, head of the piano department.

Since entering the University she has been active in the Glee club and is a member of Sigma Alpha Iota music sorority, serving as secretary of the organization during the past year.

Her program will include, "Prelude in F minor" by Bach; "Sonata in A Flat Major, Op. 26" by Beethoven; "Ballade in D minor," by Brahms; "Danse" by Debussy; and "Seguidilla" by Albeny.

Coed Senate Sets Coed Hours for Summer At 11 Week Nights, 12 Weekends

The closing hours for the girls dormitories for the summer months was set to 11 o'clock on week nights as opposed to last summer's closing hour of 10:30 in a meeting of the Coed Senate Tuesday night. The closing hour for the week ends has been set at midnight. Graduate students will be allowed to stay out until 12 o'clock at all times.

The senators adopted the budget for the year 1948-49, which was presented by Barbara Ann Covington, chairman of the Finance committee.

The estimated expenses for the Senate for the year include orientation — $130, Interdormitory council — $110, auditing fee — $30, May day — $100, Coed ball — $500, supplies and printing — $50, lectures — ....100, Yackety Yack space — $100, and $50 miscellaneous with a total of $1170.

The estimated expenditures allotment for subsidiary organization include Glee club — $100, YWCA — $200, Chi Delta Phi — $75. WAA — $300, CICA — $200, Pan Hellenic council — $125, Kappa Epsilon — $85, Town Girl's association — $125, and Valkyries — $150 with a total of $1360.

The total expenditures for the year will be $2530. The estimated income for the year obtained from the compulsory fee of the woment students will be $2,700. There is at present a $200 surplus in the treasury making an expected $2,900 budget for the year.

An appropriation of $100 was given to the WAA and a $20 appropriation was given to the Valkyries, to complete their budget for this year.

Outstanding Bills Must Be Paid Now

In order for all campus organizations to get their finances in proper shape before school closes, Harry A. Kear, accountant for the Student Activities fund, reminds the various treasurers that all outstanding bills should be paid at once.

It usually happens, due to the rush of exams and preparations for leaving town, that many bills are left unpaid during the summer months, only to cause hardships to the budgets the next fall. Kear also said that all cash on hand (including petty cash funds) should be deposited at the bank and the duplicate deposit slips brought to the Student Activities fund office. It is important all of the year's work be closed before the organization officers leave school for the summer.

PHI DELTA KAPPA

Phi Delta Kappa, honorary teachers fraternity, will hold initiation ceremonies today at 3 o'clock in room 212, Peabody hall. A picnic dinner will follow at the home of Dr. Rosenstengel.

Portraits of Branch, Outlaw Added To UNC Library Collection by Phi

The Phi Assembly has added portraits of John Branch and David Outlaw to the present collection hanging in the University library. The two oil portraits are to be hung on exhibition in the east-west corridor of the first floor of the library. The loan of the portraits by the assembly may be terminated at any time.

Both of the portraits, by unknown artists, are of members of the assembly.

John Branch (1782-1863) graduated from the University in the class of 1801. He later served as governor of North Carolina, United States senator, Secretary of the Navy, member of Congress, governor of Florida, and as trustee of the University.

Colonel David Outlaw (1806-1868) was a member of the class of 1824. He served as a member of the General Assembly, member of the Constitutional convention, 1835, member of Congress, and member of the state Senate.

Three other portraits of former members of the assembly loaned in November of 1946 of the Rev. Francis Lister Hawks by Inman, Elisha Mitchell by Jocelyn, and Bartholomew F. Moore by Browne are also on exhibition in the library.

Phi Elects Coulter Assembly President; Committees Report

Bob Coulter was elected speaker of the Phi Assembly for the fall quarter in the group's Tuesday night session.

Coulter has been a member of the assembly since last summer and has been one of the most active members this year. He is a member of the Order of the Golden Fleece, vice-president of Phi Beta Kappa, and director of the dark room at Graham Memorial.

The other officers elected were: Herman Seiber, speaker pro tem, Ernie House, critic, Fred Newton, sergeant-at-arms; David Sharpe, treasurer; Pete Gerns, parliamentarian; and Page Dees, clerk.

Bernard Plemmons was appointed to head the committee on summer business. Other members of the committee are Ruth Bradley, Page Dees, Fred Parham, Gilbert Woolard, Ernie House, and John Giles.

Committee reports for the year were read last night. Members giving reports were: speaker, Ernie House; Ways and Means, Bill Duncan; Critics report, Emily Baker; Alumni, Ruth Bradley; Finance, Pete Gerns; Membership, Page Harris; Properties, Charlie Dixon; Social, Winifred Erwin; Debate, Pete Gerns; and Constitution, David Sharpe.

Last Band Concert Scheduled Sunday

The combined bands of the University, under the direction of Earl Slocum, will present their final concert of the school year Sunday afternoon at 4:30 on the campus near the Davie poplar.

The program will be conducted by five Music department seniors who are graduating in June and who are accepting positions as band directors in various N. C. high schools next fall.

These seniors are: Harry Shipman of Greensboro, who will be the new band director for the Kinston public schools; Frank West of Winston-Salem, who will be at Belmont; Willard Burrage of Rocky Mount to Dunn; and William Fitzgerald of New Bern who will return to his home town. David Arnett of Wilson, a graduate student, who has directed the instrumental music program in the Chapel Hill public schools during the past year, will probably accept a post for the fall in either Greensboro or Winston-Salem.

The program will include a variety of compositions which should appeal to all music lovers. Gene Stryker will be the master of ceremonies in charge of the public address system. The public is cordially invited.

Len Butt Installed As Sigma Chi Prexy

Len Butt of Washington, D. C., was installed as president of Sigma Chi fraternity last night. Presiding over the ceremonies was Jack Thompson, retiring president, who was presented a gift by the chapter for his service.

Other officers are: Jack Thompson, vice-president, Graham; Bill Maceyko, secretary, Campbell, Ohio; Jim Blount, treasurer, Wilson; John Clayton, pledge-master, Knoxville, Tenn.; Earl Betts, coresponding secretary, Greensboro; Bill Leinbach, historian, Winston-Salem; Aubrey Doggett, associate editor, Greensboro; Bill Pruden, social chairman, Roanoke Rapids; Wade Dunbar, intramural manager, Laurinburg.

BUDGET COMMITTEE

There will be a short but important meeting of the Budget committee of the Student Legislature this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

The members are: Fitz Caudle, Gran Childress, Earl Fitzgerald, Jack Girard, Wayne Johnson, Steve Milliken, John van Hecke, Cam West, Nat Williams and Pfhola Wilmoth.

Special Session

The third special session of the Student Legislature within a week has been called for tonight by Speaker Jim Godwin. All members of the Legislature must be in Di hall at 7:30 tonight for a short, but very important meeting, according to the speaker.

Godwin did not state the nature of tonight's business, but he pointed out that it would not take much time to complete the session.

Last Carolina Mag To Be Distributed Next Monday

The largest issue of the Carolina Magazine this year will be released next Monday, according to an announcement yesterday by Fred Jacobson, Mag editor.

Because of its unusual heaviness and bulk, the 48-page issue will only be distributed to dorms and fraternity houses. Town students and others not reached through the regular circulation system may get copies at the Y, Graham Memorial, Trailer court, Village Co-op, and the Carolina Inn, said Jacobson.

The Mag's editors have refused to reveal the theme of the forthcoming issue, but they hint it will carry the "proper impact" in view of the fact that this marks the ending of the 104-year tradition of the magazine.

The larger size edition was made possible through a special $350 appropriation by the Publications board, say the editors. They believe that through the extra funds they have been able to produce an issue which meets the standards of the combination magazine which the Carolina mag favored in the referendum several months ago.

In addition to a seven-page section dedicated to Thomas Wolfe, the edition will carry the results of the photography contest which was sponsored by the mag and Foister's Camera store.

Also included in the issue will be a selection of interesting stories, both serious and humorous, and a variety of poems and articles, say the editors.

Joint Recital Slated In Hill Hall Tonight

Samuel Andrew, piano student from Albermarle, and Hilda Frances Lawrence, soprano from Asheville, will give a joint recital in Hill hall at 8:30 tonight.

It was erroneously printed in yesterday's issue of the DTH that the recital would be held last night. The error occurred because of misinformation beyond the control of the DTH staff.

Miss Lawrence, with accompanist Richard Rancourt, of Waterville, Me., will sing, "Sento nel core," Scarlatti; "la Chi vuol la zingarella," Paisiello, and other selections from Mozart and Bachelet.

SP MEETING

The final spring meeting of the Student party will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Roland Parker Lounge No. 1. At this time party officers for the summer term will be selected and the summer program will be outlined and fully discussed.

All Student party members are urged to attend this meeting and be prepared to name their proxies for the summer term of the legislature.

Wilkinson Is Scheduled To Air Policies Tonight

Dr. Woodhouse Will Present Candidate; Dinner Is Planned

JOHN A. WILKINSON

John A. Wilkinson, Republican candidate for the United States senate and graduate of the University in 1931, will speak on his political policies in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock tonight.

Wilkinson is appearing here under the sponsorship of the Young Republicans club and the Carolina Political union. Dr. E. J. Woodhouse will introduce the speaker and Bill Hipple, YRC president, will preside.

A dinner will be given honoring Wilkinson before the adress and an open forum session will be held following the speech.

Wilkinson has practiced law in Washington, N. C., since 1935 and is a member of the State and County Bar associations. He was elected as president of the state Young Republicans club in 1941 and has served as vice-chairman of the National Young Republicans organization since 1942.

While in school here Wilkinson was an intercollegiate debater and a member of the Debate council. He was winner of the Mary D. Wright medal and the Bingham medal for debating.

He was speaker pro tem of the Phi assembly and president of the Tau Kappa Alpha fraternity, and member of the Chi Phi and Epsilon Phi Delta fraternities. He was acclaimed as the best speaker of the senior class and served on the editorial board of the Daily Tar Heel. He was also a contributor to the Carolina Magazine.

In 1942 Wilkinson was first prize winner in Scribner's Commentator National Essay contest. His subject was "What Would Be the Foreign Policy of George Washington Today?"

House, Lowenstein State Budget Views

Ernie House, former member of the Student Legislature and chairman of the Finance committee, and Al Lowenstein, member of the Legislature, made the following statement yesterday afternoon in regard to the 1948-49 budget, with respect to financial operations next year:

"We have consulted with Mr. Kear of the Student Audit office and it appears certain that there will be a surplus of more than $7,000 available to student government on June 30, the end of the current fiscal year. In view of this fact, it would seem that the financial plight of student government is far from as grave as we have been led to believe by the debates in the Legislature We will not be able to determine the exact status of our finances until the profit and loss statements are available for the current year.

"In view of our experiences this year, it would be advisable, we feel, to work out some system by which a closer coordination in financial matters can be maintained between the Student Audit office and the Legislature. This might entail the hiring of an assistant to serve with Mr. Kear, which would, among other things, enable Mr. Kear to devote more time to student budgetary matters.

"A non-partisan approach must be adopted if we are to be able to cope adequately with our financial problems, and to insure that the individual student gets the most for his money. The administration in South building, which has so far been well-pleased with the manner in which students have handled their funds, must be approached with unity and maturity; and this can be achieved only if every legislator looks at budget problems objectively and without individual prejudices.

"Steps which might well be taken during the coming year include the extension of the principle of student administration of student fees to cover funds collected in the summer sessions. Student government is a year-round operation: the Honor Code cannot be made inoperative for three months; nor is there a "summer vacation" for other student activities. Another matter which must be dealt with is the adjustment of the fees levied under the constitutional limit. For substantially the same benefits, coeds now pay $1 more per quarter than do men students, and graduate students now pay considerably less per quarter than do undergraduate students. And $15,000 desperately needed to carry on expanded student activities, which is constitutionally available, cannot be collected under present procedures. We should strive to obtain a budgeting system by which appropriations can be made in actual figures rather than on a pro rata basis. In this way organizations need not be concerned lest their revenue be less than estimated.

"These recommendations offer no panacea; nor are they to be construed as criticisms of the officers presently making student policy concerning the block fee. Not to learn from past mistakes, however, is a luxury which student government can ill afford, especially in problems of finance,"

Lowenstein pointed out yesterday that the reason he voted against the budget-cutting bill passed in the Student Legislature Tuesday night was that his figures show that there will be a $7,000 plus surplus when student government operations for this year cease, and he believes that that money should have been used to balance the budget instead of inflicting cuts on campus organizations.

DORM KEYS

Manager of dormitories, Bill Smith, has requested the cooperation of all students who will leave school permanently or for the summer to leave their dormitory keys at his office in the basement of South building immediately before leaving school.

Visiting Agreement Expires June 3; New Plan to Be Prepared for Summer

The House Privileges board visiting agreement will expire Thursday night, June 3, according to the office of the Dean of Women. These are the terms of the House Privileges board visiting agreement as established for October 16, 1947, and governs the visiting of women students in the fraternity houses.

A new visiting agreement will be drawn up for the summer session and submitted to the administration. If approved, it will then be taken to the individual fraternity chapters for their ratification or rejection.

Last Tuesday night Coed Senate approved a policy by which a revised House Privileges board visiting agreement may be applicable to the summer session, provided that it is properly drawn up and ratified by the administration and the various fraternities.

By Which We Live

Pride and joy of most of us here at Carolina is our honor system. We like the feeling that we are responsible enough to look after ourselves, do our own policing. We dislike the proctor system with its insinuation that students are going to cheat and must be watched. And the happy outcome is that the honor system works much more effectively than the proctor system. When a professor is standing over us expecting us to cheat on a test and watching to see that we don't, many of us take that as license to try to "get away with" as much as we can. When the proctoring is left to us individually, most of us are more careful about cheating against ourselves.

Along with its effect on everything else, the war also touched life at Carolina. The navy moved in. Veterans flooded the school, bringing with them lowered moral values. People began to get worried about the honor system.

Now the veteran tide is ebbing. Next fall will see an influx of 1500 freshmen, most of them straight from high schools. For these freshmen the orientation committee has prepared a week of intensive counseling before school begins. During this week 50 selected counselors will instill in them a respect for the high ideals and practical workability of the Carolina way of life. These freshmen will enter the University beleiving, as we do, in the honor system, and because so many beleive in it the system will be stronger than ever.

As older residents in the University community we can do much to back up the freshmen counselors by pointing out to new students when the occasion arises that the honor system is not merely a theory expounded by the orientation committee but an actuality by which we live.

Send It by Mail

Tradition is wonderful stuff, but comes a time when it gets a little outmoded.

Every year since the first senior received his diploma from this esteemed institution new graduates have donned their caps and gowns and marched off to commencement exercises. Each year each individual senior has risen from his seat as his name was called, walked forward to the presentation platform, taken his sheepskin in his hand, walked back to his seat, sat down.

This year between 1,200 and 1,500 students will graduate. An estimated 900 will take part in the commencement. First they will line up outside Kenan stadium, a process consuming 45 minutes. Then they will march in, taking 30 minutes. There will be no speeches, but then comes the roll call. Each individual senior will rise from his seat, walk forward to the presentation platform, take his sheepskin in his hand, walk back to his seat, sit down. Last year the exercises took two hours and a half while seniors, parents and friends squirmed on the cement seats of the stadium and wished they had been born with more padding.

Certainly each senior is entitled to his moment of glory, but if and when my turn comes it will be glory enough to hear my name read as among those present and receive that diploma by mail.

A Creditable Job

After weeks and weeks of worrying, figuring, and tearing of hair, the Legislature finally got the budget balanced Tuesday night. And they did a creditable job balancing it, too.

The bill which finally was approved did a good bit of cutting here and there, with publications and the Debate council taking the lion's share of the slash, but the cuts were not as bad as the ones originally planned, and a certain clause in the bill seemed to give everyone confidence that by next year they would get all their money anyhow. That clause provided that if additional funds became available next year, the Legislature would as nearly as possible restore to campus organizations their original appropriations as promised them in the ill-fated former 1948-49 budget. And we all have reason to believe (even if each of us has a different reason) that additional funds will show up before the year 1948 has closed up shop.

Congratulations and appreciation are in order all the way around for the people who put in valuable hours of time working on a solution to the budget problem, padticularly Jack Girard and his Finance committee, and of course Charlie Loudermilk and several other University party legislators who finally drew up the solution which passed the Legislature with very little opposition. —C.H.

Carolina Carousel

Carouseler Kisses Off

By R. Foo Giduz

Well, good buddies and otherwise characters . . . There has now come the time in this everyman's life . . . Thus this 96th carousing of the Cursel becomes the cissoff . . . (pause for applause.) And with no further type-tripe ado C. C. says his simple adieu . . . It has been real — . . . !

But time first for a quick post-mortem memory vignette of the year's every-other-daily Carousels . . .One word we never missed before every grid game last fall was the short, exclamatory "YELL!" . . . And with the superfine prospects in the Sper-headed squad for next year we needst only rally up pre-exam gusto for one last saluting . . . YELL! . . . That's half the game . . . Then there was the inspiring welcome back for the team after the Texas trouncing . . . (And Dr. Frank left for Indonesia) . . . Followed by the Tar Heels' 35-0 welcome to Homecoming Floridians at the Gainesville 'Gator killing.

—Came late fall and we took up the lingering Book Ex coffee habit thanx to the ultra-salesmanship of Mrs. Virginia Hill Morris . . . (Who confides she gets "homesick" for the B X now and then) . . . Local politico-dormants suddenly wake up in Nov. when Junius unleashed the not-so--startling news that he was — Yes, a real live Communist . . . Grapevine now has it a few other local Reds are lately jealous they don't get the headline Genial Junie received . . . Antidote to this was the Univ's. unthinking honoring of Axisman and No. 1 wartime Black-Listee Axel Leonard Wenner-Gren at the Planetarium dedication.

For the second successive year there was no pre-Dook game vandalism on either campus . . . Perhaps we're just growing up . . . (Will they make it three?) . . . Clubs and titles broke out like rashes over the year with the Knickerbockers, Creeps, Defeated Candidates, Squirrel Shooters, and finally the recent CHPD and SSC — (Chapel Hill Panel Discussions and Suds Scuttling committee; Friday 4-6, plenary sessions to reconvene in summer session.)

Came '48 and the illy-considered Bernstein incident.. Quickly and properly demised . . . Mellow Melton announces for DTHeditorship . . . (Yes, that is his fiancee with him lately!) . . . DTH letter-writers wanted hot coffee in Lenoir . . . Melton called for hot toddies! . . . Biggest joke of the quarter (tragically so) was the substitution of a funny mag for the 104-year-old Carolina Magazine . . . No yuks . . . But Lit. Quarterly prospects now look tops . . . And the final Mag is certainly a wonderful tribute to its past record of achievements.

The death of fighting young (85) Josephus Daniels saddened the state, nation, and especially his UNC cohorts . . . At a time when reaction is coming into the vogue a truly liberal newspaperman was sorely missed . . . Dr. Frank arrived back home amidst unfounded "Graham Purge" rumors . . . Students turned out en masse for welcome . . . "Hot" seat in Alfagam house caught fire one afternoon . . . (n.c.) . . .

Elections one month away politicoes flocked back to Lenoir hall chow lines . . .? A campus " grass-roots" movement preceding spring . . . General student body elections day and Negro applications for graduate schools were announced . . . The matter was well-handled, and definite developments in this line should be seen by fall . . . SP-CP merger? . . . Looked good on paper, flopped! . . . State Student Legislative assembly was held, and most successfully so, despite red-baiters and N. C. State College . . . Things looked shakier for the local HW FPC as Wallaceman president Bill Richardson resigned completely from the movement . . .

—And finally the Carouseler wrote his 30 at dear old UNC with simply a parting word of heartfelt thanks to Tar Heelia for granting him an education at a liberal and FREE institution . . .

Just Here

Be Nice Kiddies, Now

By Larry Berry

When we return home this summer, we go as marked individuals; we have been exposed to "higher education" for a varying length of time. Our actions will have a very pronounced effect on the number and the quality of future college students. At present many of these young devils aspire to an A. B. or B. S. while they perspire at high school desks. Their idea of the University is determined by the behavior of the ground out products they know. I do not mean by this a commerce student who goes around to the grocery store and proceeds to tell the manager how the place should be managed in order to conform more nearly to the textbook, or an English major who enjoys appearing aesthetic through the use of quotations and a distaste for all about him.

At the other extreme nothing can be gained by showing the fellows just how much college has increased your alcoholic intake. They will appreciate your ability, but they will not be able to fathom the reason for classes.

The preceding seems to put a curb on our summer's behavior, and I seem to have changed from a columnist to a preacher. Have no fear because you will act as you wish anyway, and I only ask you to give that picture of Carolina you believe to be true.

With the return to work by a number of students for exams as the quarter comes to an end, why not try to force upon ourselves a semblance of obedience to the posted quiet hours. While the signs are in the dorms, we seldom bother to read that from 8:00 p. m. through 7:30 a. m. there is to be no loud talking or other disturbance.

I would like to sign this quarter off by asking you to think over the field of National Presidential aspirants and come back ready to defend your man in the fall. There are many things about these men I think need explaining. Why has the much admired Republican Harold Stassen decided that in a liberal country communism can be outlawed in as absolute a manner as democracy seems to be in Russia without some of the resulting bad consequences? A number of questions will have to be answered before the American people will be able to vote for a man instead of a party!

Running MGM's Gamut

By C. Renyoz

With the coming this week of a new movie, "Unconquered," to the screen of the Carolina theater, a new series of pictures with one-word titles has evidently begun. The last series started out under the all encompassing title of "Adventure," and ran rapidly through "Lured," "Pursued," "Cornered," and "Possessed." You can probably think of others to add to this provocative list, but remember to play by the rules—"Motherworetights" won't do. We wonder if the new series will make a complete cycle and end in a new show named simply, "Conquered." As yet the serial is like some of its synonyms. It has snap and crackle, but no Pop.

And speaking of mothers and tights, did you hear about the trapeze artist who caught his wife in the act?

We thought we had heard (and used) every excuse possibie for being late to class, but this morning came the coup de grace.

"I'm sorry I'm late,-sir." said the bright student, "but my motor wouldn't start."

"Don't you think you might be able to walk to class on a nice day like this?" the prof asked gently.

"Oh, I haven't got a car, sir," said the b.s. "I have an electric razor!" What we want to know is, "How sharp can a guy get?"

We were making a five o'clock run into Durham the other afternoon when we noticed a sign on the left just as you enter the city which reads, "STOP, SHOP, SAVE." We know that's what it says because we went back to see, but the first time we glimpsed it out of the corner of our eye we weren't quite sure. "Stop, shop, shave," we said out loud suddenly about a block further down the street, as we tried to reconstruct in our mind's eye what the sign said. "No, 'Stop, Sop, Save.' '—Shop, Stop, Stave,' '—Chop, Chop, Shave.' Oh, the heck with it. Let's go back and see how it reads," we finally decided, too dizzy by this time to care much about getting what we went after in Durham, anyway.

In case you are wondering why we have used "we" so often in this little gem, it's because of the fact that by the time we had finished mumbling to ourselves we were seeing two of us.

There ought to be a law!

Drink Deep or Taste Not

By Kennedy Gammage

In answer to the question, "How is it possible that a system such as Communism could spread so rapidly to all parts of the world?" we considered the types of people to whom Communism makes a strong appeal, and noted that there were two main categories; the naive and the frustrated.

By far the greater appeal of Communism is to the latter group. It may not be evident upon the surface, even as it is often impossible to recognize insanity by merely looking at a person so afflicted. Nevertheless, the condition is present. Most often, it is the result of a physical or emotional maladjustment to our present society.

In some way, there has been a failure on the part of these people, and consequently a violent swing in the opposite direction, an attempt to rationalize the cause for failure by blaming it upon the system rather than upon themselves. A great hate wells up inside, and a new zealot is converted. This frustration may be channelled in directions other than Communism, of course. Perhaps the person becomes an ardent member of the church . . . or a prohibitionist . . . or a zealous stamp collector.

But there are a few sucked into believing in Communism. Those who have felt the sting of uncharitable fellow men who made fun of their race or color and refused to extend to them the hand of friendship are also likely material for Communism, not because Communism can give them recognition, which it does not in practice, but only because they get a chance to get even with those who were unkind. Those, too, who have ly, and who by much reading and little thinking have taken more than they can digest, flock to Communism where they will have to do no thinking whatever, but where their very obedience to a dictator will give them an illusion of power.

The advantage of these hates and frustrations is that in Communism, these people can

Spring Cleaning

Editor:

Will you present to the student body a problem concerned with scheduling use of dormitories in the next few days? We are faced with a difficult situation in that dormitories must be cleaned for commencement guests and summer school students at the same time that many regular students would like to be using the buildings.

Examinations for the spring term end on Saturday, June 5, but many commencement guests will arrive by that time. Many of them must be housed in dormitories, and these dormitories must be cleaned even while students would normally expect to be packing.

On Sunday, June 6, approximately 75 persons will come into Stacy dormitory to register for Extension division conference. This means that Stacy must be cleaned on Saturday.

The same tight schedule exists with regard to the opening of summer school. Commencement is on Monday night, June 7. Students would normally expect to leave their dormitories on Tuesday, June 8. But on Tuesday certain students will be arriving for the summer school program which begins officially for the general college on Wednesday. These students have the right to expect to enter orderly buildings. The problem is further complicated in that Aycock dormitory, and possibly Graham, will be assigned to women students. If they are to be cleaned and converted, men must vacate the buildings by Sunday afternoon, June 6.

I do not want to ask the impossible. Technically the University charges rent for the term, not for the interim vacation period. Consideration should certainly be given to our regular students especially to members of the graduating class and to their friends. The situation can be best met by good humor and tolerance. I suggest that a student who is not graduating should leave the campus as soon as possible after his examinations; that occupants of Stacy plan to vacate before Commencement weekend; that men in Aycock who are returning for summer school move into another dormitory by noon on Sunday, June 6; that graduates in Aycock be prepared to move out Monday evening, June 7; that the campus be alerted to reception of Commencement guests and some thousands of students who come here for the summer program without benefit of orientation.

Milky Dissension

By Alice Denham

After hesitating for a week, I decided to find out what it is about the Lenoir variety of scrambled eggs that doesn't appeal to my palate. Are they really watery or do I have water on the brain? The delay of a week in approaching the subject was due to: (1) uncertaintly of the most effective psychological approach, and (2) fear of losing my place in the breakfast line if I dropped out to make enquiries.

The dietician was very cooperative and informed me the scrambled eggs are mixed with milk. She said that the kitchen is open to the public and invited me to enter it. I spoke to the Negro man who was cooking the eggs in a huge sklilet. He asserted that the eggs are not mixed with anything. I repeated the dietician's statement that the eggs are mixed with milk and he repeated his that they are not.

In concluding the case, suffice it to say, let every man be the judge of his own eggs. Undoubtedly, the watery taste of the eggs to my palate is due to my outlandish habit of drinking fifteen glasses of water daily instead of the usual eight.

During my ramblings as a private eye, I also discovered that breakfast is the same price at the Sandwich Shop as it is at Lenoir, and in my opinion it is superior. For a mere 47 cents at the Sandwich Shop, you can devour one egg, two pieces of bacon, grits, two pieces of toast, orange juice, and coffee, while the same meal at Lenoir costs 45 cents. This pleasingly surprised me since I though that although Lenoir may not be the best place in town to eat breakfast, it was by far the least expensive. Perhaps the Sandwich Shop operates without a profit!

There is one organization on campus that is not receiving the attention and consideration its past efforts merit. That is the Sound and Fury musical comedy group. Although some good writers, composers, and actors are connected with the group, the average student is either disinterested in or ignorant of S & F's activities. The same bunch does all the work and planning which entails difficulty in putting on a big production. Perhaps, the S & F meetings and tryouts lack adequate publicity.

You don't need stage experience of any kind and you don't have to be among those planning a career in the theater to join the group. All that's required is a general interest in the stage and you'll be amazed at the fun you have. Why, they even made a temporary actress out of me which ain't easy. My previous stage experience amounted to playing the part of Mercury in the fourth grade!

Drop around to S & F. Who knows, you might hear a new joke!

Little Time Remains To Get Date Tickets

This weekend will be the last chance for students to buy tickets for their dates under the plan being operated by the Athletic association.

A limited number of season tickets are on sale now for the Tar Heel's five home games and can be purchased by students for the regular prices charged for individual ducats. This will be the last chance for students to buy football tickets until the middle of July.

PICK UP YOUR GEAR

Students who will not be in summer school for either of the two sessions had better clear their baskets of any personal equipment before leaving for the summer.

The basketroom will dump the baskets at the close of the second session so students should pick up their sneakers and other athletic gear.

Tom Andrew Hurls Classy Three-Hitter For Easy 7-1 Win

By Bill Kellam

Raleigh, May 26—Apparently feeling obliged to prove that the NCAA selection committee was on the ball when they chose them for the playoffs, Carolina's Big Four champs put on a show of power on the mound and at the plate this afternoon in Devereux Meadow as they backed up Tommy Andrew's sterling 3-hitter with 16 safeties for a convincing 7-1 victory.

Andrew, who recorded his third victory in five decisions, was in complete command throughout the game and would have registered a shutout had he not grooved a home-run straight ball to Aggie catcher Bill Fowler at the start of the fourth frame.

Heavy Hitters

Harry Beason, Jim Kelly, and Will Hobbs were the big Tar Heel stickers today. Beason banged out three singles and a double in five trips to the plate while Kelly and Hobbs came through with a double and a single each in a like number of times at bat to chase in three runs apiece. Kenny Black, Rip Ryan and Andrew chipped in a pair of hits each.

Ernie Johnson, the State nothing ball ace, opened for the home boys but it took the Tar Heels only 2 and 1-3 innings to send him to the showers. The visitors got to Johnson for two runs in the opening frame on Evans' one-hand muff of Hayworth's liner to center, Beason's double to the right field fence, and Hobb's two run single to left.

Carolina came back for three more in the third. Hayworth started off the excitement again this time with a single through short. Beason's second straight hit moved him to third and both runners scored when Kelly blasted a 360-foot double to the right field fence.

Kelly then completed his circuit of the bases on Hobbs' 370 foot clout to right center. Ryan's single, on which Hobbs moved to third, marked Johnson's exit. He was replaced by righthanded sidearmer John Holding who got Pappy Hamilton to pop to third for the last out.

Holding, though allowing nine hits, managed to hold out until the final frame when Andrew's single, a walk to Black, Beason's run-producing single, Kelly's one baser which scored Black, and a hit batsman forced his removal from the rather uncontested contest. Edwards took over for State and Hamilton once more came through with the final out, this time on a fly to right.

State DP's Hurt

State double plays nipped potential Carolina rallies in the bud in the third, fourth, and seventh innings. All three times there was already one man out when the twin killings effectively chocked off the Blue and White threats. Willie Evans' perfect throw with two out in the sixth frame caught Rip Ryan at the plate and nipped another scoring attempt in the bud. Ryan was attempting to score from second on Andrew's single.

Save for Fowler's pop fly circuit which fell between the fence and signboards some 330 feet from the plate, the Farmers' weren't able to touch the slants of the Carolina curve and knuckle baller. Leo Katkaveck's blooper

Murphy Is Selected For Summer Coaching

Russ Murphy, University of North Carolina backfield coach, has been appointed associate director of the annual football coaching school sponsored by the Western Pennsylvania high school coaches association which will be held at Slippery Rock Teachers college August 9-13.

He will be associated with Sid Gillman, Army line coach, in heading what is considered one of the outstanding high school football clinics of the nation.

An all-star high school game, with Western Pennsylvania players participating, will be held at New Castle, Pa., August 14, with Murphy and Gillman directing and coaching.

Murphy, graduate of the University of Colorado, has been an assistant to Carl Snavely for the past nine years, first at Cornell and since then at Carolina.

Choo Reagan Twirls One-Hit Whitewash

By Bill Gallagher

Capitalizing on the one-hit pitching of "Choo" Reagan and backing him up with eight safeties the Misfits copped the all-campus softball title yesterday over the fraternity champion, Pi KA, by a 7-0 score.

At the same time Sigma Chi and Med School splashed their way to the two loop water polo crowns over Phi Gam and Emerson, respectively.

The tennis schedule was washed out by rain and has been reset for this afternoon. Lewis and Mangum meet in the dormitory title match while two semi-final fraternity meets complete the mural program for the day.

Misfits settled the game as early as the second frame with a two-run raliy. Bill Spiegel opened things with a hefty triple and scored on a fielder's choice by Reagan. This was enough to sew up the victory behind the sparkling hurling of Reagan. He later came home on a single by Sparger. The winners pushed across three more runs in the third. Ludwig and Greenbaum collected singles and had to sweat out two men being retired before they came in on two PiKA errors and another hit. Reagan reached base on one of the errors and came around to score his second run of the day.

The final two runs of the game were racked up in the very next inning to two hits and one more error by the faulty-fielding fraternity court nine.

Reagan twirled some nifty ball in allowing only one hit, issuing five free tickets to firsts, and setting five batters down on strikes.

Sigma Chi and Med School captured the water polo titles and due to approaching exams in the Med School the members of winning dormitory squad decided to forego the all-campus match.

Coed Correction

Jane Morrison, and not K. D. Durham as an erroneous Daily Tar Heel story reported yesterday, has advanced to the finals of the coed tennis tourney. Jane, a Pi Phi, defeated K. D. by scores of 6-2, 3-6, 6-1.

In other play, B. A. Pope advanced to the semi-finals of the tourney with a win over Beckie Holton. B. A. meets the winner of the Sarah Walker-Lib Browning match to decide who meets Morrison in the finals.

Trackmen Prepare For IC4A Action

A squad of at least five Tar Heel tracksters will be representing the University this weekend in the annual IC4A track meet slated for Randall's island in New York.

Sam Magill, star two-miler, may also be added to the Carolina quintet. It will not be known definitely if the little distance man will be able to make the trip until late this afternoon.

Bob Seligman, Ted Shultz, Dick Taylor, Henry Hickman, and Jack Moody are the cindermen slated to see action on the island situated in the middle of the East river. Some of the boys will leave Chapel Hill this afternoon, while others will wait as late as tomorrow night.

Meet Begins Tomorrow

The meet begins tomorrow and the finals in most of the events will be run off Saturday afternoon.

Seligman will compete in both the discus and the shot put. If he reaches his conference winning discus toss of 154', he stands a good chance of placing high among the leaders in that event. His 48' 5" shot put against Duke last week was good enough to beat conference champion Jim O'Leary and might also be enough for a point or two.

Hickman is another question-mark. He reached 13' against Duke for the first time in his career and if he can top the bar at that height again he will prove a big threat in the pole vault. His 12' 6" average should be good for a place among the vaulters.

Shultz, Taylor in Hurdles

Shultz and Taylor will be carrying the Carolina timber-topping hopes; Shultz in the lows and Taylor in the highs. Unless these two men run up against some really top-flight competition in the trial heats, their times for the season should install them as serious contenders.

Shultz has hit 23.6 in the 220-lows while Taylor's best effort in the 120-highs is an almost sure winning 14.6.

Moody will be the second double-duty man on the squad. Mangum (DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP); Courts 6-11: Phi Delt 2 vs. Zeta Psi 1. The blond New Jerseyite is entered in the high and broad jumps. His 6' 4" high jump is his best vertical leap, but will probably not be quite enough to top Columbia's Bill Vessie, among others.

Tar Babies Breeze To 8-2 Advantage; Ralph Brake Victor

By Mel Horowitz

Revenge was sweet to Coach Henry House's jayvee baseballers yesterday afternoon as they ended their season with an 8-2 victory over State on Emerson field.

It was only two days ago that these same Wolfcubs eked out a 3-2 win in Raleigh, but they were never in the game after the second inning when the Tar Babies sent three tallies across the plate on only two hits.

Ralph Brake, flashy freshman twirler, scattered nine hits effectively and pitched air-tight ball in the clutches to earn the victory which was the Housemen's third over the Capital city crew.

Big Second Inning

Things started popping in the home half of the second frame when Charlie Garganus led off with a single and was sent to second as Bill Walsh was hit by a pitched ball. After Jake Carter sacrificed the runners to second and third and Brake walked to fill the sacks, Garganus scored on Chuck Dixon's wild pitch, Zero Allen drove in two more tallies with a clean one base hit.

John Senter led off for Carolina in the third with a single and advanced to second when Stan Goodman was safe at first on an error. Both men crossed the plate when the State first sacker missed the throw from short on Carter's hot grounder. Goodman did some exceptionally fine base running as he went all the way home from first. Joe Brookshire followed with a single, but both men died on base.

Runs in Fourth, Seventh, Eighth

The Tar Babies added single runs in the fourth, seventh, and eighth. On an error by Fix at first, Allen was safe; he stole second, advanced to third on Senter's single and scored on Goodman's long fly. Gaining first on an error, a walk to Garganus, an infield out by Walsh and Carter's double sent Goodman home in the seventh. The last Tar Baby run came in the eighth on Brake's one-bagger, a free pass to second on Barry Payne's error, Ward's infield out and a wild pitch.

John Senter led the Tar Babies hitting attack with two for four. Jake Carter got the only extra base hit of the afternoon. Top State stickman was Oliver "Grandpa" Livingston, who also had two for four.

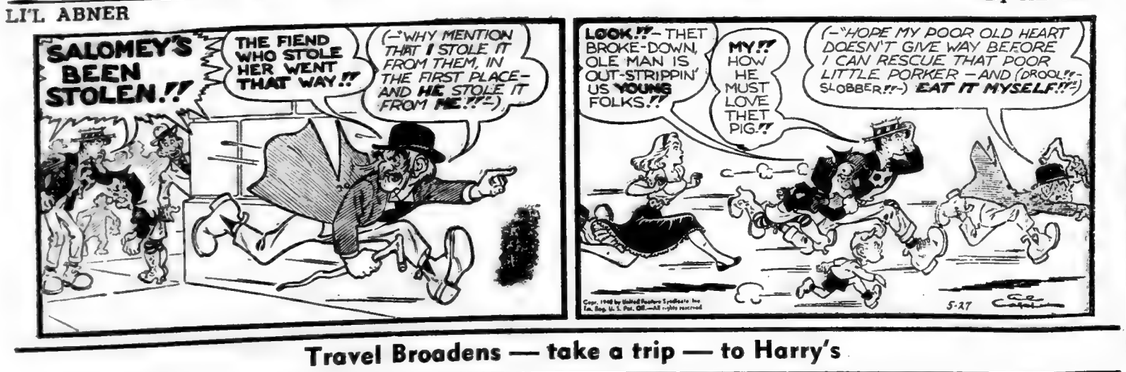
Rule-Minded Gridders Face Camera

Today is movie day for the Carolina football team as the greats of the Tar Heel gridiron face the camera in connection with a one-day school for Southern conference football officials.

The local footballers will act out the rights and wrongs of some 67 rule changes that will appear in the game next year. Their actions will be recorded on celluloid with a sound track being added with commentary depicting the goings-on.

Watching the filming will be the Southern conference football officials who are to work loop games next season. They will be refreshed and tutored on the subject of rules during the session.

The watch-dogs will be especially interested in absorbing the fundamentals of four major rule variations that will be put into the game next season. Biggest of these deals with substitution and its limits, of special interest locally because of the Snavely two-team system.



The proceedings will probably get underway around 3 o'clock at which time all designated football players are to be dressed and on the field at Kenan stadium.

YW Public Affairs Group Completes Presidential Endorsement Debates

At its last meeting of the year members of the Public Affairs committee of the YWCA cast by secret ballot the presidential candidate whom she endorsed for the forthcoming November election. Five of the group voted for Harold Stassen, one voted for Arthur Vandenburg, and one for Harry Truman. For the past month the committee has had various speakers to discuss possible presidential candidates.

At this week's meeting Emily Baker, chairman of the committee, discussed Arthur Vandenberg and Peggy Dees spoke on Henry Wallace.

In discussing Wallace, Peggy said he was an excellent beaurocrat, but he would not make a good president. In the first place, she said, he is honest, so he is not a good politician. The speaker then pointed out that Wallace was influenced by Communism. "He follows Moscow lines on foreign affairs," she brought out. Peggy reviewed Wallace's political history, and listed groups who had repudiated him. Concluding her talk she said she was convinced that a heavy vote for Wallace would draw votes from the Democratic nominee, and would put a reactionary man in the White House.

Emily Baker reviewed Vandenberg's political history, and some of his qualities that would merit his being nominated on the Republican ticket. She told the group that he had been in the Senate since 1928, and is now speaker pro tem. In conclusion Emily said his good health, social life, and knack of being a good politician were attributes of a good nominees. She said she did not consider Vandenberg an isolationist.

Dedmond Releases Data On New Budget Situation

Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, issued the following statement yesterday to explain to the campus what is being done toward the careful supervision of the 1948-49 budget:

"The financial deficit which had been foreseen for the fiscal year 1948-49 has now been corrected by legislative action in reducing anticipated expenditures to bring them in line with income expected. The exact condition of the 1947-48 budget cannot be determined definitely until the audit after July 1. Indications at this point are encouraging and point to a more favorable surplus than we had reason to expect. But the issue which has faced us has served to point up a very definite need.

"The lack of coordination between the Student Activities Fund office and student government departments has been clearly demonstrated by the many conflicting reports made. This situation must be rectified.

"With this view I have called upon the Student Audit Board to provide a system of monthly audits. Such audits will be complete as to expenditures, amounts still expendable under the budget, and total student funds available as to the reporting date. Thes reports will begin with the next fiscal year.

"I have also called upon Bob Kirby, the secretary-treasurer of the student body, to head a committee to consist of Dick Gordon, Audit board chairman and Jack Girard, Legislature Finance committee chairman, to make a study and factual report of the graduate fees, the Pharmacy school fees and the summer school fees, as well as the inequities existing in the payment by coeds of $3 per year more than any other students. This report will be the basis for discussion of adjustments and probable raises in certain fees when we confer with the Board of Trustees in their meeting this fall.

"I should like to commend Jack Girard's Finance committee and also Ernie House, Bob Kirby, Dick Gordon, Charlie Loudermilk and Al Lowenstein for their untiring work in solving the problems which have faced us."

Jess Dedmond
President, Student Body

What Katy Missed

At 4:48 o'clock yesterday in Graham Memorial a coed stood beating on a door and yelling for a man. The coed was Julia Ross; the man was Bill Sessions; the door was plainly branded "MEN"; and the yelling amounted to "Give me back my sex biography!"

The sex, it seems, was autobiographical. Julia, a Valkyrie who graduates with an English degree this June, is now studying marriage—the course, that is. Her term paper struck Literary Editor Sessions as scoop material when she laid it down on a table in the Carolina Mag office.

Sessions grabbed up the rare manuscript and dashed from the GM office down two flights of stairs to the one GM room he knew Julia would not lower her dignity to enter.

The climax to the chase came when Julia did not crash on into man's honored domain and Bill renigged on reading what Kathleen Windsor missed. He explained, "I didn't think I should peer all over it. After all, it might have gotten personal."

HPB Completes Coed Agreement For Summer Terms

The House Privileges board has completed the Coed Visiting agreement for the summer session, it was announced yesterday.

Andy Cornish, newly elected secretary of the board, reported that the agreement, if approved, will be distributed the first part of summer school. It has been submitted to Dean of Men Fred Weaver and Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael for approval.

According to Cornish the agreement contains only a few minor changes to apply to the summer setup. The biggest change, he brought out, is the placing of responsibility on the Inter-Fraternity council court for trying cases in violation of the agreement. Previously, the power to try the cases has been vested in the board itself. The function of the board, under the new agreement, will be to draw up and administer the agreement, Cornish said.

Roy Armstrong Presents Facts On Enrollment

Enrollment for next year will be about the same as this year, according to Roy Armstrong, director of admissions. To date 600 applications have been completely cleared for incoming freshmen from North Carolina, and 850 or 900 will be expected by fall quarter, he said. Ninety out-of-state students will be approximately 10 percent of the total enrollment of new students.

The Admissions office has already cleared over 150 transfer students for General college, Arts and Sciences, Commerce, and Pharmacy. Armstrong said that 75 old students have been cleared for admission, most of these being veterans. Approximately 500 men's applications are pending and only a few technicalities are holding these up, he said.

So far approximately 150 North Carolina girls have been admitted, and 60 out-of-state girls. The total enrollment for graduate and undergraduate women students will be 200 and 250.

Armstrong said 1,500 to 2,000 new students will be admitted for fall quarter. The total enrollment will be about 7,500.

"We still have room for North Carolina students, both boys and girls. The School of Pharmacy is already overflowing, but a few more students can be admitted into the other crowded schools, including sciences, commerce, political science, law, radio, music, dramatic art, denistry, and medicine." Armstrong said.

The housing situation will be greatly improved for single students, as three new dormitories will be completed by fall quarter. There is no relief in sight for the married students, Armstrong concluded.

New Official To Preside Over Council

Ed Davenport of Winterville has been appointed to serve as campus attorney-general, Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, announced yesterday.

The attorney-general's position, generally considered to be the highest appointive office in the executive branch of student government, carries with it the job of presiding over the Coalition council. It confers upon its holder the power to represent the president in all official matters.

Davenport is vice president of the senior class, a member of the Student Legislature, and a dean's list man. He is at present serving on the Coalition council and is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity where he serves as Rush chairman.

Dedmond also announced yesterday the appointment of Basil Sherrill of Gastonia to the position of constitutional adviser to the president.

Members Choose Jim Southerland Di Senate Prexy

Jim Southerland headed the slate of fall officers completed by the Dialectic Senate Wednesday in its last meeting this quarter. Other important decisions were plans to remain active during the summer session and a bill clarifying recent Senate conflict with the University Debate council.

Other Di officers chosen were: Gran Childress, Chapel Hill, speaker pro tempore; Jerry Pettigrew, Reidsville, critic; Cam West, Philadelphia, Pa., clerk; William Harding, East Aurora, N. Y., sergeant-at-arms; Charlie Long, treasurer; Merle Stevens, Forest City, Debate council representative; and Lindsay Tate, Charlotte, chaplain.

Unanimously the Di voted a gavel to Charlie Long as its highest recognition of meretorious service during two previous terms as speaker. John Zucker was awarded the same honor last week.

Amendment Passed To Force Delegation To Ballot as Unit

The Student Legislature passed a bill last night which made the University an official member of the National Students Association by a vote of 28-7.

Meeting in special session called by Speaker Jim Godwin yesterday, the legislators appropriated $241 to cover annual dues charged by the national organization.

The session was called when it was discovered earlier this week that although the University held a regional chairmanship in the NSA, it was not an official member of the national organization. Al Lowenstein, elected Tuesday night as one of three delegates to represent the student body at the national convention to be held in Madison, Wisconsin, this summer, explained that the school could not be represented unless it was an official member.

Two other students, to be appointed by Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, will make up the University delegation. Dedmond stated last night that he intended to be present at the convention.

A second bill was passed to give the delegates freedom of action at the convention this summer, but was amended after a move to reconsider the bill. The amendment, introduced by Joe Leary, authorized the president of the student body to appoint the senior member of the delegation as spokesman for the group which would vote as a unit. The amendment passed by an 18-9 vote in spite of strong opposition.

PI KAPPA PHI

At the last regular meeting of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, Leland Close, junior from Bryson City, was elected Archon for the coming year.

Other officers elected were Clell Bryant, treasurer; Walter Moore, secretary; Bill Moore, historian; Jimmy Thompson, chaplain; and Joe Melvin, warden.

593 Are Polled; 70 Per Cent Favor Negro Students

Results of the Students for Democratic Action poll of 26 University graduate schools show that approximately 70 per cent of the 593 students polled would not object to having Negroes in their classes.

The poll covered 69 per cent of the 857 graduate students enrolled and 352 of the 604 professional students (58 per cent). Professional schools include law, pharmacy, medicine and library science. Only two groups, the Pharmacy school and the Zoology Graduate department showed that a majority of students objected to having Negroes in their classes.

Secret Ballots

Balloting was accomplished secretly by responsible students in the various departments and schools. The poll was begun early in May. In the Law school, the group used figures from a poll conducted recently by the Durham Morning Herald. Students in the medical school received the ballot through the mail.

Since the question of admission of Negroes is not in the hands of the students, the poll was conducted on the basis of determining how students would feel if Negroes were admitted to graduate or professional study in their departments.

Three Choices

The ballot used gave the student the following choices: (1) I would not object to having them in my classes (2) I would object to having them in my classes. (3) I have not made up my mind whether or not I would object to having them in my classes.

In the Graduate school was found the highest percentage of students who would not object to having Negroes in their classes. 488 (82.2 per cent) would not object, 61 would object in the Graduate school, 44 had not made up their minds.

Law School Results

In the Law school 71 (59 per cent) would not object, 44 would object and four were undecided. In the School of Library Science, 20 (74.1 per cent) would not object, while two would object and five had not made up their minds.

Figures obtained from the School of Medicine show 35 (66 per cent) would not object, 17 would object and one was undecided. In the School of Pharmacy only 48 (31 per cent) would not object, whereas results showed 85 (55 per cent) would object to having Negroes in their classes. There were 20 in Pharmacy who had not made up their minds.

John Rosser Elected to Head Campus Party During Summer

John Rosser, rising senior from Broadway, has been elected chairman of the Campus party for the summer session.

No regular meetings of the party will be held during the summer, according to Rosser, and the business of the party will be taken care of by officers. The other officers are Eloise Jacobi, secretary, and Tom Shrever, publicity chairman.

Rosser is a member of the Interdormitory council ,the University club, the Student Legislature and Delta Sigma Pi fraternity. He is at present serving on the Finance committee of the Legislature. He served in the European and Pacific theaters during the war and is a commerce major.

MAG MANUSCRIPTS

Students who have submitted manuscripts to the Carolina magazine may get them at the Carolina mag office this afternoon, according to an announcement by Bill Sessions yesterday.

Amble on Out

Reynard, ex-head dog of campus, has at last been discovered in the unveiling of a mystery which has enshrouded this area since the wee hours of Sunday, May 16.

Reynard, better known as Radar, is resting in the quiet solitude of Dr. Nathan's Veterinary hospital and has been there unharmed since his disappearance of a fortnight ago.

It seems Radar belongs to 7,000 students and at the same time is a homeless vagabond. He belongs to nobody in particular, but everybody in general. Laws read that animals, especially dogs, belonging to "nobody" in particular are committed to proper institutions, it seems.

Mrs. A. M. Jordan, who heads the Humane society here, spends much of her time finding homes for nice dogs, like Radar, and requests that some kindly dog-loving gentleman or lady amble out to the hospital and "size up" Radar and another likely creature, a bird dog, for adoption purposes.

Students Must Sign Yack Address Blanks

"Today is the last chance for students to fill out their forwarding address for the 1948 Yackety Yack, and no letters will be accepted during the summer requesting that the yearbook be mailed," said Dick Gordon, business manager.

Graduate students, medical students, law students, pharmacy students, and all other professional students will receive a Yack free of charge provided they have been in school for the past three successive quarters.

Desks will be set up in the Y building today from 9 until 1:30 o'clock. Students fill out a gummed label stating the name and address he wants his yearbook mailed. For every quarter any student is not in school, beginning with the fall quarter and ending with the spring one, the student wil have to pay $1.50.

'It We Carry Nutbush, We'll Have It Made,' Mayne Albright Promises Student Supporters

By Jim Dickinson

Students and townspeople gathered in drizzling rain yesterday morning for two whirlwind speeches by R. Mayne Albright, UNC alumnus and candidate for the governorship of North Carolina.

"We think we have an excellent chance of leading in the Democratic primary on Saturday," said Albright, who brought his pretty wife and trailer, "The Challenger," for brief talks at the postoffice and Y court.

After Erie Cofield introduced Albright as "the next governor of North Carolina," the ever-smiling candidate went into a rapid-fire and humorous discussion of his visit and "revisit" to 600 towns and 200,000 in the current campaign.

"This is more fun than campus politics," said Albright as he gave discription of towns he had visited in North Carolina including Minneapolis, Saint Pauls, Independence—and Nutbush precinct.

"If we carry Nutbush, we're as good as in office," he said. "The town only has 24 voters, but Roosevelt once got 100,000 as a direct result of carrying Nutbush."

Albright introduced his wife as "the prettiest lady in the state of North Carolina" and said, "I think she's going to vote for me."

Mrs. Albright, no less a campaigner than her husband, reintroduced Albright as "the candidate of the people, not the machine."

When the Albright brigade was already late 30 minutes for the Y speech, Ernie House added his philosophy, "Dr. Woodhouse will probably show up before Albright, and that would make history."

Then came the Albright motorcade led by Foo Giduz in a model "T" named "The Brooklyn Bridge," followed by a procession of cars and "The Challenger."

Albright called the revisit a "real homecoming" and said he was late because he stopped for a speech at a country filling station between Chapel Hill and Durham. "We couldn't stop while we were winning," he said.

"I won't talk about other candidates," said Albright. "I'll let them talk about one another. The old saying by Confucius goes like this, 'Man who slings mud loses ground.'"

"We only have two paid workers for the drive," he said, "so I hope you students will be my campaign managers. We're trying to stay within the limits of the $100,000 to $500,000 campaign funds," he smiled.

Albright left here for speeches in Charlotte and Gastonia yesterday, and then a return back home to Raleigh today.

Bill Buchan Will Replace Chuck Hauser As DTH Managing Editor During Summer

Replacing Chuck Hauser as Daily Tar Heel managing editor for the summer terms will be Bill Buchan, DTH columnist and editorial writer and present associate editor.

Editor Ed Joyner also announced the appointment of Bill Carmichael, III, as sports editor for the first term and Bill Gallagher as sports editor for the second term to succeed Carmichael and Bob Goldwater who have served as co-sports editors for the past year. All appointments are subject to approval by the Publications board.

Hauser is leaving school only for the summer months. He has been offered a job with United Press in Raleigh and will return in the fall to resume his duties.

BILL BUCHAN

An Army veteran, Buchan is a sophomore and has worked on the DTH for the past 12 months. A native of Pinebluff, North Carolina, he has 14 months experience as a War department civilian editor of an Army newspaper in Germany. Carmichael, a native of Chapel Hill, has been on the staff of the paper for the past year and at present time is a candidate for a commission in the Naval Reserve. Gallagher has covered intramural sports at Carolina during the past term. He is from Hamlet, North Carolina.

LAST DTH

Today marks the last issue of the Daily Tar Heel for the academic year 1947-48. The DTH in its present size and format first published in eight-page form on the first day of classes last September, after printing as a six-column publication for many years. Today sees another eight-page Daily Tar Heel and another landmark in the life of the 55-year-old newspaper.

Publication will resume on June 12 at the beginning of the first session of summer school.

Additional Names Of Award-Winners Are Listed Fully

The following students who received awards at the annual Awards Night last week could not be listed in the Daily Tar Heel previous to this time due to space limitations.

Mrs. Ruth White Fink, director of women's athletics, announced the following awards to coeds; Betsy Ann Barbee and Bill Lloyd, Chapel Hill, and Marshall Spears, Rocky Mount.

Awards were also made to sororities, clubs and dormitories excelling in various sports: Volleyball—Pi Beta Phi; Basketball—Town Girls Club; Swimming—Pi Beta Phi; Table Tennis—Carr Dormitory, and Badminton—Spencer Dormitory.

NO, THIS ISN'T JEFF'S, but that horse really is drinking beer. His name is "Admiral," and after a dusty day's work plowing in the fields on the outskirts of Chicago, he just decided he'd drop in for a short beer to cool off. On the right is his master, Marshall Polo, also having a short one. (International Soundphoto)

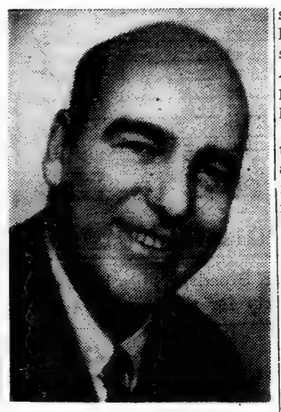
From Parties . . . . . to Metropolitan

Party Started Cordon's Success

By Thomas Bruce

One cold gray day back in the fall of 1943 when a dollar would buy something, Norman Cordon, a young singer from North Carolina, who had been doing pretty well on the concert stage, was lolling around in his apartment in Chicago.

Norman wasn't feeling quite up to par, and when a friend dropped by to invite him to a party, the Tar Heel wasn't interested. He was tired and the prospects of another late evening didn't appeal to him.



But Norman was persuaded to change his mind, and he thinks it turned out to be the luckiest decision he ever made. Someone at the party asked him to sing. Reluctantly he sat down at the piano and began on some spirituals. Another guest, Dr. Shirley Munns, told Cordon he ought to be singing in opera and that he would get him an audition.

Norman thought this all good fun and didn't take the suggestion too seriously until Dr. Munns took him to see Giacomo Spadoni, then a conductor and coach for the Chicago Opera Association.

Chicago Debut in '33

Spadoni, impressed by the strength and sonority and range of Cordon's voice, used his influence to secure an engagement for him with the San Carlo Opera Company. Norman made his debut on September 24, 1933, as the king in "Aida". And when Paul Longone formed the Chicago Opera Company Norman was one of the regular principals. He made his debut with this company December 25, 1933 as Angelotti in "La Tosca".

His advent at the Metropolitan appreciative audience were his in New York came as a natural sequence to his success in Chicago. It was on the night of May 13, 1936, and in the large and mother and four aunts: Mrs. Norman Cordon, Sr., of Washington, N. C.; Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Raleigh; Mrs. Justus Randolph and Mrs. Frank Bryan of Washington, and Mrs. George C. Wood of Edenton. He made his debut as "Menterone" in "Rigoletto".

NORMAN CORDON

Success in New York

The discriminating audience was most generous with its applause, and at the conclusion of the performance it was an assured fact that another singer had entered that exclusive and select circle in the Metropolitan. As bass-baritone of the Metropolitan, he was to sing leading parts including "La Tosca," "Aida," "The Bartered Bride," the Wagnerian "Ring," "Parsifal," and "Faust." As Mephistopheles in "Faust," critics said he looked more like the "devil" than the ole boy himself.

After 12 years of success with the Metropolitan, Norman Cordon has come back to his native North Carolina, and if he succeeds in carrying out the statewide Music Program just assigned him, this state is going to be "singing mad" before many years have passed. And although more mature in age and experience—he is 44—he is the same friendly unaffected Norman Cordon who used to sing in the University Glee Club during his student days.

State-Wide Program

Cordon sees great possibilities for the development of native musicians and the improvement of music appreciation in the old North State. Not that he is unaware of what has already been accomplished. He realizes that a groundwork has already been laid and he cites as examples such organizations as the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, the choir of "The Lost Colony," the fine work of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs. Winston-Salem's Art Festival, the comprehensive, collection of recorded classical music in the Greensboro public library, the Music Festival at the Woman's College of the University at Greensboro.

Responding to a cordial welcome given him at a homecoming dinner here May 15, Cordon talked enthusiastically about the program mapped for him.

An advertisement in a recent issue of the Tar Heel gave the reasons for the passage of the Umstead Act. This advertisement states just what the Act does and does not do.

WHAT THE UMSTEAD ACT DOES:

1. It provides "that it shall be unlawful for any unit or agency of the State Government or any individual employee or employees of any such unit or agency in his, or her, or their capacity as employee or employees of said unit or agency to purchase for or sell to any person, firm or corporation any article of merchandise in competition with citizens of the State."

2. It further provides "that as regards educational institutions, the provisions of this act shall not apply to articles produced incident to the operation of an instructional department, or incident to educational research, or to articles of merchandise incident to classroom work, meals, books and or other articles of merchandise not exceeding fifteen cents in value when sold to members of the educational staff, or staff auxiliary to education, or sold to duly enrolled students, or to members of charitable institutions, or on occasion to immediate members of the families of members of the educational staff or of duly enrolled students."

3. It further lists other exceptions to the Act, these being agencies of the State that dispose of used articles of merchandise or that produce certain articles of merchandise in their usual operations. The only educational institutions excepted are Western Carolina Teachers College at Cullowhee and Appalachian State Teachers College and Boone. In the case of these institutions, there were local situations that made it necessary to except them.

WHAT THE UMSTEAD ACT DOES NOT DO:

1. It does not prohibit dormitory stores on the campus of any institution covered by its provisions.

2. It does not prohibit a student from selling any article of merchandise to any person unless that student be an employee of the institution and only then in his or her capacity as an employee of the institution.

3. It does not prevent any student from acting as agent for any individual, firm or corporation for the sale of merchandise.

4. It does not prevent any student from acting as agent for any individual, firm or corporation for services rendered.

5. It does not control the price of any article of merchandise excepted from its provisions. Such prices are controlled by the agency selling such merchandise.

6. It does not control the price of food at any dining hall operated by the institution. Such prices are entirely in the control of the agency operating such dining halls.

7. It does not attempt to control the operation of any institution in regard to any matter other than the retail sales of merchandise.

These facts have been placed before you solely for the purpose of clearing up misunderstandings that have arisen in regard to this matter.

Fall Orientation Program Already Well Underway

By John Stump

"Student activities are the heart of the Carolina way of life."

That is the theme of the fall orientation program for new men now in an advanced stage of preparation under the guidance of Orientation Committee Chairman Bill Miller and a staff of some 70 student assistants.

Miller feels, he says, that if the men who will enter Carolina in the fall are properly oriented that next year could see the beginning of a new era for the Carolina Honor System, student government, student activities, and all of the things which make up the Carolina way of life.

Committee at Work

To further this end, he and student body President Jess Dedmond early in the quarter picked a ten-man Orientation committee which has been at work ever since to plan a comprehensive program for next fall.

Accomplishments to date include a schedule of activities which will fill the week from Saturday, September 18, to Friday, September 24, with meetings, speeches, and social activities all calculated to impress upon the new men the greatness of the University which they are entering.

Present plans call for the division of the 900 freshmen men and 500 transfers who will enter at that time into groups of 20 each. Within those groups, each of which will be led by a student orientation counselor, the men will have explained to them and be encouraged to discuss various aspects of life here.

Where to Eat

Such problems as where to eat in Chapel Hill, what the regulations governing student ownership of automobiles are, how to use the library, and what is where in Graham Memorial will be explained to them during informal sessions during the week.

Student government, publications, and other student activities will be explained in assemblies, chief of which is Student government night at which Dr. Frank Graham will speak.

The Honor System, which according to all reports is none too clear to many students now here, will be the subject of a speech to be delivered by Page Harris, chairman of the Men's Honor council.

Graduates to Speak

Several old graduates of the University will be asked to return to speak on what Carolina has meant to them in later life, outstanding alumni will point to the affect that extracurriculars have had in their success and a freshman assembly program will be utilized to carry orientation over after classes begin.

But the most interesting innovation under consideration by the committee is the making of a movie which would show the various steps gone through during the orientation of the new men.

If produced, this movie will be used in future years to train counselors.

Other attractions include the president's reception, open house in the women's dormitories, a Sound and Fury production, Monogram night, and the annual Coed ball.

Interest Shown

With a large part of his work behind him, Miller says that he has been helped "enormously" by the cooperation extended him wherever he has turned. In particular, the orientation chairman declared, "We have been impressed with the response of the the various student organizations and the interest displayed by the counselors in the program."

Although the fall and final proof of the success of the program are still a vacation away, every sign points to an orientation program which should in itself be a good illustration of its slogan: "Student activities are the heart of the Carolina way of life."

Portion of John Umstead's Act Which Pertains to University Is Printed

In conjunction with the advertisement of the Chapel Hill Merchant's association appearing on the opposite page, the Daily Tar Heel is printing here the text of the so-called Umstead act insofar as it applies to the University of North Carolina.

"Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for any unit or agency of State Government or any individual employee or employees of any such unit or agency in his, or her, or their capacity as employees of said unit or agency to purchase for or sell to any person, firm or corporation any article of merchandise in competition with citizens of the State: Provided however, that as regards educational institutions, the provisions of this act shall not apply to articles produced incident to the operation of an instructional department, or incident to educational research, or to articles of merchandise not exceeding fifteen cents in value when sold to members of the educational staff, or staff auxiliary to education, or sold to duly enrolled students or to members of charitable institutions, or on occasion to immediate members of the families of members of the educational staff or of duly enrolled students . . ."

"Provided further that the provisions of this act shall not apply to the sale of learned journals or books, or to the business operation of endowment funds established for the purpose of producing income for educational purposes."

Section 2. That any person knowingly or willfully violating the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of ten dollars for each such violation.

PHARMACY AWARD

Lynn Blanchard from Wallace has been awarded the Kappa Epsilon cup which is given annually to the most outstanding girl in the graduating class of the Pharmacy school.

The award is given on the basis of leadership, citizenship and scholarship. Miss Blanchard has served as president of KE president of the Pharmacy senate, member of the Student Legislature and member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

A LITTLE SUNTAN never hurts anyone must be the slogan vivacious Alice Denham lives by, but the boys in the Art department seem to enjoy mixing just the right shade for her lucious limbs. And to think, she's studying journalism!

Paint-and-Crayon Students Believe Bathing Suit Is Obstruction to Art

By Raney Stanford

Chapel Hill may be highly touted as an art colony, conjuring up all sorts of romantic visions of the attractions of the Bohemian life, but Alice Denham, junior from Washington, D. C., who as an artist's model should know about these things, says it's mostly hard work.

Alice works for two art classes in Person hall, a sculptoring session and a life-drawing class. She pulls down $1.50 for two hours of posing, but really earns it by staying in the same strained position for 15 or 20 minutes at a stretch.

The little tan-skinned major in journalism says she likes posing for the sculptors better than the paint and crayon students, because the clay chiselers seem a lot less serious about it all — "the quips flying back and forth in there are really frightful," she says wickedly — and because she doesn't have to pose so formally. The sculptors, under the tutelage of the nationally-renowned Raymond Puccinelli, start out with a fundamental idea in mind beforehand, she explains, and as they work along, if they come to a part in the figure that puzzles them like an arm or an leg, they call for an original to go by and Alice obligingly holds one out.

"Lots easier than assuming modern dance or ballet positions like I generally do in the drawing classes."

She says she enjoys it all, though, and as she is interested in art, she picks up much information while on the modeling stand. Even with both hands around a foot and her head upside down by one knee.

"I always pose in a two-piece bathing suit even though some students have said they deplore the obstructions of the suit and that it conceals body contours they need for true representation."

And what does Miss Denham say to this complaint? She just laughs, quietly.

Russia Revives U.S. Plan To End War

Secretary Royall Orders MacArthur To Return to U. S.

Washington, May 27—(UP)—General Douglas MacArthur was ordered home today to advise the Senate Appropriations committee regarding spending in his Pacific area of command.

The Pacific Commander was cabled immediately today by Army Secretary Kenneth Royall after the senate committee decided to invite him to testify on how much money is needed for military purposes in the Far East. Royall's cable explained that the senate group wants General MacArthur to appear either June 2 or 3. It was pointed out here that these dates are well in advance of the Republican nominating convention.

However, there has been no word yet from Tokyo whether the general is on his way. Persons close to MacArthur said that, like any soldier on active duty, he could not avoid a request from his commanding officers.

On the other hand, they point out that the general has steadfastly refused to return home in advance of the Philadelphia convention on June 21. MacArthur is said to feel that the American people would take this to be an obvious political move, something he said he is anxious to avoid.

Wife for Sale Finds 'Good Bet'

New York, May 27—(UP)—The New York woman who has her hand out for a wedding ring and $10.000 found one prospective husband today who she said is a "good bet."

Mrs. Dorothy Lawler, a 28-year-old divorcee, mother of two children and a night club hat-check girl, picked him out of the first five applicants who responded to her newspaper ad for a husband.

A female application turned up today. A woman telephoned to ask if Mrs. Lawler would pass the rejects on to her.

"I'm not running a matrimonal bureau." was the answer.

Literary Quarterly Staff Meets, Makes Final Plans for Summer

Students and faculty of the Carolina Quarterly staff met Wednesday afternoon and made final plans for summer work that is designed to raise funds and garner contributions for the magazine's first issue next fall.

Editor Bill Sessions presided at the meeting which heard talks by Roy Moose, assistant editor, and Tom Kerr, layout editor of the newly-formed literary magazine. Emily Sewell, business manager, also addressed the group.

Sessions told the meeting that the Student Legislature had underwritten the Quarterly for $1,500 to extend over the first year's publication. The original $2.000 underwrite was cut in a general budget slash by the Legislature on Tuesday night, Sessions disclosed.

Faculty Advisers

Attending the meeting were faculty advisers Phillips Russell and Walter Spearman, also several student contributors well known on campus for their literary efforts in poetry, short stories and articles

Moose told the group that contributions would be accepted throughout the summer months for the fall issue, which is expected to be released about November. He said he hoped for a steady flow of contributions from Carolina students between now and fall in order that the best possible selection of material can be made.

Miss Sewell announced a plan which is designed to publicize the magazine through women and men's writer clubs throughout North Carolina. The program is intened to secure donations and subscriptions for the Quarterly and to inform the state's people that a new literary magazine is being organized, she said.

Work on Vacation

The meeting disclosed that a number of the Quarterly's affiliates will remain in summer school and will work with Miss Sewell in the interests of the magazine. Other students not attending summer school said they will assist in subscription work and in other capacities while at home and on vacation in points of the state and region.

Sessions announced he will not be here for the summer but expects to come here intermittently in order to discharge his duties as editor. He said he will keep in touch with all staff members through the summer, either by letter or in person.

Britain Wants World Embargo On Shipments

Lake Success, N. Y., May 27—(UP)—Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko tonight revived the American plan to declare the war in the Holy Land a breach of world peace.

Under such conditions, the United Nations could use an economic blockade or an international army against any nation that fails to obey its demands. These powers within the charter would be called into use for the first time since the UN was created.

Gromyko urged the Security council to order the Arabs and Jews to cease-fire within 36 hours or face the severe punishment that could result.

Not long after the Russian proposal, Great Britain came out in favor of a world-wide embargo on arms for Palestine. The British told the United Nations Security council that they would suspend shipment of guns and ammunition to the Arabs in the Holy Land. If the UN decides to place a world-wide embargo on munitions to the Middle East.

On a Street Corner . . . . . in Wilkes Barre

How Seth Was Saved From Sin

By Chuck Hauser

"I happen to belong to the Church of Nazerene, but I preach the bible," the man with the Monty Wooley beard said.

"I'm not preaching for money. I'm preaching because I love people. All these preachers nowadays preach for is their salary. A preacher loves his salary and he gives his sheep what they want and not what they need," he went on.

He rolled into town about 2 o'clock in the afternoon last week and parked in front of the Varsity on Franklin street. He drove a coal black war surplus Dodge ambulance with a loud speaker mounted on the roof.

"My name? Seth Pollock. I was born in McVeytown, Pennsylvania and I'm 46 years old. I was saved on a street corner in Wilkes-Barre and I've been a new creature since. I quit drinking, smoking and reading True Confessions and all the other filthy magazines that shouldn't be found in decent homes."

Seth made a strange appearance on Franklin street surrounded by college men. He looked like he could have gotten a job as Monty Wooley's stand-in anytime. His beard and long hair were brown-gray, and he wore a faded suit with a striped shirt buttoned up to the neck and no tie. He probably stood 5-10 in his stocking feet.

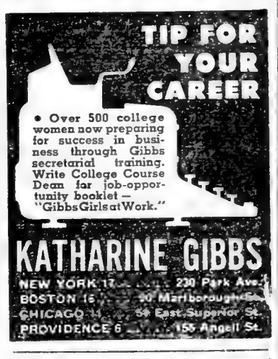
Seth explained that he had been preaching for seven years since he had quit his job with the Pennsylvania Highway department. He claimed that he had driven through "all 48 states and Canada" on his soul-saving itinerary. He pointed out that although it took a great deal of money to travel, he was well-financed by "free-will offerings."

The bearded Christian, who said that he had been trained in a bible school in Cincinnati, told how he had just come down through Asheville toward Missouri to attend camp-meetings.

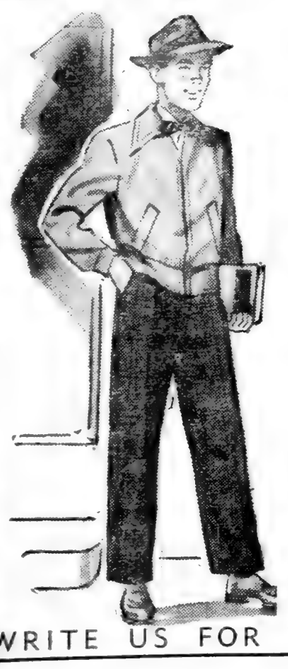
"I get arrested quite often, too," he declared. "You wouldn't think that, would you? Some of these big cities don't appreciate my preaching over a loudspeaker, and some of them just don't appreciate my preaching at all.

"They stopped me not so long ago up in Plymouth, where the pilgrims landed. 'No preaching on the street,' they said. If the old pilgrims knew that, they'd turn over in their graves."

Asked about his black truck, he laughed and said, "That's my kitchen, dining room and bedroom. Oh, yes, and bathroom, too. . . . I almost forget that. . . ."



Seth was quick to put forth an emphatic negative when he was asked to pose for a picture. "No, I don't believe in pictures," he stated. "According to the second commandment 'Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above or that is in the earth beneath or that is in the water under the earth."



And with that he climbed into his black war surplus Dodge ambulance, backed out of the parking space, and headed out Franklin street, kitchen, dining room, bedroom and all. Oh, yes, and bathroom, too. . . .

The Mag Passes

Next Monday marks the end of a 104-year-old tradition. On that day the last issue of the Carolina Magazine will be distributed to University students.

Through the years the Mag has served as a sounding board for budding authors and editors. Between its covers appeared the best writings of several generations of Carolina students, some of whom afterward won great names as professional writers.

Its contents did not always please its student readers, but always it presented the best that student writers had to offer.

Humor publications were kindled, flared, and died, but the Mag went on.

Now it, too, is dead.

Its passing leaves a gap in Carolina life as many have known it, a gap which we hope the newly-formed quarterly will be able successfully to fill.

Well Deserved Thanks

Only when they graduate do DTH staff members receive any recognition other than derogatory letters in Write Away. We would like to take this occasion of our last issue before commencement to express publicly our appreciation to several people who have done a good job and received small thanks for it.

Oldest staffer leaving in point of service is Bob Goldwater who joined the sports staff before the war and returned to become co-sports editor this year. Also graduating from the sports staff is Morty Schaap after two year's service.

Big loss on the editorial staff will be Associate Editor Raney Stanford, who worked his way up to number one reporter on the news staff, then converted himself into a columnist. Another columnist and old timer who will be missed is Roland "Foo" Giduz. Giduz was managing editor in 1946-47 and this year has established a record as the only columnist never to meet a deadline.

In the unsung but vitally important business department Mary Willis Sledge has given much of the time and effort of her two-year stay at the University. She took an unromantic task and did it well. Jim Crews, too, has put in a year of good work on the advertising end.

The news staff is fortunate in retaining all its members except for Charley Craven, a recent arrival who was a valuable asset during his short stay.

These people have given good and unselfish service to the Daily Tar Heel, and through it to the student body. All we have to give in return is "Thank you."

For Half an Hour

Could it be that some of the members of the Coed Senate are going to be here for summer school?

In years past the last action of the august group before disbanding in the spring has been to decree that all women students during the summer shall be curfewed at 10:30 each week night. Uninformed as we are as to the reasoning behind such action, this has seemed to us slightly dog-in-the-mangerish.

This year, however, the Coed Senate has extended to the summer visitors the privilege of regular 11 o'clock hours on week nights although closing hours for weekend nights remain at 12 o'clock.

Ladies, we thank you for that half-hour.

Benediction

Now until we meet again next fall, may we have a happy issue out of all our examinations and a pleasant and profitable vacation.

Kerr-Stares

Look Hard To Future

By Tom Kerr

With this issue, the Daily Tar Heel climaxes a busy year and takes a well deserved two-week vacation. And in the past few days several of our colleagues on the edit page have put forth their respective last words of good advice, signed off, and taken leave of the campus problems, DTH office, and all the other elements of editorial endeavor.

We, however, aren't any too anxious to say good-bye with tears in our eyes, with sentimental backward glances, and with that final bit of imparted wisdom. Rather we choose to to think of this time as a starting point, a time to look ahead as we look back. For there is no more appropriate time to look hard at the future than while the past is still a vivid memory though no longer a burden.

Let's take a quick glance at next year right now. The first item on the schedule, when once again Carolina shifts into high gear, will be orientation. And it is well that we think a moment on this subject.

The orientation program is one of the few really lasting projects on the campus. Next year it will be bigger and we believe better than ever before. Most of us can't take an active part in this program, but we can start off the next year with an effort to cooperate in every way possible with our orientation system.

And we shall keep an eye well fixed on the growth of this project in our student life.

Just what's going to take place in campus politics next year? Well it's to be hoped that the Legislature and the executive can take a break from political bickering over redistricting and from the problems of finance to throw themselves into some projects for the betterment of our campus life. And right now it is our fervant hope that the politicoes can forget their party differences for a while and show the student body plenty of concrete results from cooperative investigation and solving of our campus problems.

We shall be watching our student government pretty closely next year, hopefully, and with confidence.

In athletics we can now begin to look forward to a year of victory on the fields and courts, and real school spirit and sportsmanship in the student body. That Texas game a week after school opens should set the pace. And what with new ideas for the cheering section, with some of the nation's best material on our teams, we plan right now on making next year a big one in athletics.

Yes, we're going to watch the victories mount up and look for a high in school spirit next year too.

What can we expect from publications? Well, there's a great deal of talk right now of a six-page DTH next year. And it's a lot more than talk. There's potential in the publications yet to be realized, and next year the DTH is going to fight hard to give the University always a better paper.

And Tarnation, having lived through its growing pains, is determined to use its new bigger budget to show the campus what it can do on a monthly basis.

And the Carolina Quarterly is going to be struggling for existence, sincerely calling on the student body for real support.

We're certainly going to keep watching closely the progress of our publications in '48-'49.

We've hardly done more than touch the surface of the many campus organizations that have big plans and bigger ambitions for next year. For under the surface appearance of a last-lap letdown there are those who are already thinking of next year as tomorrow.

So Kerr-Stares has no intention of bidding you all a soothing adios and wishing you a very pleasant summer. We are going to take a rest too, but we're going to keep right on thinking about Carolina '48-'49, a new year with new opportunities.

Hope This Won't Develop Into a Neighborhood Feud

The Good Old Summer Time

By Pete Gerns

Graduation time; vacation time. And "What do you plan to do this summer?"

"I intend to spend the summer in the North woods, in Canada — fishing, hunting, communing with nature, studying the Bible and a few of the classics and attempting to regain a perspective that has become submerged by war, uncertainty, and a materialistally purposive education." Herbert S. Hendricks.

"After having dropped my name from the role of Bachelor's Chit. I find it compulsory to complete my schooling as soon as possible. Comprenezpas?" Aleck K. Breck.

"Forget teachers and the library, find fun - and play." Tenn Mason.

" I plan to spend the first two weeks at home taking a much-needed vacation. After that I will work for several weeks on "Golf World", and will return to UNC for the second session of summer school. Any spare time I have between work and the second session will be spent in creative writing." Jim Kluttz.

"I intend to spend the summer in harvesting work in Kansas, together with several other Carolina students." Robert P. O'Connell.

"Go home and loaf for a change." Alice Sharp.

"This summer I plan to go to summer school at the University. The main reason being that I feel I should do my work as soon as it can be accomplished so that I may graduate not too many years after the date on which I was to have graduated before the war." Edward F. Albee.

"I intend to spend this summer in school in order to graduate before my eligibility under the GI Bill expires." Peyton W. Cox.

"I plan to spend this summer at home working in industry. The main reason for this is that I attended the last summer session and need a vacation." Robert J. Gourley, Jr.

This is the last Forum of the year and the writer would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank all students who have willingly contributed to this column. We also want to show our appreciation to those who have suggested several of the questions which have helped make this column more worthwhile. And we want to say to all those who are graduating: "Good Luck Always."

In The Arena

Doug GOP From Way Back

Milwaukee —(UP)— Gen. Douglas MacArthur, whose boom for the presidency started on a "Halt Communism" platform, is a third generation Republican.

Both Arthur MacArthur, Sr., the general's grandfather, and Arthur MacArthur II, his father, were active GOP workers in Milwaukee.

MacArthur's grandfather came here in 1837. He became a Republican shortly after the party was created at Ripon, Wis., in 1856.

MacArthur's father, Arthur MacArthur II, also was an active Republican, although like his famed son, his political activities were limited by his military career. He became a lieutenant general in later years, but his chief fame was gained when as a young soldier he won the Congressional Medal of Honor by leading Wisconsin troops in the storming of Missionary Ridge in Tennessee in the Civil War.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, although not politically active until his entrance into the Republican presidential primary in 1944 in Wisconsin, always has followed his family's political beliefs. He was named chief of staff at 49 by President Herbert Hoover. He was the youngest chief of staff on record.

He served for six years under both Hoover and the late President Roosevelt. He left that position to assume command of the Philippine army, and while in Manila, he helped to prepare the Filipinos for their stand against the Japanese in 1941.

MacArthur was injected into the national political spotlight March 8, 1948, when he announced his availability for the Republican presidential nomination. That set off a series of national movements to spur his chances. In Wisconsin, Lansing Hoyt, national chairman of the MacArthur-for-President clubs, organized a complete slate for the April 6 test which saw MacArthur take eight delegates to 19 for Harold Stassen, who defeated a "favorite son."

His foes termed MacArthur's second place showing in Wisconsin a blow, but his supporters said it was a moral victory, inasmuch as the general did not make a personal appearance and worked only through clubs formed in his behalf.

MacArthur's favorite son label in the Wisconsin primary was derived from his family's residence here and his own residence in the city for several months before his appointment to West Point.

Bury Me Not By Alumni

By Raney Stanford

Thought I would put in a small word to us seniors (look out) about the service offered you by the University's shiny, brand-new Placement Service on the second floor of South. With James Galloway and Katherine Cooke at the helm, this office is working to set up a permanent contact between prospective employers and job-hunting graduates. They emphasize that regardless of whatever your job prospects are now it will pay you to file these records and work evaluations with this University bureau, for the material will always be on tap here if you ever have need of such references.

Note to Charles Addams: the University building and ground workers, who are continually digging clever little holes all about the campus to trap the drunk and unwary, are working on a most ominous one now, located in front of the Planetarium -t o-be and halfway between Graham Memorial and Alumni buildings. This one is exactly six feet long and two feet wide. The first day of excavation it was only two feet deep and we were rather worried; sanitary codes and all that, but it is currently about 5 feet down and going further. We are waiting with much curiosity and some fond hopes as to who is to be placed in there .

Well, this is it, like all good training films say. Made it man; out of the gallion. Brave and calm, and keep aware . . .

Frosh Are Red Hot

Editor:

Was attracted by the editorial in Sat. DTH and wondered was the freshman BMOC who had expressed these opinion sympathize with the bitter feeling, yet I disagree with th that freshmen are too immature and young to participate in pus life of student government.

That the writer recognized the freshman as a BMOC shoul proof that freshmen can meet the standards required to adv in campus affairs. Moreover, I point to the freshmen on the St dent council, the Men's council, the seven or eight in the Le lature, one succeeding as a sports writer, another the cam photographer, at least three in the Di senate, and several ot positions. They were in competition with experienced upper cla men, and their election is a testimony to their abilities and in tegrity.

Last fall I checked on the students (freshmen) who were studen body officers or other big wheels in high school. You'd probabl be surprised at the number who were president of their student bodies. If these potential leaders have failed to appear on the Un versity scene, it is partially due to lack of opportunity to do so

I have a classic example of this. About three weeks after the April elections, I was lying on my bunk in Miller examining a piece of election publicity which I had egotistically saved because it contained my name. A bunk-mate wanted to know what it was and I explained. "Hey," he exclaimed, "why didn't they send some over here? I didn't see that before elections. Don't they know we can vote over here?" I did not say anything, the facts spoke t themselves.

I would like to mention two things that, would be useful getting next year's freshmen into things. First, it is time some thing definite was done about the plan of freshman chapel. I be lieve some campus leaders realize the need of preparing under classmen for responsible positions and I would like to see some action toward that end.

The second is a followup of the GM interest cards similar to th ones we filled out in the fall. If a fellow is interested in reportin let him talk to someone from D'CH; if in acting or directing, some one from Sound and Fury; if in student government, to some of the student government officials. Give a fellow a chance to get where he is interested.

Just these two would be a stride toward increased freshman participation. I'd like to see something done along both lines and here is one Sophomore-in-two-weeks (hoping!) who will be willing to help.

Eric Cofield

(Ed. note: The Orientation committee has already made plans "along both lines.")

Take The Next Boat

Editor:

There has been an awful lot of squawking back and forth about Communism and non-Communism in the DTH lately, and all it boils down to is that the almost anonymous Bill Robertson is enjoying a sort of self-imposed martyrdom because of it. Personal attacks don't help the issue, the Robertsons and Scaleses only thrive on that sort of thing. However, Robertson's last attempt at space-filling was incongruously headed "Frightful Contradictions" and proceeded to tear apart whatever anyone or everyone had said about him and his idealogies in the past. Well and good—however, isn't there something incongruous and contradictory about dragging in some old saw about Americanism at the tail-end of a defense of Communism?

I would suggest the young man attempt obtaining a travel permit to visit the U. S. S. R., and encounter his first taste of Russian Government procedure. If he manages to get past that formidable barrier, I would like to hear the true account of how he spent his tourist days in dear Old Mother Russia. Of course, he would have one advantage—he would not be saddled with a Russian name, and therefore would have no explaining to do about his reasons for living anywhere but in Russia. I don't particularly relish poison-penning, but sometimes we can get thoroughly fed up with a mess of idealistic talk that leads nowhere.

If Robertson believes in Communism, it stands to reason he cannot believe in Americanism, no matter how imperfect it may be. The two just don't have anything in common, thank God, and all the fine talk about Leyte poetry and a "confidence in. . . .the American people" won't change the situation. If he loves Communism so much, I suggest he examine it a little more thoroughly —from a closer and more personal point of view than a textbook or a propaganda leaflet

And if he says that I am deeply prejudiced insofar as Communism is concerned—I am.

In no attempt at wit or brightness, your editorial page makeup of recent issues certainly deserves some commendation. With everyone grumbling about the page's obviously inferior content it seems only fair to comment on a worthy and indeed excellent job of layout.

Men's Council Hears 89 New Cases, Suspends 35 Students During Year

Johnson Reports To Faculty Group About Activities

By Margaret Gaston

The Men's council has heard a total of 89 new cases this year, suspended 35 students and placed 23 on probation, according to a report made by Cecil Johnson, chairman of the Executive committee of the Board of Trustees, at a recent faculty meeting.

In his report Johnson reviewed the past year's work of the Honor councils, and discussed the position of the faculty in cooperating with the councils.

"Emphasis has been placed this year on establishing and maintaining a relationship of understanding and cooperation between the Executive committee and the officers of student government, especially the Men's council," Johnson said. In examining the work of this council for the year, May 6, 1947 through May 6, 1948, he said it has held more than 50 meetings and has spent an estimated 180 hours in these meeting. Two meetings have lasted 10 hours and five for 8 or 9 hours. The average length of a meeting, he continued, was 3 1-2 hours.

The Women's council has held 25 meetings, two of which have lasted for eight hours.

New cases brought before the Men's council total 89, of which 71 were Honor Code cases and 18 Campus Code cases. Instructors reported 53 honor code cases, students reported 17, and advisors reported 1. Seven campus code cases were reported by students and 11 by others, which include police, housemothers, and merchants.

The Men's council suspended 35 students, — three for conduct and drinking, 30 for cheating, and 2 for other reasons. A total of 23 students were placed on probation, — 2 for conduct and drinking, 19 for cheating, and two for other reasons. Other action taken by the council included 23 exonerations, 32 reprimands, 19 applications for readmission allowed, and four denied.

Johnson expressed appreciation to the council for doing the "tremendous task."

In his address before the faculty Johnson cited the work of Fred Weaver, dean of men, "His energy, patience, forthrightness, and insight, as well as the regard in a constructive way toward making Student Government in the University a literal reality."

The speaker said it is a paradox that effective student government was dependent upon the faculty, meaning faculty cooperation, attitude, and even criticism. He said that on a quiz or an examination it was the duty of the instructor to provide physical conditions that are conducive to honesty. He pointed out that the attitude of a faculty member toward the Honor System would do much to determine the attitude of the student. "They say that the attitude of the instructor will almost determine whether the work in his class is honest," he continued.

In conclusion Johnson said the Executive committee hoped to continue the work with student government next year. It plans to ask the chancellor to have a meeting in the early fall of new faculty members in order that the operation of the Honor System may be explained and their cooperation enlisted. He said that the committee plans to work especially with the freshman and sophomore course chairmen in order that the instructors in these classes who teach such large proportion of young students may be encouraged to provide conditions favorable to honest work and to put their influence back of the processes of student government.

PROFESSOR FRIEDERICH

W. P. Friederich Relates Stories Of Paris Confab

By Dan Wallace

Prof. W. P. Friederich, member of the German department here, recently returned from Paris where he attended the fourth international Congress of Modern Literary History as one of three U. S. delegates.

Among the many reasons that induced Professor Frederich to attend the Paris conference is because he had been appointed as its American delegate in 1946. Also the University had encouraged and partly financed his trip. Above all, Friederich said, that he would have the opportunity to be in contact with European fellow-comparatists and hear from them what they are doing, thinking and hoping, and to tell them what the comparatists in America are striving for. Professor Friederich said, "I sincerely believe that all of us belonging to the western civilization, each one in his own special field, should collaborate to promote the feeling of unity and good fellowship and to strengthen the cause of democracy."

Professor Friederich said that approximately 123 scholars, representing many of the universities of Europe, were present at the conference. The two delegates from the U. S. beside Professor Friederich, were Miss Ruth Clark from Wellesley college and Mr. J. O'Brian from Columbia university.

"As usual at such conferences, the papers were of high quality and were elucidatingly discussed, but," Friederich continued "(they) did not give us half as much of a chance to get together and to learn from each other, since we were guests of UNESCO, and were lodged in the hotels Trianon Palace and Lutetia where, during our meals and in the evenings, we had lively discussions and important personal meetings." He went on to say that the intimacy among the scholars from more than 20 different nations was increased in the course of various parties and receptions.

"There were champagne, elegent women, laughter, and wit at these receptions —" asserted Professor Friederich, "and only now and then were you reminded of the horribleness of the past and the uncertainty of the future, as when one refugee with a fine intellectual face hobbled up to me and said: 'Ah, monsieur, don't forget to tell Henri Peyre that poor C. and I often spent hours discussing him and comparative literature during those interminable years in the death-dealing stockades of Buchenwald from which poor C. never escaped,' while another voice would add: 'For the love of God, don't be too late next time — and then, after all is done, when you build up a new world, please make sure that next time it really will be a better world, one without Buchenwalds.'"

The papers presented at the conference chiefly followed the topic of "Literature and the Revolution of 1848 (or of 1879)" and, to a lesser extent, other literary topics.

Professor Friederich's paper dealt with the comparative literature in the United States. In it, he stated the plans of a new comparative literature magazine that is in the making in this country.

Statement Is Made By Honor Council With Sample Cases

(The following is a report directly from the Men's Honor council on a few of the cases handled by that body within the past year. The cases are factual, but names, of course, are not revealed.

In order to keep the student body informed as to the past violations of the honor system, the Men's Council is continuing its series of "briefs" of a few of these cases.

Upon being asked by his advisor why he had returned late from a weekend, missing Monday's classes, Mr. X stated that he had an appointment with his doctor and could not return in time. The advisor, as a matter of routine, secured the doctor's name and wrote him concerning the excuse. The doctor replied, that Mr. X had had no appointment with him that week-end, whereupon the advisor reported Mr. X for lying. When called before the council, Mr. X readily admitted lying to his advisor. The council suspended Mr. X indefinitely for this violation of the honor system.

In a second case, Mr. A and Mr. B. were reported by their instructor for a possible violation of the honor system. The two papers they had turned in had similar mistakes which did not appear to be accidential. When Mr. A. came before the council, he said that he had not given or received any aid on the quiz. When Mr. B. came up, he readily admitted copying one answer from Mr. A's paper but had not given or received any help on the rest of the quiz. The council decided that Mr. B. should be suspended from the University. Mr. A. was exonerated.

In thse exams coming up, cheating or failing to report a classmate for cheating is not worth the price you have to pay.

Stations WDUK, WTIK Rate Two Roberts From Chapel Hill

By Miriam Evans

If a University student, while listening to his radio, thinks he hears a familiar voice giving the time, the station or introducing a song, maybe he isn't hearing things, be cause two University students, Bob Andrew and Bob Allison DeBardelaban, work for Durham radio stations.

Andrew, 24-year-old senior from South Dennis, Mass., has recently been named chief announcer for WDUK. Bob was a freshman at the University before the war, and, after two and a half years in the Army, he returned to Carolina in September, 1946, and began to major in radio. Bob says he first became interested in radio when he began announcing for the Fletcher general hospital station, in Cambridge, Ohio, while he was a patient there. He began working for WDUK in May, 1947, and has become very popular with his daily record show, "Luncheon On The Hill," which originates in the Strowd Motor company building from 1 until 2 o'clock, and is also conduction a contest to find a name for his new 11 o'clock program on Sunday night.

In addition to his regular announcing duties, Bob has announced all the remote programs of the Pastor, Beneke, and Krupa orchestras, which WDUK earried from Memorial hall, and has ap-

Carolina Folk Festival Promises Finest Squar' Dancin' Yet, Y'all

By Doris Thomas

"Swing your partner, round you go; back again and do si do."

The snappy strains of fiddles and the lively commands of a zestful feminine voice will direct dancing Texans in a colorful exhibition of American square dances at the North Carolina folk festival to be held in Kenan stadium June 18-19.

Rephrasing the old joke about what the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina, Governor R. Gregg Cherry, in a recent letter to Governor Beaufort Jester of Texas said it is a long way between Austin and Chapel Hill, but not too far, he hoped, for a bunch of fun-loving square-dancing, fiddling Texans to come to help make the folk festival here a complete success.

Governor, Jester, who is honorary chairman of the Texas Square Dance Festival Association, contacted Mrs. Lillie Lee Baker, Texas' first lady of the square dance and chairman of the association. Mrs. Baker agreed tha it would not, indeed, be too far to bring her 45 dancers, ranging in age from eight to eighty. So, come June 18, people attending the big Carolina Folk Festival will get an opportunity to see and hear one of the most famous groups of its kind anywhere.

Mrs. Baker, a charming and gracious woman, has a tremendous zest for living. She has been a college teacher and a successful amateur athlete, having won the Texas state singles championship in badminton in 1942.

Mrs. Baker is now women's supervisor of the Austin Athletic club where, with the help of the Austin recreation department, she started her program of teaching square dancing to anyone who cared to come and learn. Through her efforts, Austin now has a traditional entertainment twice

Bobbing in Sports

Swan Song

Monday after next is Graduation day and since yours truly is among the degree hopefuls, I feel the urge to bob up one final time in the Carolina sports scene. Which means that Bobbing Sports is singing its swan song.

Such a time comes to all students, it says in the catalog. But that still doesn't belie the fact that one does not face departure from the Hill light-heartedly. And it's with a definite tinge of sadness that I bat out this final installment and prepare to give up my hold on the ever-faithful Royal I've called my own for the past few years.

For closing out this final chapter, I can think of no better way than to reminisce about the foremost sports incidents I witnessed during my stay. I've included in my list some of the outstanding events that impressed me the most about the 1942-43 season.

Ten Top Thrills

And taking them chronologically, I offer the 10 following highlights as my top thrills as a Carolina sports reporter:

1. Wake Forest football game in September, 1942. It was the first game of the season and was the first time that I saw the great Carolina spirit in action. That the Tar Heels gained a 6-0 upset win that day was secondary to the unbeatable loyalty that prompted thousands of students to weather a steady downpour in order to cheer their team home to victory.

2. The 13-13 deadlock with Duke that same year—another example of the fighting Carolina spirit. Twice the Tar Heels came from behind to knot the score and then held on to gain a moral triumph over a favored Blue Devil eleven. It was a fine introduction to the famed Carolina-Duke rivalry.

3. Carolina's sensational triumph in the 1943 Southern Invitational Indoor games. Needing a first place in the mile relay—the final event—to gain the title, the Tar Heel quartet of Cathey, Holzman, Van Wagoner and Mangum ran Navy's foursome into the ground for the all-important points. Mangum's anchor leg after two heartbreaking hurdle upsets was particularly stirring.

4. Pitcher Allen Carmichael helping to win his own ball game against Duke in April, 1943. The slender righthander, pitching his first game before leaving for the Army, batted in the insurance run in a ninth-inning rally that netted the Tar Heels four runs and an 8-6 decision.

Back to the Hill

Round about here, there was a slight layoff from DTH activities. . . . Seems Uncle Sam had prior rights to my services. But how long can one stay away from the Hill . . . and more sports thrills. . . .

5. This one came before actually returning to school—in December, 1945. The occasion was the visit of the White Phantoms to Madison Square Garden for a clash with heavily-favored NYU. It's hard to say which thrilled me the most—the surprise 43-41 upset registered by the underdog Carolinians or the reunion with the same old Carolina spirit. 'Twas good to find it still as strong as ever—and supporting the Blue and White 500 miles from the home base. It was also wonderful to see some fellow named Dillon bucket 18 tallies in a torrid first half.

6. A no-hit game that a Duke pitcher didn't get! Bob Houghton was the impish Blue Devil who just missed entering the collegiate hall of fame against Carolina in May, 1946. A missed third strike allowed pinch-hitter Norm Galinkin to come up in the ninth inning after there should have been three outs. And Galinkin promptly stroked a single, just as promptly was put out trying to stretch it into a double, and that was the end . . . of both the no-hitter and the game.

7. HAPPY DAY!!! What else but a grid victory over DOOK! Such an event is always noteworthy but this one—the first UNC win in this series since 1940—provided me with the top thrill of the 1946 football season.

8. Accompanying the basketball team on its northward junket in January, 1947. Enough happened on this five-day jaunt to make for two separate thrills, but I'll join them together here. Thrill number one—for those with strong hearts only—came at Philadelphia, where the Phantoms lost a double-overtime tilt to LaSalle. (Until calmed down 15 minutes after the game, I thought it had been a triple overtime.)

Best in Basketball

Going on to New York. I saw what I usually consider the best basketball game I've covered for the DTH—that 50-48 comeback victory over the fading Violets of NYU. Behind by nine points in the second half, the Phantoms exhibited the old never-say-die attitude and provided me—and many other press box inhabitants—with a truly great game to write up.

9. Vinnie DiLorenzo's no-hit performance for 10 2-3 innings just last month against N. C. State. A tally in any of the first innings would have given the slim southpaw an entry to the select list, but the run never came. Neither did the no-hitter—but the game still rates as my top baseball thrill at Carolina.

10. Vic Seixas coming back from an attack of glandular fever to win the Southern conference tennis singles championship earlier this month. The nation's ninth ranking amateur had no easy road in capturing the title—but he came through some tough competition in spectacular fashion to bring the singles crown back to Carolina.

On the Short End

Insufficient space, of which I've used more than my share already, results in the exclusion of many other big events that I've witnessed in my adventures as a DTH reporter. And many had Carolina on the short end of the score—sometimes a very short end at that.

There was, for instance, the rather fateful jaunt into NYU territory just last January. And three months before that "I was at Texas, too!"

And no trip will be remembered longer than the one to Washington, D. C. last November. A fine victory over Maryland, thousands of the Tar Heel faithful on hand despite the rain, the pleasure of very enjoyable company—all added up to one big weekend.

THANKS

Ere I depart, I want to express my gratitude to a lot of people around campus who eased the task of this reporter no end. There's Jake Wade and Charlie Crawley, who provided lots of info. . . . Felzer, Snavely, Hearn, Kenfield, Jamerson, Rabb, Scott, Erickson, Ranson, Lee, and the rest of the Woollen coaching staff—always cooperative when facts and figures on their teams were needed. . . . Vernon Crook, Susan Barbee and others of the Woollen office corps, who'd keep us up-to-date on latest athletic happenings. . . . Athletes in all sports—it was a pleasure to write about them and their doings. . . . And going back to my freshman days of 1942, I owe a lot to a former DTH sports editor, Bill Woestendiek, for his invaluable instruction into the intricate workings of putting out a sports page.

Last, but foremost in importance—a great big hearty thank you to a hard-working sports staff—Schaap, Jenrette, Fox, Vaden, Gallagher, Herowitz, Kellam and others— for their untiring efforts. It's been appreciated more than they imagine. Much more of the same to Colleague Billy Carmichael, who has my very best wishes for success in carrying on as sports editor for the coming year!

And for inspiration, there was alway's Hoppy!

One last thought: I hope that the readers have enjoyed the sports page during the past year as much as I've enjoyed working on it.

Baseball, Track Teams Capture Conference Championships

Team Also Garners Big Four Laurels, Bid for NCAA Play

By Dick Jenrette

When Carolina baseball coaches Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb surveyed the prospects for their 1948 Tar Heel diamond club, they probably would have been the last to prophecy a Southern conference and Big Four championship outfit.

For the Tar Heels had finished well down in the standings of both loops in the preceding year and barely managed to climb out of the Big Four cellar at the end of the 1947 season. But this year the Tar Heels were a revitalized group. Many of the boys had gained experience and poise by play during the summer, and a "never say die" spirit carried them through the arduous schedule which ended with Carolina victorious in 17 games while losing only six.

Having developed a knack for winning the close games, the Tar Heels eked out seven decisions by one run and four more wins by two runs. This ability was the principal reason for the team's success.

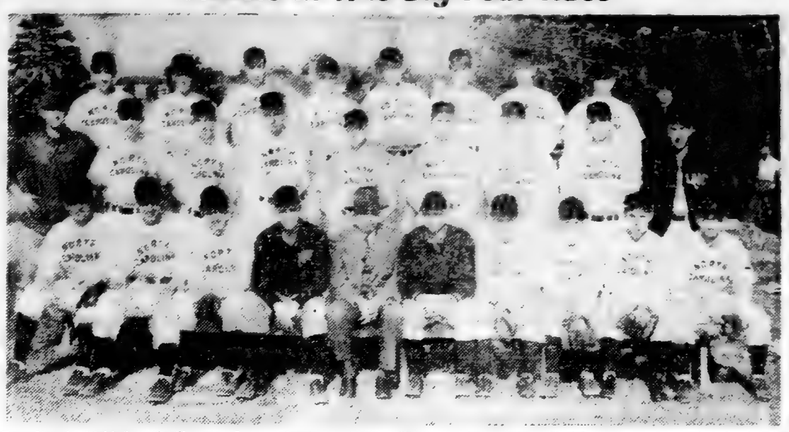
NCAA Reward

A bid to participate in the annual NCAA baseball tourney was the reward for the season's fine work. Georgia Tech will be the Tar Heels' opponent in the first round of the event, which gets underway at Charlotte on June 10. If the Carolina nine continues to display the form exhibited recently, the team will be a definite threat to take the tourney. Both the batting and pitching have been top-flight in recent games.

Coaches Hearn and Rabb are to be highly commended for their fine tutoring of the team. Jim Hayworth and Jim Hamilton also provided capable leadership in their roles as co-captains.

No Individual Star

It would be hard to single out an individual star on the team. Vinnie DiLorenzo, the catlike southpaw, did yeoman duty on the mound, compiling a 6-3 won-lost record. DiLorenzo was also the workhorse of the team, pitching 85 innings — more than twice as many as any other Carolina hurler. Frank Robinson, who had a perfect 4-0 mark, also was invaluable. Other pitching superlatives were Ray Blair, with 4-1, Tommy Andrew, and Dean Cassell.



Ken Black, leadoff batter, had the top batting mark among the Tar Heel regulars, and he contributed numerous sensational fielding plays. Ken ended the season with a .337 mark to edge out Will Hobbs, who had .333, and Jim Kelly, with .326.

Kelly, who last year was the team batting champion, also proved himself quite a clutch hitter. He easily led the team with 21 runs-batted-in. Shortstop Rip Ryan was the only boy to get two home runs.

Titlists in 1948 Big Four Race

Carolina's 1948 baseball squad, coached by Bunn Hearn and Walter Rabb, was successful in its bid for both the Southern conference and Big Four title. The team finished well down in the standings of both leagues last year, but made an amazing recovery this season. Jim Hayworth and Jim Hamilton captained the squad.

North-South Victory by Ward Was Highlight of Golf Season

By Billy Carmichael III

A tepid-torrid golf season studded by the dazzling North-South amateur victory of galaxy-golfing Harvey Ward, saw the Tar Heel linksmen dethroned of their Southern conference crown while compiling a record of six wins and four losses with a tie thrown in for good measure.

The step-down was not any discredit to the local swingsters, for the season saw the rise of collegiate golf in the state to an unprecedented level. Duke, the reigning power until it was rather roughly jolted from its perch in 1947 by Carolina, sported its usual powerhouse, while State and Wake Forest were developing something of a New Look in local golf circles.

State brought along its youngsters of a past season to field a string of six veterans, while Coach Jim Weaver of the Deacons brought into the picture a quartet of freshman stars that promised to make Wake Forest a contender for conference and national honors in years to come.

Lack Veterans

The Tar Heels were a little lacking at the start of the year of seasoned veterans due to graduation last spring. Then the loss of Ray Taylor of Greensboro, who did not return to school during the spring quarter, furthered the headaches of Coach Chuck Erickson, who found it necessary to build his team on the talents of the two regular returnees—Ward and Bob Cox.

Ward did not disappoint his coach. For although he lost several individual matches during the season, the Tarboro Tartar took most of the nation's best amateurs in hand one sunny week in Pinehurst and gave the boys a few lessons in the game, especially in the fine art of plain and fancy putting. Ward topped Dick Chapman, who needs no introduction, in the quarter-finals; disposed of Arnold Palmer of Wake Forest, who later won medalist honors in the Southern conference tourney, in the semi-finals; and mastered the ability and arrogance of Frank Stranahan, the Toledo strong boy, in a stirring 36-hole final.

Ward also finished with runner-up honors in the loop tournament shot at Pinehurst, in which the Tar Heels as a team placed fourth behind Duke, Wake Forest and State.

Didn't Reach Peak

Cox, the other holdover, didn't fare so well throughout the season, never quite reaching the peak of his game. Among the newcomers, Roy McKenzie, the tall, rangy lad from Winston-Salem, showed up well at the start and finish of the season sporting an exceptional short game.

Jack Brantley, playing the No. 3 position most of the year, proved the steadiest of the team, shooting in and around point-winning figures all season. Two new young faces, Frank Brooks and Harvey Oliver, showed lots of promise throughout the year and look to be the backbone of Tar Heel teams to come. Bobby Hayes and Dan Nyimicz handled the relief work during the season.

The Tar Heels won their first four matches, topping Harvard, Georgetown, Davidson and Williams. Next they lost to Michigan while Ward was away at the Masters and defeated Virginia and State. Then came the Duke debacle, a 25-2 loss, after which the Carolinians lost to Wake Forest, tied State, and fell again before the Deacons in the season's finale.

Ward will be rewarded for his

Monogram Election

Gus Johnston and Bob Hutton were elected president and vice-president, respectively, of the Monogram club in elections held Tuesday night. Jack Brasington and Bill Pritchard were elected secretary and representative to the Athletic council at the same time.

In addition to elections, 22 men were initiated into the organization.

Awards Presented For Sports Work

Monograms have been awarded to sixty-seven Carolina athletes by the Athletic association in the four intercollegiate sports which the men participated in this spring. They were tennis, baseball, golf, and track. Also awarded white NC on a field of navy blue was head cheerleader Moffat Sherard.

Tennis: Vic Seixas, Clark Taylor, Ray Morris, Charles Rice, Don Skakle, Heath Alexander, Stan Gruner, Duke Wilder, James Ingram.

Golf: Jack Brantley, Frank Brooks, Bob Cox, Roy McKenzie, Harvey Ward.

Baseball: Tom Andrew, Harry Beason, Ken Black, Ray Blair, Dallas Branch, Jack Brasington, Dean Cassell, Emmett Cheek, Vinnie DiLorenzo, Ott Evans, John Gregory, Jim Hamilton, Jim Hayworth, Willard Hobbs, Frank Jones, Jim Kelly, Frank Robinson, Fred Ryan, Andy Tranavitch, Sid Varney, Bill Buffaloe.

Track: Winfield Baldwin, Len Briley, John Bristow, Mark Burnham, Hunter Heggie, Charles Herty, Henry Hickman, George House, Jim Hunt, Bill Joyner, Andy Kirk, Mervin Lentz, Julian McKenzie, Sam Magill, Jim Miller, Jack Moody.

ALUMNI PRIORITY

Vernon Crook, ticket manager, announced yesterday that all graduating seniors are entitled to alumni priority in purchasing football tickets for next year. Application forms may be secured at the ticket windows in Woollen gym any time during regular office hours.

Tar Heels Survive Slow Start To End With Great Record

By Larry Fox

Carolina's track team started the spring season slowly, but before the campaign was over the cindermen had a highly creditable 4-1 record in addition to the Southern conference championship.

The Tar Heels really reached their peak in the final dual meet of the season last week when they swamped Duke, 81-50. Almost everyone on the squad turned in the best performance of his career to rack up a higher total of points than the Tar Heels' greatest admirers had anticipated.

Things didn't look too good for Carolina's track chances when Maryland breezed into Chapel Hill early in April to sweep the Carolina relays. Only two Tar Heels copped first places in the meet while the Terrapins garnered six. Jack Moody won the high jump with a 6 feet 4 inch leap and Bob Seligman took discus honors.

Tech Roars

Mighty Georgia Tech roared into Fetzer field and took the measure of the Tar Heels. When Carolina's first dual meet was over, the Engineers were on top by a 69-62 score. From then on the local cindermen were unbeatable.

The Tar Heels got up to a .500 average when they ran up against Virginia. Despite the efforts of the Cavaliers' star timber-topping duo, the Mohler brothers, Carolina marked up a 73 2-3—47 1-3 victory; the first of the season.

Victory number two came at the expense of N. C. State one week later. No mile relay was run in this meet so the score was an unusual 77-49.

Navy was Carolina's next victim, but by a much closer score. The locals didn't clinch the decision until Moody's broad jump victory was recorded late in the meet. Moody deserved his role of hero with a 23 feet 2 inch leap. The final score was 69-62.

The Conference meet was held the next week and the Tar Heels won the championship with a total of 55 1-7 points. Maryland was second with 44 1-4. Three locals won individual honors in

Carolina Netters End Year With 20 Wins And One Defeat

Seixas Is Winner Of Singles Crown In Annual Tourney

By Dick Jenrette

Coach John Kenfield, Carolina's veteran tennis coach, has tutored some great Tar Heel teams in his long tenure at Chapel Hill and ranking at the top of the list would be the 1948 Blue and White racqueteers.

For the current edition of Tar Heel netmen has completed a season of twenty wins and only one defeat—that a 5-4 decision to William and Mary which meant the Southern conference championship. The Tar Heels of 1948 can be justly proud of their accomplishments.

Captained by Victor Seixas, a native of Philadelphia and the nation's ninth-ranked amateur, the Carolina squad swept to 16 consecutive victories before William and Mary finally derailed them. And the Tar Heels possibly would have won this match had Seixas been able to play.

Glandular Fever

Vic fell victim of glandular fever midway in the season and was unable to participate against the Indians. He recovered in time for the annual Southern conference tourney to determine the individual champions of the loop; and in this event defeated Tut Bartzen and Frank Kovaleski, William and Mary's two top netters, to gain the singles crown. Had Seixas been able to execute this feat in the regular season contest with the Indians, Carolina would have been returned the victor.

Despite the fact that Seixas missed nine of the team's 21 matches, he still was the big man in the Tar Heel camp, as evidenced by his winning the conference singles title. During regular season play, he lost one match, while winning 11. Vic performed in the number one position.

Skakle Phenomenal

Don Skakle, who for most of the season did his playing in the fifth position, turned in the most phenomenal record of all the Carolina players. He marched to 18 triumphs without defeat to complete his third year at Carolina in which he has gone undefeated.

Sam Daniels and Les Dameron, with 4-0 and 2-0 won-lost records, were the only other Carolina boys with unblemished records.

JOHN KENFIELD
. . . Another great season . . .

Ray Morris, Philadelphia, and Heath Alexander, Charlotte, ranked behind Skakle and Seixas in the matter of won-lost records for singles competition. Both boys had 17-2 marks. Morris is a former captain of the Carolina net team.

Rice, Taylor High

Charlie Rice, Atlanta, Ga., and Clark Taylor, New Haven, Conn., were also near the top of the list. Taylor, a lanky scrapper who ranks as the number one New England netter, compiled 18 wins and three losses. Playing in the number two spot regularly, Taylor took over the top spot when Seixas became ill during midseason. He teamed up with Seixas to go into the conference doubles finals before losing to William and Mary's Kovaleski and Bartzen.

Rice had an identical record of 18 successes against three losses. Rice was the regular number four man on the squad.

Other singles records on the team showed Stan Gruner with 8-5; Duke Wilder, 3-1; Jim Gallion, 1-1; and Bert Ingram, 0-1.

Carolina will have three representatives in the NCAA intercollegiate tourney at Los Angeles this summer. Seixas, Taylor, and Alexander will make the trip.

Jayvee Outfit Has Successful Record Under Henry House

By Dave Ferebee

If the success of the future Carolina varsity baseball teams can be judged by the present jayvee squad, it looks as though the Big Four crown may rest here for a few more years.

Under the able tutorage of Coach Henry House, the Tar Babies enjoyed a season which was almost as successful as the one of their big brothers on the varsity team. They captured ten wins out of the fifteen games played, for a average of .667, which is good baseball in any league. In doing so, the Jayvees scored 88 runs to their opponents 58.

The record shows wins over Greensboro high, 8-4; Presbyterian Junior college, 6-1; Duke Jayvees, 6-2, 9-7, 9-7 and 7-2; High Point high, 9-6; and N. C. State Jayvees, 9-4, 7-4, and 8-2. The losses came at the hands of High Point, 3-0; Duke, 8-5; PJC, 4-3; Greensboro high, 1-0; and State, 3-2.

Allen Leads

Team leader in the batting average department was Jerry (Zero) Allen, the Shelby, N. C. product, who turned in a .340 average. He was followed by "Bole" Weavil with .313, Don Ward with .308, Charlie Garganus with .305, and Bill Walsh with .302.

Third-baseman John (Sleepy) Senter took honors with the RBI department with ten. Close behind was Joe Brookshire with eight, El Lamb with seven, and Ward with six. Ward had the most extra base knocks with one double, one triple, and two homers.

Ralph Brake, classy Rowland, N. C. righthander, had a perfect season on the mound. He won five games without a loss. Lefty Bill McGinn turned in a three-two record while Ed Gaston broke even with two wins and an equal number of defeats.

Here are the averages of boys who have batted 40 times or more:

Player	AB	R	H	Pct.
Allen	50	10	17	.340
Ward	65	14	20	.303
Walsh	43	9	13	.302
Senter	61	11	16	.262
Lamb	41	7	10	.244
Goodman	46	8	11	.240
Brookshire	57	5	13	.288

Phi Gam, Med School Capture Championships in Mural Play

By Bill Gallagher

The intramural department brought down the curtain on a big year of activity with the announcement that Phi Gamma Delta and Med School walked off with top team honors in the fraternity and dormitory championship races.

Grail awards to the outstanding individual athletes were copped by Gurney Boren, Zeta Psi, and T. E. "Boo" Walker of the Med School. Walker also was awarded the best intramural dormitory manager's trophy along with George Byrum of Sigma Nu who received the best fraternity manager honors.

Running right behind the top teams were Sigma Chi and Zeta Psi in the fraternity loop and Lewis and Emerson field house in the dormitory division.

This week's action brought to a close a year that was jammed with heavy competition by all the outfits who took part in the mural program. Some of the highlights included the big Sports Carnival held in Woollen Gym April 1, and the strong representation made by the mural men in the Big Four meet held at Duke earlier this month.

Boren topped the fraternity list in a close race that is even tighter for the runner-up position with the final winner depending on the end of the tennis competition. Leo Duffey, Sigma Nu, follows Boren's total of 211 points with a score of 193. Gene Turner of Phi Delt had a 189 total through yesterday but he is still in the tennis play and therefore he can move into second spot though he has no chance to take first place away from Boren.

Following Walker in the dormitory race were two fellow medicine men; giving the aspiring doctors a clean sweep of top honors. Walker was out front with 168 points. Next were Sam Stallard, who tallied 153, and Charlie Fordham, who collected 115.

Perhaps the biggest round of credit for the success of the intramural program should go to the hard working mural staff whose job it is to nurse this unquestionably "big" portion of campus life along the right road. Two feature faces down at the office are Taylor Dodson, holder of B.A. and M.A. degrees in Physical Ed, and Prince Albert Lee who is now attaching an M.A. to go with his B.A. Dodson who yesterday passed all his work for 2 Masters now will go to the University of Indiana to work on a Ph.D. Lee will probably complete his work this summer.

Two undergraduate men who take care of a big part of the work that must be done for the successful completion of all events are Dave Burney and Wilbur "Ikey" Carr. Also due credit are Clarence Smith and Billy Creel who handled the card work in the fall and winter quarters.

Yesterday's tennis was almost washed out with only one match being completed. Phi Gam 1 moved into the fraternity finals with 3-2 win over Sigma Nu 1. Phi Delt 2 lead Zeta 1 by two-to-nothing when the rains came. Lewis was leading Mangum, 2-1, when the proceedings had to be halted. Both matches are to be finished today with the winner of the fraternity tilt moving into the division finals against Phi Gam.

Pick Up Your Gear

Students who will not be in summer school for either of the two sessions had better clear their baskets of any personal equipment before leaving for the summer.

The basketroom will dump the baskets at the close of the second session so students should pick up their sneakers and other athletic gear.

the two-day meet. Dick Taylor was crowned the 120-yard high hurdles champion with a time of 14.6 seconds. Seligman heaved the discus 146 feet, 4 7-8 inches to lead the field, and Bill Joyner took high jump honors by topping the bar at 6' 2".

The Duke dual meet was a fitting climax to the season. Coach Dale Ranson's boys notched their largest point total of the campaign, set one University record, and tied another.

Seligman heaved the shot 48 feet 5 1-4 inches for the new standard, while Hank Hickman and Rusty Russell equalled the pole vault mark of 13 feet. This was the best performance of the year for all three boys.

Don Nelson and Ted Shultz turned in especially good times in the dashes. Nelson equalled the conference mark of 0:21.1 in the 220 while Shultz turned in a 0:10 century.

All men who have not picked up their intramural track awards are requested to come by the office and do so at once.

Research Program Produces Technique for Tapering Molten Nylon Bristles

Difficult mechanical problems solved by Du Pont chemists and engineers to make nylon paintbrushes practicable

Nylon bristles used in toothbrushes and hairbrushes are uniform in diameter—that is, they are "level." But paintbrushes made from such bristles did not paint well. Studies of the best natural bristles showed that they were tapered, so a research program to produce tapered nylon bristles was started.

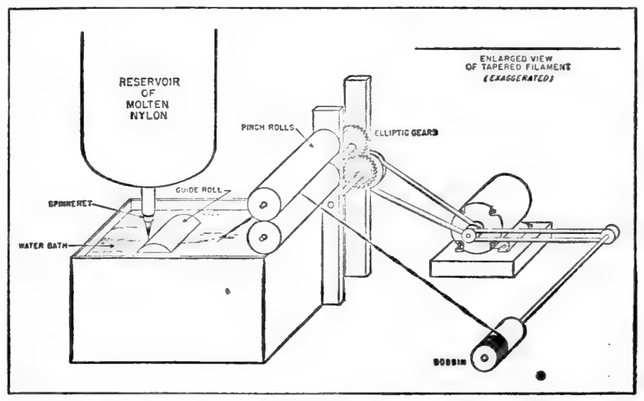
Some difficult mechanical problems were encountered. Level brush bristles were being made by extruding molten nylon through spinneret openings designed to produce filaments of perfectly uniform diameter. A new technique had to be found to make tapered ones. Since it was not practical to taper the filament after cooling and drawing, a precise taper had to be put in just as the nylon emerged molten from the spinneret. And it had to survive the drawing operation, in which nylon is stretched to several times its original length!

Techniques originated in laboratory

The original idea for solving this problem came from Du Pont chemists, who worked out the techniques in the laboratory, in the somewhat crude form represented in the accompanying diagram. It being largely a mechanical problem, chemical and mechanical engineers were called in to cooperate soon after the studies got under way. After further laboratory development, the engineers put the operation on a production basis.

The final result was a highly efficient process for tapering nylon bristles. As the molten filament emerges from the spinneret, pinch-rolls driven by a series of gears pull it slowly, then quickly. The size of the filament varies with the speed of pulling—thick diameters resulting at slow speeds and thin diameters at fast. Next the nylon goes to the drawing operation, where it is stretched by rollers to give it strength and resiliency.

Engineers designed special machines



Following spinning and drawing, in which many filaments are handled simultaneously, the nylon is "set." Then it goes to a special machine, designed by Du Pont engineers, which "feels out" the crests and troughs and cuts the bristle at these points. This type of design was necessary because of the unavoidable small variations in the length of individual bristles. Sorting the bristles and sandpapering their ends completes the process.

Present state of development of the "spin-draw" machine evolved from the crude laboratory apparatus shown in the diagram below.

Many techniques contributed to the development of the optimum properties of nylon in tapered bristles. At the laboratory stage, x-ray studies were made to learn the effect of various degrees of crystalization on bristle drawing and setting. Numerous devices were designed to test the bristles—for example, a machine that simulates the abrasive effect on a brush swept back and forth over a surface. Even after manufacture was established, high-speed stroboscopic photography and other stroboscopic studies were employed to improve coordination in the various operations and make a more uniform product.

The development of these bristles furnishes another striking example of the great variety of problems, often intricate, that may arise out of the discovery of a new substance like nylon.

Diagrammatic representation of the first laboratory apparatus used to establish the principle of making nylon from molten plastic. (From an early patent.)

Questions College Men ask about working with Du Pont

What are the opportunities in development work?

The conception of an idea in a research laboratory is merely the starting point at Du Pont. Men with training in mechanical, electrical, metallurgical, and chemical engineering are required to demonstrate the practicality of the laboratory findings, including small-scale operation of the new process. Even after the full-scale plant is operating, development work is continued to improve efficiency. each month throughout 10 months of the year where hundreds of people gather to dance a jig and listen to the strains of Texas' best fiddle artists and master callers.

Texas, loud and proud, has the gosh-arndest square dance festival in April that any old-timer would ever hope to see. It's purpose was to perpetuate its pioneer past in typical, colorful fashion — the same idea Bascom Lunsford, North Carolina's ardent folklore promoter, has in mind for the festival in Chapel Hill in June. He says he can show the United States that North Carolina is particularly rich in folklore.

In the Austin festival, frontier and western clothes were the order of the day. Young and old came in their gingham gowns and calico bonnets, cowboy shirts and blue jeans. The big Gregory gymnasium at the University of Texas was a scene of swirling skirts and high heeled boots. The spectators watching the dancers clapped their hands and tapped their feet to the rhythm of the strains of "Leather Britches" and "Swing Old Adam."

National Reputation

During the war, Mrs. Baker and her dancers gave free performances for veterans at the McCloskey General Hospital of Temple, Texas, and neighboring USO and service centers. Their biggest thrill came in May 1945 when they were invited to the show at the National Folk Festival in Cleveland, Ohio, and St. Louis, Mo.

Members of the Texas Square Dance association are not known throughout Texas only for their dancing, fiddling, or calling talents. The association's president is James P. Nash, Austin oil man; its vice-president, Walter Bremond, Jr., a bank president; and the music chairman, Henry Hudson, is a prominent businessman and rancher.

Hudson is considered one of Texas' finest fiddlers. He has been at it ever since he was six years old when he picked the lock on his father's fiddle case and promptly received a thrashing. That didn't stop Henry, however. He went right on stealing his dad's beloved instrument and getting his hide tanned regularly. Then, one day, Henry made his own fiddle which was fashioned out of a cigar box. In his second attempt he used willow wood and the result was so successful that his home-made fiddle proved enough to learn to play. He has been fiddling ever since.

Texas, generally conceded to be the state with the biggest of everything, had a humdinger of a square dance festival in April. Come June 18, with some 600 Tar Heels participating in their folk festival joined by the already famous Texas group, North Carolinians are promised two days of rollicking good fun the likes of which haven't been seen in the Old North State since Dan'el Boone tripped the light fantastic down along the Yadkin River.

All over America... Smokers Report

NO CIGARETTE HANGOVER

when you smoke PHILIP MORRIS!

—because PHILIP MORRIS is DEFINITELY LESS IRRITATING than any other leading brand!

Sure it's a pleasure to smoke. But not when you've got "cigarette hangover" —that stale, musty taste in your mouth—that dry, smoked-out feeling in your throat.

When that happens . . . it's time to CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS.

Like millions of smokers everywhere, you'll find a milder smoke in PHILIP MORRIS, a fresher, cleaner smoke than you've ever known before!

That's why we say . . . If every smoker knew what PHILIP MORRIS smokers know, they'd all change to PHILIP MORRIS!

Remember: PHILIP MORRIS is the ONE, the ONLY leading cigarette recognized by eminent nose and throat specialists as definitely less irritating.

NO OTHER CIGARETTE CAN MAKE THAT STATEMENT!

Read What One of America's Top-Ranking Doctors Says About PHILIP MORRIS

"This office has oftentimes recommended to patients with throat irritation that they change their brand of cigarettes to something milder, and whenever the question is asked 'What is milder?' our answer has been, 'PHILIP MORRIS'"

Summer Registration Reaches Record Figure Of 4,400 Students

Drop-and-Add Set To Begin Today In Venable Annex

GUY PHILLIPS

All indications pointed yesterday afternoon to a record-breaking summer school enrollment with approximately 4,400 students registered for the various University courses, according to Guy B. Phillips, director of this year's summer school.

1,800 New Students

Twenty-six hundred regular Carolina students had pre-registered prior to the opening of registration yesterday morning for new students. It was estimated late last night that the new students would total over 1,800. This number does not include health and intercultural work shop students, nutrition students and law students. The number of second-term students expected here has not been tabulated.

Pre-registered students found a long line at Woollen gymnasium, where registration took place, before the doors opened at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, but after the first rush, the students moved through the doors, picked up their cards and were out of the building within fifteen minutes. Students registering for the first time had a more difficult time of it, but were given appointment cards at the front of the gym eliminating a possible long waiting period before entering the building.

Drop and Add

Drop-and-add procedure is scheduled to begin at 8:30 this morning at the registration hall, located in Venable X, according to Mrs. Eileen Burton of the Central Records section. She added, however, that rain last night would postpone the movement of records from Woollen, and that if it did rain, the doors to the drop-and-add line would not be opened until 10:30 this morning.

Students Must List Summer Addresses

All students who have changed residences for the summer term were advised yesterday by Postmaster W. S. Hogan that they may change their addresses on special forms available for that purpose at the post office.

The only thing which must be done, he said, is come to any of the windows in the post office and fill out a Change of Address form.

He pointed out that this will be necessary for all former residents of the quonset huts, as no further mail will be delivered there.

COEDS BEWARE

Women students must not enter fraternity houses until further official notice appears in the Daily Tar Heel, Audrey Branch, assistant to the dean of women, warned yesterday.

Coeds are not permitted to visit fraternities until a visiting agreement is completed and approved between the fraternities and the University administration.

Bill Shuford Resigns Job As Student Union Head

By John Stump

Bill Shuford, well-liked director of Graham Memorial, has submitted his resignation to take a position as assistant executive secretary of the Alumni association, it was announced yesterday.

According to Dean Fred Weaver, secretary of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors, "Bill's resignation is being accepted with the deepest regret."

To Leave July 1

Shuford, who assumed the directorship on July 1, 1947, expects to actually vacate his former post this July 1 after holding it for exactly a year.

During that time, he has organized the Rendezvous room, which is now enjoying its greatest popularity since its establishment, and has taken a leading part in getting the Student Entertainment series back on its feet. Under his directorship, noted hypnotist Franz Polgar, Mickey McDougall, the card detective, the Deep River Rhythm boys, and many minor entertainers have been brought to the campus by Graham Memorial.

Home Is Where . . .

Shuford, a native of Asheville, is a member of the Carolina class of 1941. During the war, he served as an officer in the Armored Infantry for five years, two of them in Europe. He now calls Chapel Hill home.

BILL SHUFORD

While an undergraduate here, Bill, as he is known to everyone around Graham Memorial, was secretary-treasurer of the student body, delegata of the Grail, and a member of the Golden Fleece. He served two years on the Student council and was a member of the University club, Interdormitory council, and numerous committees.

Graham, Aycock Are Taken Over by Coeds

By Bill Buchan

Graham and Aycock dormitories, long used to the sound of male voices and the habits of college men, have adopted a new look with the beginning of the summer session.

Ambitious male students, looking for old buddies or taking a five-minute break on the way home from the tennis courts, will find the welcome mat withdrawn and a chorus of protesting feminine voices if they dare enter the once male-inhabited halls. The answer to the mystery, according to J. E. Wadsworth, University housing director, is the overflow of women students here during the summer months.

Married Couples

In addition to these two, Alexander and Whitehead dormitories have been filled with married couples and Stacy and Everett have been assigned to the Extension division for use by various groups visiting the campus for different occasions scheduled during the summer. Lewis, the remaining dorm in the lower quad, will remain vacant to permit a general overhauling and repainting job. It will be used however, Wadsworth stated, if overcrowded conditions make it necessary.

"A" dorm, the first of the three new dormitories to be completed, is in use for the first time by students this summer.

Just for Summer

The housing director emphasized that the dormitory assignments are for the summer and are not necessarily for the fall term. He urged all students who plan to remain at Carolina throughout the year to make a room deposit as soon as possible for the fall term.

"While we try to please all students in the assignments of rooms," Wadsworth asid, "many of the rooms now occupied by students are assigned to students who are not in summer school. These rooms will be returned to their regular occupants in the fall and new summer school students will have to be assigned to other quarters."

Students Vacate Quonset Hut Area For Summer Terms

Forty quonset huts stood locked and empty yesterday as mute testimony to the decreased summer enrollment at the University.

To those men who only last week walked out of the hut area after living, in some cases as much as a year, in the "tenement on the tennis courts," their re-opening date will be too soon if it is never.

But the official word from South building yesterday was that realization of an anticipated fall en-

House Delivers Welcome Speech To New Students

Chancellor R. B. House welcomed all new students to the University summer school in a brief orientation meeting held in Gerrard hall last night.

At the same meeting Student Body President Jess Dedmond also made a short speech of welcome which included brief instruction and indoctrination in the working of student government here.

Campus Code

Tom Eller, past president of the student body, introduced the newcomers to the Campus Code, the University's unwritten law of conduct, and a short talk on the honor system was made by a member of the Honor Council.

Following the hour-long orientation program old students and new met each other at an open air dance at 9 o'clock in the Y court. Music for dancing was provided by Pianist Chic Burroughs' eight-piece orchestra which formerly played under the name of Jimmy Marshall's Carolinians.

Coeds Meet

New women students met in their dormitories after the dance last night for instruction concerning social regulations. Coeds will meet again in the dormitories on Monday night to elect house presidents, who will compose the Women's council during the summer.

Previous orientation instruction was given 41 incoming freshmen on Wednesday morning when they met in Gerrard hall at 9 o'clock to hear a welcoming address delivered by Dean Spruill and to meet their faculty advisers.

After taking scholastic placement tests, the freshmen returned to Gerrard at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon for further orientation under the guidence of Bill Miller, chairman of the Orientation committee. The two-and-a-half-hour program was concluded with a general tour of the campus.

Lenoir Schedule Is Released for Summer

Lenoir hall officials yesterday released the dining hall time schedule for the two summer sessions. During week days the central dining room will be open for breakfast from 7 to 9 o'clock in the morning, for lunch from 11:45 to 1:30, for supper from 5:30 to 7 o'clock. Sunday hours are: Breakfast—8:30 to 9:30; lunch—11:45 to 1:30; supper—5:30 to 7 o'clock.

The Green room will be open for breakfast only from 6:30 to 9 o'clock in the morning. The special rates begun last quarter in the North room will be continued this summer. They are breakfast, 25 cents, lunch, 50 cents, and supper, 50 cents.

Grad Student from Oslo Ready To Go to Paris with Carnegie

By Jim Dickinson

A graduate student from Oslo, Norway, who came to the University on a "short visit" and ended up in school, has just received his master's degree in philosophy and is preparing to leave for Paris to accept a prominent position with the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

Erik Tranoy, who has been here since March, 1947, spent 16 months of 1944-45 in a concentration camp in Germany and after his release came to the United States in 1946.

He held a position with the Norwegian embassy in Washington, D. C., for a while and came to Chapel Hill for a visit. Highly impressed by the Chapel Hill and University atmosphere, he decided to continue his education here and was awarded the Graham-Kenan scholarship.

After his release from the concentration camp Tranoy collaborated with a fellow-student in writing a book entitled "Norwegian Students in Germany." The book described conditions of the camp as experienced by the group of students who had been taken from the University of Oslo and placed in confinement.

While attending here Tranoy has been a member of the Philosophy club and the Presbyterian co-op. He has taken minor courses in sociology.

Tranoy says his position with the Carnegie institution in Paris will consist in spreading information about the United Nations and international relations groups who work to maintain peace.

The organization is purported to arrange conferences between students, scientists, and others who are doing research work in studies designed for permanent world peace, he says.

George C. Marshall Surprise Speaker At Commencement; 1,300 Get Degrees

Praises Dr. Graham For His Services To United Nations

"What we might say here tonight would go all around the world in 24 hours," Secretary of State George C. Marshall told the class of 1948 in commencement exercises in Memorial hall Monday evening.

For that reason, Marshall pointed out that he could not say anything definite on current issues. "They are either in such a delicate state of negotiation or in complete stalemate," he continued, "that it is inadvisable for me to engage in public discussions, except in so far as may be necessary to keep the people of this country reasonably advised of the general situation."

1,300 Graduate

The Secretary of State was a surprise speaker at the ceremonies in which approximately 1,300 seniors received their diplomas from the University. Arrangements were made last week for him to speak Monday night, but secrecy was maintained until Monday morning when it was learned that he definitely would arrive.

Marshall flew into the Chapel Hill airport about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, only a few hours after Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall had landed at the Raleigh-Durham airport on his way here to receive an honorary degree.

Graham Did Service

The Secretary of State explained that the reason he took time off from his official duties to come to Chapel Hill to speak was the great service that Dr. Frank Graham, a personal friend of his, had done for his country. The speaker pointed out the need for more men like Dr. Graham to serve the government, particularly in relation to foreign affairs.

In his address, Marshall told the graduating class to avoid snap judgments in foreign problems. He advised the students to get at the "true facts" before making judgments on foreign affairs, asserting that "we Americans are sometimes inclined to emotional reactions, which can be very dangerous in matters concerned with international relationships."

Keep Informed

The speaker urged the students to keep informed on the United States' current role in world affairs and declared that it takes more than "mere superficial reading of a single newspaper or listening to your favorite radio broadcaster to get at the true facts."

Dr. Frank Porter Graham rapped the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill in his address to the group Monday night.

Graham said the answer to a digerence of opinion is "not denunciation, not a concentration camp, not the Mundt-Nixon bill now pending in the Senate. The answer to error is not terror but the cleansing power of light and liberty under the Bill of Rights and the Constitution of the United States," he declared.

Confusion on Americanism

The president of the Greater University went on to point out that there is much confusion to-

Dewey Makes Pledges In Burlington Speech

By Chuck Hauser

Burlington, June 10—New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey told a crowd of over 2,000 people here today that the Republicans "want to relieve Truman of all his problems" and predicted "the finest house-cleaning of left-wingers and fuzzy do-gooders that we've had in a long time."

THOMAS E. DEWEY

The little governor who looked as if he had just stepped off a wedding cake also spoke in Durham today. He barely caught a glimpse of Chapel Hill out the window of his convertible, however, as his 13-car motorcade whirled through the University community about 11:15 this morning.

One state highway patrol car preceded the caravan as it roared through Chapel Hill, but on the outskirts of Burlington, the local chief of police waited with motor running to lead the way into the town where the "next president of the United States," as he was introduced, was to speak.

The motor parade pulled into downtown Burlington and stopped. The top flipped down from Dewey's convertible and the governor himself stood up on the

Rendezvous Room Opens Tomorrow

The Rendezvous room, which has been closed since May 30, will re-open tomorrow evening, Graham Memorial director Bill Shuford announced yesterday.

Billed as the coolest place in town, the nite spot is located in the basement of the student union building. Tomorrow, as usual, the snack bar will be open to sell a variety of toasted sandwiches, cigarettes, coffee. The juke box will be available for dancing.

During the summer, Shuford said, the room will feature the Jack Sturgill trio each Friday evening.

FACULTY RECEPTION

All new students are invited to meet the members of the faculty at a reception to be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial Sunday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Fifty-Three Named To Run Orientation During Fall Quarter

The names of 53 men who will serve as orientation counselors during the forthcoming fall orientation were released yesterday by the Orientation committee.

The men, who have been collectively described by the committee as "the closest possible approach to a complete list of the top men on this campus," have been participating in a counselor's training program for the past ten days.

At two meetings and through the medium of an outline of the subject matter covered, they have been familiarized with the things which they are expected to transmit to the incoming men.

Reporting one week before the opening of school this fall, they will spend the next week on orientation. Each will be indentified by an armband with a C on it.

According to chairman Bill Miller of the Orientation committee, their response and interest thus far has been "heartening."

Those selected are Herb Mitchell, Nat Williams, Don Evans, Nemo Nearman, Jim Gwynn, Bob Kirby, Tom Wharr-

Many Carolina Students Going To Europe for Summer Months

By Sally Woodhull

That the charms of the Old World have not been completely buried in the Atomic Age is evidenced by the number of Carolina students who plan to visit Europe this summer. They are going for a variety of purposes, from business and study to pure sight-seeing, and in a variety of ways, from airliner to cattle boat, but they all want to see gay Paris and the German beer gardens.

Peggy Ellis, graduate student from Rayville, La., and Erwin Danziger, rising junior from Chapel Hill, have each been accepted for one of the international holiday courses at a German university operated by the Educational and Cultural Relations division of American military government.

Peggy will be one of 100 American students studying at University of Munich under outstanding professors from Europe. About 200 German students will join the Americans in this three-week course of study, aimed at fostering international understanding among university students.

Planning to sail from New York about the middle of June, Peggy will take a student ship operated by the Institute of International Education. On board, students will be given orientation courses in European customs by the American Friends Service committee.

Although this is her first trip to Europe, it is not the first time Peggy has left the States, for during the war she worked with Civil Service in Hawaii. She took her undergraduate work at Louisiana State university, and has been doing graduate work in psychology here. She is graduate counselor and assistant hostess for Alderman hall.

DTH MEETING

All students interested in working on the Daily Tar Heel during the summer are urged to attend a DTH staff meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the DTH offices, second floor Graham Memorial. All regular or former staff members and all those interested in joining the staff are expected to be present.

A Name For "A" Dorm

After a long, long wait and many premature rumors as to their progress, one of the new dormitories has been completed and is now being occupied for the first time by summer school students. The building, located opposite Woollen Gymnasium, has been designated as "A" Dormitory. University officials have expressed the opinion that they desire to name the dormitories as soon as possible to avoid their being known as "A," "B," or "C" for several years. It is this newspaper's intention to propose a name for "A"—Wolfe Dormitory, in honor of one of our more famous sons, Thomas Wolfe.

Of course, the occupants of such a dormitory will immediately acquire the nicknames of "Wolves" and other such appropriate adjectives that are sometimes given to the more aggressive males. It is our opinion, however, that the possible joke will wear off with a little aging and the name "Wolfe" will be accepted without comment just as Grimes, Stacy or Kenan are today.

In addition, the name "Wolfe Dormitory" will give proud alumni and students an extra opportunity to explain that the novelist was not only an alumnus of Carolina, but also one of the most active student leaders in his class on the campus.

All joking aside, we nominate "Wolfe Dormitory" as the official title of "A" Dormitory.—B.B.

26 Convention Votes

Governor Dewey and motor escort whizzed through Chapel Hill yesterday as New York's chief executive continued his one day "whirlwind" tour through North Carolina. Following as it did the appearance of Stassen and Taft in the state, the tour makes North Carolinians feel that they are being treated as well (if less intensively) as those in Oregon and Nebraska.

In Burlington, Dewey tarried long enough to give a short speech and get in a little old fashioned hand shakin', but the reaction to his speech seems to have been summed up in the statement of an old farmer who said, "I don't know what he's wasting his time here for; we ain't gone Republican but once since I can remember."

The explanation for that is, of course, that in the hottest pre-convention fight the Republicans have seen in many a year, North Carolina's 26 convention votes look mighty good to all the candidates. The old North State's Republican leaders, who this year are being wooed by each of the big three, have their share of the spotlight at this time of any election year however and then are too often forgotten in November.

We would suggest that this time before casting their convention votes, these gentlemen see to it that whoever they go to is committed to doing something for their state which has been suffering from a drought of attention and patronage for longer than the 16 year period which Republicans in general have endured.—J.S.

Thoughts For Newcomers

Summer school sessions at Carolina are different from the regular sessions here in that many of the students are people from other schools or school teachers here for refresher courses. From the indications of enrollment figures, we are going to have even more of these persons on our campus than we have had for some time. It is for that reason that the Daily Tar Heel rolls out its special welcome mat and greets the newcomers with a heartfelt hello. We're glad to have you here with us.

Undoubtedly, many of you are graduates of Carolina, or have attended summer schools here before. If you have, you are aware of the pride we take in our liberal, free-speaking university. Perhaps the two outstanding examples of this freedom, which is a part of what we call our Carolina way of life, are to be found in our student government and entirely student operated Daily Tar Heel.

The Daily Tar Heel is your "mouthpiece." What we write on the editorial page, or the stories that are presented on the news or sports pages is for your benefit. We do not expect students to read or be interested in everything that is published on these pages. We do try, though, to give Carolina students an overall picture of the activities that are going on, on the campus. If you are interested only in the crossword puzzle or Li'l Abner, it's up to you.

While here you will have an opportunity to attend many interesting programs such as the folk dances to be held here in Kenan Stadium later this month. Graham Memorial, the student union building, is open throughout the day for your convenience. Scheduled programs, under the direction of able director Bill Shuford, will be held from time to time for your entertainment. The Rendezvous Room, located in the basement of Graham Memorial, opens tomorrow night. Here "in the coolest place on the campus" you will find a smooth dancing floor, comfortable couches, soft drinks and snacks to help pass the afternoons or evenings.

All in all, we feel sure that you will enjoy your stay in Chapel Hill this summer. If there is anything that we, the staff of the Daily Tar Heel, can do to help you please do not hesitate to call upon us.—B.B.

On Graduation

Thoughts In Memorial Hall

By Pete Gerns

Commencement Day always leaves an imprint . . . different, almost holy . . . even the rain that started to pour from all corners of the trades did not detract from the special occasion . . . some last minute changes: graduation exercises will be held in Memorial hall, not the stadium . . . on orders from the White House on the corner of Franklin and Raleigh. Hustling black robes line up nervously in Phillips . . . wade through knee-deep mud to the portals of the hall from whose walls they will spit forth into life, degrees and all, three hours hence. . . .

Some of the lighter moments are left behind on Sunday . . . a good meal at Lenoir . . . chicken a la Rogerson . . . a Playmaker production afterwards . . . and then a last night in school. . . .

Monday follows too eagerly . . . a great remembrance . . . Dr. Frank's speech . . . direct from his heart to ours . . . it made you feel what a great president we have . . . overshadowing even the Secretary of State . . . the heart is what makes the man . . . you could also feel the difference in the handshake . . . Governor Cherry's . . . a routine matter, almost . . . Dr. Frank's firmness . . . a man-to-man talk . . . with each one . . . individually . . . a Final Goodbye. . . .

Toward the final part of the program some seniors managed to mar the ceremony. . . . "Can't wait till I get out of here". . . . "To hell with tradition" . . . supposed to be mature men . . . Ha! graduates of a university . . .but some never seem to be able to learn that you have to work together to live together . . . all for one and one for all. . .

And now summer has brought 4,500 from many states . . . to the new ones among you . . . a heartfelt welcome . . . perhaps you'll like the Hill well enough to stay on some more . . . some of you will linger a little longer . . . the place gets into your blood. . . .

You'll remain for months . . . even years . . . and then you'll never forget the Hill . . . it'll be to you what you make out of it . . . some good . . . some bad . . . but the important thing is: it's real. . . .

Battle park some cool summer evening . . . a beer at Hogan's lake . . . a quiet fire on the Mason farm . . . that's all part of an education . . . as much as studies . . . roommates . . . the Y. . . .

You may come to love it as so many others have. . . .

CONTACT WITH THE EISENHOWER inner group has been maintained by Southern Senators through Maj. Gen. Floyd Parks, retiring press relations chief for the Army. . . . Most active pro-Eisenhower Senators are Maybank and Johnston of South Carolina, Robertson of Virginia, Sparkman and Hill of Alabama, and Pepper of Florida. Johnston's secretary, Jim Lever, used to be an Army crony of General Parks. . . . Senator Kilgore of West Virginia has thrown his weight behind Senator Brewster's bill to give ex-Presidents the salary and privileges of a Senator for life, thinks it might help the "Truman situation." . . . Mississippi's rootin'-tootin' John Rankin is so worried over the Eisenhower boom that he has started one of his preposterous whispering campaigns—to the effect that Ike is the son of a Jewish carpetbagger who made money off the South in reconstruction days. . . . Actually Eisenhower's family came to this country several generations ago from Switzerland, settled in Kansas and Texas.

WOMEN ARE WATCHING what Republicans do to two of their sex, recently appointed to outstanding Government jobs. To date, they aren't happy. Miss Freida Hennock, expert New York lawyer, was appointed by Truman to the Federal Communications Commission—first time in history a woman has sat on this important commission. . . . Truman also reappointed Judge Marion Harron of San Francisco to the U. S. Tax Court, after she had served one term with distinction. . . . But the Republicans are now blocking both ladies. . . . FDR not only appointed the first woman to the Cabinet in American history, but recognized women's abilities by appointing two lady diplomats (Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman); the Director of the Mint (Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross); and Assistant Treasurer of the United States (Mrs. Marion G. Banister) plus many others. . . . Women's organizations are already getting irked at the Republican blocking of Miss Hennock and Judge Harron.

TRUMAN TRIP—Significant aspect of the Truman tour is the absence of labor leaders at station stops. Organized labor has been the backbone of the Democratic Party, but now they're missing. . . . While the President of the United States was playing to 2,000 people plus 8,000 empty seats at the Ak-sar-ben Auditorium in Omaha, the Omaha baseball club licked Des Moines before 5,000 people. Earlier in the day the Ak-sar race track drew about 9,000. . . . When the Friendship Train made its first stop at Bakersfield, California, at 7 a.m. more than 1,500 people turned out. When Truman showed up at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the first morning of his tour, a scant 200 were on hand. . . . Norman Armour, one of the best career diplomats, is quitting as Assistant Secretary of State. Official reason: fatigue and health. Actual reason, he was seldom consulted, and when he was, his advice wasn't taken.

MOSCOW RADIO PROPAGANDIZERS who have been telling the Russian people that the USA is a nation of warmongers would be interested in public response to this column's idea of a Friendship Train to the children of Russia. Reason behind the idea is that the only way to prevent war with Russia is to win over the Russian people. Here is a cross section of the letters and telegrams: Sara Lowrey, Waco, Texas—"Your suggestion of a Friendship Train for the Russian children seems to me a hopeful sign for peace. I am a teacher. I do not have much money, but I gave $75 to your first Friendship Train and I wish to give the same to the Friendship Train for the Russian children." (She enclosed a check.) . . . G. T. Mowrer, San Diego, Cal.—"Regarding your letter to Stalin, suggest you request your readers to write him, as believe avalanche of letters would be influential." Tass newsman—"Pearson's idea was conceived in Wall Street." . . . Rev. Maurice R. Gortner, Lansdowne, Pa.—"To some people, your suggestion may seem too idealistic but to others who know the power of the spiritual, your plan reveals a mark of real statesmanship. If Mr. Stalin will receive your letter in the spirit in which you have written, and if he together with our leaders will permit your program for friendship to become a reality, it may well be a determining factor in building the road to peace." .

News On The Black Market

Frankfurt, Germany—(UP)—The American military government considered black marketing in Germany a "recognized way of life" early in the occupation, an official history of the first year's activities here revealed.

Efforts to destroy it, the black market, the report said, were complicated by its expansive nature, the re-deployment of American troops and the inefficiency of the German police.

The reference to re-deployment indicating that American controls might have been relaxed because of the cut in quantity and quality of American troops here, was one of three slight references to American involvement in black market operations.

One of the other two references noted the sudden appearance on the black market of American goods stolen or otherwise obtained from stocks held at signal corps, engineer, ordinance and quartermaster depots. The report also mentioned "items * * * procured in many instances from American troops."

The reference to U. S. participation in the black market involved the establishment of "barter marts." They were organized exchange shops where Germans could swap their old silver, Meissen china, expensive cameras and Persian rugs for the cigarettes, soap and other American luxuries which the Germans considered necessities.

The history just released does not include a report of what happened to the black market when U. S. authorities banned further import of cigarettes and tobacco, theretofore brought in by the case for "bartering" purposes.

The acceptance of the black bourse as a way of life stemmed not only from the dire economic straits in which the Germans found themselves after the war, the report said.

German veterans of the Nazi occupation of other European countries remembered the harassing effect of the black market on their administration and calmly went about the task of creating the American military government.

The history credited the displaced persons reported always to have been a source of difficulty in maintaining security in occupied Germany, with much of the responsibility for black market operations. Their constant comings and goings, crossing borders, moving from one place to another, were a natural vehicle for black marketing. Sometimes, the army report said, Germans would go so far as to masquerade as displaced persons, simply to discredit that group.

The army history has closely correlated the problems of police security, displaced persons and the black market.

The report included references to the arrest of a black marketeer in Munich who was found to have 4,500 pounds sterling and 300,000 marks worth of jewels in his possession.

The DTH Goes To Press

By Bill Buchan

Vacations are fine things, as are beaches, mountains and just plain old visits with the home folks, but it isn't much fun to receive a wire one day early ordering you to return to Chapel Hill to "put out a Friday paper." Such was the case of the Daily Tar Heel staff however.

Seems that Editor Ed and yours truly had agreed on Fridays and Tuesdays for publication days, with the first issue scheduled to appear Tuesday. This insured the staff of a long rest and a regular return trip to the campus Thursday just in time to register and start classes on Friday.

Eaton Holden, money-wise DTH business manager had other plans, though, for a paper today and somewhere inbetween, someone forgot to tell the other of the arrangement. Holden went ahead and signed contracts for advertisements Friday and the news, sports and editorial staffs went ahead and planned to enjoy an extra day of vacation.

Wednesday morning when Holden, uneasy about the lack of activity in the other offices told Chuck Hauser, who was preparing to leave town enroute to his home in Georgia, that the paper was expected on Friday; Hauser unpacked his bag, enlisted the help of John Stump another staff member preparing to go home after helping with commencement, and began making phone calls and sending wires.

Billy Carmichael, sports editor was called in from his home on Hill Billy Hill and Ed Joyner was called at his home in Wilson. Joyner's comments were unprintable, but he promised to arrive in the village on Thursday morning. I just happened—dern it—to come back here Wednesday afternoon and with nothing better to do, walked into Graham Memorial to knock out some letters. The letters ain't been writ yet.

So with Carmichael producing the Sports page, Joyner on the editorial page, Hauser on the two news pages and Stump and myself alternating between the latter two, the first summer edition of the Daily Tar Heel emerged.

Suffice it to say, Holden throws his hat into the news offices to see if he is welcome before he enters. But we like him anyway.

Over in Sanford Monday night, as the storm clouds gathered and rain began to pour, we heaved a sigh for the poor officials in charge of graduation here who were scheduled to hold the exercises in Kenan Stadium. There will be, we thought, a terrific mixup if they have to change the program on such short notice.

It seems though, that our worries were unnecessary, because sources close to the operations end of the commencement tell us that the switch from Kenan to Memorial Hall was made on five minutes notice without a flaw in the machinery. Also, this person went on to add, the procedure inside Memorial Hall went off with clockwork mechanism.

Who was responsible for the fine work possibly would be hard to say. However, it is plain that much planning and much work and an excellent program of coordination was enacted in the process. To those people, for their time and efforts goes the orchid of the week and a sincere "thank you" from the rest of the campus.

Planes Make The Movies

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood—(UP)—A B-29 ball turret, built for war at a cost of $50,000, is being used to make movies by a studio that bought it for $45.

David O. Selznick executives estimate that the turret so far has saved the studio about $50,000.

When studio engineers got hold of the brand-new ball-turret, sold by the government as surplus, the first thing they took out was the electrically-operated hydraulic system that turned it in any direction through a full circle.

Clarence Slifer, in charge of special effects, estimated that it would cost about $20,000 to design the unit, have it made, assembled and tested. The materials included the finest bronze bushings, the hardest gears, the most polished bearings, tested and re-tested electrical controls and a shrewdly geared motor.

For $11.80 in time, the turning device was adapted to a camera and made possible the first full circle movie shot in "The Paradine Case." The exact gears turned the camera at a steady, timed, focusable speed to film all of the room, its occupants and its four walls at once.

The second thing to come out of the ball-turret was the machine-gun trigger controls. Keeping the stage doors shut during shooting has always been a movie problem. Bells would ruin the soundtrack. Red lights never proved really effective. Guards at every door were too expensive.

For $5.45, the four stage doors are electrically locked by the machine-gun controls and stay locked until pressing a button opens them.

Sometimes movie film has to be run through a camera and projected on glass. The glass fits into frames and sometimes has to be moved one way or the other to frame the image perfectly.

That used to be done with handrollers, but it isn't anymore. The two tiny motors, control system and gears that used to operate the expensive bombsight now move the frames the least fraction of an inch or several feet away with an easy control handle. The cost of adapting it: $30.

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael III

June is Misquoted

JUNE IS ANYTHING BUT THE MONTH OF BRIDES for many of Carolina's spring athletes. They just haven't got time to be in, or better, take part in weddings or nupitals of that nature. For some of the Tar Heels, notably the baseballers, a trio of tennis players and a lone, but capable golfer are still engaged in and wedded to their spring sports assignments.

The boys are all contributing the extra time, talent and whatever else it takes for the sake of exhibiting the old school try in the search of far-off national honors. One will have to go far to compete for them and in a sense, farther to win them. For the golf and tennis are being played in the never-never (never play them anywhere else) land of California, while the baseball finals will be held in Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Optimistic Optimist

THE AMAZING THING ABOUT THE WHOLE situation—and one can hear the respective coaches cringe at the sound of this—is the fact that all three of the Tar Heel entries have a very possible chance of success to one winning degree or another.

The baseballers, now in highly-competitive competition for district honors in Charlotte, stand a good chance to win there and enjoy similiar results against the other three Eastern region winners in the second-stage action in Winston-Salem beginning next Tuesday. The obvious reason for this optimistic view is the length and breadth of the Tar Heel pitching staff, which would warm the hearts of such as starter-starved Leo Durocher or Joe Mac Carthy.

You can afford to be a little weak at the bat and in the knee if you've got the boys—count 'em, there're five—who can start the first inning and still be out there when the ninth rolls around. And be winning, too. As Confederate General Forrest would have paraphrased it, "You get there firstus, with the mostus."

The Tar Heels are not especially weak at the plate when one comes down to the facts. The hitting has been slightly overshadowed by the brilliant pitching, but it has been there and been there when it was needed, which will continue to be the pay-off factor as long as games are decided on the team scoring the greatest number of runs.

Tennis Tournamenteers

ON THE NATIONAL COLLEGIATE TENNIS FRONT the Tar Heels will be represented a little later in the month in the NCAA competition on the coast by a trio of the local performers. Vic Seixas, whose game has been tempered like fine steel, and Clark Taylor, who still has a temper, will lead the delegation to be filled out by a junior partner to the Tar Heel tennis corporation, Heath Alexander.

Seixas seems fully recovered from the effects of his spring illness, which he had to battle along with some pretty stiff competition in winning the Southern conference singles crown, and should be at the top of his game for the action. With Garner Larned ineligible this year because of the one-year residence rule on his transfer to Rollins, Seixas will probably rule as the favorite if only by virtue of being seeded first in the event.

Vic and partner Taylor will be threats to the doubles' crown and the possibility of a sweep for the Tar Heels is not an impossibility. Still-coming Alexander will play mostly for the experience, though he did sparkle in the recent Sedgefield tourney in Greensboro.

Galaxy-Golfing Ward

HARVIE WARD, THE TAR HEEL GOLFER, who won the North-South amateur and the heart of many a golf fan at Pinehurst this spring, will be the Carolina try at a third NCAA crown—the links award to be battled for at Stanford University in sometimes sunny California.

Ward, like the others, will be a favorite, but golf seems to be even less true-to-form than the usually unpredictable games of tennis and golf. The Ward is high on the experience level, having attempted to master the Masters' earlier this year and will be in there swinging with the best of them. He and his shots bear watching.

All of which proves that June may be the month to do big things in after all. . . .

Baseballers Begin NCAA District Playoffs In Charlotte

Varied Intramural Program Being Planned; Work Underway On University Golf Course

Softball, Casting Tennis, Horseshoes Feature Competition

The Intramural department is planning a full and varied program of activity for the first summer session, according to announcements released by assistant director P. A. Lee.

The program will include softball, horseshoes, tennis and bait casting with competition to be staged in all events.

The softball will be played on the regular league basis with independent teams welcomed to join the activity along with the dormitory and fraternity units. Any team may be composed of any student or faculty member, regardless of residence, with the only provision being that no man can participate with more than one team.

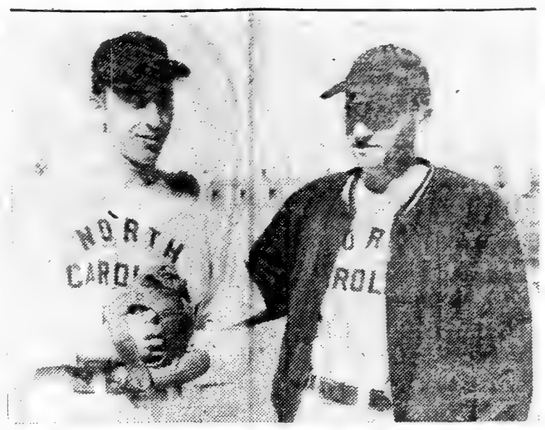
Entries Accepted

Entries for softball are now being accepted by the mural department (311 Woollen—phone F-3321) with the closing date for entries set for next Thursday and play beginning the following Monday.

Horseshoe tournaments, both singles and doubles, will begin on June 24 with the closing date for entries being Tuesday, June 22. The tourneys will be of the single-elimination nature. Entry blanks are now available.

Exact Plans

The exact plans for the tennis competition have not yet been formulated, but will be announced the first of the coming week. The same is true of the bait casting contest, the nature of which is still to be decided.



The schedule and time for all games and matches will be announced through the Tar Heel.

Softball Umpires

All men interested in umpiring softball games during the first summer session are requested to attend the Intramural softball umpires clinic on Tuesday, June 15, at 5 o'clock in 302 Woollen.

Mural Managers

There will be a meeting of all Intramural softball managers on Wednesday night, June 16 at 7:30 in 302 Woollen. All managers are requested to attend as all aspects of the summer program will be discussed.

Athletic Office Finds Football Season In Bloom in June Handling Ducat Demand

Football season may still be several months away, but just try and tell that to the gallant souls of the Athletic association staff who are presently satisfying with the ticket wants and needs of those wish to see the Tar Heels perform each week come September.

The trend is toward season tickets this fall—sell all the games at one time—which somewhat minimizes the giant task on hand. But the bug in this solution is the strength of the Carolina home schedule which means more people want to see the games, more tickets are demanded, more trouble.

Sell, Sell, Sell

Yet, Vernon Crook and his staff aren't dissatisfied. After all, that's the purpose in their walk of life, and the more tickets you sell, the better business seems to be. And it is.

From the current look of things, all the Tar Heel home games will be sellouts—Texas, State, LSU, William and Mary, and Duke. Most of the tickets will go the season book way, with the remainder, those in the end section of the concrete and those in the temporary stands, going on sale the single ticket way.

Right now the department is servicing the needs of the Educational foundation members, next come the general alumni and last and probably least, the general public. For, by the time you take care of your alumni, your students, and the visiting team these days, there just isn't much room left in the stadium, at least not in Kenan.

The orders are handled in a very business-like manner as it would be hard to complete the job any other way. Most of the applications come in on the special forms provided by the Association and from then on it's a clock work procedure.

The orders are handled in the order of their arrival, placed in envelopes, sealed and mailed while the application blanks are carefully checked and filed to prevent error. After that, everything is in the hands of the U. S. Post Office, another trustworthy organization.

Of course, there are a lot of people requesting seats on the 50-yard line, but the one that stumped them last week was the fellow who asked for his on the 49. And then there's the gentleman who perennially secures two tickets for himself. His size prevents the simple occupation of a single seat.

New 18-Hole Layout Now Being Developed On Mason Farm Land

The beginning of construction on a University golf course here in Chapel Hill has been announced recently by the Board of Trustees.

The course of 18 hole length will be built on a tract of land commonly known as the Mason farm and on the surrounding areas.

Much of the timber on the course was cleared during the war as a work project of the Naval pre-flight school here at that time, but the future flyers left still a lot to be done.

Bulldozers Move

The bulldozers have moved in and the additional timber will be removed along with the stumps left from the cutting done by the Navy. After the big obstructions have been moved, the smaller grubbing will be done, the ground made ready for planting by some of the countless large machines used in the operation, and then the actual planting done.

Coach Chuck Erickson, the Tar Heel golf coach, who is supervising the new operation along with Mr. F. J. LeClair, says the work is progressing at a favorable rate of speed except for the fact that the recent heavy rains have left the crews spending as much time keeping the equipment free of the mud as they have been working and grading on the course.

Weather Holds

If the weather holds reasonably fair for three or four weeks, until the heavy work is completed, seeding of the front nine may possibly get underway as early as late July.

Alabama, Georgia Tech, G. W. Slated To Compete along with Tar Heel Nine

By Billy Carmichael III

Charlotte, June 17—North Carolina's Tar Heel baseballers will take a flyer at the 1948 National collegiate diamond crown starting tonight when the Carolina nine along with three other top flight southern teams begin competition here in the Queen City to see who will represent NCAA district three in the nationwide college playoffs.

Besides the men of Coach Bunn Hearn, Alabama, Georgia Tech and George Washington will be in town for the big sectional action and with such an entry list, play should be at its best for the fans who will pack the local ball orchard to see the collegiations in their go for national honors between now and Saturday.

Because of the early summer deadline it was impossible for the Tar Heel to carry the result of last night's game in Charlotte.

Win or lose, though, because of the double elimination nature of the playoffs, the local entry will see further action today in the Queen City.

The Tar Heels, seemingly slight favorites to take the district proceedings in their stride and proceed to Winston-Salem next week for the Eastern playoffs, will meet the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech in the feature attraction of the evening, while George Washington and the Crimson Tide are set to do battle in the opening contest.

The affair is of the double elimination variety with action continuing until all but the winning team have suffered two losses. Thus, tonight's winners will play tomorrow with the losers being paired in the other game. The winner of the loser bracket and loser of the winner bracket square to determine the other finalist.

The Tar Heels seem to be getting the nod from the experts on the basis of their large and efficient pitching staff. They have five hurlers—Ray Blair, Vinnie DiLorenzo, Frank Robinson, Dean Cassell and Tommy Andrew—all of whom have proved winners throughout the season. And when a team is playing three or four games in several days, it's the biggest pitching staff that usually means the difference.

DiLorenzo, the ace southpaw, will probably get the starting assignment tonight with Emmett Cheek handling the catching duties. The infield will see Will Hobbs at first, Jim Hamilton at second, Ripp Ryan at short and Jim Hayworth at third. Kenny Black, Jimmy Kelly and probably Frank Jones should be the outfielders.

Among the opposition the Tar Heels will run up against, Bama seems the most potent, being the only holdover from last year's competition in the district. Georgia Tech is almost as equally well heralded, and comes north from the Peach state loaded for baseball.

day on the question of what genuine Americanism is. "To be truly American in the American tradition is sometimes called un-American," he said. "To stand by our historic American Bill of Rights is not a subversive activity. It is unfair to our religion and our Americanism to call the most decent, humane and spiritualistic hopes Communistic."

During the ceremonies at the 154th annual commencement, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall and Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of Charlotte, vice chairman of the Democratic National committee, received honorary Doctor of Laws degrees.

"I understand that the sheriff and two of your county commissioners are Republicans," he started. "I'm glad I'm in good Republican territory, at any rate."

Governor Dewey then told of a humorous experience he had in Salem, Massachusetts. "An elderly gentleman walked up to my car," he said, "and told me that he had been voting for Dewey for president ever since he licked those Spaniards in Manila bay!"

Dewey went on to state that he was "serenely confident" that the Republicans would bring vigor, confidence and everlasting faith in the government to provide a means "of turning back the octopus of Communist totalitarianism."

"We will start next November," the governor promised, "and on January 20 we will relieve the administration of all its problems."

rollment figure of 7500 would cause them to be re-opened.

One reason given for this contemplated action was that by reopening the area, the University could house on the campus many of the students who are now forced to commute from Durham, Carrboro, and other outlaying areas.

Although most of the hut residents departed Saturday following examinations, yesterday was the first day that the area was completely vacated.

Several 'squatters' who for varying reasons had to remain in Chapel Hill had been using at least four of the huts as temporary headquarters. Mail was delivered to the boxes in the area during the past week, but the post office announced yesterday that delivery had been discontinued.

Regarding the situation for the hut residents in the fall, Housing director J. E. Wadsworth said that the University will attempt to decrease the number of men in each hut.

When asked if last year's three-quarter hut tenure endured by some men would be duplicated, he stated, "With the new dormitories that shouldn't happen, but of course pending final enrollment figures, there is no way of making a definite prediction concerning the situation."

–Golf Course–

On paper and from the looks of the early work, the course promises to be one of the country's most scenic—cut directly from the pines. As to its difficulty, its well-trapped greens and tricky fairways promise a test for the master as well as a challenge for the plain duffer.

No completion date for the course has been announced, but if all goes well, it might be ready for play late next year.

600 Will Participate In Folk Lore Shows In Kenan Stadium

More than six hundred North Carolina entertainers from the coast to the mountains will participate in the first Carolina Folk festival to be held here in Kenan Stadium on Friday and Saturday of this week. Two shows will be presented on each day, beginning at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon and 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and 8 o'clock in the evenings. At the close of each day's program, a Grand Festival Ball, honoring the participants in the activities will be held in Woollen Gym, with Frank Wright's Colored Orchestra providing the music. On Saturday, the Mutual Broadcasting company will air the program on a national hook-up.

In addition to square dance teams from the western hills of North Carolina, the Folk Festival will feature the Scotch Highlanders from Fayetteville. Teams from Texas and Mississippi will take part in the program. Variety will be the keynote for the festival with cowboy dances of the southwest, mountain dances of the North Carolina hills and the imported Highland Fling from Scotland being featured.

Contest Judges

Judges for the first all-state square dance and mountain music contest will be J. J. Bailey, chief special agent of the Southern Railway; Mrs. Edna Kipp, secretary of the State fair in Raleigh and William Gibbs, president of the Mount Mitchell Bear Hunting Club. The judges for the musical portion of the all-state contest will be announced at a later date.

In the event of rain, all activities will be held in the Woollen Gym. Admission prices are 50 and 25 cents for adults and children in the afternoon and 75 and 40 cents in the evening. Season tickets are available at $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Folklore Exhibit

In connection with the Folk Festival, the University Library has prepared a folklore exhibit which is now on display in the main corridor of the library building.

Participants in the program who will be here for both days are being housed by the University Extension Bureau in available dormitories.

DR. GRUMMAN, above, Director of the University Extension Division, is chairman of the Carolina Folklore Society, organization which is sponsoring the first Carolina Folk Festival in Kenan Stadium, Friday and Saturday.

All Vets Must File Subsistence Forms

All veterans who failed to fill out re-enrollment forms for subsistence allowances under the GI Bill during the pre-registration period, or at Woman's Gymnasium during registration on June 10, may do so by coming to 315 South Building.

Authorizations for educational expenses and subsistence expired at the end of the Spring quarter for all veterans enrolled during the academic year which was concluded June 7. New authorizations will be necessary for all veterans who desire the benefits for the summer session.

All Public Law 16 veterans who have not given the training officer their schedule must report to 111 Peabody immediately so that they may be placed on the payroll for the summer months. This does not apply to veterans under public Law 346 (the GI Bill).

Dance Classes

A class in social dancing will be held on the concrete terrace at the east side of Woollen gym on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 9 o'clock. The first session of the class will be held on Thursday night at 7 o'clock. The classes will be open to all students and their wives. William Crutchfield and Julia Fuller will be the instructors.

Collection of Shaw Is Exhibited Here

The world's largest collection of material on George Bernard Shaw is now on exhibit in the main corridor of the University library. The unusual collection of Shaw's books, pamphlets, letters, manuscripts, etc., were presented to the University by Dr. Archibald Henderson, official Shaw biographer and personal friend of the English scholar.

In accepting the collection, Charles E. Rush, librarian, said, "The University library welcomes the opportunity to become the custodian of Dr. Henderson's great collection of Shavian and to administer its creative use not only by Carolina students and faculty, but by the scholars of the world who will be attracted by its unmatched holdings."

Five cases now hold the collection, which has been on exhibit for the past five weeks. It is expected that the works will remain in the main corridor of the library until the latter part of June and possibly later.

Law Wives

The Law Wives Bridge Club will meet Thursday night at 7:45 p. m. in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial.

British Author To Speak Friday In Gerrard Hall

Norman Tiptaft, former Lord Mayor of Birmingham, England will address Summer Session students, faculty and the general public on living conditions in Britain under a labor government, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Gerrard Hall. His appearance here is being sponsored by the Summer Session, with the cooperation of the North Carolina World Peace Forum.

Tiptaft is touring the United States for a period of four months and is scheduled for lectures in the major cities of the nation. He was managing director of one of the most modern silverware and jewelry factories in England until 1935. He has travelled on business in India, China, Japan, Malay, Canada and Europe, including Russia and Germany. His activities in public affairs include the chairmanship of the Birmingham civil defense committee during the war and following the Lord Mayoralty, the chairmanship of the civic reconstruction committee. Upon his return from a lecture tour with the British troops in the Middle East, he wrote numerous articles for the British press, did various broadcasts, produced three books, one a satirical skit on modern England and a best seller.

Dean Guy B. Phillips, director of the Summer Session will preside at the lecture session. The speaker will be introduced by Chancellor Robert B. House, who is president of the North Carolina World Peace Forum.

Graduate Students Given New Dorm

The University housing officer J. E. Wadsworth announced today that all graduate students who desire to room this fall in the new graduate dormitory should drop by the housing office and fill out their applications. Graduate students who have already filled out their forms are requested to turn them in as soon as possible so that assignments may be made. This move is at the option of the students themselves and is not compulsory.

Wadsworth also warned all students that the deposit which they have made for summer accomodations does not entitle them to the same rooms this fall. Those students who are planning to be here for the fall quarter should make another application for fall rooms to avoid confusion later.

Summer School Enrollment Sets New Record

The largest summer school enrollment in University history went on record yesterday with 4,526 students registered for one or both sessions, according to Guy B. Phillips, director of summer school.

This year's increased registration has seen heavy enrollment by teachers and graduate students, but a sharp decline in veterans' enrollment, said Phillips.

Phillips said all possible adjustments are being made in an effort to keep the size of classrooms at a medium which will prove most favorable for both students and faculty.

The biggest problem facing registration officials to date has been a shortage in staff members and the lack of budget facilities, the office reported.

As registration ended yesterrolled to supplement the total of rolled to suplement the total of 2,600 who had pre-registered during last quarter.

The new record in summer enrollment exceeds last years' record by only a narrow margin, the enrollment at that time having been set at 4,445 students.

GM to Give Dance For New Students

A dance in honor of the new students will be held Saturday night at 9 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. Everyone is invited to attend. Music will be furnished by "Chic" Burroughs and his Carolinians.

The regular masterpoint bridge tournaments are scheduled each Tuesday and Thursday night at 7 o'clock. These tournaments are not continuous, so that a player can enter either night. But Director Bill Shuford emphasized the importance of being on time for the tournaments. And for those who would like bridge instruction, Howell Peacock will give lessons in beginning and advanced bridge Monday nights at 7:30.

Bingo games will be a usual Saturday night feature in the main lounge. Bingo games will also be played in the Rendezvous on Tuesday nights. Ping-pong tournaments will be held on Thursday nights.

S & F Tryouts Slated Tonight For Three Shows

Preliminary tryouts for three new Sound and Fury shows will be held at the first meeting of the summer quarter tonight at 7:30 in the Sound and Fury office, third floor, Memorial hall.

Pete Strader, director, will audition old and new talent for the summer musical comedy "Mardi Gras," for the annual Freshman night show in September, and for a projected revue for the benefit of the WSSF.

"Mardi Gras" with original music by Tread Covington and a book by Pete Strader and Colbert Leonard is a complete, authentic musical comedy with the requisite amounts of songs, dances and comedy. The locale is New Orleans during Mardi Gras, and the story about a boy who meets a girl. "That much," said Author Strader, "is typical. However, the events surrounding the boy and girl are anything but. If an adjective is needed, Thorne Smithish will fit very nicely."

With three shows to cast a large number of singing, dancing, acting, and technical parts are available. Director Strader emphasized that previous experience is unnecessary and everyone is welcome.

Wallace Club Is Planning Petitions

The Students Wallace-for-President club met on Friday night and outlined a program in which members will canvass several nearby towns in a move to secure the Chapel Hill quota of the 10,000 valid signatures necessary for placing Wallace's name on the North Carolina ballot in the November election.

Vice-Chairman Paul Morehead presided at the club's initial summer meeting held in Graham Memorial and attended by approximately 50 members and visitors.

No Yacks Yet

As the DTH went to press, there was no further explanation for the delay in Yackety-Yack delivery. Gene Johnstone, the only one of the board of editors now in school, said that he hoped yearbooks could be on hand for distribution sometime next week. As yet, though, there has been no word from the binders, Lassiter's Press in Charlotte, to explain why the Yacks were not available yesterday as was originally announced.

North Carolina Youths on Campus For Eighth Annual Boy's State Meet

SECRETARY OF STATE Thad Eure, left, and Dr. Ellen Winston, right, Commissioner of the State Department of Public Welfare are among the instructors who will appear on the Boy's State program, now in progress on the Carolina Campus. The annual session will close Saturday afternoon.

State Officials to Give Lectures on Government Offices

More than 270 high school boys from all sections of the state gathered here Sunday for the opening of the 8th annual Boys' State, sponsored by the American Legion and directed by the University's Institute of Government.

The program, which began Sunday, will continue through Saturday night. State Commander of the American Legion, Ray Galloway welcomed the boys to the assembly in the opening exercises. Also appearing on the program was Secretary of State Thad Eure and chairman of the Boys' State Commission; Colonel Wiley Pickens, Raleigh, executive commander of the American Legion, and Director Albert Coates of the Institute.

Instruction in Government

All sessions of the Boys' State are being conducted in Memorial Hall until Friday, when the program will be moved to Gerrard Hall. Throughout the week the boys will be given instruction in government from the local or city level through the state, national and world governmental systems. They will put what they learn into practice by staging their own elections for city, county and state offices after they have met in nominating conventions.

Among the instructors appearing on the program throughout the week will be Dr. Ellen Winston, Commissioner of the State Department of Public Welfare; R. G. Deyton, Director of the State Budget; Forrest Shuford, Commissioner of the Department of Labor; Dr. Clyde Erwin, Superintendent of Public Instruction; A. H. Graham, Chairman, State Highway Commission; Col. H. J. Hatcher, Commander, State Highway Patrol, Lt. Gov. L. Y. Ballentine, Assistant Attorney General Peyton Abbott, and Mayor Henry Powell of Henderson.

Chapel Hill Speakers

Chapel Hill speakers will include Representative John Umstead; President Frank P. Graham, Chancellor R. B. House, Dr. Archibald Henderson, Dean of Men Fred Weaver, Profs. E. J. Woodhouse and Frank Hanft, and Henry Lewis and William Cochrane, both of the Institute staff.

Recreation for the boys during the week will include attendance at the first Carolina Folk Festival to be held in Kenan Stadium Friday and Saturday; Colin the Magician, and movies of the Carolina football games. The boys will also have time every day for swimming, softball and tennis.

Y Coalition Cabinet Makes Plans For Active Program

The Coalition Cabinet set up by the YMCA, the YWCA, and the Hillel Foundation to handle student religious activities on campus during the summer held an organizational meeting last night. The group outlined an active program for the next six weeks.

Under the Coalition Cabinet's supervision, services of the respective religious organizations are to be established on a year-round basis for the first time in many years, according to Ed McLeod, cabinet chairman. Plans formulated last night now call for regular vesper services in the arboretum, campus-wide picnics, and dances throughout the summer.

As yet definite dates have not been decided, but McLeod asked that "everyone watch for notices of all cabinet events to enjoy the best of spiritual fellowship among other Carolina students.

In the "Y" building itself, such permanent public facilities are to be continued as the lost and found bureau, a student directory, and bulletin boards for advertising rides, sales, rentals, and data on campus activities in general. Also, a "Y" representative is always on duty at the information desk in the lobby to give whatever assistance is possible to students, faculty, and townspeople alike.

Other cabinet officers besides McLeod who were elected during the spring quarter include Betty Perkinson and Rita Loeb, secretary and assistant secretary, respectively.

Bob Barrus, the associate YMCA secretary who will act as adviser for the group, has invited all students interested in the summertime religious program to contact him at the "Y" office at their earliest convenience.

Playmakers Slate Tryouts for Today

All persons, including students, faculty and townspeople, who are interested in working with the Carolina Playmakers are urged to attend a summer organization meeting of the group this afternoon in the Playmaker theater at 4 o'clock, according to an announcement released yesterday.

During the summer sessions, the Playmakers will produce two major productions in addition to one bill of experimentals. Acting and technical positions will be open for assignment in these productions.

Playmaker officials emphasized in the announcement that persons taking part in the activities do not have to be drama majors, but that any students in any department at the University is eligible to take part.

Di Society Meeting Tomorrow Night

The Dialectic Literary Society will meet in executive session tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West, Gran Childress announced yesterday.

Childress, elected at the last Di session in the spring quarter as temporary speaker especially for this summer, said that Senate plans for the next six weeks depend on the outcome of the meeting tomorrow night.

If enough Senators are present to warrant decent-sized discussions in the future, the Di will complete its list of summertime officers and hold regular meetings each Wednesday night hereafter. According to Childress, there will probably be summer memberships open for those interested in forensic participation.

The Philantropic Assembly, the other forensic society on campus, voted earlier to remain inactive for the summer because so few members were expected to be in school.

Lenoir Wants Workers

Students interested in working at Lenoir Dining hall can make applications at the Student Aid Office, 302 South building. Hours for the jobs are breakfast, 7 to 9 o'clock and lunch, 11:40 to 1:30. Those accepted will be able to work one meal during the day and get three meals in return.

DTH Meeting

All students interested in working on the Daily Tar Heel during the summer are urged to attend a DTH staff meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the DTH offices, second floor, Graham Memorial. All regular or former staff members and all those interested in working on the editorial, sports, news or business staffs are expected to be present.

No Occasion Complete . . . . . . Without Canine Participants

Chapel Hill's Dog Colony - True Carolina Gentlemen

By William W. Prouty

And in that town a dog was found,
As many dogs there be,
Both mongrel, puppy, whelp and hound,
And curs of low degree.

Oliver Goldsmith died before Chapel Hill was founded; but had he been a native of this Village instead of Ireland, his lines above would have been just as apropos. For, without doubt, Chapel Hill comes as close to being a dog heaven on earth as any community in the country. Dogs of all kinds, sizes, shapes; pedigreed dogs, whodunit dogs, hounds, giant Newfoundlands, Doberman pincers, and just pain, ordinary flea-bags happily roam the town and campus, unmolested, unattached, and, for the most part, unlicensed.

They gleefully and futilely chase the innumerable squirrels, they saunter disdainfully past the "No Dogs Allowed" signs in Lenoir Hall to accept the evertic though obliging students. They walk nonchalantly into classrooms for a morning or afternoon snooze, paying not the slightest heed to the erudite lectures. They gather in unbelievable numbers at every athletic contest; and by cavorting on the playing field they succeed in temporarily stopping the play in four of every five games, much to the amusement of the spectamains that there are a great number of dogs in Chapel Hill, and they all have a doggone good time. Dog days are not just the six weeks from early July to early September in the Village, as in other communities. Dog days are 365 days a year here in this combined Paris, Miami and French Riviera of dogdom. Here the canines have the run of the town and campus, living as best suits their tastes, with never a dog catcher's shadow crossing their happy paths. Occasionally the city officials half-heartedly announce that all unlicensed dogs will be taken into custody and destroyed if not claimed and licensed. But inevitably tradition overcomes official fervor, and soon the whole thing is happily forgotten, while once again the furry free-loaders bustle with carefree activity.

In all the better canine communities pedigree is the thing. In Chapel Hill pedigree isn't worth the paper it's written on—so far as the dog is concerned, that is. The pooch of unknown parentage is just as well fixed and happy as his leash-hung, heavily papered contemporary. In fact, the waifs seem to have the better of it. They live the full life without submitting to the leash, wash brush, vaccine, and muzzle which dog the lives of their so-called more fortunate brothers. They are as free as the breeze, and they answer to no whistle which they do not deem friendly.

Some Quaint Characters

Out of this canine conglomerators. They appear in profusion at speeches of all kinds; and during the Commencement exercises they have a field day. In fact, it is said that there has never been present hand-outs of the apathea gathering of ten or more people in Chapel Hill which did not include at least one dog.

Doggone Good Time

While this statement may be a little exaggerated, the fact retion there have emerged some quaint characters. Well known to townspeople and students before the last war was Rubinoff, a big raw-boned, shaggy-haired dog of doubtful parentage but of undeniable virility. Rubinoff was champion sire of the anti-leash set, and though he is now gone, his numerous progeny are carrying on in the true Rubinoff tradition.

Another dog that was known to everyone in Chapel Hill was Trixie, a little dog on fox terrier lines who accompanied the late Professor Koch, originator of the Carolina Playmakers, everywhere he went. The lovable Professor and his little dog walking to and from the Playmakers building were a familiar sight. They were inseparable.

But perhaps the most famous dog in recent Chapel Hill history is Dan, the old English setter owned by Professor Lee Wiley of the Romance Languages Department. Dan, who goes home only when and if the mood strikes him, roams the campus, the classrooms, the athletic fields at will, and is equally at home in dormitory, fraternity house, cafeteria, fire station and what have you. Everybody in town knows him, and though he is friendly with everybody, Dan never takes up with any one person or group for long.

New King of Canines

Not so long ago Dan left town mysteriously and nobody knew where he had gone. Several weeks later he was found in Charleston, S. C., and returned to Chapel Hill, to the joy of townspeople and students alike.

Dan has recently disappeared again, and his place as King of the Canines has been taken over by a non-descriptive member of the set known officially as Reyn-

(See DOGS, page 4)

Suggestions on Commencement

Graduation exercises are, in our opinion, one tradition that can very well be terminated, but if they are to be continued, they should be carried out properly. For this reason we hope the people who will be in charge of next year's commencement were on hand in Memorial auditorium last Monday night to observe the fiasco that took place there. And we hope they learned something.

When several thousand people, some of them from as far away as Maine and Florida, come all the way to Chapel Hill to watch their sons and daughters receive a diploma, they should at least have the guarantee of being able to watch the event they came to see. Such was not the case last Monday. Memorial hall was as crowded and hot as the New York subway at 5 o'clock on a summer afternoon, and just as inadequate. The 1,100 people on hand to receive degrees occupied the entire ground floor, and parents and visitors were left to fight for any perch they could cling to. They packed into the shoe-box sized balcony and stewed there like sardines in a can. They overflowed the downstairs aisles, where they stood during the three-hour proceedings. They swarmed back stage, sat on the speakers' platform, stood outside in the rain peering through the windows—and still there were many left who didn't have a prayer of getting near the auditorium.

The exercises were originally scheduled to be held in Kenan stadium which would have accommodated the crowd nicely. Then the rains came. This seems to have surprised the commencement officials, in spite of the fact that the sun had not even peeped at Chapel Hill for eight straight days. It is not clear just who decided to make the shift to Memorial Hall just five minutes before the program was to start. The Marshals understood that it was to take place in the stadium regardless of rain and they weren't prepared for the change. All they could do was mill around and look confused.

About the best thing that can be said of the commencement is that the speakers spoke briefly, and Dr. Frank was worth going to hear. As for the rest of the proceedings, they were so long that about the only people still present at the end were the governor shaking hands and the last people to receive degrees. The rest of the graduates hardly paused at their seats after getting their diplomas.

For next year's commencement we suggest again that the University eliminate individual presentation of diplomas. We also suggest that the bleacher sets be put up in the gym for use in case of rain. Of course this will cause added expense, but as we said in the beginning, if commencement is worth having at all it should be done right.

Our Team Is Red Hot

There is a Carolina team now on the road to possible national honors. That team is the baseball team.

Last week this Carolina team won district honors in Charlotte by defeating the best in the South. Today this Carolina team enters competition against the best east of the Mississippi River at Winston-Salem. The winner there goes on to Michigan to face the western winner for the national collegiate baseball championship.

Should the Carolina nine survive this hearty test, all Tar Heels will share its glory. Equity would say then that these same Tar Heels should share in the trials and tribulations of the team along its bumpy road to national honors.

"The time has come," the paraphrased Walrus said, "to back our team in spirit if we are unable to do so in reality."

New GM Service

With out the fanfare of advance publicity Graham Memorial instituted another service feature for the entertainment of students Sunday evening. It was a new form of concert under the stars.

Originating from a record player in the student union office, the music reaches its audience through a loudspeaker just outside the office window. The records are classical and semi-classical favorites. The concert will go on from 7:30 until 9:30 each Sunday evening, and next week the GM office plans to provide a booth at which listeners may get cold drinks and snacks.

From the number of couples star-scatter'd on the grass at the initial performance it seems the new service will be greatly enjoyed.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is issued daily during the regular sessions of the University by the Colonial Press, Inc., except Mondays, examination and vacation periods, and during the official summer terms when published semi-weekly. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per year, $3.00 per quarter.

Hodgepodge

We Wrote It, You Name It

By Ed Joyner

One of Carolina's ever-ready Operators went over to call on one of the new women students Sunday night. She wasn't quite ready when he arrived and from the top of the stairs informed him that she couldn't see him because she wasn't dressed.

"That's okay," Johnny told her, "just slip on something and come on down."

So she slipped on the top step.

Now that has nothing whatever to do with anything, except that we weren't quite ready for this column either so we figured the easiest way to do it would be just to slip on the top step and come on down.

You see, its so early in the quarter that we haven't had time to get enough people to do all the dirty work on this paper and consequently a skeleton staff is putting out the Daily Tar Heel (published twice a week during the summer terms. We didn't change the name because it would cost us money at the post office.)

There is going to be a staff meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the DTH offices on second floor Graham Memorial. We need a lot of people to do a lot of things, so if you are interested and want to do a little work and have a lot of fun, drift on up.

* * *

During his commencement address last Monday night Governor Cherry quoted copiously from Arnold Toynebee's "Study of History." The Governor didn't know it, but he was being checked pretty closely on those quotations. This is how it happened.

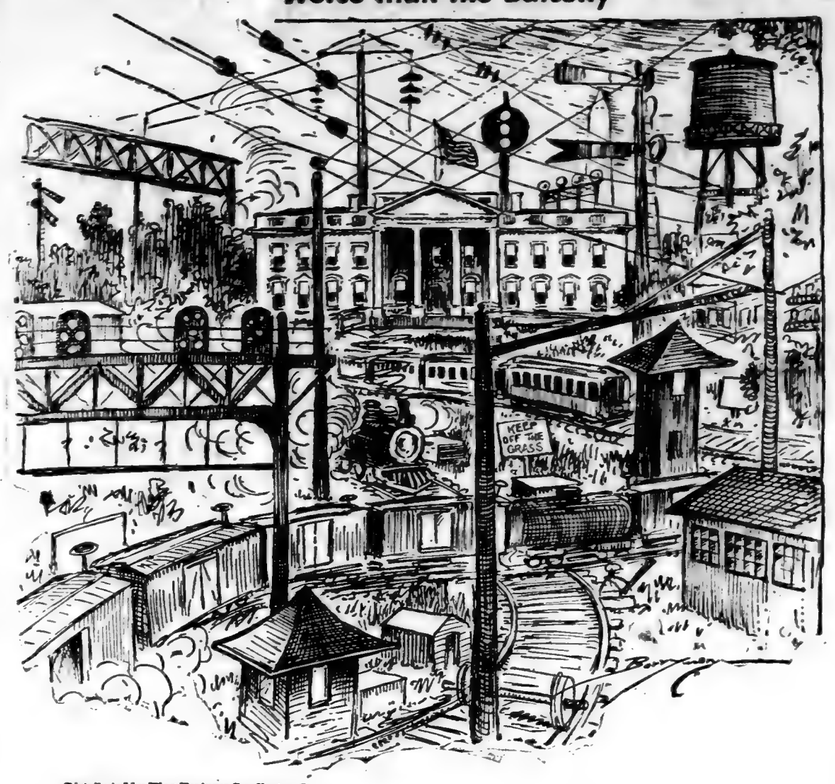
Raney Stanford, former member of the DTH staff, had his mother and younger brother come over from Durham to see him graduate. The house was so full that they had to sit on the stage behind the speakers. Raney's brother had brought along a book to read just in case things got dull. It was the "Study of History." So while Governor Cherry spoke young Stanford and a distinguished member of the University faculty were sitting behind him flipping rapidly through the pages to check his quotations.

We don't know whether they caught him in any slipups.

* * *

You meet the damndest people in this racket. We're sitting here Sunday night in deep communication with a typewriter when suddenly somebody puts up a detour sign and our office becomes Highway Number One for a procession of Characters.

First it's Bob Eagle, who has some vague connection with Tarnation. He's zany enough by himself but he's dragging a babe from Queen's College in the City—New York, that is—who doesn't understand the accent in these heah pahts. Ever try to explain the financial set up of the Student Legislature talking like a Dead End kid?



Then in pops a foursome including a guy who wants to start a lacrosse team here and a girl from Florida who is taking some sort of psychology course which she proceeds to demonstrate by trying to hypnotize us.

After that we have to take time out for a cuppa joe with a fancy title down at the atmosphere emporium on Franklin street. There we meet a guy who starts off by panning our paper, comes back to the office to give us some suggestions and ends up at one a. m. deciding it isn't such a rotten rag after all and sitting down to write an editorial for us.

While he is still here we hear a roar coming across the campus and in buzzes Sports Editor William the Third fresh back from the baseball tournament in Charlotte and all hepped up over what a terrific team he has just discovered we have. Thirty minutes later when he slows down to take a breath we discover what the buzzing is. Perched on his head is a kid's skull cap topped with a pair of built-in blue and white celluloid helicopter propellers.

Yep, people certainly are.

On the Chin

The Consumer Has Had It

By Pete Gerns

The current session of Congress is coming to a close with the consumer still taking it on the chin. Saturday of this week has been set as a tentative deadline by the solons at Washington.

Congress has been sitting now since mid-November, with a special six-weeks session followed by its present four-months session. The results, from a consumer's standpoint, don't add up to much. The inflation threat is even more serious today than it was in mid-November; living costs are about 4 per cent higher. Rent inflation has not been checked. Income taxes have been reduced a little, but the lion's share of the savings goes to the upper-income bracket groups.

The three items which concern the consumer most are rents, taxes, and general economic stability. Congress, unfortunately, has done very little on this front in the last eight months. Here is the sad record:

Rents: Congress extended the weak rent control law of 1947 only to April 1, 1949, although it seems obvious that living space will still be at a high premium then. Under the old law, rent increase applications had to be handled through the office of the Housing Expediter, who is now virtually supplanted by an Emergency Court of Appeals whose decisions are final. We still have a Housing Expediter; however, his decisions have no force.

Basic trouble spot in this picture is the provision that new or re-converted dwelling units are control-free. Their presence serves as golden opportunity to a landlord to submit the tenant to rent increases, knowing full well that the lessee has to accept or risk higher rents still in the new housing developments.

Finally, Congress committed its greatest faux pas du jour when it did not eliminate a single one of the heavy excise taxes, left over from the Great Melee, which cut into the purchasing power of the consumer, and specifically that of the low-income brackets.

Congress has failed, miserably, to enact an anti-inflation program. It has catered to lobbies while disregarding the plight of the consumer. We have no price control, allocation control, rationing of scarce food. It did not cut discriminatory margarine taxes. With adjournment only a couple of weeks away, it passed the Bullwinkle Bill, which would literally have exempted the country's railroads from the provisions of the anti-trust laws. The veto of this bill is one of the few things President Truman will be able to point to with pride after he leaves the White House in November.

From the consumer's viewpoint, it seems evident that we have been sold short. Let's stop shrugging our shoulders for a minute and examine the one point which we so often neglect: We can do something about it.

We elect people to Congress for the purpose of enacting laws for the betterment of the entire nation. We have to keep prodding them lest they go off on tangents. We can write to them and tell them where we stand on issues. This will work with those Congressmen who are doing their job conscientiously. Most of them will value the opportunity to send us a letter explaining the why's and wherefore's of issues at stake. Some of our senators and congressmen don't give a hoot. We can help put someone else into their jobs come election time.

Getting The Inside View

By Bill Buchan

They told me that the summer sessions here at Carolina are slightly different from the regular sessions, inasmuch as a different crop of people take over the general routine of the campus.

I was also informed — confidentially — (pardon me, ladies) this new crop of people would consist of "old maid and bachelor school teachers." Suffice it to say, that these rumor mongerers were slightly wrong. As far as this columnist is concerned, the majority of the new women are as fine a bunch of sweet young things as North Carolina has presented to Carolina in some months. (The phone number is F-3361, girls, the name is Buchan.)

The main point of this column, however, is a conversation with one of our new students several nights ago. She was a school teacher from a typical small town. She attended a traditional small college, getting her A.B. there, and all this time, she had heard the numerous rumors about Chapel Hill, but she had never been here to find out for herself.

Rumor number one was, as is to be expected, the Communists. She was slightly disappointed when she was informed that Junius Scales is a nice, good looking, friendly man and not a bushy-bearded individual who walks around with a hammer and sickle in his hands. She was also duly informed that our communistic brethren number no more than twenty-five, if that many.

Then we got on this "good time" story about the Chapel Hill Country Club life. Though we were a bit stumped at first, we convinced the young lady that while "some" people here may carry their partying to an excessive extent, by far the majority of students here do study and pass. The number of students who flunk out at the end of a term is minor, compared to the number enrolled.

What about these organizations, she wanted to know. The Wallace Club, all sorts of international peace groups (for instance, the CCUN, IRC, the World Federalists, etc.), why aren't they all combined? Chapel Hill, we pointed out, is a little city—a liberal little city—where people are free to say and do and believe in what they please. Unfortunately, a minority group on the campus, if their activities are such that they make news copy, can give the entire campus the "radical" title. The Wallace Club, for example, though their membership is not very large, is a very active group of people who are constantly doing something to further their goals. But as far as national politics are concerned, we also have Young Democrats, Young Republicans, Stassen for President, and an Eisenhower for President club. These organizations are more in line with the thinking of the majority of the American people and they don't make the headlines as often as the Wallace groups.

The girl was sincere in her questions and was interested in the real truth about Carolina life. There were several more regular Carolina students in on the conversation and when we had finished the discussion, she had taken a different viewpoint towards life in the village.

"It's too bad, though," she added, "that all the people of North Carolina can't learn about Chapel Hill in person, instead of listening to the stories and rumors that run from town to town throughout the state."

It is to be hoped that our other summer visitors here will make an effort to find out for themselves the true facts about Carolina and that they will then return to their schools or their homes, and take part in the defensive side for Chapel Hill and our "way of life."

Cholly's Follies

Inevitable as Dogs

By Charlie Gibson

Dale Carnegie, want to write another book? If you wish to put "Hey, how you?" tactics on the best-seller market again, come on to Carolina for summer school. Odds are that you will find enough speciments for a sequel called "How NOT to Win Friends and Influence People."

During what should be "the good old summertime", three fiends are as inevitable at UNC as dogs and heat.

In the season when suntan, too, comes in bottles, Campus Enemy Number One is the back-slapper. This character's mother must have been romanced by a politician. He is the dread of those who authentically toast their spines through beach parties. Around blistered backs veni, vidi, he fraps. Pronto, his victims unintentionally advertise the Broadway hit, "Look, Ma, I'm Dancing", howling and writhing in pain.

In the season when energy, too, must often be found in bottles, Campus Enemy Number Two is the erudite species of eager beaver. This creature is usually a degree-mad graduate student or a schoolteacher whose pupils have been granted three-month paroles. He she or (better still) It is phenomenal. When spring fever has warmed over into summer slumps, even when the hottest weather encourages bare feet and barren brains, this individual STUDIES. Accidentally there comes an undergraduate course with grades on the curve; occasionally there is a trip to the outdoor pool with nothing smaller than "War and Peace" to read on the banks. Classmates and on-lookers alike sweat out morale tantrums, cussing higher temperatures along with higher education.

In the season when beauty, too, is bottled as ever, Campus Enemy Number Three is the temporary coed. ANN Nigma, banned as destructive at all accredited resorts in this area, does her vacationing at Chapel Hill. The fine Southern reform school from which she is on leave cultivates such hobbies as fraternity pin collecting and teaches all the ladylike arts, including ju-jitsu. The dates she majors in are strictly non-historical, more often ending hysterical. She plays through geology easily enough since she and fossils have so much in common, but she drops botany upon the news that "it only has one feel trip through the Arboretum."

Dale Carnegie, why not bring Kinsey along? There'll be a hot time on the old Hill this summer, but somehow the indication is fair and cooler with more fun to come.

The Dean Says . . .

Education on Skids

New York—(UP)—Edward Alvey, Jr., dean of Mary Washington College, says the nation's education system is heading for disaster.

Alvey, in an article written for the new Encyclopedia Americana Annual, said the current crisis in our schools, caused by the shortage of teachers and lack of facilities, is going to get progressively worse.

Alvey finds that an increase of more than 30 per cent in children of elementary school ages is expected for the 10 year period of 1942 to 1952.

"Such a trend has obvious implications for elementary and secondary school enrollments," Alvey said. "Already the effects of the increasing birthrate are being felt in the lower grades of the elementary schools."

Alvey estimated that there will be nearly 3,000,000 six-year-olds by 1952, an increase of about 1,000,000 in 10 years.

"This will only serve to aggravate an already dangerous shortage of qualified teachers," Alvey said. He estimated that at least 350,000 trained teachers left the profession during the last five years.

"At present," Alvey said, "there are more than 100,000 teachers working with 'emergency certificates' because they lack the minimum teacher qualifications."

Alvey added that since 1942 the average collegiate preparation of teachers had dropped approximately one year.

The dean said the major cause of the teacher shortage was low pay scales.

Alvey finds the outlook "in the higher education plants continues to be grimly tight." The enrollment for last year, he said, doubled the previous one.

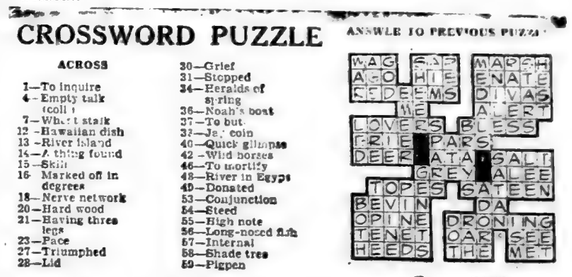
Alvey predicted that the enrollment in colleges and universities would be doubled next year and re-doubled the year after.

"By 1950 the enrollment in colleges and universities is expected to reach a record 3,300,000," Alvey said. "Thus, we must drastically intensify our efforts in order to save our educational system from disaster.

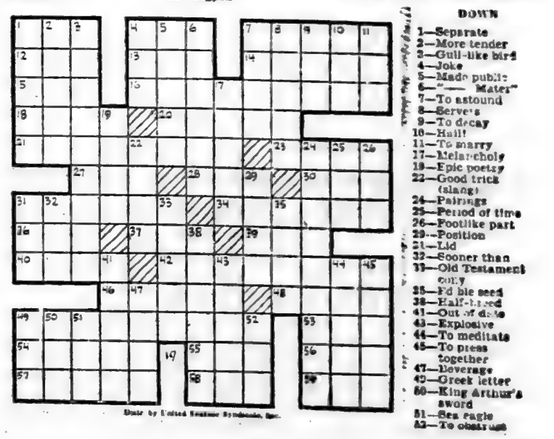
Up This Tree . . .

Wrong Kind of Kitty

Oceanside, Cal. —(UP)— Police officer Tony Telebar answered a telephone call from an excited woman who reported that her dog had treed a cat near her home.



As Telebar arrived on the scene, the dog left the treed cat and chased the officer. The cat then jumped from the tree and bounded down a canyon. The dog switched back after the cat and again treed the feline. This time the officer turned a flashlight on the tree and saw—not a housecat—but a full grown wildcat.



He fired his service revolver and the animal fell from the tree into a clump of bushes. There were many snarls and growls from the area but Telebar declined to approach the wounded cat.

In the morning there was no sign of either a dead or wounded wildcat.

Thoughts on a Baseball Team

ALL SPORTS WRITERS DREAM OF THE STORY that will write itself with only an innocent bystander needed to punch the keys. That story seldom comes, for there are more frequent times when there is a story to tell and somehow, no way to tell it.

Such a story is the one of Carolina's current baseball team which is rapidly gaining prominence in its somewhat successful search for national honors. A writer in contact with this team senses his story, but how it can be told is yet to be reckoned for no one has yet to tell it.

It's about a team that wins baseball games. Of course, that is nothing new in the sports world. There have been lots of teams to win games of all sorts, but not the way this team wins them. Some would call it luck, but even the best of gamblers and oddmakers will tell you that luck can be carried only so far.

The Secret Still Sought

THE SECRET OF A WINNING TEAM has long baffled the best and the worst of the sports experts. The safe players contend it's the team with the most talent that wins the most games, and it is true that talent helps and his ball team in question is abundant with talent. But talent has been and will continue to be overcome by what one chooses to call the spirit of the underdog. So, maybe the winning team must have a something extra that may or may not be definable.

Athletics today we will all admit, have reached the stage of specialization. Gone for the most part are the days of the four lettermen, for an athlete today must give the majority of his sports year to one sport in order to make the grade. Gone is simplicity from sport—it is today a science. And it can become at times more work than play. But not for the Carolina baseball team who find time in the short 24-hour day to talk, eat, sleep, and study baseball and still play the great American game with a zeal seldom seen in these athletic parts today.

Now, some will pass this off as a late 20th century revival of the great American "college try" that made Stover of Yale. Yet, maybe there's a need for a little revival. The effects of it are thoroughly entertaining to the spectator and for the cold fact statistician is the the revelation that these tactics do win ball games.

The Sensation of Winning

STILL, IT'S MORE THAN DO-OR-DIE for the Alma Mater with the present Carolina baseball team. They love to win because they have realized more than most the sensation of doing so, for the proof of ability to the athlete is the proof of the ability to produce, to score, to win. They hate to lose for in loss they see their imperfections, their shortcomings, their inabilities.

Certainly all athletes, all people, feel sensation of personal failure, but these fellows are a sensitive lot whose current belief in themselves is in baseball and their ability to play the game.

They have other characteristics of greatness, a simplicity in victory, a quiet self-reproach in defeat, a sense of the overall value of their achievements, and just a touch of the killer instinct necessary in all champions.

The Cor of the Core

THE CORE OF THE TEAM IS, OF COURSE, THE PLAYERS. In baseball as in no other sport, each player is basically a specialist, but the ability to produce is no greater than the ability to coordinate specialist to specialist. Each man must respect and understand the work and purpose of the other. These Carolina baseball players believe in each other with the same vigor that they believe in themselves.

They turn for leadership to their captains, the Jims Hamilton and Hayworth, whom they elected to lead their cause. The two are the rock, the sword, the shield, the spokesmen—the latter a fact attestable by an umpire who has been unfortunate enough to have come in verbal contact with the pair.

Behind the leaders come the players: the pitchers—the proverbial prima donnas whose structural ailments are said to be more mental than physical, but who generally prove the difference between a good and great team. Then the catchers who have the answers to the problems of the world with a varied anxiety to reveal them. Then the infielders who are the friendly backbone of the club. And last, the outfielders, who are the roamers and dreamers of the great outer lands.

At the helm are the coaches—colorful Bunn Hearn, restricted in activity, but never in spirit—a diamond legend. And his molding hands, his assistants—baseball-wise Henry House and Walter Rabb, who know not only the rudiments of deriving the best of the talents of their charges, but also the knowledge necessary for the maintence of the psychological edge needed to fully extract these abilities.

Another Gang

BEHIND COME THE SECONDARY POWERS TO BE. Doc White, the trainer, who tends to necessary repairs which become necessary rather often on a team that specializes in scrap and hard play. Sam Jones, the Negro field agent of Woollen's Sarge Keller, who always has what someone forgot to bring. Jake Wade, the publicist, who finds the continued elongation of the season almost forcing him to choose between marriage and a career. And matronly Manager Bill Buffalo, who sees and oversees with varied degrees of apparent success. And the fans, who can make or break the greatest of teams.

Put them all together and you have a team that has a championship look and championship ideas—a dangerous combination, but a delight to watch.

Another Gas House Gang? Yes and no. They can live up to the reputation, yes, but, no, they are something new and therefore deserve a new name of their own, the delicate choosing of which had best be left to another day. . . .

Diamondmen Topple George Washington In Winning Contest

By Billy Carmichael III

Charlotte — Carolina's baseball team used its game-winning formula of good-hit, good pitch, to near-perfection during the past week of NCAA District three baseball playoffs here to win three of four games and the right to represent the area in further competition at Winston-Salem this week.

The Tar Heels trounced each of the teams in the tourney once and dropped a single game to spirited George Washington in the third round of competition. This loss the Hearnmen avenged the following day, when they rolled over the Colonials in the finals, 10-0.

Winning Factor

Too much pitching and a lot of big hitting proved the winning factor for the Carolina entry. They romped over Georgia Tech in the Opening game, 15-0, with Vinnie DiLorenzo setting the Jackets down with a single hit, a scratch blow to short center in the seventh. Meanwhile, the Tar Heel batters were unleashing a 19-hit attack with Jim Hayworth leading the way with four safeties.

The Tar Heels won the second game as easily behind Frank Robinson, 11-3 over Alabama as Will Hobbs paced the plate activity with a triple and a pair of singles.

Dark Horse

George Washington, the dark horse team of the tourney came from behind on the third day of play to defeat Alabama also, and gain the right to face the Tar Heels on Saturday night.

The form books made it look like a routine third win for the Tar Heels in this game, but the dopesters had not reckoned with the left arm of Colonial Pete King. King, who had lost the 11-inning opener for the Washington lads, had finished up the last two innings of the 'Bama game in the afternoon before coming to the mound that night.

He wasn't expected to last, but he did, fighting off a three-run rally by the Tar Heels in the last of the ninth to win, 5-4. Tommy Andrew started for the Hearnmen, but was relieved by Dean Cassell who finished up the ball game in wild and wooly fashion.

Final Game

The final game had to be moved out of Griffith Park, where the rest of the tourney had been played because of conflict and so, the two teams moved

Robinson Probable Hurler Against Eli; Illinois, Lafayette Meet in Other Tilt

Winston-Salem, June 14—The second phase of Operation Championship will begin for the baseballers of North Carolina tomorrow night when the Tar Heels, recently District three winners at Charlotte ,square off against Yale in the opening round of the NCAA Eastern playoffs.

The other opening round game tomorrow night will see the Illini of Illinois, the District four victors from the mid-west, facing Lafayette, the winners of the District two title in the east.

The whole affair will be on the same double elimination basis that the Dixie District tourney was held in the Queen City last week, with the winners of the opening games meet each other in one half of a doubleheader on Wednesday night. The other game will be played between the losers and play will continue Thursday and possibly Friday until a winner has been crowned.

To Kalamazoo

The eastern champion found here in Winston-Salem will move on to Kalamazoo, Mich., where on June 24-26. East meets West for the national collegiate championship.

The meeting between the Tar Heels and the Eli will be their second of the season. The two teams battled to a 7-7 tie in Southern Pines at the beginning of this season in a contest that was finally stopped by the elements.

In tomorrow's game, Frank Robinson, the Cana Cannonballer, will probably start on the hill for the Tar Heels with either Emmett Cheek or Sid Varney behind the plate. Cheek came up with a sore arm during the Charlotte series and was capably replaced by Varney, leaving the Tar Heel coaching staff with a comfortable choice of catchers for the coming series.

Carolina Infield

The Carolina infield will be the same that played last week with one possible exception. Will Hobbs, the big first baseman for the Carolinians, pulled a muscle in his leg during the final contest with George Washington, and if he is unable to play, John Gregory will take over the initial sack

Jamerson Shoots Ace On Local Golf Links

Swimming Coach Dick Jamerson was the proud stroker of a hole-in-one on the 146-yard seventh hole of the local Chapel Hill country club last Wednesday.

Jamerson, who used a No. 5 iron, was playing in a foursome with Giles Horny, Art Bennett and S. Y. Tyree. On the second time around, Jamerson almost duplicated his feat on the same hole when his tee shot stopped a hands-width from the cup.

The ace was his first.

Magill Is Elected YM President at Berea Conference

Sam Magill, a rising junior here at the University, was elected Saturday to the presidency of the Southern Area Student YMCA council. The election came during the annual Southern conference at Berea College in Kentucky.

Magill has also been active in campus life in Chapel Hill. He has been an outstanding member of the track team with an almost perfect record for the two-mile event. After successfully organizing the World Student Service Fund drive last year, he will serve as vice-president of the campus YMCA next fall. Magill is also a member of the Student Council.

Other members of the University delegation at the conference which ended yesterday were Ruth Evans, Bob Blackwell, Pete Burks and Sally Woodhull.

'Studio in Review' Art Exhibit to End

The twelfth annual "Studio in Review: 1947-1948," an exhibition of art students' work, will end June 18. The show features sections including sculpture; painting in watercolor, oil, and tempera; film strips; drawings; design projects; advertising layouts; and mural studies.

Student sculpture is a new category for the annual exhibition since the Department offered its first sculpture courses in the fal lof 1947. Works in the sculpture section range from realistic to abstract. Of particular interest is an exaggerated torso by Sylvia LeClair, an art major from Chapel Hill.

For the summer session the Art Department has added a new instructress, Mrs. Mary Leath Thomas of the University of Georgia. Mrs. Thomas will give instruction in water color and art education.

Drawing will be made Saturday night, June 19, and play will begin on Tuesday, June 22. Two draw sheets will be made for each division. One will remain permanently in the mural office and the other will be kept by Kenfield.

All matches including the finals will be best two out of three regulation sets. It will be the winner's responsibility to report his name and the score to Kenfield. In order to facilitate efficient administration of the tourney it will be necessary to set definite time limits for the completion of each round.

cross-town to Highland park.

The change was to the Tar Heels liking as they roared to a four-run lead in the first two innings behind the clutch hitting of Jim Kelly and DiLorenzo. Six more big runs put the game on ice in the seventh, Ott Evans' three-run double doing the most damage.

Meanwhile, DiLorenzo was shutting out the Colonials on five hits, two nice fielding plays by the lefthander himself and shortstop Rip Ryan subdueing two minor uprisings.

After the game, DiLorenzo was awarded the most valuable player award—a watch—and the Tar Heels went home.

Dartmouth Presents Degree to F.P.Graham

DR. FRANK P. GRAHAM

President Frank Porter Graham received the highest tribute to be obtained from a University when the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him by Dartmouth College at the 179th Commencement of that institution on Sunday, June 13, shortly after he had delivered the main address.

President John Sloan Dickey of Dartmouth, in conferring the honorary degree on President Graham, said, "You have been a leader and participant in wellnight every good cause in the communtiy and for some years now you have been the most versatile and useful representative of your state, indeed, the entire South, in the critical affairs of this nation and of the United Nations.

"At real personal risk and sacrifice you'd have been willing to walk the path of public interest and wisdom through such bramble patches as social security, labor relations, racial relations, civil rights and the settlement of a bitter imperial quarrel.

"You possess that rare quality in human statecraft of being able to test your own convictions by principle and to govern your actions as to other men by the more lenient rule of reason."

The degree from Dartmouth brings to eight the number of honorary degrees conferred on President Graham, he having previously been the recipient of honorary degrees from Columbia University, Catawba College, Birmingha m- Southern College, Davidson College, Duke University, William and Mary, and Temple University.

SP Meeting

Student party chairman, Ed Tenney announced yesterday that the party plans to carry on through the summer terms in "full facion." Tenney stated, however, that a great many of the partys' activities will be social affairs until the fall session.

The party will hold its first meeting the the summer session tonight at 9 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge in Graham Memorial. Tenney urged that any new students, interested in Carolina student government, attend the meeting. Officers for the summer terms will be elected.

CCUN Meeting

All students and faculty members who are interested in the United Nations are cordially invited to a summer organization meeting of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations. The meeting will be held at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in room 211 Graham Memorial.

Students already affiliated with similar CCUN groups from other colleges are urged to attend, as a report of the State Headquarter activities will be given.

ard, but more affectionately as Radar. Radar, following in the footsteps of Dan, had a run in with local officers several weeks ago and spent a few unhappy days in a local veterinarian shop until worried students arranged for his release.

The Chapel Hill dog to stop all dogs, however, is a tremendous Newfoundland who belongs to a professor's wife. This mammoth, which outweighs his mistress a good fifty pounds, can be seen most any day pulling her along by leash to various parts of the Village. A wag has suggested that the tiny lady should get a saddle and ride the dog. At this time it is not determined if she has taken the proffered advice.

But mostly, Chapel Hill dogs are just plain dogs, without benefit of pedigree. And if they regret the fact, it's not at all discernible from their actions. They live the life of Riley, and they're well aware of the fact. They wouldn't swap the Village even for Brooklyn where the tree grows. Besides, if Chapel Hill is good enough for Betty Smith, it should be good enough for them.

Jim Hamilton will be at second for the opener with Rip Ryan at short and Jim Hayworth at third to complete the infield.

The outfield will be Jim Kelly in left, Kenny Black in center and either Ott Evans or Frank Jones in right. Evans hit the ball well during the District playoffs, doubling home three runs in the 10-0 win over the Colonials on Sunday.

Vinnie DiLorenzo, who pitched the Tar Heels to two victories at Charlotte, will probably get the nod on Wednesday with Dean Cassell or Tommy Andrew being called on to pitch the third game of the series if the Tar Heels go that far. Ray (Asbestos) Blair will be saved for relief work.

Little is known of the strength of the other teams in the tourney besides Carolina and Yale. Lafayette comes to the Twin City fresh from having defeated Navy for the honor of representing their district while Illinois whipped the best of the Big Nine and the rest of the mid-west to gain admittance.

Visiting Agreement

All fraternity's must turn in their coed visiting agreements to Dean of Men Fred Weaver by this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Jack Thompson, president of the Interfraternity Council announced yesterday. A list of approved fraternity houses will be issued by Thursday noon.

Thompson also announced an important meeting of the IFC for Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

Carolina Folk Festival Begins This Afternoon In Stadium

Di Senate Issues Invitations And Announces Plans

The Dialectic Senate in its initial meeting of the current session Wednesday night formulated plans for an active summer program, inviting new members to join in electing its officers.

The Di made its first summer bill an open invitation to all members of the Philanthropic Assembly who are now in school. Unanimously the Senators present offered all those whose own forensic club is to be inactive until fall the opportunity to "think of the Di as their summer home."

Anyone who desires to join the Di at this time either for the summer alone or permanently may obtain information about submitting membership blanks from Gran Childress, Di speaker, or Richard Bowen, chairman of the membership committee.

Beginning next Wednesday night at 9 o'clock, weekly open forums will be held in the Di hall, third floor, New West. At these discussions on current campus, national, and international issues, all interested students, townspeople, and faculty members are welcome to listen and to contribute their own opinions.

Other officers elected Wednesday in addition to Childress, who was chosen at the last Di meeting in the spring quarter, were Don Shropshire, speaker pro tempore; Jerry Pettigrew, clerk; William Harding, critic; Bill Jernigan, treasurer; and Charlie Gibson, sergeant at arms.

Edwards Elected SP Vice-Chairman

Harold Edwards was elected as temporary vice-chairman of the Student party at the first meeting of the group Monday night. A junior from Leaksville, Edwards was one of the many newcomers at the meeting. He is a transfer from Catawba College, where he was president of the freshman class. Kay Ledford of Asheville was elected as temporary secretary.

Plans for a Student party dance, to be held in the Roland Parker lounges of Graham Memorial next Friday night were made. Bill Anderson, chairman of the dance, announced that refreshments would be served and that the dance would be open to all students.

Victory Village Adds Three Roads

Approval of three additional one-way streets was made by the Victory Village Council at its meeting Monday night, according to Mayor Bill Goulding.

Tentative plans call for traffic on King Street to enter from Mason Farm Road and proceed north in direction of Daniels Road. Traffic on Johnson Street will enter from King Street and proceed east to the junction of Johnson Street and Daniels Road.

Except for the portion of it lying east of the Johnson Street junction, Daniels Road will take care of traffic traveling west to Mason Farm Road.

CPU Meeting

"The record of the 80th Congress" will be the discussion topic of the Carolina Political Union when it meets Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial. All interested persons are invited to attend the meetings.

The U. S. Weather Bureau is part of the Department of Agriculture and was established in 1890 to collect reports of weather conditions.

Dr. Graham To Speak To Boys' State Today

By Clyde Osbourne

Praised as "the best yet" by its leaders and a large number of observers, the eighth annual American Legion-sponsored-Institute of Government-directed Boys' State moves into its fifth round of activities today. Included in today's program is a talk by President Frank P. Graham at 1:30 this afternoon in Memorial Hall.

Since the first call for calisthenics Monday morning at 6:45, 285 teen-age boys, representing every section of the Old North State, have been hard at work learning and practicing to be Americans.

Quonset Hut State

Under the direction of Terry Sanford, Assistant Director of the Institute of Government, the Boys' State delegates have established a "state" replete with "counties" and "towns" in the quonset area where they are billeted.

There the boys have published a daily newspaper, divided into political parties and elected local officials for each of their "cities," held party conventions complete with caucus meetings to nominate "county" and "state" candidates, and sounded off in oratorical contests.

Graham To Speak

President Graham's talk this afternoon climaxes a full week of lectures by distinguished experts in the fields of politics, government, and education, which have been heard by the youths. Professor E. J. Woodhouse, Lt. Governor L. Y. Ballentine, Dr. Archibald Henderson, Dr. Albert Coates, Director of the Institute of Government, Secretary of State Thad Eure, and Dr. Frank Hanft, of the University Law School are among those advising the youths on good government and clean politics.

Chancellor Robert B. House, speaking to the boys on Wednesday, stressed the need for each of them to develop a good hobby plus the habit of reading, stating that both were essential to good living.

An added attraction to yesterday's program for the future State leaders was a talk by Major General Byers, Commanding General of the famed 82nd Airborne Division. General Byers stated a need for well trained and healthy young men on the political as well as the armed front.

Time Out For Fun

The week hasn't been all work for the boys. Breathing time has been provided each day with all the facilities of Woollen Gymnasium at the command of the delegates. Movies of the Carolina-Virginia football game were shown to the group by Coach Crowell Little in Memorial Hall

Vets Must Watch Deadline Dates

Student veterans entitled to increased monetary benefits because they have more than one dependent are reminded by VA of two important deadline dates to be observed if they are to receive increased allowance retroactive to April 1.

One deadline affects veterans taking full-time educational courses. The other affects veterans taking part-time courses. Combination school-job training courses or entitled to increased benefits due to new subsistence-earned income ceilings.

Veterans in full-time educational courses who are entitled to $120 monthly subsistence because they have more than one dependent must submit evidence of additional dependency before July 1 in order to have the higher payments retroactive to April 1.

Veterans with more than one dependent and taking part-time school training, combination courses or who are affected by the increased income ceiling must submit proof of additional dependency by September 1. In most cases, veterans in this group may submit this evidence on a form which they will receive from VA.

De Gaulle Speech Will Be Discussed

The anniversary of the speech by General Charles De Gaulle which started the French resistance movement will be celebrated tonight at 7 o'clock in the French House. Therese Barbier, a French girl, and student at Mitchell College in Statesville, will give the talk.

Tomorrow, members of the French House will hold their weekly picnic, which is part of their extensive daily programs. Every night talks are given, plays presented, and songs sung. Anyone interested in French, and who can speak the language is welcome to participate in any of these activities.

Playmakers Urge All To Tryout For Summer Plays

By Violet LaRue

Students and townspeople desiring roles in the forthcoming Playmaker production, "All My Sons," and other summer plays will be given tryouts at 4 o'clock and 7:30 today at the Playmakers Theatre, according to an announcement by Sam Hirsch, director of the play.

"All My Sons," a Broadway Critics Prize play by Arthur Miller, has five parts open for men and four for women, and a small part for an eight-year-old boy.

The play will be presented for three consecutive days beginning July 14 at 8:30 o'clock at the Playmaker Theatre.

Kai Jurgensen, self-dubbed "office boy for the summer session," gave a sneak preview of proposed summer productions at a meeting of the Playmakers on Tuesday afternoon.

Tryouts for a one-act show to be given in conjunction with Sound and Fury will be held at the theatre Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This production will be given on July 1 as a benefit performance for the World Student Service fund.

Featured during the second summer session will be an adaptation of "As You Like It" and a bill of several experimentals. Further announcements will be made concerning these plays, said Jurgensen.

Norman Cordon Is New S&F Advisor

Norman Cordon, North Carolina's famous Metropolitan Opera star has been named faculty advisor for Sound and Fury with Mrs. R. J. Wherry as assistant advisor, announced Jerry Weiss, president of the campus musical comedy organization yesterday. Mr. Cordon has returned to his home state to further its music appreciation through his association with the new North Carolina music foundation.

Mrs. Wherry, the new assistant advisor, will specialize in Choreography direction. She once taught in the Blair Dance and Expression school in Columbus, Ohio, and is now with the Wherry dance studio in Chapel Hill. Well prepared for stage direction, she has starred in radio, stage, and dance productions.

Colombian Visits UNC on US Tour

Dr. Pedro I. Vargas, prominent Colombian medical official who will head that Latin American country's new health program, has been in Chapel Hill for the past 10 days visiting local university and state health offices in order to gather data which he will use in the organization of his country's health service.

Dr. Vargas, who plans to leave Chapel Hill today, has been touring the country under the auspices of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs in Washington. He has been in this country for several months and plans to continue his tour until his return to Bogota about the middle of July.

Band Rehearsals

Rehearsals for the University band for this summer have been scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4:30. Earl Slocum, director, has announced that no auditions will be held and anyone who plays a band instrument is invited to participate in these practices.

THE SWIRLING SKIRTS OF THESE teen-age Texas square dancers will add to the colorful exhibition of folk dances during the Carolina Folk Festival, which begins this afternoon in Kenan Stadium. Dancers and musicians from over twelve North Carolina counties will take part, in addition to the Texans.

HPB Regulations Will Take Effect For Coeds Today

The House Privileges Board Visiting Agreement for the first summer term goes into effect today for all women students and fraternity members. A copy of this agreement is posted in each women's residence and in each men's fraternity house.

Stipulations by which women may visit in men's fraternity houses are, "Women students may be entertained only in the social rooms approved by the House Privileges Board. Approved houses shall be open to women students from 12:00 noon until the dormitory closing time for women. There shall be no consumption of alcoholic beverages in the presence of, or by, women students in the house or on the premises of any fraternity."

The following fraternities have been approved to participate in the Visiting Agreement for the first summer term: Chi Psi, DKE, KA, Kap Sig, Lambda Chi, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gam, Phi Kappa Sig, PiKA, Pi Lambda Phi, SAE, Sigma Chi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, TEP, ZBT, and Zeta Psi.

Anthropologist Speaks Saturday

Dr. Ethel Alpenfels, noted anthropologist of New York University, will speak on "Sense and Nonsense about Race" in the main lounge of Graham Memorial tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The public is invited.

Dr. Alpenfels is at the University in the interest of the Workshop on Human Resources and Intercultural Education. She will meet with this group on Friday to discuss human relations from an anthropologist's point of view.

Ex-Lord Mayor Will Speak Today

"Britain Today" will be the subject of a speech to be given by Norman Tiptaft, former Lord Mayor of Birmingham, England.

Tiptaft will speak in Gerrard hall at 4 o'clock today. He is sponsored by the Summer Session, directed by Dean Guy B. Phillips, and the North Carolina World Peace Forum. Chancellor R. B. House will introduce the speaker.

Norman Tiptaft is touring the United States for a period of four months and intends to visit several major cities of the nation. He has been a world traveler, having visited the Far East, Near East, Europe and Canada. During the war he was the chairman of the Birmingham civil defense committee. After serving as Lord Mayor, he became chairman of the civic reconstruction committee. Recently he has become an author and writer for the British press.

Chapels Will Be Held For Freshmen In Fall

Tentative plans for freshman chapel, beginning next fall, were announced this week by Jess Dedmond, president of the student body. According to Dedmond, the chapel will be held twice a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Deans C. P. Spruill, William Wells and Fred Weaver are working on technical parts of the plans at the present time.

Ten o'clock is being considered as the chapel hour, although the time has not been finally decided yet. Each chapel will last about thirty minutes and will include "educational" lectures and opportunity for the freshman to organize for "political" and "social" purposes, the student body president said.

Plans are already underway, it was announced, for meetings with representatives from State and Duke to lay plans for the prevention of vandalism during football games next fall. Last year, the season was marred by only one or two minor instances, as a result of these inter-collegiate conferences.

Dedmond also announced his plans to expand the responsibilities and duties of the student Attorney General. Dedmond stated that he wanted the officer to have the power to speak for the president in co-ordinating the activities of the Student and Men's councils. Ed Davenport of Winterville was appointed to the Attorney General position last quarter.

House to Welcome Chamber Visitors

Chancellor R. B. House will welcome over 300 delegates at a "get acquainted" meeting of the Fifth Annual Southeastern Institute for Chamber of Commerce Executives to be held here June 20 through 26. The first meeting will be held at the Institute headquarters at the Armory.

The Chamber of Commerce Institute is one of the six regional meetings held throughout the United States. The southeastern region comprises nine of the southern states. An extensive program has been planned for the delegates and will end with examinations to be held on the last day of the Institute.

Not all of the program during the week will be of study as there will be a varied program of "Talent Night," "Fellowship Night" and a dance. There will be no night life scheduled for the night preceeding examinations on June 26.

Banjo-twanging Lawyer Tours Country Telling Americans Of Carolina Folklore

By Sam Whitehall

If you're in trouble or just want to relax, all you have to do is go down to South Turkey Creek in Buncombe County, look for the house that a "five string banjo built," and there you'll find Bascomb Lamar Lunsford, retired lawyer and more recently, one of North Carolina's more famous minstrel enthusiasts and director of the Carolina folk festival. If the gentleman of the house is away, two will get you five that he's off to some part of the country talking about the rich folklore of North Carolina.

Bascomb Lamar Lunsford is not a large man, but in his face and eyes, one can see the vastness of the mountains. His voice exacts confidence because he seldom says anything unless he is sure it is right. He is a man of prodigious memory, in fact, he told us that it was memory and the love for folklore which once secured him a victory in the state legislature.

It seemed that Lunsford was running for legislature reading clerk, but he had two opponents who came from Raleigh, the center of state politics. Lunsford, however, did not let their political knowhow disturb him and went about his business of greeting the legislators with homey hello's and inquiries about local county conditions and happenings. "My knowledge of North Carolina folklore and customs of back-farms was what won me that election. My opponents didn't even come close," laughed Lunsford.

The banjo-twanging lawyer of the western Carolina hills is not an ordinary "One-night-stand" musician. He has a deep and quiet understanding of human nature. "I love humanity, but perhaps not to the degree that Will Rogers did. He loved or found good in everyone, but I have to draw the line sometimes when my principles are endangered," said Lunsford when he was asked to clarify his stand on humanity.

In the few weeks that he has been at Carolina Lunsford says he has been impressed with the high standards of the University and the students. His only advice to the younger folks is this, "plan your life as you would a good house. Select the timbers and supports with care as they must last you forever."

Nationwide Radio Broadcast Slated For Tomorrow

By Lincoln Kan

Texas will invade Carolina today as a pre-football guest of the Carolina Folk Festival which is being held this afternoon, tonight and tomorrow in Kenan Stadium, beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Texas square dance team and musicians will be featured in a broadcast at 2 o'clock Saturday over a nation-wide hook-up with the Mutual Broadcasting company. "We hope to have Chancellor R. B. House on the radio program to play his harmonica," stated Bascom Lamar Lunsford, director of the festival.

Sponsored by Folklore Council

The first all-state Carolina Folk Festival is sponsored by the University folklore Council. The chairman of the council, Russell M. Grumman, said yesterday, "We plan to have the festival as an annual affair. We have much to offer here in North Carolina to the nation."

The festival will have square dancing of Western Carolina, cowboy dancing of the southwest and clog dancing such as the "Buzzards Lope." On the musical menu there will be banjo picking, fiddling and ballads featuring songs like "Black Jack Davy" and "Barbara Allen." As a change of fare, novelty numbers featuring old timers on the Dulcimer, String Bow and harmonicas will be presented. The Fayetteville team, led by Christine Cherry and Billie Estes, will add an imported flavor to the show by presenting dances from the highlands of Scotland. Representatives of over twelve counties in North Carolina will participate in the activities.

Carolina Students

Two Carolina students, Hoyle Bruton, editor of the new Carolina Folklore magazine and Benedicta Santos from San Paulo, Brazil, will assist Lunsford. His son, Lamar Lunsford, Jr. who is now assistant district director of the Western North Carolina Vocational Agricultural department will also be assisting.

"All persons going to the Saturday afternoon performance should try to get to the stadium before 2 o'clock, as the broadcast will start at that time," Lunsford said, "the two evening dances will be brightened by the colorful costumes of the participants, and we hope everybody will come."

Dance Cancelled

The previously scheduled Summer School dance, slated for tomorrow night in Graham Memorial, was postponed yesterday afternoon by director Bill Shuford, in order that all students could attend the dance in Woollen Gym.

Dr. Grumman announced that advanced sale of tickets will be made in the lobby of Swain hall at the information desk. Season tickets may also be purchased. "For those who are unable to purchase tickets beforehand, they will be on sale at the entrance to the stadium and at the door of Woollen gym for the dances," he added.

Peace Envoy

A proposal that Dr. Frank P. Graham be sent to Europe as a peacemaker for several years was offered by Rheinhold Schairer, executive secretary of the World Education Service council, in an address at Woman's college on Wednesday night.

Schairer said that Dr. Graham should join hands in the effort with a similar great humanitarian from Russia in a program of human assistance which he contends is desperately needed in Europe.

President's Problem

Many things are missing from the University this summer. One of the missing is the Student Council. Not one of its nine members returned to summer school—and its absence may soon prove embarrassing.

Now being tried before the Men's Honor Council is a case which very probably will be appealed, and since there is no Student Council to hear the appeal, the case will go directly to the faculty. Whether or not this is good or bad, we don't know, but it is definitely a violation of the Constitution.

Student Body President Jess Dedmond has responsibility for filling vacancies in the councils by appointment. However he does not want to appoint a whole new Student Council. One reason is that he doubts that one could be formed which would be superior in composition to the present Men's Council. Another reason is that he would like to see how the judicial branch functions without the Student Council, possibly with the idea of eliminating that body. Also he has precedent in allowing cases to go from lower councils to the faculty, since this was done last summer in the absence of the higher court.

Dedmond's reasoning may be sound, but it seems to us that until the constitution is changed its provisions should be adhered to.

Chance to Learn

For the past several months there has been an unfortunate attitude on the part of newspapers to play up the U. S.—British rift occasioned by the Palestine question. A great deal of this feeling, that the British and ourselves are at odds, is a result of misunderstanding and ignorance. For over a hundred years our relations with Britain have been friendly. Now that the United States has grown to world leadership, there is a tendency on the part of her citizens to depreciate the trials and troubles of other nations and to measure them by our own yardstick. This tends to create confusion and misunderstanding.

Today Norman Tiptaft the former Lord Mayor of Birmingham, England, is scheduled to speak in Gerrard hall under the joint sponsorship of the summer school authorities and the North Carolina World Peace Forum. Here is an opportunity for us who are interested in the world and its implications in our lives to re-educate ourselves. For others who deplore the world conditions, but who seem to think that there is not much that can be done, here is an opportunity to find out what other people have done about their own situation and thereby to gain the confidence needed to employ our own strength for our own world.

Dean Guy B. Phillips, Russell Grumman and E. R. Rankin of the World Peace Forum are to be congratulated in keeping the student body informed. It is in keeping with the Liberal educational advantages which has made our University what it is today.

We urge our student body to take advantage of this opportunity.

—L.K.

Thank You, Mrs. Burton

Folks working in the registration department of the University are not in the position to receive much praise for their efforts in straightening out schedules, filing class tickets and all the other monotonous jobs that are involved in the huge process of satisfying some 7,500 students. However, this week, the lady in charge of all the various duties in the registration has left her duties to join her lawyer husband in Stanly, North Carolina and we think she deserves recognition.

The lady in question, Mrs. Eileen Burton, joined the registration department here in October, 1945 when her husband entered Law school. Since that time, she has had an inside view of the continuous growth of the student body and, incidentally, the expansion of her department from a crew of four workers in Memorial Hall to a huge gathering of 150 in Woollen Gym under the comparatively new card system.

During the recent registration, for example, Mrs. Burton was everywhere at once in the Gym supervising the operations and answering the hundreds of questions of slightly confused students.

Although she plans to live in Stanly permanently, Mrs. Burton said yesterday that she will return to Chapel Hill in the fall to help out in the registration.

For a job well done, we give a sincere thank you to Mrs. Burton and a sincere wish for good luck in her new home with her husband and daughter.

Hodgepodge

I'm Proud Of My Dad

By Ed Joyner, Jr.

I won't be getting home for Father's day Sunday, and I guess it's just as well. We never find much to talk about, my dad and I. That doesn't mean we don't think a lot of each other. We do. It's just that we never manage to find much to say when we are together.

I'd like to tell you about my dad. He's one of the finest men I've ever known.

He doesn't stand very high when you measure him by a dollar sign, my dad doesn't. I guess at one time or another he's owed almost everybody in town. That never seemed to worry anybody but him, though. The people he owed always considered his word as good as money in the bank, and it is.

My dad is a bookkeeper. He's never made a lot of money. I don't think he even wanted to. Only thing he's ever done with what he had was to spend it on his family. There've been plenty of times when he has gone to church with his one Sunday suit wearing thin at the seat and the elbows, but my sister and my two brothers and I always had about everything any of the other kids in town had. I don't think Dad ever tasted a decent part of the chicken at home, even when there was plenty of it, until after my brother and I went off to school. One of us might want a second piece. That's the kind of father he is.

Money never meant much to Dad, simply because he was too busy living and teaching us how to live. When you measure him by the scale of the fundamentals in life, only a handful of men I've ever known can reach his height.

He tried to teach us honesty, self reliance, moral integrity, tolerance, faith in both God and men, a curiosity to know and a sense of humor to ease the path. He didn't do it merely by saying, "These are good theories." He did it by the way he lived.

He seldom told us directly not to do a thing. He would say, "If you are going to start smoking and drinking, do it in the open here at home—but I would rather you didn't do it at all." He would always explain why he didn't want us to do something, and because we respected him we seldom did things behind his back that we would be ashamed to tell him about.

I'm proud of my father. I think he is a little proud of me, too. I would like for him to be. I would like for him to be proud of me not for anything I may ever aquire or anything I may ever do, but for the kind of man I turn out to be. And I would like to be a lot like him.

I don't get home much any more, and when I do we don't find much to say to each other, my dad and I. But he gets the Daily Tar Heel and every time it comes he opens it up and reads what I have written—not because he ever expects it to say anything, but just because I wrote it. Tomorrow or maybe Sunday he will get this paper and he will open it up and read this.

I wrote this column for him. I hope you didn't mind.

Things are Rough All Over

By Patricia Clary

Hollywood (UP)— Glamour girls are keeping Hollywood's insurance agents busy these days insuring them against mayhem. Life in the movies is getting rough.

The way they're making movies, a girl's likely to find her eyes scratched out, her hair burned off or a bone or two broken.

Paulette Goddard had a scrap with three men in "Hazard." Jane Russell got burned at the stake in "The Paleface." Audrey Totter tangles with a woman wrestler in "Dark Circle."

"Now don't pull your punches," director John Farrow warned the ladies. (He's a stickler for realism.) "Really let your fists fly. And I hope we'll get this in one take."

"I hope so too," said Miss Totter.

"Now you put some force into it," he warned here 250-pound opponent. "Make it real."

The fight starts when the four women standing at a wharfside bar get into an argument. The fat one tosses the beer into Miss Totter's face. Miss Totter jabbed her cigarette at the girl's hand.

The fat girl jumped on Miss Totter's shoes, grabbed her by the hair, slapped her with a backhand, tossed her on the floor and landed her 250 pounds on the floor atop Miss Totter's 110.

While Miss Totter spat in her face, her opponent banged her head against the floor and battered her around.

"I hope I didn't hurt ya, dearie," she said kindly after the scene was over. "I tried to take it easy."

Miss Totter grinned unsteadily as she felt for broken bones, climbed to her feet and crumbled. X-rays taken immediately at the Paramount hospital showed she escaped with nothing worse than bruises.

"You were wonderful," Farrow told her. "And brave. Y' know who that gal was? A female wrestler I saw a while ago. Say, you ought to see her flying scissors!"

Miss Totter said she thought she had.

Foto Facts

Get That Snapshot Right

By A. W. Sapp, Jr.

You can take better, pictures, yes, you, the average practitioner of the photographic art can, by exercising a little judgment, take far better photographs than even you thought possible. Here are a few simple maxims to follow. Follow them, and your camera will work with you, not against you.

Firstly, recognize the limitations of your instrument: don't expect a box camera to take pictures of itself and run around in concentric circles after the subject. This is a grossly exagerated example, of course, yet some photographers are extremely disappointed when their cameras fail to take pictures on days the California chamber of commerce exports to Florida.

Secondly, take care to pose your subject. There is nothing, nothing in the good Lord's world, more frustrating, than to discover Aunt Minnie has a pine tree growing out of her head, is squinting, and that the shack in the background you thought so picturesque, photographed as it actually was, with the half moon on the door seemingly aimed at poor Minnie's neck.

Choose a plain background, with the sun not behind you, but rather off at an angle. Turn your subject so that objectionable shadows appearing under the nose and eyes are diminished. Keep in mind that the photograph you want must, to a certain extent, resemble the work apeparing in the current crop of pictorial magazines. Study those magazines, with the idea in mind that you can imitate the work appearing therein. Photography is a wonderful hobby, and the results that can be obtained from the proper practice of it will give increasing satisfaction in the years to come.

Lastly, and certainly not least, check your exposure with an exposure guide. Very few of us have the ability to guess exposure time, and as a result more pictures are lost through improper exposure than any other cause. Remember, you have only one chance to take a picture under given circumstances, take full advantage of it.

Let us, here at the Daily Tar Heel, know whether you would like to see this column continued by submitting questions or telling a reporter.

Mads M. Christensen stands on his head to silence skeptics.

The enthusiastic motorist drives a 1923 model car. "I'll be dag-nabbed if I would want to go back to the old horse-and-buggy days," he smiles. He bought the car 23 years ago.

Christensen credits his health to eating only two meals a day, growing a beard and not smoking or drinking. He thinks men would be healthier if they wouldn't shave.

New York (UP)— Colu... has given Darius Mil... first symphony the permane... of a fine recording. It is of unquestionable authority ... cause it has the composer ... self conducting the Colu... Broadcasting Symphony ... chestra (four 12-in., alb...

Commissioned by the Chic... Symphony for its 50th anni... sary, Milhaud composed the work in the last months of 1939—difficult months emotionally for any Frenchman, who ... with a new war getting under way. Yet the travail is not reflected in the score, which ... predominantly pastoral in mood, as though through it the composer escaped actuality.

He is a bold artist, however, and he speaks out boldly in his own voice. That you can accept his first symphony with complete confidence. You can't ... it is a master work in the first or suggest it will become an everlasting part of the repertoire. It is improvisional and often tentative.

Fifth in the series of B... concertos recorded in the Tanglewood, Massachusetts music shed during the Berkshire music festivals is the Brandenburg No. 6, the longest of the concertoes and certainly one of the most appealing ... only for its concertino for two violas.

The Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevitzky rarely has sounded better on records and particularly noteworthy is the performance of the violist Joseph de Pasquale and Jean M. Cauhape.

Koussevitzky's views on how Bach should be performed are most definite, even to the point of being arbitrary. Whatever may be the opposing opinion, he gives the score the ring of its utter majesty. (RCA Victor; three 12-in., alb.).

Another series of notable recordings with a fresh addition is that of the Metropolitan Opera-Columbia collaboration. It is of Hans Sachs' baptism recitative followed by the noble quintet from the last act of Wagner's "The Mastersingers." (12-in. single.) Herbert Janssen, baritone, is the Hans; Polyna Stoska, soprano, the Eva. The other singers are Torsten Ralf and John Garris, tenors and Herta Glaz, contralto. The performance has genuineness—it is an entirely authentic excerpt

Baseballers With Backs To The Wall, Continue To Battle In NCAA Playoffs

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael III

Stress and Strain

THE STRESS AND STRAIN OF ANY KIND of college tournament soon begins to tell on everybody including the sports writers. The typewriters get sluggish along with the ball players and the fans, and tempers all the way around get shorter as the list of remaining teams does likewise.

The majority of the college baseballers at the NCAA Eastern diamond playoffs in Winston-Salem don't like the idea of tournaments at all. Of course, it's the only possible and practical way to find just who belongs at the top of the national diamond heap, but the ball players say that in theory, it just ain't the right way to play.

This here theory says that baseball is a percentage game; that there is no team that wins them all, but that the champions are the one that produce the most over the greatest period of time. A tournament may catch one team in a couple of hot ball games while the better team happens to be out for a sandwich on this particular occasion. Those players competing in any sort of organized league competition can regulate themselves for the best use of their energies over a period, but these college affairs jam a season's laurels into a few games. 'Tis an unsolvable problem, but a good alibi for any and all losers.

Self-Made Champions

THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS, PRE-TOURNEY FAVORITES to take the Eastern playoffs, were the first to take their leave of scenic Winston-Salem via the elimination route. The Illini, it seems, were like many who go places—self-made favorites. They came roaring into town, with plenty of steam up— roar and steam compliments of the Norfolk and Western—and plenty to say about the merits of their ball team.

It seems they professed to be the best of the Big Nine, a title to which they are both entitled and welcome. And in the language of the Big Nine, that means one is good and to be treated with respect due one of this position.

As it turned out, the rest of the simple fellows in the tournament, notably Carolina and Lafayette, either didn't read the newspapers or don't have enough manners to show respect where it is due. 'Twas a shame the roughing the invincible Mid-Westerners got during the first rounds of the playoffs.

The Whine of the Nine

THE BIG NINE FROM THE LOOKS OF THINGS feels the South is greatly responsible for the state of affairs of Big Time Athletics in the American sporting picture. They periodically accuse the Southern schools of subsidizing everyone from star halfback to the manager of the baseball team in an effort to produce successful or winning teams.

Meanwhile, the pure and above-board Big Nine merely takes the athletes that happen to be wandering by the doors in search of knowledge and builds them into the nation's leading football powers. All of which proves the true spirit of Frank Meriwell still blooms bright somewhere in the country.

The punchline to the story could be one of many. One could tell about the method used by one Big Nine college near a race track which employs football for the summer months, but pays them a retainer the rest of the year because of the labor shortage in the area. It prevents a shortage of good halfbacks in the Big Nine too. Or the legend about the fabulous bidding for Tommy Harmon's academic and athletic services that would have made it cheaper to retail him through the Merchandise mart in Chicago. Whatever the price, he proved to be worth it.

Which goes to show that though it was damn unChristian of him, there was one sport writer who got a kick out of seeing the Invincible Illini trod into the dust on two straight occasions. My! how the skeletons in the Big Nine closets must have turned over on those occasions.

Well Done, Well Run

IF THERE IS ANYTHING IN THIS NCAA baseball tournament that impressed you more than Yale's Frank Quinn does, it's the fine business-like way in which the whole shindig is being run. College athletics are a situation in which anything can, and usually does happen. The boys who run the show follow the old Boy Scout line of "Be Prepared" and it might be said that the proof of the pudding has been in the competing—a planned plan of action with ample provision for the elements, both physical and player, and above all, good officiating. A short, fitting citation might be—well done, well run. . . .

Softball, Tennis, Horseshoe Murals Start Next Week

The summer session intramural program opens next week in a big way with the softball, tennis, and horseshoe schedules getting underway in that order.

Yesterday was the last day for filing softball entries but there is still time for entering in the tennis and horseshoe competition. The deadline for getting in the racquet wielding is 6 o'clock Saturday. Entry sheets may be signed at both Scuttlebutts, the basket room at Woollen Gym or by calling the Intramural Office. The telephone is F-3321. All horseshoe slingers must register by next Tuesday's 6 o'clock closing time.

Late yesterday there were over 25 softball nines who had signed up for play. The Grads, last year's champs, have entered and will make a strong bid to retain the title. They will be coached by Scott Boyd, a member of last year's winning combine, who coached basketball and baseball at Louisburg College during the past school year.

In the tennis tournament singles and doubles play will be held in two divisions. The open division is for anyone registered in or employed by the University—amateur and pros, lettermen and non-lettermen. A 'closed loop will be limited to amateurs and non-lettermen. A letterman is anyone who earned a letter on any college tennis team. Someone eligible for the closed division may also enter the open group if he desires.

Drawings will be made after the Saturday deadline and play will start on Tuesday, June 22.

The horseshoe tourney will be on an individual entry basis with a single defeat elimination system. Anyone interested should file their name and get in on the big doings in the summer murals.

Ward Is Among Links Favorites

Chicago — Both the individual and team champions will be on hand for the NCAA golf championships in Palo Alto, Calif., June 28 to July 3, an NCAA spokesman said today.

Ted Payseur, golf committee secretary, said 22 schools, includ had entered full five-man teams, Payseur said Dave Barclay of Michigan, would be back to defend his individual title against 140 other shotmakers.

Fred Wampler of Purdue, the Big Nine champion, and Harvie Ward, North Carolina, who beat Frank Stranahan in the finals of the North-South amateur tourney, are expected to be strong threats to Barclay's title defense.

Tar Heels Beat Illini After Yale Loss Battle Lafayette, Then Maby Eli Again

By Billy Carmichael III

Winston-Salem, June 17—Carolina's Tar Heel baseballers, backed to the wall by a first round defeat to Yale, will be battling to remain in the NCAA Eastern playoffs here tonight when they tangle with also-once-beaten Lafayette for the honor of advancing to the finals and a second chance at the unbeaten Eli.

The Tar Heels kept their Eastern championship hopes alive last night when they defeated and eliminated from further competition the highly-touted Illinois entry, 7-3, behind the five-hit pitching of ace lefthander Vinnie DiLorenzo. The Illini had dropped the other half of Tuesday night's opening double-header to Lafayette, 9-6.

Tangle With Yale

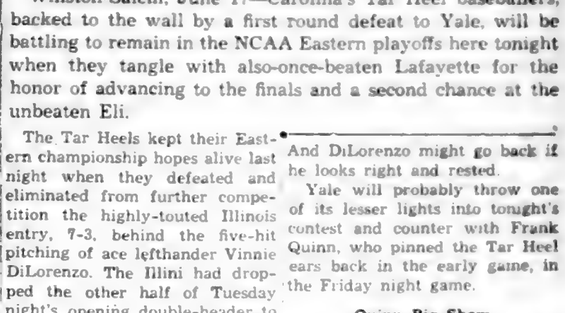
Thus, the winner of tonight's first game behind the Carolinians and the Pennsylvanians will tangle with Yale in the second contest of the evening. Should the Bulldogs come through to win their third straight, the competition will end then and there. But should their opponents win, the Eli will be forced to a seventh and deciding game on Friday night.

The Tar Heel hopes to take Lafayette and then turn back Yale twice in a row, lie in the depth of their pitching staff. They have used but two of their five potential starters—Frank Robinson and DiLorenzo—and still have seemingly ample throwing power to draw on. Dean Cassell will pitch the first game with Tommy Andrew getting the call in the second game, if the Tar Heels win the first. A double Carolina victory will leave a problem for Friday. Robinson is doubtful because of a sore arm. Ray Blair worked but two innings in the first game with Yale and is ready. And DiLorenzo might go back if he looks right and rested.

Yale will probably throw one of its lesser lights into tonight's contest and counter with Frank Quinn, who pinned the Tar Heel ears back in the early game, in the Friday night game.

Quinn Big Show

Quinn was mostly the whole show for the New Haven lads on Tuesday night. A fast ball pitcher who had faced the Tar Heels in the regular season, Quinn thrilled the opening night crowd by fanning the first six batters.



Jim Hamilton opened the Tar Heel third with a rousing triple to right center and scored when Eli catcher Felski dropped the ball while tagging the Carolina second baseman at the plate. That was the extent of the Blue and White batting strength with Quinn turning on the power. Meanwhile, the Yales were getting six runs and nine hits off starter Robinson and that was the ball game.

Different Story

Wednesday night's contest proved to be a different story. With DiLorenzo pitching creditably on the mound despite a blow of rather damp and chilly weather, the Tar Heel bats began hitting and thumped out seven runs and ten hits to allow their lefthander to coast to an easy win.

Wednesday night, and last night a magician, billed as Colin the Great ran through his bag of tricks for the boys.

Tonight the boys will be guests of the Carolina Folk Festival in Kenan Stadium, and will round out their day by voting for 'state" office candidates, nominated at the "Federalist" and "Nationalist" Party conventions held last night.

Dance Cancelled

The Graham Memorial dance in honor of new summer school students has been cancelled because of the conflict with the Folklore festival balls scheduled for tonight and tomorrow night at Woollen Gym.

Baptist Church Supper

All Baptists students are invited to attend a Baptist Church supper Sunday night at 6 o'clock at the Church. The program will be under the direction of Norman Hutchins and will feature a "Sing-Spirational" after the supper.

–Tar Heels–

After spotting Illinois two runs in the first, the Carolina nine came back with a tally in the second and went ahead in the third on doubles by Black and Hayworth, an infield hit by Kelly and a fly to the outfield.

The Tar Heels put the game out of reach of the enemy in the sixth, scoring four more runs on a walk, a hit batter, and four straight singles by Black, Hayworth, Evans and Kelly.

Yale won the second game of the night, trouncing Lafayette: 11-3, with a 15-hit barrage.

See Your Dentist Teeth or No Teeth

Boston —(UP)— Even if you're toothless, you should see your dentist at least twice a year.

That's the belief of President James H. Maycock of the Massachusetts Dental Society.

"Because the mouth is the source of nourishment through which all food must pass before it is digested, we must be absolutely certain that this part of our anatomy is healthy," he said.

He said twice-a-year examinations would lead to early discovery of any infections or other forms of unhealthy mouth conditions.

Student Handbook Nears Completion

A pocket size handbook containing 172 pages chock full of information about Carolina activities and traditions will be mailed by the YMCA in mid-August to all entering freshmen, according to Charlie Gibson, editor.

Containing enlarged sections on orientation and student activities, the book appears this year in a new pocket size, with a blue and white cover. Other additions include a campus map and a datebook.

Prizefight and Quiz Show To be Featured By Vets Wednesday

The University Veteran's Association Board of Governors today announced plans for a July 4 program, co-sponsored with the Chapel Hill American Legion and a new type of their regular open house, with the atmosphere of a night club, a world heavyweight championship fight, and a Dr. I. Q. quiz show.

July 4 Program

The July 4 program will be held on the lawn under Davie Popular, and will feature a concert by the University Band. A prayer will be given by the Reverend Joyce of the Carrboro Methodist Church, and a short talk will be given by Chancellor House.

The program, starting at 3:30 will be presided over by Hugh Wells, president of the UVA. R. L. McMillan, ex-state commander of the American Legion will be the principal speaker.

The open house, which will begin Wednesday night, June 24, will be a regular feature of the UVA. The program will start as a regular night at the club, with dancing of course, but will be interrupted at some point for the quiz show. Contestants will be picked at random from the audience and will receive appropriate gifts for answering questions correctly. At the end of the first round there will be a jackpot question. If the jackpot question is not answered then the jackpot will be carried over until the next week.

Louis-Walcott Fight

Since Wednesday night is the night for the Louis vs. Walcott championship fight, arrangements have been made to broadcast the bout.

Two new men, Gene Braswell and Bud Hampton, have been named to the Borad of Governors.

Summer Council May Be Appointed

Discussion of what action will be taken toward appointment of a temporary student council to serve during the summer months will be the main business at a meeting of the Coalition Advisory Cabinet in the Grail room at 3 p.m. Wednesday, President of the Student Body Jess Dedmond stated today.

In commenting on the possibility of such action, Dedmond said, "We are faced with an unusual situation, in that not one member of the elected Student Council is in school for the summer. And while the constitution makes no provision for such appointments by legislative enactment or past precedent, the President of the Student Body fills vacancies which normally occur during the regular school session.

"And in view of the fact that the Men's Council is now handling a case which may possibly be appealed," the president continued, "it seems desirable that some action be taken."

Members of the cabinet who are in school for the summer term are Scotty Venable, Thurman Williams, Bill Miller, Ed Davenport, Bob Haire, John Rosser, and Ed Tenney.

English Group Holds Meeting

There will be a meeting of the English Institute on Monday, June 28 ,at 8 o'clock in Roland Parker lounges of Graham Memorial. Speaker for the occasion will be Kai Jurgensen, acting head of the Dramatic Arts department during the summer.

All English teachers and friends are invited to attend the meeting. There will also be a short business meeting, after which refreshments will be served.

Bankers to Hold Annual Meeting At University

A number of prominent authorities on banking from this and other states have accepted invitations to lecture and lead discussions at the 12th annual Carolina Bankers Conference to be held at the University of North Carolina July 11-16 under the sponsorship of the North and South Carolina Bankers Associations, the North and South Carolina Banking Departments, and the University.

For the first time since the Conference was inaugurated, a full five-day study of trust operations, entitled the Technical Trust School, will also be held to run concurrently with the regular sessions.

Strictly an educational program, the Conference will have this year a faculty of nine lecturers and instructors who are members of the faculty of the Graduate School of Banking of Rutgers University.

These Rutgers faculty lecturers are M. J. Brines, special lecturer, Fordham University School of Business; Carlisle R. Davis, American Institute of Banking and author of Institute's text, "Credit Administration"; T. Allen Glenn, Jr., former member of Reconstruction Finance Corporation and now president of the Peoples National Bank of Norristown, Pa.; Louis S. Headley, former member of the faculty of St. Paul College of Law, now president and director of the First Trust Company of St. Paul, Minn.

William H. Neal, Winston-Salem, past president of the North Carolina Bankers Association and chairman of the Carolinas Bankers Conference for 10 years; Gilbert T. Stephenson,

French Pictures Now on Exhibit

Person Art Gallery is now featuring 41 watercolors painted by French children during the last 11 years. These paintings depict Paris street scenes and country landscapes, workers of farms and cities, churches, fairs, sports, the liberation—in short, the life of France as seen by her school children from five to sixteen years of age.

The exhibition was selected by the Museum of Modern Art from the collection of the French color manufacturing firm of J. M. Paillard in Paris. The firm has held annual competitions since 1935 to encourage children to paint their ideas and impressions of the world about them. A different theme for paintings is given each year and a jury of distinguished artists and art critics selects the best painting for exhibition in Paris. Later the paintings are displayed in museums and schools throughout France as well as other countries.

The exhibition of paintings by French children will remain on view at Person Hall until July 12, after which it will continue its tour of the country under the auspices of the Museum of Modern Art.

CPU Hails Congress As 'Best' Group Yet

Facts of the 80th Congress meeting were given Sunday night at the C. P. U. by Bill Patterson who concluded that this was one of the best Congress meetings thus far. Following these points was a general discussion which centered around the congressional accomplishments and failures, although the members often digressed leading to the Russian and Palestine problems.

NOT TO BE LEFT OUT OF THE CAROLINA Folk Festival in Chapel Hill this week-end was a lively hometown square dance team composed of townspeople and university students. Calling themselves the Greenwood Team of Chapel Hill, the 16 high steppers led off the performances at the festival Friday night with a mountain square dance. Kneeling in front of the group are Bascom Lunsford, director of the festival (left), and George Pegram of Denton (right), folk singing and guitar playing favorite of the festival. Left to right the participants in the Greenwood team are: Linda Wilson, Arnold Wilson (caller), Pat Gravatt, Earl Page, Katherine Hovis, Hibbard Thatcher, Janet Green, Jess Wilson, Mary Ann Rhodes, Gene Hall, Sue Carter, Rex Reckindorf, Ginger Callahan, Bob Callahan, Stella Bruton and Nathan Booe. The group was formed several weeks ago under the direction of Arnold Wilson and Hibbard Thatcher, both university students and square dance hobbyists.

Stirling, Drew Represent CCUN At National Meet

Roberta W. Stirling and George Drew of the University are representing the Carolina chapter Collegiate Council for the United Nations and the state headquarters of the CCUN at the third annual national institute of the CCUN now in progress in New York.

Miss Stirling, who has been selected as the North Carolina nominee for state directorship of the CCUN 1948-49, heads a five man delegation composed of representatives from the CCUN districts of the North Carolina state organization. The members will attend United Nations meetings at Lake Success, study the Charter under authorities invited to lecture to the institute and formulate plans and policies for the national, regional and state headquarters for the coming year.

The North Carolina delegation will be joined by the former state director Lincoln S. H. Kan, who is now in charge of the summer office of the CCUN. "No specific program has been planned for the summer school until we can have a representative group decision," announced Kan. He urged all former members of the CCUN from other campuses and those who are interested in United Nations study or work to contact him in the CCUN office in Graham Memorial before 3 p.m. Wednesday.

BSU Chooses New Summer Officers

At a supper meeting Sunday night, the Baptist Student Union chose the following officers to fill the temporary vacancies for the summer term.

The new officials are Bill Kochnline, President; Dot Nelson, Music Director; Don Shropshire, Secretary; and Frances Green, Social Chairman.

The Union also voted to continue their Sunday night supper meetings throughout the summer at 6 o'clock. The meals will be followed by a vesper service for all interested students. A social hour will follow the service.

A hayride to Hogan's Lake has been scheduled for next Friday afternoon at 3:30. All students are to meet in front of the Baptist Church at that time. A weiner roast will follow at the lake. In case of inclement weather, the ride will be held the following Friday.

Vet's Club Closes

The University Veteran's Association announces that the clubhouse will be closed this Thursday night for a meeting of the Secretaries of the Southeastern Chambers of Commerce.

First Folklore Festival Is Called "Howling Success" By Lunsford

4,000 Attend Shows; Dancers, Fiddlers, Singers Featured

Crowds of more than 4,000 attended the first Carolina Folk Festival, held in Kenan Stadium last Friday and Saturday, under the sponsorship of the University Folklore Council. Bascom Lamar Lunsford, director of the program, proclaimed the festival a "howling success."

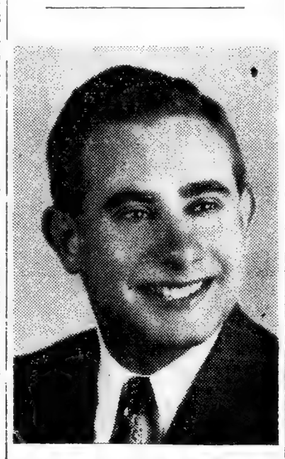
Chancellor R. B. House and Dr. I. G. Greer, executive vice-president of the North Carolina Business Foundation were featured Saturday afternoon with others in a nationwide broadcast from the stadium that was carried by the Mutual Broadcasting company over 400 stations.

Texan's Attend

A group of 45 Texans, dressed in 10-gallon hats and high heeled boots came all the way from Austin to participate in the program, at their own expense. Under the direction of Mrs. Lillie Lee Baker, the Texans gave North Carolinians a taste of Texas square dancing, fiddling and calling.

George Pegram, a Denton "banjo pickin', buck dancing, singing" mountaineer was the hit of the show with his first rendition of that good ole "Mountain Dew." Because of his instant popularity, Pegram was forced by the insistence of the crowd to give repeat performances during the festival.

House Featured



Chancellor House, playing on his popular harmonica, played "Old Log Cabin in the Lane," followed by Dr. Greer who sang "Black Jack Dave in Sourwood Mountain." Dr. Greer was accompanied by his wife on the dulcimer, an old three-stringed instrument similar to a double violin.

Dialectic Senate To Hold Forum On Harry Truman

Harry Truman's candidacy to be the next president of the United States will be the topic for discussion when the Dialectic Senate holds its first meeting of the summer tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West.

Gran Childress, summertime speaker of the Senate, has invited all interested students to take part in the open forum which is expected either to support or disrepute the President's recent uncomplimentary statements about Congress.

A special invitation has been issued to all those who are interested in joining the Di at this time, either for the summer alone or permanently. Members of the Philanthropic Assembly will also be welcome since their forensic group is to be inactive until fall.

PETE GERNS

Gerns Appointed Business Manager

Pete Gerns, senior from Canton, Ohio, has been appointed to the position of business manager of the 1948-49 University Directory. Gerns was one of several applicants for the position and was picked by the publications committee of the YMCA, which annually publishes the Directory, on basis of his qualifications and experience with publications. He is secretary of the Publications Board, business manager of Tarnation, and columnist of the Daily Tar Heel, and has served as assistant editor for the 1946-47 Yackety Yack.

Vesper Services Wednesday Night

Tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock the first in a series of vesper services sponsored by the Coalition Cabinet will be held in the section of the arboretum next to the greenhouse. The speaker for the evening will be Dr. Bernhard Andrson, new member of the Department of Religion faculty. His subject will be "This Time of Crisis."

The scripture reading will be given by Earl Page, a student here at the University.

This is the first in a series of vespers sponsored by the cabinet and the continuance depends on the attendance by the students.

Sound and Fury Groups Named For 'Mardi Gras'

Committees for the new Sound and Fury summer production, "Mardi Gras," have been named by Jerry Weiss, S and F president.

Publicity is headed by Doris Weaver and Vel Taylor, co-chairmen, with Mary Lou Williams, Jane Hunter, Helen Beam, Dan and Emily Ogburn as staff members.

Membership committee consists of Ann Humphrey and Emily Ogburn, co-chairmen, Dot Charles, Alice Ferebee, Betty McDonald, Paul Kaziah, and Pat Ellis.

Stan Fox, business manager, and Al Wehrhahn, assistant-manager for the show, are aided by Fred Swartzberg, Violet LaRue, Dot Charles, Rita Loeb, Helen Beam, and Ann Tucker.

Lighting is under the direction of Colbert Leonard, designer, Walt Johnson, master electrician, Ig Henifred, Roy Wilson, and Tyson Taylor.

Pete Strader, also co-author and director of "Mardi Gras," will design scenery assisted by Roy Wilson, Tyson Taylor, Al Wehrhahn, Bob Plumb, Mary Lou Williams, Rita Loeb, Ann Humphrey, and Pat Ellis as crew members.

Student Leaders Named NSA Congress Delegates

C. of C. Meeting In Session Here; 185 Men Attend

More than 185 delegates from 10 states will begin their second day of classes today in the fifth annual Southeastern Institute for Chamber of Commerce executives, now in session on the University campus.

The purpose of the meeting, according to L. P. Dickie, manager of the institute, is "to acquaint the delegates with the newest material on organization, promotion and management of chamber of commerce activities."

The courses offered the "students" are divided into three year sessions. Credits at these sessions are honored at similar institutes throughout the nation. Delegates who pass the three years work are required to take an examination at the end of each institute and are awarded a diploma upon completion. Many of the men attending this session are graduates and have come back to get a refresher course.

Chancellor R. B. House greeted the delegates Sunday night with several selections on his harmonica. Professor Rex S. Winslow of the University Extension Division also welcomed the visitors. Preston E. Foster, president of the Southeastern Institute, spoke on "Why We Are Here."

J. Everett Rogers, president of the Institute Student Body said that adult education was an important part in the chamber of commerce program. He estimated that there will be over 275 participants in this year's program.

A daily bulletin recording the activities of the group will be mimeographed for the delegates by Walker Owens. Entertainment in the evenings have been planned for every night except Friday, the night before examinations.

May Call Meeting Of Legislature

A session of the Student Legislature may be called within ten days or two weeks, George Rodman, parliamentarian, announced yesterday.

Rodman, who is ranking officer of the student legislature during the summer term in the absense of the speaker and speaker pro-tem, request that all members and appointed proxies submit their summer school addresses to him in care of the student government office.

Lowenstein, Haire, Dedmond, Godwin Davenport Selected

Five Carolina student government leaders have been appointed as official UNC delegates to the annual National Students' Association Congress, to be held in Madison, Wisconsin the week of August 23. Some six hundred students from schools and colleges throughout the United States will attend the session.

In addition to Al Lowenstein, appointed by the student legislature last quarter, student body president Jess Dedmond has appointed Jim Godwin, vice-president of the student body, Ed Davenport, attorney-general, Bob Haire, former chairman of the Campus party and himself as the delegates. The students will attend the Congress at their own expense.

Discussion Panels

During the meeting, discussion panels will be conducted on student cultureal and economic welfare, student government activities, student government functions and structure and international affairs.

The NSA constitution was approved by the group at its national meeting last summer, which was attended by Bill Miller, Johnny Clampitt and Herman Baker from Carolina. The local legislature ratified the constitution on May 27.

During the meeting last year, Clampitt was elected as regional treasurer of the group and Baker, now out of school, was elected regional chairman. Carolina is recognized as a regional leader in NSA activity.

Comedy Try-outs Slated for Today

Try outs for "Close Quarters," a one act comedy by Catherine McDonald, are scheduled for 4:00 p. m. this afternoon at the Playmaker Theatre. The play will be presented on July 2 as a part of the benefit program for the World Student Service Fund.

"Close Quarters," to be directed by Walter Merserve, is the story of life in a trailer on the campus of a university. There are three parts for men and three for women.

It is urged that all students and non students interested please be on hand for the try outs.

Some Swim . . . . . . Some Sun

Campus Mermaids And Males Parade At Pool

By Jim Dickinson

Scores of summer students with an eye to beat the heat are daily turning their attentions toward Kessing outdoor pool and the parade of the Carolina mermaids.

Lounging there on hot sultry afternoons (and any other time) can be seen the young and the old, the fat and lean, the shaply, the non-figured and all other types of woman and manhood.

They're there for various reasons. Some like an occasional retreat from classroom monotony while others feel the need of sunshine and vitamins not contained in the Chapel Hill and campus eating diet.

Because of pool regulations the men must use the gym-furnished bathing trunks, a green-colored and scanty bit of cloth which even fits on rare occasions.

The pin-ups, on the other hand, are permitted to bring their own in a gesture which indicates sound judgment and foresight on the part of whatever officials may be involved. These last range anywhere from calico to gingham and lastex. Some are translucent and others tend a little toward the transparent.

Shapely mermaid Dusty Moore, journalism major from Gastonia, says some of the gals' suits "fit the figure" and philosophizes further that others are especially designed to "squeeze the figure."

Types of suits, says Dusty, are almost as numerous as Republican candidates for the White House seat. These range from one-piecers to two-piecers and include the backless and strapless models. The stomachless and split-up-the-sides versions are the ones which currently keep the dry goods retailers smiling and the more conventional groups gossiping, she says.

Seen along the tile banks of Kessing are two typical groups known as the male "overseers" and female "tippers." The tipper is the lovely who slips into her suit and dashes toward the 5-foot marker as if to plunge in for a dip.

She tips her thermometer-toe into a quarter inch of water and lets out a sizeable "Ouch!" Then she saunters over and lies down for an afternoon of sun basking, where she intended to go from the start. She and on-looking men agree she is more effective at that point, anyway.

The overseer has never seen the farm or a tobacco crop but is perfectly at home beside the pool. He believes the age of chivalry is still at hand and stands by to give the ladies a pull when they decide to emerge from the brink. The birds-eye view is his reward for patient waiting.

Lady splashers have the mermen typed as lookers and dreamers and seers. A rare type is known as the "be-seener," they say.

In answer to a question about gym swim suits, Dusty says they're "straight and terrible and not fit for a girl to be seen in—to the best advantage."

As Dusty sums it up, "Some wear suits to go swimming but others swim to wear the suits."

Dusty has a bit of advice for those who have not yet attended the pool, "Go there for this reason or that, but if you want to swim go someplace else—it's too crowded."

Here For The Taking

Carolina is a hot-bed of communistic propaganda. It's the biggest country club this side of the Mason-Dixon line. "I won't ever send my son to this school, it's dangerous to moral standards and the great American Democracy." So said one of the summer school visitors.

That's okay lady. We hope you're contented in your generalities and accusations. We feel only sympathy toward you for missing the basic fundamentals that are present here for your taking. These basic principles are for the plucking anytime you want to listen to the professors or lecturers. They are in the books you have been assigned and they are being "lived" every day under the name of the Carolina Code.

Some of us who have been here call the philosophy we have developed here the "long view" or the "lets-get-along" idea. We know we have a great University on the hill. Graduates for many years past have contributed their strength to the world and to their state. We have developed here understanding of people and their religions and creeds and their ways of life. We have learned how to get along by letting our previous prejudices be washed under by fresh ideas and thereby developing new outlooks upon the human race and its objectives. Some have not been so fortunate, because they have remained deaf, dumb and blind through their years at Carolina. Others like Herschel Johnson, and Dr. Frank have taken what the University has offered and now are contributing to a world in which all of us will live and work.

Here's luck to you visitors. Come back and stay with us during the regular sessions. The good of our state, our University and our world is in our thoughts and ideas. This is our chance to learn. It's here for the taking. Let's not miss it.—L.K.

Don't You Trust Them, Dean?

During the summer months many members of fraternities did not return to school, leaving vacant rooms in some fraternity houses. On the other hand many non-fraternity men were looking for rooms. In the face of this situation five fraternities admitted one to three non-fraternity men, personal friends of their members, to occupy space in their houses—and because they did so no member of these five fraternities may take a coed date into his house. These fraternities are excluded from the House Privileges Board visiting agreement which goes into effect this week.

It is evident that as long as both men and women students attend this University the two are going to get together for dates. The members of the five black-listed fraternities are going to continue to date coeds in spite of the fact that they can no longer take dates to their houses to dance or to converse with friends in a congenial atmosphere or to get a snack from the kitchen. They must take their dates elsewhere, but where? The Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial and the Veterans Club are ideal places, but if fraternity men are forced to use them entirely, they will crowd out non-fraternity men who like to take their dates to these places. There are two movies, always crowded.

Where else? If you have a car you can drive your date out to a drive-in and drink beer. If not, you can get beer in town. If you have a car you can drive out and park and neck. If you don't have a car, the arboretum or the stadium will do. Can it be inferred that Dean Weaver and Dean of Women Carmichael consider this preferable to having a coed enter a fraternity house in which one or two "outsiders" are living?

On behalf of their members, the four excluded fraternities do not like this situation. If no provision is made for changing it, they will have to kick the visitors out of their houses. On behalf of the visitors they do not like this inhospitable solution either. A change can be made only after consideration by the faculty Advisory Board on fraternities—and Dean Weaver appears to be in no hurry to call a meeting of that body.

In explaining his stand on the visiting agreement to the Interfraternity Council, Dean Weaver said in effect:

"Because your fraternities are closely knit organizations and operate on a principle of brotherhood, we can trust you to abide by the visiting agreement. The outsiders in your houses are a different matter."

No provision was made for allowing the less-than-a-dozen resident "outsiders" to sign a pledge to uphold the visiting agreement.

What's the matter, Dean, don't you trust anybody but fraternity men?

George Is A Character

By Ed Joyner

George is a Character. George is a Character with a capital C. George is a banjo player, too—one of the best. He is also a very fine person. But first, last and always George is a Character.

George's real name is George. He also has a last name—Pegram—but to the thousands of people in Kenan stadium who watched and listened as he played and sang the old ballads during the Carolina Folklore Festival Friday and Saturday George was just "George."

From the time he unwound his lanky six feet plus, topped by a ten-gallon Texas Stetson and garbed in a black cowboy shirt with white piping, from the time he lovingly clutched his five-stringed banjo and stepped up to the stage microphone, from the time he threw back his head and roared out "That Good Old Mountain Dew," with his right foot patting time for his music—from that time on George belonged to the crowd.

George was good. George knew George was good and the crowd knew George was good and each knew the other knew that George was good, so George and the crowd got together and had themselves a fine time.

George stole the show.

Lamar Lunsford, who was directing the festival, got a little bit irked and the other people who were trying to perform didn't like it too well, but the crowd loved it. They wanted George—and George gave them George.

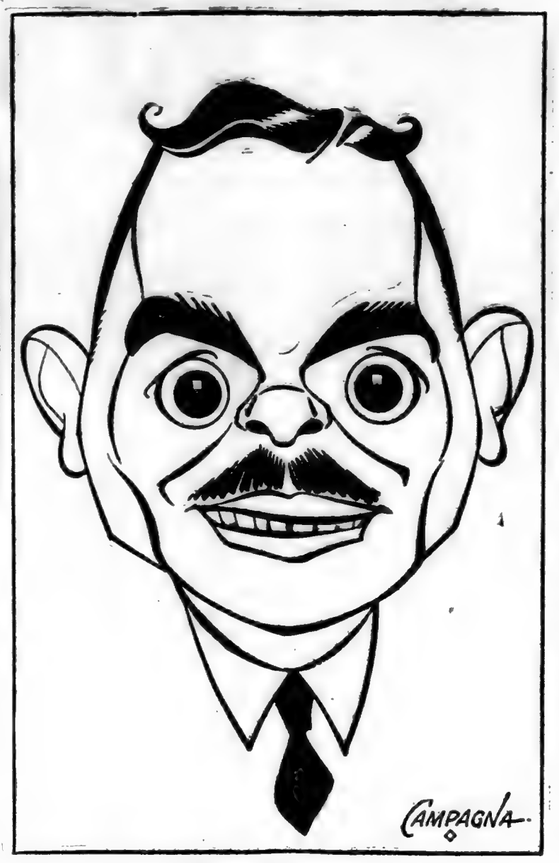
It didn't matter what group was dancing or what band was playing, George was right up there in front. He sat in with almost every band that played and in between times he soloed. The few times he was off stage the crowd roared to have him back—and George was just as anxious to get back on stage as the crowd was to have him there.

"I want to do a buck 'n wing for them," George said. "I can dance too."

Like Sports Editor Billy the Third said, George has color. Billy the Third is something of a character himself, and he hasn't any use for athletic teams or people who don't have "color."

By Saturday afternoon half the people on campus knew George. Everywhere he went they'd yell, "Hi George". And George would yell back and wave his big hat. And everywhere George went he took his banjo case with his precious five stringed banjo.

That five stringed banjo was George's pride and joy. "Paid $380 for it in Greensboro," George said. "Yep, $380. In Greensboro. Tell you what. I'll give anybody a hunerd dollars if they can find another one like it anywhere in this part of the country. Yep, anybody. A hunerd dollars."



Friday night a group of students kidnapped George and took him to the Buccaneer. Saturday he went to the ATO house for supper. After supper he sat on the front porch with his banjo and sang "Mountain Dew" and "Nobody's Business." He stopped traffic. People came out of all the houses in earshot to see what was going on. People walking by stopped on the sidewalk. People in cars pulled over to the curb to listen. And winking at the people near him with his one good eye, George gave them their money's worth.

"I was good this afternoon, wasn't I," George said. "They liked me out there, didn't they. Did you hear me on the radio? I guess they heard me all over the country this afternoon, didn't they. I shore wish I could hear myself on the radio."

"You come up and hear me me at the Asheville festival in August," George kept telling everyone he talked to. "I'm really going to be good up there. They already told me I'm goin' ter be the star of the show."

He probably will be, too.

Is He the One?

G.O.P. Convention

May Parallel 1920

By Pete Gerns

REPUBLICAN LEADERS WILL CHOOSE their presidential candidate this week at Philadelphia, at a convention which may run parallel to the party convention held in 1920. Then, as now, two major candidates were favored. Leonard Wood and Frank Parker stood perhaps more firmly entrenched with their respective following than Taft and Dewey. A deadlock was created after a close fight in which neither side would waver, and Harding, of Ohio, who had not even been conceded an outside chance, rode to victory on the 10th ballot. Perhaps someone will pull another Daugherty."

Numerous rumors regarding the selection have been circulated, largely for psychological reasons. Heading the list, and perhaps with an element of truth in it, is the assertion that Stassen will back Taft for Taft's support in the vice-presidential race. Dewey and Warren have been linked by the "guessing gang" for similar motives; in addition, New York's governor has been said to have certain obligations to Pennsylvania's Ed Martin. Regardless of who will win, however, the Republicans will not be likely to impose another darkhorse of Harding's caliber on the nation. Mouthings like: "Not nostrums, but normalcy, not revolution, but restoration, not surgery, but surrender, not heroics, but healing" do not appeal to the majority of voters of this day and age.

The Republicans are most likely to succeed in electing their candidates next November. The public wants a change as it did 28 years ago. This brings us to another consideration. The Democrats will hold their convention in Philadelphia in July. Truman should get the nod. Suppose, however, that Eisenhower should reconsider his stand on the issue of nomination for the presidency and should be nominated, could he be elected? We think not.

The people have just been given a Selective Service act which will be in full force ninety days after the affixture of the presidential signature. The advocates of this measure wanted it for reasons of safety, in this writer's opinion for passive rather than active security, however. The voter, therefore, will be likely to feel that election of a former general to the nation's highest office coupled with the re-activation of the draft would over-balance the trend in our country's government.

* * * *

A VERY UNNECESSARY STEP was taken the other day by Sim DeLapp, state Republican party boss from Lexington. The issue: ratification of Judge Warlick's appointment to the Eastern Carolina district court. Boss DeLapp ran up to Washington to speak in favor of blocking the appointment. The reason: the judgeship is a life-time proposition and was to be held open until the Republicans took office.

This sort of horseplay is accepted as sound political principle (the reader may not believe that there are principles in politics) in an election year. It can perhaps be condoned for positions to be filled on the ICC, FTC, etc. It seems to us, however, that politics should be kept out of the judiciary. Judge Warlick has an excellent record. We need more of his kind in government.

ON THE LOCAL SCENE: It is regrettable that girls attending summer school have to put up with Aycock and Graham dorms. Girl students are kept on duty during certain hours of the day to help relay messages from callers due to the lack of an adequate buzzer system. Students who live on the Eastern half of the first floor have to pass the lounge en route to the washroom. It seems to us that this state of affairs could have been prevented. The new dormitories were ready for occupancy at the beginning of the term and it stands to reason that one of them could have been turned over to the girls. We recommend that one or more of the new dorms be used for this purpose next summer.

And as we are talking about summer school, we go on record of reprimanding the Coed senate for cutting week-end hours back to midnight. Surely, impairment of health cannot be claimed to be adequate reason for such action.

Canton, N. C. —(UP)— The settlers of this mountain community of 5,000 named their home in honor of the Ohio city which built their bridge.

Canton was incorporated in 1891 as Pigeon River, after the roaring highland stream which drove their power mill. Two years later, however, a citizen noticed the name of Canton, O., engraved on the bridge which spanned Pigeon River.

Canton sounded like a good name, and it stuck.

Jersey Joe For President

By Sergei Burgess and Charles Odell

Be sure to check your radios before you turn them on and try to tune in on either the Republican convention or the Louis-Walcott fight Wednesday night. Unless you're careful, you're liable to latch onto something like this:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Now we present the feature bout of the evening, the battle for the heavyweight champeenship of the world, between . . . Senator Vandenberg, and his notable, opponent, Thomas E. . . . Walcott, the challenger. And in this corner is the world's heavyweight champeen, weighing 204 pounds and wearing purple tights, . . . Harold Stassen. Now coming up onto the speakers' rostrum is Senator Taft . . . in white tights and weighing 194 pounds. And now, here's the bell. Louis comes out, looking for Walcott. Walcott looks nervous, he's being stalked; Louis is looking for a quick knockout. The champ draws back his fist and lets go with a smashing right to . . . Stassen's final tabulation. Now we can see the delegates from Nova Scotia forming a ring . . . which a quick left jab by Walcott just knocked Louis out of. And there goes the bell, ending . . . Dewey's chances for the nomination. The delegates are in an uproar; there'll be a second ballot to determine just who will . . . be the next heavyweight champ of the world. Now out of their corners come Taft and Vandenberg. They're in a crucial spot because it's their first chance to . . . land a smash to Louis' jaw . . . Taft walks to the rostrum where . . . a left to the chin floors him! The ref is counting one, two, three, four, five, six, seven . . . hundred votes for Harold Ickes as a dark horse! This is startling. Nobody but . . . Gillette's Calvacade of Sports . . . would have polled such a surprising return from the New York delegates. There's a general uproar among the delegates from the Southern states—both of 'em—the delegates from North Carolina, a young woman, insists upon being allowed to sing "Love for Sale" . . . to Walcott, who is stepping back from a battering attack on . . . the final returns of the second ballot. The dark horse . . . Walcott reels as the bell ends round four.

"Now they're coming out of their corners, with . . . Stassen looking haggard, smoking nervously, and running his hands through his hair. Taft also looks nervous as he . . . looks for an opening. Now he finds one and lets go with a long right that catches . . . Dewey without a single delegate. Some of the delegates—I think for Taft—are staging a rally now and are marching around the Hall . . . throwing punches at one another. It's a real slugfest. Louis steps back as Jersey Joe hooks a left to . . . Governor Warren's jaw, which is set sternly. Warren walks to the speakers' platform and is going to say something. Listen. 'During the past sixteen years the administration has given the country nothing but stumbling bureaucracy, radical policies, and . . . seventeen silver dollars to the lady in the balcony. Dr I. Q. is brought to you by the . . . judges who have just handed in their decisions. The referee, Mr. Goldstein, gives eight rounds to . . . Douglas MacArthur . . . in the stomach, which was the best blow of the fight! . . . Dewey is smiling happily as he considers the long fight which lasted only . . . eight rounds for Walcott. . . . who will be the Republican Candidate for President. And the vice-presidential race is practically in the bag for . . . Arnold Wilson, manager of the Rendezvous Room, who says that . . . Convention Hall in Philadelphia . . . is the place to bring your dates for plenty of . . . the Sharpest Edges ever honed!"

There. You see.

We Love Southern Comfort

By Bill Buchan

Of all the various characters who eventually wind up on the Daily Tar Heel staff, one—perhaps the favorite—has never gotten any publicity, and she does as much, if not more, work towards the publication of the paper as any person on the staff.

This staff member is a broken-down, but good rumming station wagon named "Southern Comfort". People on the campus who do not know her personally, are apt to ridicule her and make corny jokes because of her present condition, but you'll never find a DTH man or woman degrading her in any way.

If you haven't seen her, she is a Ford—model number unknown. Her grill is broken and the hood bends in the middle when you lift it up to take a gander at her insides. Right now the horn is sorta out of fix and blows every time anyone steps on the brakes. We contend, however, that that is merely Southern Comfort's way of making conversation. Some of the wood around her rear end has rotted away and she has no right front door. The left front door won't open, either, and her roof leaks a little here and there. But aside from that, she's a pretty good looking vehicle.

At one time, not so long ago, she had no brakes, no North Carolina license plates and the accelerator had to be pushed by one man sitting on the floor and working with it. But just right last week, she sailed through the state inspection lane without hesitating. Some people were surprised, but Southern Comfort took the whole affair in her stride.

Her only fault is her temper. Thursday, for instance, she staged a fit beside Manly Dorm. Out of a clear blue sky, she popped her fan belt, got her horn stuck and began pouring smoke from under the hood. What she got mad about, we haven't figured out yet, but a quick trip to a local garage and she was in good shape for delivering copy to the print shop and for taking circulation manager Owen Lewis on his regular delivery route Friday morning.

We suspect that Southern Comfort is slightly inclined to be jealous of the newer model convertibles and Cadillacs running around campus. The other morning, while Lewis was delivering papers in Victory Village, Southern Comfort took advantage of him and when he was checking his route, she bumped whambang into a shiny car parked along the street. Southern Comfort, of course, was unharmed except for some added black paint. The other car, however, required $50 worth of repair work.

The maddest she has ever been, though, was one day recently when some joker saw her parked on Franklin street and slipped a very sarcastic note under the steering wheel. The poor wagon was so angry and hurt that she absolutely refused to start for five minutes.

So when you see her parked, or when she passes you on the street, please speak to her in a cordial voice. If you don't, she might fling another fit and we'd never the the papers off the press.

But You're Cuter Neuter

(We usually leave this sort of thing for Tarnation, but just to show you what you are missing because we publish a decent newspaper we are reprinting this column from the "Record" of Antioch College, Ohio.)

By Shelly Platt

Sex is a phenomena that occurs whenever men and women of either gender mingle. This may sound hard to believe, but we've got to face facts sometime. The main trouble with sex is that it is so permanent. There's no use struggling, it's got you and you might just as well get used to it.

Standards are rules set up to govern our standards—they are NOT rules. This is an important point to remember since it is the foundation of practically our entire social system (the region between the digestive and circulatory ones). They were first discovered in prehistoric Bessarabia and gave rise to fertility dances which later developed into Council meetings.

The main duty performed by standards is to keep people informed as to just what they are doing in case they are interested. They very rarely are, hence Student Counseling.

I have been busy on proposals that will settle the whole issue.

1. The sponsorship of a "Read a Good Book a Nite" club.
2. Hot laxatives nightly for anyone under twenty-six.
3. Request all women to leave.
4. Request all men to leave.
5. Request everyone to leave.
6. Presentation of gold buttons stamped in blue with "I Abstained" to lucky winners.

There they are—every one a sure-fire gem in itself. As a matter of fact, what I'd really like to see is mass sterilization of all incoming freshmen. There's an idea with some zip to it. We'll push it with slogans like " You're cuter neuter," "You're a solid sender without a gender," and a host of others too numerous to mention mainly because I haven't thought of them yet.

Now is the time to act—we haven't got all year you know. Look at the Polynesians.

Baseballers Take Third In Playoffs; Robinson, Kelly, DiLorenzo Sign

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael III

After All Is Said and Done

THE BASEBALL SEASON IS OFFICIALLY over, the bats and balls are put away, the star seniors have signed professionally, the playoff pressure has passed and there is nothing left, but to look back over a slightly—stooped shoulder and get a seasonal view of the entire proceedings.

The Tar Heels didn't win the Eastern playoffs at Winston-Salem as the headlines have previously announced. They were not especially at their best in the tourney games, but they did, on the other hand, face a tough lot of competition. Illinois, the pre-game favorite was the first to go, which gives one an idea of just what gave up in the Twin City during the time before the smoke had cleared.

Yale, as the records show, came out with their names on the free ticket to Kalamazoo and the national finals, and they go with everyones' blessings. They won it by a fairly large margin with no single play or decision being blameable for the fact that some other team didn't make the championship grade. Yale did have one advantage over the other three teams—the Eli didn't have to play any district eliminations to get into the Eastern finals, and Carolina, Lafayette for each team. The slightly-tired trio's pitching staffs knew the dif- and the Illini did. The difference began to show after the first game ference and the casual observer would say the rest of the lads could tell it too.

In Like Quinn

ALL OF WHICH IS ENOUGH OF THE SOUR GRAPES for the Eli fielded quite a baseball team, much more of one than anyone including Yale coach Ethan Allen expected them to field. Their star was, of course, Frank Quinn, the potent or better omipotentant hurler, who stopped the Tar Heels cold in their championship tracks on opening night and left the local boys in a backed-to-the-wall position the Hearnmen never quite recovered from.

Quinn had about as much of what is commonly referred to as—stuff—as will be seen in a college hurler—if you could see it. The slight dimness of the night lights in the minor league park at Winston-Salem added to his apparent effectiveness and made it all the harder for the Chapel Hillians to stay in there swinging. Quinn fanned the first six Tar Heel batters, which looks as impressive in the scorebook as it did on the playing field.

Heap Many Scouts

QUINN WAS THE SHOW THAT CAUGHT most of the eyes of the major league scouts that packed the park in sardine-like fashion to get a look at the cream of the college crop. Though the rest had the look of slightly-skimmed milk in comparison to Quinn—who is promised to either the Red Sox or the Yankees—the fact that there were a multitude of signings after the tourney closed is proof of the high caliber of the ball players involved. Many of the Tar Heels' favorite sons went in the signing rush.

Uncrowded Crowds

THE BIG AND ONLY DISAPPOINTMENT OF THE TOURNEY besides the fact that everybody couldn't win, is the lack of interest shown in college baseball on the whole. Both at the district playoffs at Charlotte and the Eastern finals in Winston-Salem, the crowds were nothing to write home about to the NCAA headquarters. Charlotte, reputedly a good baseball town and packed with Tar Heel alumni drew a maximum of 2,000 on feature nights and the Twin City crowds did little better.

The trouble seems to lie in the fact that there is something wrong with college baseball. It has the advantage over the pros of being stocked with that "old College try" and yet, to the honest and even partisan observer, it just isn't as interesting to watch. The fault, one writer would say, lies in the prolonged length of time in which the game is played.

Most of the NCAA games played in Charlotte and Winston-Salem lasted around three hours at which time the seats seem to be getting awfully hard and the peanuts awfully stale no matter what's going on out on the field.

Improvements Can Come

THE IMPROVEMENT WILL LIE GREATLY IN THE HANDS of the umpires. It is they would keep the game at a high and fast tempo and yet, not hamper the playing talents of the participants The collegians have a bad fault of kicking a little too much over any and all decisions and this slows the game down to an Ernie Lombardi pace in a hurry.

The umps take a little too much off of the college boys too, in the way of chatter, the words of one lad in Winston resounding as far as the press box high in the stands, and seemingly calling for that young fellow's mouth to be washed out in a comfortbale shower somewheres. It might be well to bounce a few of the players early next season and teach the boys a little of the well-defined etiquette of the game.

Speed the game up a little and keep the lippy lads in line and you'll make college baseball a better game and a better crowd-drawer to boot.

Spurlin Accepts Coaching Position

Max Spurlin, senior guard on the North Carolina football team, has accepted a position as assistant coach and health teacher at the David Millard junior high school in his home town of Asheville, and will not return to the Tar Heel squad this Fall.

Spurlin plans to attend Summer school in order to complete work on his degree, and will go to Asheville on August 31 to assume his new duties as assistant cage and grid coach.

The big guard still has two years of eligibility at Carolina, but would rather sacrifice this in order to get a start in the coaching profession.

Hayworth, Black Are Considering Offers

Three Carolina baseball players signed professional contracts at the conclusion of the NCAA Eastern championships at Winston-Salem, it was learned on the return of the squad last week.

Jim Kelly, outfielder from Elizabethtown, who had been elected co-captain for next season, decided to terminate his college career and joined the Washington organization. He reported to the Senators' farm club at Charlotte in the Class B Tri-State league yesterday.

DiLorenzo To Trenton

Left-handed pitcher Vinnie DiLorenzo of Bergenfield, N. J., signed his contract with the New York Giants and also reported yesterday to the Trenton, N. J., club of the Class B (Inter-State) League. DiLorenzo won three games for the Carolina Gas House Gang in the playoffs and had a 6-3 record during the regular season.

Frank Robinson of Cana, who was undefeated in four decisions in the regular season, adding another in the playoffs, has cast his lot with Buffalo of the International league. He has been assigned to Goldsboro of the Class D Coastal Plain loop subject to appearance in about two weeks.

Others May Sign

Other Tar Heels who received professional offers and likely will join their former teammates as pros are Jim Hayworth, third baseman from High Point, and Kenny Black, outfielder from Norfolk, Va.

Pitcher Ray (Bub) Blair of Winston-Salem will succeed the departing Kelly as co-captain of the 1949 team. Fred (Rip) Ryan, classy short fielder from Trenton, N. J., is the other co-captain.

Local Swimmers In Georgia Meet

Five University students are scheduled to compete in the "Sectional Olympic swimming tryouts" at La Grange, Ga., Friday and Saturday, June 25 and 26. The five are Miss Randy Hudson, Bill Pritchard, Sam McCauley, Jim Thomas, and Bob Ousley.

Randy Hudson, coed from Tarboro, will compete in the 100-yard breaststroke, 400-yard freestyle, and the 300-yard individual medley swim. Miss Hudson holds numerous women's swimming records including records in the 100-yard breaststroke and 100-yard backstroke made last summer at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Jim Thomas, Southern conference backstroke titleholder, will swim in the 100-yard backstroke, individual medley, and two relays. Bob Ousley, Conference breaststroke champion, will swim the 220-yard breaststroke, individual medley, and two relays. Bill Pritchard will swim the 100-yard freestyle and two relays. Sam McCauley will enter the 440-yard freestyle and swim on one relay.

The meet is being conducted by the Amateur athletic union as a sectional tryout for the final Olympic trials to be held in Detroit, July 8-11. Individual high-score and team trophies are to be awarded.

Snmmer Mural Program Opens This Week Featuring Softball, Tennis, Horseshoes

The summer mural program opens up this week with a full program on tap as softball, tennis, and horseshoes all push across the scene for a chance at the feature spot on the schedule.

First-round play in the softball loop started yesterday with a total of 24 nines swinging into action. Four loops with seven teams entered in each will play seven rounds in determining the top two teams who will then start final eliminations that will pit the champions of all leagues into competition for the campus crown.

This afternoon at 6 o'clock is the deadline for all entries in the Intramural department's first summer session horseshoe tournament. The tourney will be conducted strictly on an individual entry basis with a single-defeat-elimination system in both singles and doubles play.

Entry sheets may be signed at the Lower Scuttlebutt, Basket Room—Woollen gym, Graham Memorial, and the Intramural office. Telephone is F-3321.

A total of 19 fraternities have entered the play as against nine non-fraternity entries. All teams have been mixed and divided into four leagues. Each team will play a total of six tilts to decide the occupants of the top two positions.

The tennis entries were drawn and have been posted at the Intramural office, the Basket Room—Woollen gym and at the tennis courts. All those entered should check one of these lists and report to John Kenfield at the tennis courts between 2 and 4 this afternoon to decide a time for the match to be held.

Entries ran high in the closed loop with a total of 68 signing up to do battle for the title.

Miller Gains Point In NCAA Track Meet

Minneapolis —Jimmy Miller, Carolina distance ace won a single point for his school in the NCAA track and field championship here last Saturday by finishing sixth in the 3,000-meter steeple chase.

Lafayette Decision Eliminates Locals

Winston-Salem — Carolina's Gas House baseball team finished up in third place in the NCAA Eastern playoffs conducted here last week.

The Tar Heels were eliminated from play on Thursday evening when they suffered their second loss in the round-robin affair at the hands of Lafayette, 5-2.

Yale Wins

In the second game of the twin bill that night the Pennsylvanians too, fell by the waysides, losing a close 4-3 decision to Yale. The Eli dominated the play throughout the three day tournament and will represent the East in the College World Series at Kalamazoo beginning this Thursday.

The Tar Heels just couldn't get started in their last Twin City appearance. Pitcher Dean Cassell, who started on the hill for the Hearnmen got himself into trouble in the bottom half of the second inning, and before he could get out, Lafayette led, 3-0.

The victors added another run in the third while the Tar Heels somewhat sluggish after a week of constant baseball, remained idle at the bat.

Rally Comes

They did rally slightly in the top of the fifth when Emmett Cheek came up with a single, one of three hits he gained during the evening, and scored on a pinch double by Vinnie Di-

Junior Baseballers Gain 10-2 Victory

Chapel Hill's American legion team made its bid for first place position in the Area one, League three standings in the junior baseball competition yesterday by defeating Bragtown 10-2 in Durham.

The win put the locals into a first place tie with Wake Forest the current league leaders, who played Raleigh in an unreported ball game yesterday.

Chapel Hill now has a won and loss record of eight and two with nine games remaining on the schedule. The two losses came at the hands of Durham and Wake Forest.

Play will continue this week, with two games scheduled this weekend. Garner will play here Friday. Chapel Hillian Ben Perry coaches the squad.

Carolina Ace Loses Exhibition to Flam

Los Angeles, June 21 — The 64th National Collegiate tennis championships get underway on eight courts at UCLA here today and a lively scramble for the singles crown seems assured before the singles crown is decided next Saturday.

Eighty-two contestants, the best of the college crop, swing into action and by nightfall the field will be reduced to 32 in both singles and doubles.

North Carolina's Vic Seixas is seeded No. 1, having lost in the finals last year to Gardner Larned by scores of 6-3, 9-11, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Jimmy Brink of Washington, northern division champion of the Pacific coast conference and unbeaten this year, is No. 2; Jack Tuero of Tulane next and Herb Flam of UCLA fourth in the seeding.

But Saturday Flam sounded an ominous note when he whipped Seixas in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, in a test match, which led tennis observers to predict a wide open battle for the title. Flam has not been defeated in dual meet competition in the Pacific coast loop.

Top seeded doubles team is Flam and Gene Garrett of UCLA, who lost out in an extra set battle last year to Bobby Curtis and Sam Match of Rice in the finals. Kovaleski and Bartzen of William and Mary, and Seixas

University Awarded '49 NCAA Swimming

The 1949 National Collegiate athletic association swimming championships have been awarded to the University and will be held in Chapel Hill March 25-27.

The site of the championships was announced in Minneapolis last Thursday by the executive committee of the NCAA. Last year's meet was held at the University of Michigan and was won by the Wolverines.

Next year's meet in Chapel Hill will mark the first time in the history of the championships that the event has been held in the South. Previous championships have been held in the East, Middle West and Far West, but never before in the South.

Lorenzo. Another single, this one by Kenny Black, scored DiLorenzo with the only other Tar Heel run.

Ray Blair, relieved Cassell in the fifth and finished up the ball game. He yielded the final Lafayette run in the seventh when the "home team" matched a double and a single for the score.

The Tar Heels almost got a rally going in the top of the ninth, with two men getting on base after two men were out but Black lined out to end the ball game.

The Tar Heels suffered first round defeat in the playoffs as they lost to Yale and its great pitcher, Frank Quinn, 6-1 on opening night. The Carolina entry, though rallied to stay in the running the following evening, when they dumped Illinois out of the tourney, 7-3, behind the fine hurling of DiLorenzo. It was his third playoff win, counting two victories at Charlotte.

Giduz Announces Weekly Program For French House

Dr. Hugo Giduz, head of the French House, has announced the weekly program to be presented by the House. Tonight, Mr. Edward T. Draper-Savage, of the French Department will give a talk.

The rest of the week is planned as follows: Wednesday, the French Film "Clandestine" to be shown at the Village theater. Thursday, readings by Rene Herdere from a group of modern French poems. Friday, a recital of French songs by J. Hutchinson and William Hover, accompanied by Mr. Brockman. All three are instructors in the French department. Saturday, the weekly afternoon picnic to be held at the home of Dr. Nita Andrews.

Of the 27 students living at the French House, 14 are from North Carolina, and the rest from South Carolina, New York, Georgia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Maine, and Michigan. These students, who speak only French while in the House, are either teachers of French or prospective teachers of French. In addition to the faculty help received in French pronunciation, the students are also helped by Genevieve Faucher and Therese Barbier, both French girls.

Kovaleski and Bartzen, whom Seixas defeated on the way to his first Southern conference title this spring, are seeded sixth and seventh in the singles seedings respectively.

Summer Who's Who Is Now Available

A student directory for the summer session has been completed by the YMCA. Copies of the directory are to be found at the Western Union office, the South Building information desk, the Graham Memorial main desk, the telephone office, and the YMCA information office.

The information desk at the "Y" expects to receive the major portion of requests for addresses. However, Bob Barrus, summer YMCA secretary, asked that the public use the other available copies whenever possible. Also, oral requests at the "Y" desk are preferable to telephone inquiries.

CHIC BURROUGHS and His Carolinians will furnish music for the annual Summer School Dance sponsored by Graham Memorial in the Main Lounge of GM at 9 o'clock Saturday evening. The dance is in honor of the new Summer School students and everyone is invited.

Psych Dept. Gives 'Ink Blot' Tests

Dr. Marguerite Hertz, an internationally known psychologist from Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, is directing the first course on the Rorschach Test in North Carolina which is being offered jointly by Duke and Carolina.

The Rorschach test as described by Prof. James W. Layman of the University Psychology department is a supplementary tool for psychoanalysts. It is an "ink blot" test for personality appraisement of individuals. The "ink blots" are made beforehand and shown to the subject. The answers to what the blot suggests is then analyzed by previously prepared indicators.

The results reveals the type personality the individual has, and in the case of the mentally sick it helps diagnose the measure and type of disturbance. "It is a faster and shorter method than psychoanalysis; however, it is not a substitute. It is one of the most important tools of psychiatry devised," said Layman.

The course now offered is for the purpose of training technicians in the use of the Rorschach test. The majority of students now taking the course, are graduate students, veteran administration employees and professionals already engaged in psychiatry work. The 10 day course will terminate next Friday.

Yacks Out Soon, Johnstone Says

The answer to the cry, When are the Yacks coming, was answered today by Gene Johnstone. Seems that the glue is drying and the Yacks will be delivered, he hopes, on Thursday or Friday. 1,000 Yacks will be delivered at the first delivery; the remainder coming within the next week or so.

Johnstone said, "The Yacks are binded and we'll get them to you as soon as possible. We're sorry that they haven't been delivered sooner, but the printing, binding, and "gluing" took longer than expected. The Yacks will be given out in the Baby Lounge of Graham Memorial."

UVA Open House Quiz Show Begins Large Summer Program

By Stewart McKeel

The University Veteran's Association went Dr. I.Q. Wednesday night. Featuring the lovely Lib Thomas as the roving contestant picker and Bob Allison as the MC, the UVA started their regular series of open house off with a bang.

Using a mixture of the different quiz shows that today are on the air the vets came up with a very successful idea on how to top off a night at the local night club.

All people present were given a number, with corresponding numbers placed in a central box. The MC's most able helper, Miss Thomas, would then draw a number from the box, the person holding the same number would come forward and take a whirl at winning a carton of cigarets and a chance at the final jackpot prize of $10. Once forward, under the spotlight, the contestant would choose a category to suit their taste, or profession as the case may be. These eight categories were offered to the participants; drama, musical titles, slang expressions, true and false, government of the United States, everyday sayings, sports, and songs.

Of the eight contestants picked only two won a chance at the jackpot. To win this chance the two contestants answered the first three questions asked them, thereby winning a carton of cigarets, and then went on to answer the next two questions. A total of five questions had to be answered without a mistake.

Frances Dulkerian and Bill Dyer, the two contestants who reached the jackpot question were neither able to answer the question so the jackpot was carried over until next week. The jackpot question? When were the doors of the University of North Carolina first opened?

Rehearsals Begin For 'All My Sons'

Today Director Sam Hirsch announced the cast for the coming Playmaker production, "All My Sons." Rehearsals are well under way and the cast is showing promise of a good production.

The members of the cast are as follows: Nat White, Birmingham, Md., as Joe Keller; Miriam Miller, Baltimore, Md., as Kate Keller; Edsel Hughes, East Orange, N. J., as Chris Keller; Martha Grattan, Durham, as Ann Deever; Fred Young, Monroe, La., as George Deever; Bill Hardy, Durham, as Dr. Jim Bayliss; Rue Gutherie, Charlotte, as Sue Bayliss; Paul Keziah, Mineral Springs, as Frank Lubey; Lucia Callart, Chapel Hill, as Lydia Lubey; and David Rosen, Chapel Hill, as Bert.

Cabinet Decides To Appoint Summer Council

The Coalition Advisory Cabinet Wednesday voted for a temporary student council for the summer school Jess Dedmond, president of the student body, said today.

This action was taken because only one member of the regular student council is in summer school.

Members of the council will be picked from recommendations made to Dedmond by the party chairmen. It is a standing policy that temporary appointments to elective offices be from the same political party that the regular officers are from, but due to the fact that it will be difficult in summer school to find capable appointees for the offices, Dedmond said "I asked the consent of the party chairmen to waive this right for summer appointments, and have received their unanimous approval."

Dedmond also has asked George Rodman, ranking officer of the student legislature, to call a special session of the legislature to confirm appointments made. The Election Bill of 1948 says that such appointments must be confirmed by the student legislature. The special session of the legislature will be held next Thursday night.

Eight members, two of them women, will be picked from the recommendations made. Final decision pending legislature approval will be made at a cabinet meeting next Monday at 5 o'clock. A majority vote of the cabinet members voting is necessary to confirm appointments.

Rehearsals Held For 'Mardi Gras'

Sound and Fury's new musical comedy "Mardi Gras" is now in the early rehearsal stages as Memorial Hall resounds with jokes and dance routines each night. The summer show is written and directed by Pete Strader with music by Tread Covington.

Pat Ellis, Colbert Leonard, and Jane Hunter lead the parade of names on the casting list. All three are well remembered for their outstanding work in last fall's S and F production, "Gin Lane."

Other members of the "Mardi Gras" cast are Alex Lassiter, Rita Loeb, Bill Sanders, Faith Adams, Tommy Thomas, Doris Weaver, Ig Heniford, Dan Morgan, V. Taylor, Violet LaRue, Ann Grainger, Ann Humphrey, Emily Ogburn, Ann Tucker, Alice Ferebee, Dorothy Charles, Betty McDonald, Nancee Black, Mary Lou Williams, Helen Beam,

The setting of "Mardi Gras" is in New Orleans during the time of the religious movement of that name.

Second Session On Intercultnral Work Has Much Interest

The second summer Workshop in Intercultural Education, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews is in full swing here and is scheduled to continue until July 20.

The workshop, under the direction of Dr. W. Carson Ryan, was initiated last summer to explore educational methods and to find ways to improve cultural and living conditions in the South. The students of the "experiment in education" come from ten Southern states and represent many different religions and creeds.

Dr. Lester Dix, consultant of the Workshop, explained its functions, "This is an investigation into human resources. By keeping the students of different backgrounds working and training together, we hope to reach a common denominator in thought and way of life."

Beside Dix, other consultants for the group are Marion Quin, supervisor of public school art in Elizabeth, N. J., and Myron Schwartz and Virgil Border of St. Louis, Mo. Quin will be here for two weeks and will leave after the completion of the art projects now underway.

The students are now busy making pink horses, purple and yellow polka dot rabbits, figurines and minature stage sets for the puppet show which will close the art activities.

Later, the workshop students will split into smaller groups from committees now running the study programs. "We want to approach as many problems as possible in order that our students may inform themselves about new literature, science and philosophies. They will return to their communities to become centers themselves," Dix said.

At present they have a steering committee chaired by Phillip Ogilvie, editor of the North Carolina Catholic, Father Gerald Maquire, chairman of the Social committee, Velma Patton, head of the material committee, Julius Cohen, chairman of the public relations committee and evaluation committee headed by Anna Leahy.

Anthropology, psychology, child welfare and care will be topics of lectures by visiting consultants. These resource consultants are Dr. Hugh Kelley, Wake Forest; Rev. Edmond D. Benard, Catholic University, Washington; Dr. John Ivey, Jr. University Sociology professor, Dr. Ethel Alpenfels, internationally known anthropologist and others.

Air Reserve Meet Set For Monday

There will be a brief, but important meeting of the Air Reserve Association in 103 Bingham Hall, Monday night at 7:30. The purpose of the meeting is to determine the extent of the local chapter's summer activities and to plan a summer flying schedule for pilots, provided there are enough of them interested.

A substantial attendance at this meeting is imperative since a lack of interest will probably result in cessation of all ARA summer activities on the campus.

Invitation to attend the meeting is especially tendered to new students and to anyone who is interested in joining the local chapter of the Air Reserve Association.

Students Must Apply

All men students and married couples who plan to occupy dormitory space for the second summer session are requested to notify the Housing office not later than July 1, according to an announcement by J. E. Wadsworth, housing director.

Cards have been distributed to the campus which students may use in supplying the information. Failure to comply may result in the loss of dorm space.

Johnstone Says Yackety Yacks Expected Today

Gene Johnstone, member of the board of editors of the Yackety Yack, said yesterday he expects the first shipment of the long awaited yearbooks today. By the middle of next week, Johnstone said, he expects to have approximately two thousand copies on hand and in the process of delivery to regular University students who have been in school for the past three quarters.

The delay, according to Johnstone, was caused by a number of factors beyond his control. The enlarged size of this years' annual, the large number of irregularly shaped cuts, and the fact that the thick paper has taken a longer time to dry than was first anticipated are considered as several reasons for the unexpected delay.

When asked if he had been bothered by anxious students in search of their Yacks, Johnstone stated that he averages between fifty and one hundred phone calls per day. He added, however, that the delay is not the fault of the local staff and that he was not worried about the inquiries, but merely attempts to be patient while explaining the story to the ninety ninth questioner.

The Yacks will be distributed from the Horace Williams lounge, just off the main lounge in Graham Memorial when they arrive. Those slated to be mailed will be shipped directly from Charlotte.

Contract Let for Disposal Plant

The contract for the construction of the new town-University sewerage disposal plant to be located on the Mason Farm, one and one-half miles south of Chapel Hill, was awarded to the Boyd and Goforth Construction Company of Charlotte by the town board of aldermen at its meeting last night, according to G. W. Ray, town manager.

The Charlotte contractor, who was the lowest bidder for the work, offered to build the plant and lay the sewerage line from Chapel Hill to the plant site for $394,574.27.

Cheney Electric Company of Jacksonville was given the electrical work by the aldermen, the bid of that firm being low at $6,158.

Ralph B. Carter Company and the Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation, both of New Jersey, entered a joint low bid of $3,735 for the job of installing pumping equipment in the new plant.

Engineering costs of approximately 6 per cent bring the total cost for the long awaited project to $421,533, which is $3,427 under the $425,000 estimated figure for the completion of the plant.

Money for the construction of the project was obtained when the Town of Chapel Hill, long without adequate sanitary facilities, floated a bond issue of $200,000 to combine with $225,000 allocated to the University for the project by the State Legislature.

Two sites on Mason Farm were under consideration for the sanitation project. One of them, known as the "lower" site, was further distant from Chapel Hill. The additional cost for running a sewerage line to this site was estimated at $75,000. University and town authorities asked the Board of Trustees to request this amount from the state.

At a meeting of the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees, held in South Building on

WSSF to Hold 'Daffy Auction' At Charity Show

A one-act play, musical skits, and a "Daffy Auction" will be included on the program of the World Student Service Fund charity show which is to be presented jointly by the Playmakers and Sound and Fury next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

Highlights of the show will be the comic auction of girls for dates and faculty members to baby sit, walk dogs, shine shoes or do homework. Mademoiselle D'Amour, the mysterious queen of love whose identity is to be kept secret until the show, will also be sold to the member of the audience who pledges the largest donation to WSSF. Auctioneer for the program will be E. J. Woodhouse of the political science department here at the University.

The Playmakers' production of "Close Quarters," a brief light comedy depicting trailer life at a university, will open the program. Sound and Fury will then stage several skits and musical numbers, combining forces with the dramateers for the charity for the first time since the musical comedy group was organized several years ago.

The benefit show will be sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA as a feature of their summer schedules with all funds collected going to provide educational equipment for students all over the world. Admission will be 55 cents per person, tax included; and tickets will go on sale in the "Y" lobby early next week.

Co-chairmen of the entertainment for the evening are Eloise Jacobi, Emily Ogburn, and Jerry Weiss. Working with them are Tiff Cunningham and Betty Jane Blalock.

SP Dance Slated For GM Tonight

The Student Party, one of the three political parties on campus, will entertain at a dance from 8 until 11 in the Roland Parker lounges of Graham Memorial. The dance is open to all old and new students who wish to attend. Refreshments will be served during the evening.

Tom Carter, Carolina student from Jacksonville, Fla., and member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, was elected treasurer of the party for the summer terms at a recent meeting. Bill Anderson and A. W. Sapp, Jr., both of Greensboro, were elected to the executive council of the party for the summer.

Victory Village Speeds To Stop Spread; Houses To Be Sprayed With Disinfectant

By Clyde Osbourne

Densely populated and child-filled Victory Village was a mass of activity yesterday following the shocking news received late Wednesday afternoon that an illness of one of its residents, Mrs. Frank W. Nelson of 206-A Jackson Circle, had been diagnosed as poliomyelitis by Dr. Fred Patterson of the University Infirmary.

Mrs. Nelson, the wife of a senior in the Department of Physical Education, was rushed to Rex Hospital in Raleigh for treatment.

Little Sue Nelson, 13-months-old daughter of the victim of the disease was taken to Duke Hospital when she displayed some of the same symptoms as her mother. Fortunately, medical authoritics of that institution found no trace of the virus in the spinal fluid of the child.

Speeding to halt the possible spread of the most feared of all childhood diseases, Mayor Bill Goulding, after getting the report of the case at about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, called a special meeting of the Victory Village Council to discuss measures for attempting to prevent further occurrence of the crippling sickness.

Information Obtaining

Mayor Goulding consulted a physician for information. Councilwoman Mrs. R. L. McKee visited the local health department to obtain pamphlets and information and Sanitary Engineer James A. Westbrook of the District Health Department came in to speak to the council meeting. University Director of Operations J. S. Bennett and P. L. Burch, Victory Village Manager for the University, attended the called session, which took on more and more of the appearance of an old fashioned town meeting as it progressed, because of the influx of anxious parents and residents.

In advising the gathering, Westbrook stressed the fact that science hasn't yet learned all there is to know about how infantile paralysis is spread, but that it is known that the common housefly is a carrier of the virus and suggested ridding the village of all insects as the first step to be taken.

DDT to Be Used

The engineer said that a careful spraying of every apartment with DDT, the removal of all trash, the cleaning of all garbage disposal cans, and the use of kerosene in all trash and garbage receptors would go far toward making the settlement insect-free.

When a method for raising money to buy sprays and DDT was being discussed, Burch and Bennett stated that the University would supply the sprays and

Commerce Meet To End Program Saturday Morning

By Jim Dickinson

An all-day program today will climax a festive week of learning, fun and frolic for approximately 280 Southeastern Institute of the Chamber of Commerce executives now attending the third consecutive annual session on the University campus.

The week's session for students, faculty and visitors from 13 states includes a series of lectures on general civic, commercial and industrial activities.

Classes are being held daily from 8:15 in the morning until 3:50 in the afternoon in Bingha mhall annex and 103 Bingham hall. Examinations on Saturday morning for first-year and advanced students will bring the week's agenda to a close.

About 75 members of the group are attending their first annual session while 108 executives have attended one or more of the previous sessions of the chamber. Approximately 100 visitors round out the meeting's total participants.

Headquarters for the group are set up in the Armory of ROTC and housing facilities in Carolina Inn and Whitehead and Stacy dormitories.

The highlight address of the week was given yesterday morning in Gerrard hall by Earl O. Shreve, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. He spoke on "The Institute's Place in the World Today."

James H. Gray, editor of the Albany Herald, Albany, Ga., spoke Monday morning in Gerrard hall on the topic "Setting the Stage for Southern Progress."

Odd Names Just 'Run o' Mill' To Historians

By Charlie Gibson

It was revealed this week that Henry Adams, Charlie Chaplin, James Monroe, and Robert E. Lee are attending summer school at the University. Historians were not as startled as might be expected, however, when these famous names appeared in the summer student directory recently completed by the YMCA.

In the typed directories now available for reference at information desks in the "Y", Graham Memorial, South building, and the Western Union and telephone offices, the letters "S" and "X" have the most and least names under them respectively. While "X" is exclusive for two students named Xanthos, "S" surpassed "M", "W" and "B" in popularity among last initials.

The astounding size of the "S" division is largely due to the Smiths. Each quarter when the roster has been fixed for public use and especially the one time annually when it has been printed for sale during the fall, the Smith clan has been found to be almost as predominate in Chapel Hill as dogs and rain. Now behind the 54 inevitable Smiths, the nine next most common last names are Williams, 36; Johnson, 31; Wilson and Jones, 23 each; Harris and Taylor, 20; Brown, 19; Moore, 18; and Davis, 17.

At a dime per copy this directory became a best-seller in the past year. The success of the campus "Who's Who" and "Who's Here," two names for the name catalogue itself, is sometimes attributed to the fact that it reads like a zoology textbook, a trade magazine, a menu and Webster only knows what else.

In the directory zoographers can count sixteen different animals whose proper names are used on campus. Dormitories and not zoos house the two Bucks, Buffaloes, Crows, and Sparrows; the three Mooses; the four Foxes; and Helen Bear, Paul Beaver, Marion Bird, Harry Collie, Robert Eagle, Frank Giraffe, Irene Herring, Daphne Lamb, Jonathan Steed, and Al Swann. A zoologist might also find four Manns along with two Hipps and Zack Finger.

Tradesmen can find the following twenty professions: Baker, Barber, Brewer, Butcher, Butler, Councilman, Cooke, Gardner, Hunter, Merchant, Marshall, Miller, Mason, Nunn, Potter, Sellers, Shaver, Usher, Weaver, and Workman. Artists can locate the nineteen Browns as well as twelve Whites, four Grays and Greens, three Blacks, and two Blues. Weather bureau experts can sight the familiar Dew, Snow,

Jurgensen Speech Will Highlight English Institute

The first of a series of summer meetings and conferences arranged by the sixth North Carolina English Institute will be held in the Roland Parker Lounge, Graham Memorial at 8 o'clock Monday night.

Kai Jurgensen, of the Department of Dramatic Art, will speak on "The English Teacher as Community Belasco." Professor Jurgensen, who is currently engaged in a new "American" translation of Ibsen's plays, will discuss production problems encountered by teachers who volunteer—or get "drafted"— to put on school community plays. Teachers of English, their frends, and well-wishers have been invited to attend.

J. O. Bailey, executive secretary of the English department for the summer session, will preside at the meeting. Professor Bailey was elected president of the local institute group at a similar meeting last year.

A brief business following the address will be devoted to election of officers and organization of committees for the state-wide Institute conferences to be held at Chapel Hill and Duke University on August 5-7. Steering committees for the August program are F. E. Bowman, A. C. Jordan, and Miss Mary Poteat for Duke University; J. O. Bailey, Miss Dorothy McCuskey, and Richard Walser for the University at Chapel Hill.

Other meetings of the Institute are scheduled as follows: At Appalachian State Teachers College, Boone, July 8-9, under the direction of Gradon P. Eggers, head of the English department, and John J. Van Noppen, at Western Carolina Teachers College, Cullowhee, July 9-10, under the direction of Dean W. E. Bird and Miss Mabel Tyree; at East Carolina Teachers College, July 23, under the direction of Miss Lucile Turner, head of the English department, and Meredith N. Posey.

The North Carolina English Institute is sponsored by the North Carolina English Teachers Association, the University Extension Division, and the participating colleges and universities. Richard Walser, department of English, N. C. State College, is president of the English teachers organization; Russell M. Grumman is director of the University Extension Division.

Kan to Attend CCUN Meeting

Lincoln Kan, former state director of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations left yesterday for New York City to attend the annual national institute of the CCUN, now in progress in that city. He was joined in Richmond by Ann Beale, former Carolina student and district CCUN leader who will also attend the conference.

Roberta Stirling, nominee for the state directorship for the coming year, and George Drew, CCUN publicity director, have been at the meeting since Monday. While there, the members will attend United Nations meetings at Lake Success, study the UN charter under authorities and formulate plans for the national, regional and state headquarters for the coming year.

Carolina Traditions

Brick Walks Replace UNC's Gravel Walks

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

An observer standing at the foot of South building steps may look towards the library and see tradition being destroyed in the form of piles of brick which now bedeck the sanctified soil of the University.

To some people, the reaction is, "It's about time we were relieved of soggy walks on rainy Monday mornings." To others with a touch of nostalgia in their hearts, the new modern walks are proof of the old cliche, "Carolina is certainly changing." This is but the manifestation of the fact that the Atomic age has taken over.

Not so long ago, during the blue uniforms and skivvies of the V-12 preflight days, the Navy wanted to pave the "decks", but those who remained here to guard Chapel Hill for the returning warriors fought successfully against the change. Now, however, civilization is advancing and the brick walks come regardless of opposition.

From the same spot at the bottom of South building may be seen the Bell tower, another Carolina tradition. Each evening, if one is in the vicinity, he can hear the bells ringing out with "Hark the Sound" and other Carolina and Southern songs. The peal of the bells comes as a welcome lift after an afternoon of study or play.

The tall majestic trees that reign over all parts of the campus stand as strong rulers and guardians of hurrying students and cannot be cut down without the permission of the University. The ruling was inspired through the influence of one of the oldest traditions—Davie Poplar.

This tall, now-ailing tree once gave restful shade to the first committee of the state legislature which came here to pick a site for the University which would be remote from a railroad and far away from the evils of city-slickers. Old Davie is now on her last legs with insides holding tree surgeon's medicines and concrete. From latest reports, she hasn't long to live.

Tradition will continue, however, because a successor—Davie Poplar, Jr., was planted a short distance from the older tree several years ago. Young Davie is now some twenty feet high and gives all evidences of being a capable successor to it's illustrous forerunner.

Between the Poplars and Franklin Street is another Carolina tradition and landmark, the Confederate Soldier, more famous as the top guardian of Carolina's many traditions. He has stood guard and challenged ex-soldiers and civilians alike as they have weaved their ways across the campus from the downtown stores or from the bustling offices of the student union building, Graham Memorial.

Rumor has it that the old soldier is slated for a court-martial at an early date because he has been caught several times recently with an empty pint in the crook of his arms. Authoritative sources, however, are confident that he will be exonerated and released because there is no evidence to support the claim that he had been drinking while on duty.

Speaking of drinking, no one has seen any Carolina tradition until he has sipped water from the Old Well, located directly across from South Building. When South was built, the well was the only water supply for the University. Now it serves as a center of activity, surrounded by dozens of buildings and thousands of book-searching students.

Incidentally, when South was built, observers complained that it was too large and an unnecessary expense for the state. The University would never grow enough to need such a building, they argued.

On either side of the Old Well, two old dormitories face each other, Old East and Old West. They once served as barracks for invading Yankees, who stabled their horses in a nearby building, now known as the Playmakers Theater.

Another Carolina tradition, the arboretum long a haven of botany lovers and just plain lovers, will soon give way to the new order. Rumors say that the unusual collection of botanical growth near Davie hall will be moved to Mason Farm to make room for more dormitories.

True or false, the news of such a contemplated move serves only as a reminder that the University is steadily moving forward.

Dance Featured On GM Program

A Summer School dance in honor of new students will be the feature attraction on Graham Memorials' schedule for tomorrow. The dance, with music by Chic Burroughs and his Carolinians, will begin at 9 o'clock in the main lounge of GM. All students and their wives are invited to attend. Refreshments will be sold as usual in the Rendezvous Room in the basement of the building.

Director Bill Shuford also pointed out that the regular bridge instructions will be featured Monday night at 7:30, with Harold Cheek teaching the beginners. The bridge tournaments on Tuesday nights, open to both beginner and experienced bridge players, are drawing bigger crowds each sessions. Master point prizes are given to winners. Shuford emphasized the importance of participants being on time for the tournaments.

Carolina Forum To Have Speakers

Charles O. Long, chairman of the newly organized Carolina Speakers Forum, has been in Washington during the past week interviewing prominent men on a national and international level in an effort to secure them as speakers here during the coming year.

The Forum, set up by the student legislature last quarter, is composed of one representative each from the International Relations Club, the Carolina Political Union, the Collegiate Council for United Nations, the Dialectic Senate, the Philanthropic Assembly and the student body.

The purpose of the Forum is to coordinate the appearance of speakers on the campus. Each organization will continue to sponsor their individual speakers under the Carolina Forum name.

While he is in the North, Long is attending the Republican convention and will write a special feature article for the Daily Tar Heel.

Johnson Supports Medical School For Chapel Hill

Charles M. Johnson, candidate for governor of North Carolina, gave his full support to the Medical Care program and the Medical School at Chapel Hill in a letter to Collier Cobb of Chapel Hill this week.

In his letter, Johnson said, "What I want to do is set up a medical school second to none. There has never been any reason why we had to send our boys and girls to other states to study medicine. Other states should have been sending them here. In order for the Medical School to be a real success, we should start off right. What I mean by that is, to get the best instructors that we can find, regardless of the cost right in the beginning."

Johnson also stated that he was very much interested in the Retirement System. As chairman of the commission which was appointed to study the question, Johnson said that it was recommended that the system be put into effect. He added, "A real retirement system probably means more to the University than any other department or institution in the State, because it will mean that we can secure and hold the best men."

W. Kerr Scott, Johnson's opponent in the gubernatorial race, has indicated that he would like to see the State accept the Cone offer for setting up the four-year medical school and adjoining teaching hospital in Greensboro instead of Chapel Hill, which was designated by this year's legislature.

In a speech last October, Scott said, "The Cone estate is offering a site and $15,000,000 to put this hospital for the training of doctors at Greensboro.

WC Counselor Accepts New Post

Mrs. Florence Ingram, counselor at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, has been named as assistant dean of women at the University of Illinois. She will take her new post July 1.

Born in Burlington, Ia., she attended the University of Iowa and Teachers College of Columbia University, New York, where she received the master of arts degree.

She taught in the Des Moines, Ia., public schools from 1923 to 1928. Married, and then left a widow, she became social director at Pomona college, 1937-39; dean of girls at a NYA regional residence project in Weiser, Idaho, 1940; visiting teacher in the department of pupil adjustment of the Des Moines public schools, 1941-42; and has been at her present post since 1942.

Coeds May Visit Sigma Nu, Chi Phi

Sigma Nu and Chi Ph. fraternities were added Tuesday to the list of frats that may entertain unchaperoned women students in their houses under the House Privileges Board visiting agreement. The addition of the two fraternities was made with the approval of the offices of the Dean of Men and Dean of Women.

CHIC BURROUGHS AND HIS Carolinians will furnish the music tomorrow night for Graham Memorials' annual Summer School Dance. The dance is in honor of new summer school students but is open to all comers. The music is scheduled to begin at 9 o'clock.

Milner Explains Jap Teachings To PTA Meeting

The Twenty-first Annual Parents and Teachers Institute of North Carolina meeting at Woman's college in Greensboro June 21-24 heard an address Wednesday night by Charles F. Milner, associate director of the University Extension division, on "Educational Reconstruction in Japan."

Russell M. Grumman, director of the Extension division and First Vice-president of the Parents and Teachers institute, addressed the group on Monday night and presided at the Wednesday night meeting.

Milner has recently returned here after serving for three months in Japan with the Armed Forces in an educational status.

He explained methods being used by educators from the United States who are striving to place Japanese vocational and educational facilities on a footing which will exceed that of prewar years.

W. H. Plemmons of the Education department addressed the institute Monday night on education in the state and region.

Directories Out At Central Points

The student directory for the summer session, compiled by the YMCA, is available for use by students on campus. Copies of the directory may be found at the Y information office, the South Building information desk, the Western Union office, the telephone office and the Graham Memorial information office.

Y officials pointed out, however, that individual copies of the directory are not available. Bob Barrus, summer YMCA secretary asked that students use the other copies of the directory at points over the campus, as well as the one located in the Y building. He also stated oral requests are preferable to telephone inquiries.

Student tDormitory Hostesses, Officers Elected By Summer School Coeds

Nine women student government officers have been elected, and assistant hostesses in the women's dormitories have been appointed at the University of North Carolina for the summer.

Each dormitory and each sorority chose its house president who will serve as a member of the Women's Council in addition to her dormitory office. This group of 12 coeds will compose the Interdormitory Council which has the power to interpret social regulations, recommend changes in rules and supervise dormitory house councils.

Barbara Cashion, Chapel Hill, who served as speaker of the Coed Senate during the past year, was elected president of the Interdormitory Council and Joan Lucas, St. Petersburg, Fla., was elected chairman of the Woman's Council.

The other nine members of the Interdormitory Council are Betsy White Fountain, Fountain; Lucille Olive, Charlotte; Agnes Rudisill, Lillington; Lucy Evans, Greensboro; Mary Stringfield, Mars Hill; Helen Ann Reid, Thomasville; Pansy Barker, Durham; Louise Seagroves, Raleigh; Randy Hudson, Tarboro, and Jane Casstevens, Clemmons.

Assistant hostesses appointed by Dean Katherine Carmichael are: Elizabeth Welch, Kingstree, S. C.; Meadie Montgomery, Yazoo City, Miss.; Ann Dickinson, Richmond, Va.; Josephine Fishel, Vaughn; Martha Akers, Charlotte; Patricia Carruthers, Akron, O.; Dorothy Colquitt, Savannah, Ga.; and Nancy Keen, Elon College. They will serve for the current six-weeks term of the Summer Session.

No Rest in Thinking

"Student Leaders Named NSA Congress Delegates," "Dialectic Senate to Hold Forum on Harry Truman," "Temporary Student Council May Be Appointed," "University Students Attend National CCUN Meet," and "Legislature May Be Called" are headlines in your last issue of the Daily Tar Heel. Most people glanced at those heads and shrugged, "What does it have to do with me?"

The significance underlies the face value of the news items about student activities. We are happy to report student action, because as a college newspaper we are proud that even in the slack months there is no rest in the political thinking and movement at our University.

A university is based on the theory that in college future members of society gain important lessons about the world in which they live. Our college students must create, build and correct the world that is theirs. It is good to see that their social consciousness is constantly alive.

More power to those who help keep Carolina a source of inspiration and learning for those of us who know we must live together in a confused world.—L.K.

VA Is Snafued

Some veterans here are not getting all that's coming to them from the Veterans Administration. That is the complaint which Training Officer Oscar B. Laws of the local VA office has been receiving.

Last February 14 President Truman signed a Congressional bill increasing subsistence allowances to veterans in school. This bill went into effect on April 1. It increased payments to single veterans from $65 to $75 and payments to married veterans from $90 to $105 for those with one dependent and to $120 for those with more than one dependent.

On March 2 the national VA office in Washington sent out a news letter for publication. This news letter informed married veterans that they should file application for the increase and that if they did so by July 1 the increase would be retroactive to April 1, the date on which the law went into effect. The news release stated that full instructions on application procedure would be mailed to the veterans with their subsistence check for March. No instructions were included in the March checks.

A second news letter dated June 14 was sent out. It repeated the information that the subsistence increase would be retroactive to April 1, if veterans filed application before July 1. However, this has not been the case. University veterans who have filed application to the regional Veterans Administration office in Winston-Salem have found that the inerease has been made effective as of the date of receipt of the application rather than as of April 1.

Local VA officers have protested the situation to the Winston-Salem regional office, but have received no reply. At least one University veteran, a law student, has appealed the action to the regional office, but as far as the VA office here knows, he, too, has received no reply.

By an act of Congress signed by the President of the United States, married veterans in school are entitled to this increase in subsistence as of April 1. Anyone who is paying out of his own pocket the high cost of living these days knows full well that veterans supporting families here need that money. We would like to suggest that the University Veterans Association, an organization which has in the past accomplished much toward bettering conditions for veterans on this campus, investigate this situation and see that the Winston-Salem VA office corrects its mistake.

Life Is a Wonderful Thing

A few days ago we strolled into Danziger's for a late breakfast. There was somebody at the piano playing very creditably. On closer look we saw that the player had only one arm. He had a mean left hand. So we talked to him and asked him whether he played the piano before the war. He had. He had to learn how to play like a two-handed man soon after he got back. The piece he was playing was an original written by him and his partner. It was called "Life Is a Wonderful Thing." We would like to quote the last stanza for you.

"No one told me how, I just learned
That a smile is yours, if it's earned.
When you're in love, it's endless Spring
'Cause Life Is a Wonderful Thing."

Somehow we couldn't help but feel ashamed for ourselves and other veterans like us. Here was a man who had really had it, yet he can still feel that Life Is a Wonderful Thing. He doesn't think that Society owes him anything. He isn't hiding behind "combat fatigue." He is not shirking his duty to himself and his society. He is in there plugging. Maybe he is only plugging songs, but the lilt in his words is good and clean.

Do we know that Life Is a Wonderful Thing?—L.K.

Coeds Have Rough Life

By Ed Joyner

Ever since summer school started reports have been circulating that the coeds living in Aycock and Graham dormitories don't like it there. Now those dorms have been good enough for men students for lo these many years—in fact I know some fellers who lived in the quonset huts and in Miller and Nash barracks who would have been happy to lay a sizable bit of cash on the line to get into one of them last year. So I sharpened up my pencil and my nose for news the other day and trotted off through the mid-afternoon heat to find out how come the coeds were squawking.

I still don't know. Why, those women have reception rooms (that used to provide sleeping space for four men), pictures on the walls, drapes, shades on the windows, curtains on the showers, cold water fountains on every floor, they're only a block-and-a-half from the swimming pool and tennis courts, they're surrounded by men, and they even have a booth, yes, a booth, around the telephone so everybody in the dorm doesn't get in on their conversations.

And they're complaining! Why, over in Old West—but let's not go into that.

Living conditions really aren't TOO bad, however, according to the first coed I met in Aycock. She was a Floridian—and not bad, not bad.

"It's not half as bad as we thought it would be," Miss Florida asserted. "It sort of grows on you. Most of the kids who didn't like it have moved out. Originally 130 people were to live in Aycock. There are only 92 here now. Some kids were offered a chance to move and didn't even want to."

Aycock and Graham are hardest on the maids, she said. There are no rugs to sweep the dirt under.

I think we are really learning a lot from it," she continued.

"A lot about what?" I asked

"A... about living together," she said.

I looked at her. Thank you, I said, and you can sign me up for the course.

This was just one side of the picture, as I soon discovered from two young ladies from New York and North Carolina.

"It's the most horrible thing I ever got into!" exclaimed the lady from Tar Heelia. "It's like living in somebody's outdoor camp!"

"Exactly what is so bad about it?" I inquired.

"Oh," was the answer, "we just don't have men living in here."

"There must be something wrong with it," she added. "They're moving men out of all the dorms like it around here. They're even moving my man out of Lewis—and our rooms were right across the street from each other."

Ah, me. Life does have its little tragedies.

Over in Graham I got more information. "There aren't enough mirrors," a Louisiana lass told me. "I like it, though. I like the girls. They are characters. We've got one who talks like Katherine Hepburn."

"The beds are hard, horribly hard. And we don't have elevators, but it's nice, though. Be sure to get that in."

What, I asked, is so nice about it.

"Well the people are nice," she said, "and the dormitory heads are nice."

"The what are nice!" I managed to ask after thirty seconds during which I was simultaneously replacing my lower jaw and marveling upon the freedom of speech in our great American democracy..

"The dormitory heads," she repeated. "You know, the hostesses or housemothers, or whatever you call the heads of dormitories."

There was just one other question I wanted to ask, but after that I didn't quite have the nerve. Graham and Aycock were built for men. I'd like to know if those coeds have found a use for all the fixtures in the shower rooms.

Your Vote Counts

By Bill Buchan

When the bull sessions turn inevitably to state politics, one of the first questions that I can always expect is why I am supporting Charles M. Johnson for governor. People figure, I suppose, that we should be content with our local campus political battles and leave the state fights to the so-called "professional politicians." That isn't the case at all.

I support Johnson simply because I feel that he is the best man for the office, because I feel that he will make an excellent governor and because he has pledged to support issues that I feel are necessary for North Carolina.

I didn't join the Albright bandwagon in Chapel Hill because I did not think he was qualified or ready for the job. In years to come, after more experience, he might make a fine governor. I never considered Scott for a lot of reasons. One, because I heard several months ago of the gas rationing deal during the war when Mr. Scott drove each day from his home in Alamance county to Raleigh and back. For some reason, Scott has never appealed to me as a vote-getting candidate.

This is just the second year that I have been able to vote. I'm one of those unusual persons who think that voting is an essential part in the American life. Last year, I could only vote for the mayor of the town where I was living. This year, I can go all the way up to the president of the United States. If people get out and vote—all the people—and the man that I personally am pulling for doesn't win, then there is no comeback. It's when people take voting as one of those unnecessary evils and stay away from the polls that I become disgusted and feel that elections are not fair or equal decisions of the people.

At this stage in the game, there are very few people who could be persuaded from their choice of the man they should support. If all the people who are for Johnson, or all those for Scott, go to the polls tomorrow and cast their votes, then there can be no dissatisfaction from anyone.

I happen to feel personally that Johnson is the best man for the office. Elsewhere in this issue of the DTH there is an advertisement, supporting Johnson's candidacy that is being paid for by several other Carolina students who feel as I do. If you haven't made up your mind, read that ad. Read what newspapers throughout the state have said about Johnson. Read the highlights of his platform. After you've read the ad, if you decide to vote for Johnson, go to your poll tomorrow morning and vote. If Scott is your choice, I still would urge you to vote. That way, the man that the majority of the Tar Heels want for governor will win.

(Editor's Note: I strongly disagree with Mr. Buchan's choice of candidate, but I am heartily in favor of his suggestion for settling the dispute—at the polls.)

Just Look, Stupid

By A. W. Sapp

So you can't find anything to photograph. You've looked high and low, snapped pictures hither, thither, and yon, and you still come up with the same old uninteresting pictures.

You are in one helluva mess. Don't give up hope, the dawn is breaking in the east, all will turn our right, if I may wax optimistic.

Well, let's take this problem apart, get to the nucleus, remove a few protons, and figure out the cause and cure for this particular problem.

In the final analysis, you are taking pictures not for yourself alone, but for the pleasure of your friends, acquaintances, and members of your family. With this in mind, it is not too difficult to realize that a picture-story will be far more interesting to the casual observer than a single shot would be. To cite an example: your favorite aunt Minnie has just fallen into a large mud puddle. To be sure, a picture of Minnie wallowing about in the mud would have a certain amount of interest to a person unacquainted with her. However, of much more than casual interest and humor would be a sequence-story showing Minnie in the puddle, Minnie wallowing about, Minnie fighting the mud, Minnie winning, crawling out on all fours to meet the crowd of other relatives, and finally—Minnie using the strongest invective against the Gods of Mud in general, this puddle in particular.

Always try to take pictures of things that will interest you in years to come. Your friends, the places you haunt, the places that haunt you, and in general those things that are part and parcel to everyone's life.

Finally, it will be up to you to discover the interesting subjects that are to be found everywhere. Here on the campus, we have The Old Well, the various dormitories, the Library building, Kessing Pool by day, the Arboretum by night (no shoving, please), and even main street might present a few interesting characters. After all, what has Margaret Bourke-White got that you haven't got? Who knows, you, too, might win a prize. What's stopping you?

Cholly's Follies

The Gibson Telephone Hour

By Charlie Gibson

It was 12:15, and the telephone had not rung once.

The notice Friday had certainly been plain enough. Right there leading off the classified ads section, it had said: "Everyone who wants their name in the paper call F-3361 between 12 and 1 o'clock."

12:20, and no one had called—no, not even an English teacher to fume over the incorrect grammar.

Didn't "Hey, how you?" day do any good, or are folks still bashful? If I had a nickel for everyone on campus who seems to think my name is Getmynameinthepaper Gibson, all at once I could buy a 1949 Ford, Paulette Goddard, and a dinner jacket at Chapel Hill merchants' prices. Yet here I was trying to give away golden opportunities for self-publicity—fine chances, mind you, for good old ego salve. And what happened? True, a few had already asked me if I had anything to do with that rather peculiar notice; but Lynn Hammock and Warren James did not want me to use their names.

12:30, and the phone sat there, as stupidly silent as the blind date you've just told you're an ex-convict.

This ought to prove something or other. It couldn't be that no one reads the Southeast's only collegiate daily because I distinctly remember the lynching-mad mob that day that there was no crossword puzzle. It couldn't be that no one reads it before noon, either, because I have often seen lads holding it in front of their faces in the "Y" court as camouflage for morning maneuvers. It couldn't be that everybody had a twelve o'clock class because I had just seen the appetite brigade at Lenoir Hall, charging in until one would think the food there was free or good or something. And it couldn't be that everyone had already embarked beachwards for the weekend. No, not everyone—not after I had refused to loan a fraternity brother twenty bucks to take the new coed I found last week to Myrtle.

12:40 and, lo, there came a strange ringing sensation.

"Hello. Colonial Press?"

"This is not the Colon—"

"Are my pants ready?"

"No, the Colonial Press prints but doesn't p—"

"Why aren't they ready? An active took 'em to you yesterday for me!"

"Listen, sonny boy, what say you try the University Press instead? Goodbye now."

As I hung up, in came DTH Wet Blanket No. 129456.

"Hey, louse," quoth W.B., "what the L are you trying to do? What a corny idea to fill a column, even a summertime column! The heat affecting your brain, you press copy-cat? You know the K&M Beer Delivery Service pulled your stunt earlier this week. They ran a big ad last Friday that said nothing but: 'Call 3536.' You're stale, kiddo."

I didn't know: but, sure enough, 'twas so. I called 3536, and brew boss Eddie Katzin swore that that ad had rated between 150 and 200 results, some of them even the day before the paper got off the press. Most inquirers were disappointed when there was nothing being given away. Not one bought a case of beer.

So that was it, eh? The appeal to curiosity had gotten a rise where my "I" teaser had failed. Yep, curiosity is always enough to drive stewdunce to read at least the captions under the pictures in their textbooks. I knew that; but, so help me, Winchell, I thought they craved petty publicity, too.

12:50, and I was beginning to think we had overestimated Alexander Graham Bell. Just when I was about to conclude that he was not enough of a genius to make names with our "Dr. Frank," I happened—

Charles Milner Returns To UNC From Japan Duty With MacArthur's Occupation Forces

By Sunny Rollband

Charles F. Milner returned here from Japan three weeks ago after a special 90-day assignment with the Army in which he worked as consultant with Japanese educators who were trying to set up an audio-visual program.

Milner, associate director of the Extension Division and director of the Communication Center at Carolina, arrived in Japan well acquainted with the technicalities of a program which would help educate adults and children through the new educational media of films, slides and projections of book materials.

Met UNC Alumnus

While in Tokyo he met and worked with Mark Orr, an alumnus of UNC, who is head of education for SCAP (Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers.) Before beginning to travel to the 46 prefectures (which correspond to the United States), Milner prepared an audio-visual handbook.

After spending four weeks in Tokyo, Milner began touring Japan, using two railroad cars of equipment. His staff included an interpreter who helped him in speaking with Japanese peoples.

On this tour he held 11 two-day conferences designed to train representatives from the prefectures in the use of the 2,050 projectors loaned by the United States for the program. The technicalities of these projectors, which included 1,300 sixteen mm. sound and 750 combination projectors were explained to the more than 700 people attending these sessions.

CHARLES F. MILNER

"The questions asked about the threading and other difficulties in operation are the same as those asked by everyone here in the United States," says Milner.

Set Up In Libraries

All visual aids, once explained and distributed among the prefectures were set up in the public libraries where teachers and other educational groups could have easy access to them. The sound films and other aids are American-produced, but have a Japanese sound track dubbed in.

While traveling across Japan, Milner visited the Imperial Gardens, the summer palace in Kyoto, the hot springs; went cameron fishing, shot the rapids out of Kyoto. The two times he went through Hiroshima it was too dark to see anything, he said.

At present Milner is working with Howard Bell, of the American Council on Education to have two movie projectors sent to the proposed new auditorium for Hiroshima. Bell is working on blueprints for the rebuilding of Hiroshima into the most beautiful modern city in Japan. The city, as planned will have playground, auditorium, and dormitory facilities for 30,000 children.

Raw Fish For Dinner

In his journeys around four of the five main islands of Japan, he visited many people in their homes and partook of food which included bamboo shoots, raw fish, sea weed, raw eggs, octupus, and pickled fish eyes. These meals were eaten on the floor, with chopsticks, he says.

Milner always found the people extremely courteous, with never one indication of an insult. He says they are enthusiastic about democracy, but must adhere to the examples set by the occupation forces since the Japanese are essentially an imitative extremely observing race, used to being led.

One difficulty is the Japanese confusion of the word "freedom" which to them implies no personal restrictions of any kind in the practice of democracy. Milner was amazed to find no bitterness, but rather enthusiam, especially among the younger people who must be shown that democracy is the responsibility of the individual who must work to keep democracy functioning.

Main Problems

One of the main problems at the present time is the rebuilding of the bomb-shattered industries. These districts are still completely devastated and the only activities in them are those of the people living in rude huts which barely keep out the elements.

Japan's dense population of 80,000,000 people is beset with housing and food problems. Milner saw 500 people living in the Uano railroad station in Tokyo, merely because they had no other place to go. And in this same station, his friends report people dying of starvation when they couldn't glean food from the markets or the garbage cans.

Dance Classes

Students interested in learning basic steps of social ballroom dancing are invited to attend classes on the concrete terrace at the east side of Woollen Gym on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 9 o'clock. The classes are open to all students and their wives. Julia Fuller and Bill Crutchfield are the instructors.

College Values Are Caught, Not Taught, Says House

Taking as his thesis that "some college values are caught and not taught," Chancellor Robert B. House is of the belief that good teachers have something of their personality, beliefs and their general attitude toward the world to give to their students but that in too specialized education this gift is lost in the shuffle.

In an article by Chancellor House which has been published by The Journal of General Education he says "colleges and universities have been indifferent or timorous about the personal culture, the social adjustment, and the spiritual conviction of teachers. They have frequently employed rudderless teachers to guide students. The result is cultural, social and spiritual drift on the part of students.

"We are aware of this drift in our colleges and universities and are seeking a remedy in 'general education,' a quality we desire in both students and faculty," he said. "But the approach is too exclusively intellectual. We will not solve the problem until we achieve in addition to stern discipline in subject matter a more vital personal enjoyment of culture, a more vital sense of democratic participation in our fundamental institutions, and a more humbly felt and more frankly asserted point of spiritual reference."

Chancellor House was of the opinion that "great teachers are in relation to great teaching ideals. If they pursue the ideals I think they will bring them home to their students both directly and indirectly." He pointed out several University of North Carolina professors who, he said, stood out as influential personalities while he, himself, was a student here. Among them were Dr. Francis Preston Venable, Dr. Henry Van Peters Wilson, Dr. Collier Cobb, Jr., Dr. Edwin Greenlaw, Dr. Walter Dallam Toy, and Dr. Charles Staples Mangum.

Coaching Course Here for CPA Men

The Carolina School of Commerce, at the request of the North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants, will hold a coaching course this summer for the benefit of those preparing to take the CPA examination.

The course will begin July 26 and continue until August 31 under the direction of David M. Beights of Winter Park, Fla. Professor Beights has had wide experience both as a practicing accountant and as instructor at Rollins College and the Universities of Illinois, Texas and Flordia.

According to George Perrin of A. M. Pullen Company, Greensboro, and chairman of the Educational Committee of the Association, "the certified public accountants of North Carolina are thoroughly in favor of helping those wishing to enter the profession meet the standard qualifications."

Carolina Praised By French Scholar On Local Visit

Dr. Charles Morage, Director of Studies in the School for Advanced Studies at the Sorbonne, France, has spent the past few days visiting various departments at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Morage, whose visits to well known colleges and universities throughout the country are being sponsored by a Rockefeller Fund grant, gave high praise to the University. While talking with President Frank P. Graham. he said "You have what are probably the most outstanding departments of mathematical statistics and sociology in this country."

He said, too, that the University Communication Center is, in his opinion, one of the best of its kind in the United States, and expressed the desire to set up a similar department at the Sorbonne's School for Advanced Studies, which is comparable to Princeton University's School of Advanced Studies.

While here, Dr. Morage had meals with members of the French House. He addressed the group on cultural relations between France and the United States, tracing relationships between the two countries back to early Colonial days.

From Chapel Hill Dr. Morage plans to go to Georgia, where he will visit the University at Athens. He will be in this country approximately another month.

Breed Them Young

ONE OF THE STAUNCHEST CRITICISMS of Big Time football at the University is that the Tar Heels draw so many of their players and stars from outside of North Carolina and thereby, or so the critics say, prevent North Carolina boys from playing varsity athletics in the college.

The truth of the matter is that in many sports the State is entirely incapable of producing athletes of sufficient number or caliber to make the grade nationally in competition with the produces of other states. The fault of the matter seems to lie in the fact that here in North Carolina there are not sufficient athletic facilities in our public secondary schools which the majority of the boys in the state attend. Football and basketball are two sports where North Carolina is not producing enough of the caliber gridders or cagers in line with the potential ability available among the youth of the state.

Baseball Factory

PROOF THAT SUCH MATERIAL IS AVAILABLE can be found in the sports where North Carolina excels, such as baseball. In baseball, the facilities are usually available to the young boy, and the result is that the Tar Heel state ranks in the top three among states having the greatest number of performers in the Major leagues today. There are more professional baseball leagues in North Carolina than in any other state in the union, and behind these pro circuits are a huge network of semi-pro and strictly sand lot teams that give the player of all ages and abilities a chance to play the great American sport with other competitors of his own level of talent.

The effect as mentioned, is obvious. Under such a partially-organized, partially-not plan, the game of baseball has prospered in North Carolina, and brought fame and fortune to many residents of the State.

Dealer Development

ONE OF THE BIGGEST DEVELOPERS of young baseball talent in North Carolina is the American Legion competition. The Ford people, though seeming to have nothing to talk about but their newest market sensations, have found the time during the years to put into effect and back a nationwide program of summer baseball play for the American youth.

Legion baseball has been a stepping stone for many a major leaguer and a major minor leaguer. And for many others who never had any aspirations of Big League fame, it has been an exciting and constructive factor in their maturity. Good legion baseball is well worth watching as it is both well played and well coached, a combination which means a sport of great spectator value in most every case.

The local legion team is one of the many functioning throughout the state and is at present in a tight fight for first place in the local area league competition. Legion baseball returned to Chapel Hill in the past few years after the absence of a decade and its effect and success can be measured both in wins and losses and in the players it has put forth. For one who likes an afternoon of baseball, it might be well to drop into Emerson one of these afternoons and watch the local team perform.

Back Comes the Theme

GOING BACK TO THE THEME of the apparent lackings of production in some sports in North Carolina, the fact that—where there are facilities there are champions—gets further proof in the growing game of golf. North Carolina pros are now leading the by-states tally on the big national circuit in dollars gathered, and the proof of the pro is in the payroll. Serious Skip Alexander, tough-looking Clayton Heafner, Johnny Palmer and All Smith are all pro-proof of where the boys can go if there is some place to go to begin with.

Throwing in ranking-amateur Dick Chapman and Carolina's rising star Harvie Ward and you cement your argument in rather solid fashion.

The Boiling Point

THE WHOLE QUESTION BOILS DOWN TO THE FACT that North Carolina has the material if it only could have the facilities with which to develop it. There must be no state university prouder than the one who can sport a roster of almost all home-state boys and then go out and beat the best of the nation week after week.

Given half a chance North Carolina can do this. One Charlie Justice is sufficient proof and there can and should be many more like him. And they should all go to Carolina.

The improvement must come for the most part in the high schools of the state. Here is where the blockades and bottlenecks are and here is where the development of new champions must begin. On top of this there must be more plans such as the Legion-Ford idea and the Chevrolet-soap derby which can draw and hold the interest of the athletic youth of the state.

There may even come the day when Pennsylvania will start coming to North Carolina looking for football players.

Wins Four Matches; Teams with Taylor To Win in Doubles

Los Angeles, June 24—Top-seeded Vic Seixas of the University of North Carolina remained the man to beat in the National collegiate tennis tournament after four rounds of competition.

Seixas marched into the quarter-final round along with seven other seeded stars as the tourney continued to run pretty true to form.

The other seven in the round of eight besides the Tar Heel star are James Brink, Washington; Jack Tuero, Tulane; Herb Flam, UCLA; Harry Likas, San Francisco; Fred Kaovaleski and Bernard Bartzen, William and Mary; and James Evert, Notre Dame.

Other Tar Heels

The other entries from North Carolina went out in the early rounds. Both Clark Taylor and Heath Alexander made it as far as the third round before being eliminated. Taylor fell in the third round competition before Straight Clark of USC, 6-4, 6-2. Clark later lost to Tuero.

Alexander departed from the play before the strokes of second-seeded Bring, 62, 6-0.

Seixas, meanwhile, has been playing hot and cold tennis in advancing four rounds. He got a scare in the third round when Conway Catton of San Francisco raced to a 4-3 lead in the first set of their match. But the Tar Heel rallied to take the next nine straight games and the match, 6-4, 6-0.

Again Filled

Yesterday in the round of 16, Seixas again found his hands filled. Opponent Gene Garrett of UCLA grabbed the first of a 4-set match and things looked bad for the favorite. Here, Seixas rallied as before though, and producing the best form seen in the tournament this far, banged through his rival in the last three sets to emerge a 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3 winner.

In the doubles play the Tar Heel team of Seixas and Taylor, seeded No. 3 behind Flam and Jack Garrett of UCLA and Bartzen and Kovaleski of William and Mary, continued to remain a threat to the doubles title. The pair won their third round match yesterday, Wade Spilman and Ed Chew of Texas, 6-4, 6-4.

Indians March

William and Mary continues its march toward a second straight team championship. With two of its stars left in the singles play and the same pair remaining in the doubles competition, the Indians are piling up a heavy total of winning match points.

Seixas continues to improve as the tourney progresses. A noted slow-starter, vaunted Vic seems to be improving as he goes Herbie Flam looks to be the Tar Heel's biggest competition for the singles crown.

DANCING CLASSES

The intramural department announces that dancing classes are being held every Tuesday and Thursday nights at Woollen gym beginning at 7 o'clock. Novice class instruction is first with the advance group following at 8 o'clock.

IN FAR-OFF CALIFORNIA Tar Heel star Vic Seixas continues to battle for singles honors in the NCAA tennis tournament. Last reports placed Seixas safely through the first four rounds.

Murals Finished First Week; Horseshoes Open This Monday;

The summer school mural men closed their first week of play yesterday amid a sweltering heat wave that was harder to beat than anything that has come along in quite sometime.

Big doings was the course of events on the softball and tennis fronts. The horseshoe pairings were made and matches will start on Monday.

In softball, the four loops will continue their round-robin play through Wednesday of next week. On Thursday games will be scheduled among the top two teams of each league to determine the final champion. In case of ties another day of play might be needed.

After final eliminations are held the four champions will pair off and fight it out for the top crown.

Full-scale tennis play continues as the large opening round field begins to chop itself down to a workable number. The horseshoe hurlers unlimber their strong arms and get down to business on Monday with a full schedule carded.

Harvie Ward, Pre-Tournment Choice For NCAA Golf Title

Palo Alto, Calif.—Harvie Ward, Jr., from the University of North Carolina, who this spring moved into the national spotlight by capturing the North and South amateur crown, has been classed as the man to beat to win the NCAA golf tournament to be held July 3 at Stanford University.

The young Tarboro links star who whipped some of the best simon-pures in the game today including Dick Chapman of Pinehurst and Frank Stranahan, recent British Amateur winner from Toledo, Ohio, heads a list of 137 entries representing 35 schools according to an announcement by Ted Payseur. The Northwestern athletic director and chairman of the NCAA committee said this field includes 22 full five-man teams.

Defending champion Dave Barclay of Michigan will be on hand to attempt to retain his title as the best college golfer in the land. Two other midwestern stars, Fred Wampler and John Clearly, winner and runner-up in the 1948 Big Nine race, have also entered the tournament.

Stiff competition is assured in the team play with classy outfits from coast to coast stroking at their very best for a chance at this year's crown. Louisiana State University, defending titleholder, has a full squad on hand to defend the title.

Other groups who will be seeking top laurels include Penn State, UCLA and Northwestern.

Stock Car Racing Opens Sunday at Hillsboro Track

Hillsboro, June 24—Ranking stock car drivers of the country will be competing for a $4,000 purse at the new Occoneechee speedway, located two miles east of Hillsboro on the old Durham highway, Sunday afternoon when this famous one-mile dirt track is officially opened.

Time trials will start Saturday afternoon, being slated for 1 o'clock. All cars not qualified Saturday afternoon will start at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The 15-lap consolation race will start at 2:45 o'clock Sunday with the 100-lap feature starting at 3:30 o'clock.

Tar Heel editors deliberated late last night on whether or not to enter Southern Comfort, the Tar Heel station wagon in the 100-mile feature event at Hillsboro Sunday. No decision was forthcoming at presstime.

Promoter Bill France, the genial pioneer of the stock car racing business, is anticipating a record field of entries for the national championship event, sanctioned by the National Association for Stock Car auto racing. Thirty drivers will be allowed to compete for the main purse in the 100-mile feature event, these being selected on the basis of their qualifying times Saturday and Sunday.

The new banked track is one of the most beautiful racing plants in America, being constructed at the site of the famous horse racing track that attracted race fans from all sections of the south to the famous Occoneechee farm for many years. With 100 acres of land available for parking space, plenty of parking areas are provided to accommodate the nuge crowd expected to attend this event, North Carolina's first national championship event in the 100-mile class.

All three of the Flock brothers, rated as Atlanta's gift to racedom, will compete in this big race. Fonty Flock, the 1947 national champion, regained his position as the No. 1 man in the national championship race this season by winning the feature at Birmingham last Sunday, while brothers Bob and Tim made it a clean sweep for the Flock family by winning feature races at Columbus, Ga., and Greensboro in other important events last Sunday.

Chapel Hill Juniors Battle For Top Spot In Game Here Today

Chapel Hill's Legion juniors get back into action in their determined bid for the top spot in the league three standings when they take on the Garner nine in a 3 o'clock tilt at Emerson stadium today.

The Wake Forest outfit remains on top of the loop by virtue of their not too secure one-game margin over the locals. They proved they will put up a determined fight to stay where they are in two games this week. In both battles they roared back in the late stages, one time overcoing a ten run deficit to win, to demonstrate that they will be tougher as the season continues.

Garner's not too potent juniors were the second victims of the leaders' late assault in their Wednesday game. They were edged out by a five-run rally in the ninth 7-4.

The league race is pretty well settled down to the third position with the Durham nine a full two-and-one-half games to the rear of the two leaders. Their chances were dealt a stiff jolt with the loss of ace southpaw Billy Thomas due to an arm injury against Garner on Monday.

Following along in line behind the top trio are Raleigh, Garner, and Bragtown. The records the leaders are as follows: Wake Forest nine wins and one defeat, Chapel Hill eight wins and two defeats, and Durham five wins and four defeats.

DDT, if the village would supply the labor to do the work.

The council members were instructed to find a volunteer in each of their constituencies who would do the spraying for that section of the village. Engineer Westbrook offered to give a demonstration to the volunteers Thursday afternoon in the home of Cecil Applebury at 135 King street. Each volunteer was to be allowed to charge a fee of 20c per room for the work.

Advice for Children

With the first phase of the war against the dread foe mapped out, the council turned to the discussion of educating the residents concerning polio. Mayor Goulding quoted Dr. Robert B. Lindsay of the University Infirmary as saying it would be best if the children in Victory Village were kept there. This, the doctor said, would prevent endangering the residents of other sections of the state to infection from the possibly infected children. He strongly advised against sending the children home.

Distribution of Phamplets

Councilwoman McKee gave each of the persons attending the meeting a large number of the folders and pamphlets obtained from the health department for distribution among the village residents. She stated that the health authorities had a movie about polio which they would gladly show anywhere in the settlement.

The council members decided to call a meeting of all their constituents in their respective wards after returning home from the meeting. Each was to instruct the residents of his ward to prepare for the spraying, scrub all garbage cans and coat them with kerosene, to keep their children near home and under no circumstances to allow them in any crowds, and to remain cool and give constructive effort to the prevention of further cases.

Thursday the residents of the village were cooperating. G.I. cans were beginning to shine, and trash was being trucked away. Solicitous mothers kept an alert eye out for their children, and the main topic of discussion in any group was polio.

The spraying is expected to get under way today.

Speakers for Wednesday's program included LeRoy Marceau, employee relations consultant of the Standard Oil company, in an address concerning the Taft-Hartley Law, and Dale H. Gramley, editor of the Bethlehem Globe-Times, Bethlehem, Pa., speaking on the editor's view of the Chamber of Commerce.

L. P. Dickie, manager of the Institute from Atlanta, Ga., termed this "the finest Institute session we've ever had" and voiced the opinion of the entire group as "most grateful to the University for a warm reception and the provision of extensive facilities."

He said all in attendance are having a "grand time" swimming in Kessing pool during these hot afternoons which reach 90 degrees in the shade.

The group travels en masse to South dining room of Lenoir hall daily at noontime for a luncheon party. A program under direction of Everett Rogers, student body president, and his side-kick "Pilch" lends a highly flavorable atmosphere to noon meal procedure.

A program of singing, dancing and general capering was staged in the Armory on Tuesday night by talent groups. Prizes were awarded those who showed best and souvenirs were tendered to all present.

The opening meeting of the Institute last Sunday night heard an address by Chancellor R. B. House and songs by Norman Cordon of the University Music department.

Wednesday, the University's engineer, Thomas E. Rose, advised the group that the "lower" site was no more suitably located than the "upper" site. The additional sum was not approved by the committee.

Upon receiving this information, the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen passed on the bids for the "upper" site.

Construction on the project is expected to begin at once.

CHARLES M. JOHNSON

FOR GOVERNOR

CHARLOTTE—Charles M. Johnson, who owns and uses one of the best minds in the State—he ought to be Governor—wants more "home rule" for North Carolina. That is, less from Raleigh and more from the local units—the cities and counties!

He ought to get a universal hand of applause for taking the initiative in a matter of so much importance as this to the preservation of the principle of local self-government.—Charlotte Observer.

SCOTLAND NECK—As a candidate Mr. Johnson will measure up to the standard set by those who have been Governors of North Carolina in the past. He is an able and intelligent public administrator, and in other capacities has proved his value to the commonwealth . . . He is thoroughly familiar with North Carolina and the problems of the State as a whole.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

WILMINGTON—Of all candidates, the sound and insistent voice of Mr. Johnson is the only one to prompt some early relief for the farmer on his road problem. He is the first to offer a genuine long-range rural highway improvement plan. Mr. Johnson has demonstrated his ability to place a great state issue in its proper light and then propose a sound remedy. This is just one of the many outstanding qualifications which make him the man best fitted to be North Carolina's next Governor.—Sunday Star-News.

WINSTON-SALEM—Aid for North Carolina schools has found a stout champion in Charles M. Johnson . . . One of the ablest and most efficient officials North Carolina has ever had.—Journal and Sentinel.

IT'S EXPERIENCE THAT COUNTS!!

Charles M. Johnson, through direct contact has worked with, and for, the following categories of North Carolina citizent:

FARMERS: Was born and reared a farmer on a farm near Burgaw in Pender County.

TEACHER: Member State Board of Education, Chairman Teacher's and State Employee's Retirement Commission—Recently instrumental in having Teacher Load reduced.

CCUN Leader Speaks On Voice Of America

Roberta Stirling, rising University senior, will be featured on a "Voice of America" broadcast on Independence Day, according to an announcement by the national headquarters of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations.

She will speak in her capacity as the new North Carolina State Director of the CCUN. Miss Stirling made the recording for the July broadcast while she was attending the third annual CCUN national institute in New York during the past week.

During the session Bobbie Stirling also gave a report on the work accomplished in North Carolina in its first year of existence. She said, "We in North Carolina are proud of the magnificent reaction to our work from the college students, civic and governmental leaders and the people of North Carolina for which the United Nations was conceived."

Miss Stirling's new post was officially confirmed by National headquarters at the Thursday election. She had been nominated by a steering committee of the North Carolina state organization at their convention in May under the leadership of the former state director Lincoln S. H. Kan. The North Carolina CCUN grew from one organized chapter to 28 separate units on the campuses of colleges in this state.

The CCUN has for its objectives the promotion of understanding, interest and support among the people of North Carolina and in the United Nations. The organization works primarily with college and civic groups. Its future plans include expansion into the high school and teaching levels. It is now cooperating with the newly established United Nations Information Center sponsored by the United Nations directly. The CCUN was largely responsible in getting the Center here.

There will be a short meeting of the CCUN at Graham Memorial at 3 o'clock Wednesday. A report of the national conference will be given by Kan who attended the last two days of the meeting. All those interested in international affairs are urged to attend.

School Principals Plan Annual Meet To Be Held Here

Taking "The Role of the Principal in an Effective School" as its theme, the second annual Summer Conference of the North Carolina Principals' Association, headed by O. E. Dowd, principal of the Greenville High School, will be held here July 28-30.

Several general sessions, including the opening dinner meeting the night of July 28 when Dr. I. G. Greer, Executive Vice-President of the North Carolina Business Foundation, will be held. During the afternoon panels on such topics as school plants, personnel problems, teaching aids, and qualifications and responsibilities will be held.

Guest speaker at the July 29 evening session will be Hon. H. P. Taylor of Wadesboro, University Trustee.

Dr. Harold Benjamin, Dean of the College of Education, University of Maryland, will speak at the July 29 morning session.

Conclusions to be presented by the various panel groups and a summary by Dr. Arnold Perry of the University School of Education will comprise the final program Friday morning, July 30.

Among the well known North Carolina Educators who will participate in the Conference are Dr. A. M. Proctor, Dr. Gertrude Hildreth and Dr. Mabel Rudisill, all of Duke University; Dr. J. D. Messick, Dr. A. H. Hurlbut, and Dr. Leo Jenkins, all of East Carolina Teachers College; J. E. Miller of the State Department of Public Instruction; Dr. Clyde Erwin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Paul Reid, Controller, State Board of Education; Walter E. Hess, Angier, Managing Editor, Bulletin of Second School Principals; J. P. Booth, Lenoir; W. M. Jenkins, Durham; M. E. Yount, Superintendent, Alamance Schools; Mrs. Annie Laurie McDonald, Lenoir Rhyne College, and Dr. Dennis Cooker, Dr. Perry, Dr. J. Minor Gwynn, Dr. Dorothy McCuskey, and Dean Guy B. Phillips, all of the University School of Education, and Charles Milner, associate director, University Extension Division.

Dean Phillips is in charge of local arrangements.

Students Attend Air Corps Camp

Six Air Reserve Officer Training Corps from Carolina are participating in the annual summer encampment for AROTC at the Orlando Air Force Base. A total 625 students from twelve different educational institutions in the Southeastern states are attending the camp.

The Carolina trainees are Robert Gray, C. B. Mendenhall, James H. Waynick, Grey Adams, Earl Hartsel and Harry Thomas, Jr.

No More Yack News Except 'Expected'

The Yacksty Yacks, so help us, are expected here for delivery sometime Friday, according to the Lassiter Press in Charlotte, where they are being printed. Of course, this is the third week that they have been expected on Friday, and if you want to believe it, it's entirely up to you.

Students are requested, however, to refrain from calling the Daily Tar Heel office, the Graham Memorial office or Gene Johnstone. More information can be obtained from the Charlotte people than anyone in Chapel Hill knows at the present time. At last reports, some 300 Yacks were completely finished and they, in addition to several hundred others, are expected—as we said— to be here Friday for delivery.

CIO Labor Leader To Speak to AVC

William Smith, North Carolina CIO Director, will speak tonight at 7:30 at the Presbyterian church on "Labor, the Veteran and Politics" under the sponsorship of the American Veterans Committee.

Affiliated with the labor movement for much of his life, Smith joined the CIO in 1938 after being associated with the maritime unions. He has held many important positions all over the country, serving successively as Regional CIO Director for Florida and Georgia, for North Carolina and Virginia, for New England and the West Coast. At present, he is directing activities for the CIO organizing committee in North Carolina.

AVC members are asked to remain for a short business meeting after the speech in order to elect a new secretary. The membership committee will report on its current drive. In addition, plans for a forthcoming beer party will be considered.

Parker to Speak At Georgia Meet

John A. Parker, head of the University's Department of City and Regional Planning, will be one of the principal speakers at the University of Georgia's "Leadership Training Institute" which is being held at Athens through Wednesday, June 30.

"The Community at Work" is the theme of the Institute which is sponsored by the Division of General Extension through its Department of Forums and Institutes with the cooperation of 18 state agencies.

Professor Parker is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has served as city planning consultant to a number of communities in New England and in the South. His subject at Athens will be the "Planning Process in Action."

Fight Against Polio In Victory Village Reported Underway

With its first case of poliomyelitis still less than one week old, Victory Village, with the wholehearted cooperation of its residents, the University, and the local health authorities, has almost completed its campaign of education, sanitation, and spraying in an effort to halt the further spread of the dread disease, according to Mayor Bill Goulding.

The infantile paralysis victim, Mrs. Frank W. Nelson of 206-A Jackson Circle, wife of a rising senior in the Department of Physical Education, is reported to be doing nicely at the Rex Hospital in Raleigh where she was taken last Wednesday following the positive diagnosis by Dr. Fred Patterson of the University Infirmary.

Little Sue Nelson, 13-months-old daughter of the Nelson's who showed some of the same symptons as her mother and was taken to Duke Hospital in Durham for observation, has been declared a negative case by the officials of that institution.

Sanitary Engineer James A. Westbrook of the District Health Department has expressed great satisfaction with the progress of the preventative campaign conducted in Victory Village.

"Not only have the villagers completed 75 per cent of the spraying and garbage can cleaning, but the idea has spread to other parts of the town," the health authority stated yesterday.

"The University trailer court has cleaned its garbage cans and coated them with kerosene, and the laundry house and the bath houses there have been sprayed with DDT."

With the case of the feared polio reported in Victory Village, there has also been a heightened interest in learning about the disease among the townspeople, the

Picnic for All At Hogan's Lake

A picnic derby will be held at Hogan's Lake next Tuesday afternoon between 5 and 8 o'clock with hay wagons to take all interested students from the "Y" to enjoy food and games with prizes.

Tickets for the hay ride, picnic, and full afternoon of entertainment will be sold Thursday, Friday, and Monday in the "Y" lobby. Admission will be 50 cents for all those who became "Y" members by pledging donations to either the YMCA or the YWCA during registration. All other students besides these in whose honor the affair is being given are also cordially invited but must be charged 75 cents to cover food and transportation.

The outing is being sponsored jointly by the YMCA, the YWCA, and the Hillel Foundation as part of their summertime program. Committee members in charge of the campus-wide social are Emily Ogburn, Faith Adams, and Charlie Gibson, all working with Bob Barrus, summer director of the "Y".

Philosophy Head Publishes Book

"A Philsophy of Mathematics," a text for courses in logic and the foundation of mathematics, by Dr. L. O. Katsoff, head of the University Philosophy Department, has just been published by the Iowa State College Press.

According to the Press, Dr. Kattsoff "presents the basic concepts of the chief authors on the subject—Frege, Russell, Pasch, Chwistek, Hilbert, Church, Godel, Mannoury, von Neuman, Heyting—and then states his own conclusions.

"The original sources of information on this subject are widely scattered, many of them accessible in only a few libraries. In this comprehensive treatise, Dr. Kattsoff draws together the significant information."

Fourth of July University Band Concert Slated

The University Veterans Association and the Chapel Hill American Legion will sponsor a 4th of July program in the Forest Theater featuring a concert by the University band and a talk by R. L. McMillian, ex-state commander of the American Legion.

The program, starting at 4 o'clock, will be presided over by Hugh Wells, President of the UVA. The Reverend Joyce of the Carrboro Methodist Church will offer a prayer and Chancellor House will give a short talk.

In case of rain the program will be held in Memorial Hall.

The UVA will also sponsor an open house on Wednesday night in the clubhouse. In addition to the jackpot, valuable prizes, donated by the merchants of Chapel Hill, will be given away. Because no one answered the jackpot question last week the jackpot has now accumulated to $20.

UVA Investigates Veterans' Claims

The University Veteran's Association met yesterday and voted to investigate the complaint of veterans with dependents who claim that their pay raises have not been retroactive to April 1.

Last February 14 President Truman signed the bill that gave the raise to the vets. Later the Veteran's Administration sent out a letter saying that if vets with dependents wanted to get the raise for their dependents, and have it retroactive to April 1, they must file their claim before July 1. The vets complaint is that although he filed the claim the raise so far has not been retroactive to April 1.

Hugh Wells, President of the UVA, said that he had contacted F. C. Shepard, Veterans Advisor, and that Shepard said if the vets with complaints would see him, he would promise action within 48 hours. Shepard's office is on the third floor of South building.

Wherry Resigns Position Here

Prof. Robert J. Wherry, professor of psychology at Carolina since 1937, has resigned to become a member of the Psychology Department of Ohio State University, it was learned here today. His appointment at Ohio becomes effective October 1.

Professor Wherry is a graduate of Ohio State in the class of 1925 and also received his master's and doctor's degrees there.

From 1944 to 1947 he was chief of the Research Analysis Section in the Adjutant General's Division in Washington, his work being concerned with selection tests for aerial gunners and the development of tests, interview procedures and rating forms for numerous military projects.

Notice for Women

All women students who plan to be here for the second summer term are now asked to pay at the Cashier's Office in the basement of South Building a $6 room deposit for the second term. The receipt received for the deposit from the Cashier should then be taken to the office of the Dean of Women where the actual room reservation will be made.

Faculty Club Meets

Prof N. J. Demerath of the University Sociology Department will be the speaker before the bi-weekly luncheon of the Faculty Club on Tuesday, June 29, at the Carolina Inn. His subject will be, "Living Conditions in Chapel Hill."

Republican Meeting

The Young Republican Club will meet Thursday night at 7:30 in Roland Parker Lounge 3 of Graham Memorial. All Republican students are invited to attend the meeting and take part in discussions.

Special Legislature Slated for Thursday

A special session of the Student legislature will be held at 7 o'clock Thursday night in the Di Senate Hall in New West, according to George Rodman, Parliamentarian of the body.

"It is imperative that all members and proxies be present, as the appointment of the temporary student council by President of the Student body Jess Dedmond will be considered," said Rodman, who is ranking member of the Student ligislature in the absence of the president and the president pro-tem during the summer months.

The parliamentarian stated that other matters of importance would be discussed at the meetings.

Di Senate Again Discusses Truman

Harry Truman's candidacy to be the next president of the United States will again be the topic for discussion when the Dialectic Senate meets tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West.

The bill on Truman was to have been argued pro and con last week until the Di moved to adjourn early to hear the broadcast of the Republican convention. Tonight it will be reconsidered along with the President's recent uncomplimentary remarks about Congress.

Gran Childress, summertime speaker of the Senate, has extended a special invitation to the meeting tomorrow to all those who are interested in joining the Di at this time, either for the summer alone or permanently. Members of the Philantropic Assembly will also be welcomed since their own forensic group is inactive until fall.

Newsome Writes For Britannica

Dr. A. R. Newsome, head of the University of North Carolina History Department, has contributed an article on this state to the 1948 Britannica Book of the Year, the annual summary of the preceding year's events which is published by the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

He is one of a number of authorities on business, industry, science, politics and education who have contributed to the 1948 Britannica Book of the Year which contains nearly a 1,000 articles covering the developments of 1947.

WSSF Benefit To Present Soup To Nuts For Charity

Everything from entertainment and laughs to dates and faculty slaves will be offered the audience at the World Student Service Fund benefit show this Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Tickets for the charity review will be sold between 9 and 1 o'clock in the "Y" lobby beginning today. The price of admission—55 cents—is for a full two-hour show to include a novelty auction, a one-act comedy by the Playmakers, and skits and musical numbers by Sound and Fury. Proceeds will be given to WSSF by the YMCA, the YWCA, and the Hillel Foundation to further world-wide education.

Opening the charity show Thursday evening will be the most novel auction in campus history. E. J. Woodhouse of the University political science department will present approximately twenty coeds as dates for those who pledge the highest donations to WSSF.

Auctioneer "Eager Jaw" Woodhouse will also sell out several of his fellow faculty members into student bondage. Those who bid the largest WSSF pledges in this case will obtain divers personal services from prominent University personalities. Instruction in either tennis or pool playing will be secured from Fred Weaver, ex-racket and cue shark and present dean of men.

Some lucky Lenoir hall addict will hire Stuart Sechriest of the journalism department to stand in the chow line for him, then serve his food at the table, and pre-taste it for poisoning. Music-lovers and lovers in general who desire serenades for their dates anywhere in Chapel Hill can obtain either Chancellor Robert B. House and harmonica or N. B. Adams and guitar, the latter specializing in Spanish renditions.

Possibly the best buy of the evening will be Walter Spearman, also a member of the journalism school and baby-sitter extraordinary. The tired, tried, and true father of a two and a five-year-old who are currently out of town on his vacation, Spearman assured all who are interested that he will have ample time and experience for tending infants of all ages and degrees of dangerousness.

Other faculty members as yet unannounced will fall before the Woodhouse hammer as dog walkers, "Y" court shoe shiners, and homework doers, according to Emily Ogburn, Eloise Jacobi, and Jerry Weiss, student co-chairmen for the entire show.

The second feature on the program will be "Close Quarters," a one-act Playmaker comedy concerned with trailer life at a uni-

Bynum Hall Loses Gymnasium Claim

Extensive building programs at the University of North Carolina have taken away the novelty of the phrase, "something new has been added" but local interest was aroused this week when something old was taken away.

No longer will strangers in Chapel Hill wander into Bynum Hall looking for the swimming pool or a place to take a shower. For the Roman capitals, "GYMNASIUM," prominently embossed across the facade of the building, were scrapped off.

Although Bynum was renovated to house the Journalism Department, the Press and the News Bureau in 1939, the label "GYMNASIUM" remained until this week.

And during those nine intervening years occupants of Bynum were obliged to explain apologetically from time to time that the swimming pool was no longer located here and the athletic department was to be found in Woollen Gymnasium "across the highway."

Bynum was built in 1905 by William Preston Bynum in memory of his grandson, William Preston Bynum, Jr., a member of the class of 1893, who died in his junior year. It served as the gymnasium until 1939 when Woollen Gym was built.

Giduz Announces French Program

The following program has been announced for the French House by Dr. Hugo Giduz, for the coming week.

Tonight skits will be read by members of the French House. Wednesday, the French Film "The Bargekeepers Daughter" will be presented in the Village Theater. Thursday, two short plays will be presented by French House members. Friday, Mrs. Mary Castles, former teacher of French in Washington high schools will sing French songs and wear the costumes fitting the regions from which the song comes. Saturday, the weekly picnic will be held.

Carolina Songs Ring Out . . . | . . . In Yankee Land

Tar Heels Mix With Texans At CCUN Meet

By L. S. H. Kan

"Hark the Sound of Tar Heel Voices" mixing with Cornell Alma Mammy swirled through the smoke and beer fumes.

It was the German-American club in New York . . . the gather-Heels were there, tired from Heels were there, tiered from fully a week of conferencing at the CCUN national institute.

They were relaxing for a few hours before the final day when reports will be made and the work accomplished evaluated. Meanwhile the North Carolina delegation representing the 5 districts and the state headquarters were having fun with the other delegates from all parts of the nation.

Shop talk met with stony silence . . . even if some eager beaver wanted to discuss what Mrs. FDR said at the institute. Somebody starts a song and the roar of other collegiates sweeps the atmosphere. All varieties of drinks were on the tables, cokes, orangeades, beer, cocktails and straights covered the checkered tables. A young lady fumbled for her lipstick and began to write on the whitewashed pipes overhead already marked to overflowing by preceding generations of students who left their initials and what was more important their college names.

But it was not all play for the weary CCUN members. Their committees had sat up many nights watching the dawn wind sweep the empty littered streets while they framed resolutions which might truthfully reflect the present day thoughts on foreign affairs of the nation's collegians.

Many of the delegates had instructions, as to what they were to achieve and what they were to say. All over the nation the college men and women wanted to be heard through their national organization. They wanted "in" in the world they were to live in, and had fought for, and which would belong to their children.

The North Carolinians acquitted themselves well. Their new state director Bobbie Stirling had transcribed the thoughts of the young people of North Carolina for a Voice of America broadcast. Norman Bie of Asheville Biltmore had shown the students from other states how wide-awake the smaller colleges were in world thinking. Flora Riggan of Flora Macdonald College and Barbara Yount of Lenoir-Rhyne College upheld southern charm and new thinking.

California, Washington, the Dakotas, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, New York students, and those from other states listened to represenatives of the United States, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt and Foster Harding of the New York Times. They were attentive and discriminating. The delegates weighed the words and if they found the reasoning lacking they would question the speakers for a better explanation.

Shaw No Atheist . . . | . . . Just an Individual

Shaw Biographer Started Career With Snapshot

By Jim Dickinson

The George Bernard Shaw collection of 10,000 items now on display in the main corridor of the library got its start some 40-odd years ago with Shaw sending the mandatory message, "Send me your photograph," to Dr. Archibald Henderson, who was then a graduate student at the University of Chicago.

It all began when young Henderson, an ardent admirer of Shaw and his works, sent across the sea an humble request that Shaw consider him an applicant for the man-sized job of writing the Shaw biography.

"You look like the man who can do the job," was Shaw's prompt reply upon receiving the aspiring student's photo. A humorous connotation of this message was seen by Henderson when later he visited Shaw and saw the author's release to newsmen that only a "desperate" man would attempt to become the Shaw biographer.

Dr. Henderson, mathematics department head and the only authorized Shaw biographer, contributed the Shaw collection to the library recently after 50 years as a University faculty member and 45 years as the Shaw biographer.

The collection consists in nine cases of Shaw's writings including drama, art, music, novels, cartoons, caricatures and scenes from plays. Also included is Dr. Henderson's first biography of Shaw written in 1911.

Shaw terms the biography of 1911 as a "signal service" rendered him by his lifelong friend and biographer. Prior to that time, Shaw has written, he had been called a Shelleyan atheist, vegetarian, humanitarian, street-corner agitator, and a leading spirit in Fabian society.

"Henderson pulled me together into one character," he wrote. "I became an individual where I had not even been a species. I had become uncollected odds and ends. Henderson collected me and advanced my standing very materially."

Shaw wrote that he has never been able to feel convinced that he was worth all the labor Dr. Henderson devoted him.

"But if he thinks so it is not for me to gainsay him," said Shaw. "I have tried to give him authentic facts without hampering him as a critic."

A majority of the works in the collection bear the author's autograph, and many contain personal messages to Dr. Henderson within the covers. In direct contrast, Shaw has always considered autographs as "forgeries" and has only placed his name upon those items sent to his biographer.

On one set of books Shaw wrote, "The best excuse for these old novels is that Dickens could not have written them."

A "black and white" portrait of Shaw hangs on the library wall overlooking the glass cases bearing the collection. The unusually lifelike masterpiece was painted by William Tittle of London in 1924 and has become a work of international recognition.

Shaw rewrote many of his writings and always gave evidence that he preferred people to see his works in the best edition.

He inscribed this message in one of the books he sent to Dr. Henderson, "Consider this a first edition because in later ones the millionairess is not a borer (a woman boxer is unbearable and on the stage unconvincing) but a Judo (jujitsu) wrestler."

Yellow Journalism

It may sound presumptious for a columnist on a college newspaper to reprimand professional newsmen who might logically be considered his betters. However, that is what Pete Gerns is doing on this page today, and although opinions expressed by Daily Tar Heel columnists are their own and not necessarily those of the paper, in this case the Daily Tar Heel agrees in essence with Mr. Gerns.

Peter Carlton is news director for a radio station in a town for which the 1940 census listed a population of 11,564. What he knows about Chapel Hill we do not know, but it must be very little to judge from the story he wrote last week concerning "communist threat" against the manager of the Carolina theater for showing anti-communist films.

Maybe Mr. Carlton has an axe to grind against the University. Maybe he doesn't. At any rate it is evident that it is people like him rather than people within Chapel Hill who are chiefly responsible for spreading black rumors about communistic activity here. They shoot off their mouths without checking their facts and because they are supposedly reliable newsmen and their stories are printed in reputable newspapers what they say is believed by many people.

Mr. Carlton took a grain of truth, divorced it from its true interpretation, and built a sensational news story. He engaged in a type of journalism which sells newspapers and makes people listen to newscasts—for a while. It was journalism of this same type that rushed the United States into the ignominious Spanish war. It is a type of journalism commonly called "yellow."

No doubt Mr. Carlton is a more competent craftsman in his own territory, and therefore we suggest that he stay there. We doubt that he would hold his job long if his stories about the people of Elizabeth City were no more accurate than his story about Chapel Hill.

Write Away to Write Away

Today on this page the first letter this summer written to the Daily Tar Heel for publication is being printed in the Write Away column.

For the benefit of new students here, Write Away is a standing column in this paper during regular terms and also during the summer. It is open to all students who have anything they want to say upon any subject—so long as it is not lewd or libelous.

Only restrictions on letters submitted are that they should be not more than 300 words, typed or written legibly, with the writer's name signed in longhand and his address given.

The writer's name will be withheld from publication on request but will be released to anyone asking for it who has a good reason for wanting to know. Letters longer than 300 words will be shortened by the editors to make room for more letters. Otherwise you have complete freedom to use the Write Away column in any way you wish.

So if you have any gripes, requests for information, or random thoughts on any subject, write a letter to Write Away.

The Hard Look

A former Carolina student said to us during a pleasant visit in New York, "I have come to a great decision. Never will I work here or live here. The people of New York are hard, they look it, act it and seem to be unapproachable. I'm going to stay in the South."

Of course we are happy she is going to stay South to grace our beautiful scenery; however, we are a little perturbed at her reactions. Is the generalitiy true that the Yankees or more particularly the New Yorkers are hard? Have they become callous and unfeeling in the maelstorm that they are constantly living amidst? Is the scene such as we saw when a taxi-driver swore at a drunken, broken Bowery tramp and as the car passed the bum drew his fist back in threat with both his eyes and lips mumbling curses . . . is the scene a true portrayal of all New York?

We think not. We think there is a heart wherever human beings are. Sometimes the heart is hidden, because of man's instinctive desire for survival. On other occasions kindness reveals itself in gruffness. Perhaps the taxi-driver was cursing at the world which allowed bums on the Bowery.

And as for our sweet southern miss who wants to run away from reality, we feel that she needs to get out of the cotton wrapping. No matter where she goes, she will find harshness and cruelty, but it is up to each of us as individuals to find the causes and try to do something about it in our life time.—L.K.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official newspaper of the Publication Board of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where it is issued daily during the regular sessions of the University by the Colonial Press, Inc., except Mondays, examination and vacation periods, and during the official summer terms when published semi-weekly. Entered as second-class matter at the post office of Chapel Hill, N. C., under the act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price: $8.00 per year, $3.00 per quarter.

Hodgepodge

The Answer From Aycock

(The answer to the Hodgepodge column of last Friday—which dealt, more or less, with the living conditions of women students in Aycock and Graham dormitories—we received the following communication entitled: "Reply to Ed Joyner —AYCOCK GIRLS NOT SQUAWKING")

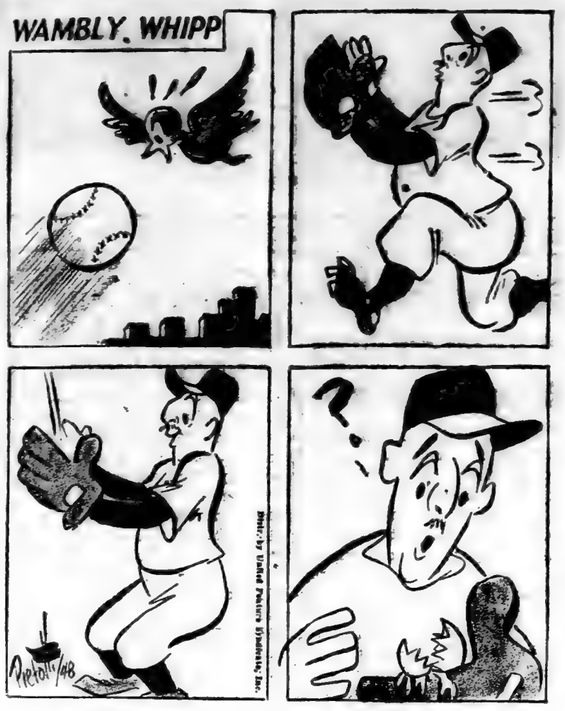
The girls—and old ladies—of Aycock read your article "Coeds Have a Rough Life" in the June 25th Tar Heel with more than a little interest. There's not been much squawking, has there? My observation, as an inmate, is that they have accepted conditions with remarkable fortitude.

The reception room, after a little water was applied where needed, was made fairly presentable, ivy on the mantel some rushes in the fireplace—draperies for the window. There, three or maybe more of the ninety-two Aycock residents can entertain their dates—at one time . . . (Let's see, in six weeks that makes how many? . . .)

The hall fountains we appreciate on these scorching days. And the one telephone, by a fair and equable division is available to each girl at least once a week. (Line forms on right.)

The bathrooms aren't so bad. By adding a complicated network of wash lines ninety-two panties and bras and what-not can be hung up to dry. Of course we have to duck each time we come in and out, but that's not hard. The mind says, as we approach the door "Bathroom, duck." (Note: All fixtures are not used.)

As for the bedrooms, I can speak only for my own. The metal furniture still is usable, and although the drawers stick, yet they do not deserve the violent kicking that the previous occupants apparently gave them. After a scrubbing of my floor, which removed all but the ink, gum, cigarette burns, and some mysterious dark brown stain. . . . (Having read so much Shakespearean tragedy lately I am sure I make too much of this last. . . .) the room is not too bad. The bed, however, is peculiarly constructed. It is concave—so deeply grooved that once inside, the occupant is just about lost to view. It's something like a hammock—but not so soft.



The closets are adequate. Over one of mine was left a pennant with poignant inscription: "I Need Lovin'." I have let it remain. My room is different from many others in that it boasts a globe for the center ceiling light. "The boys made them the target for sling shots," someone explained to me, "so they are not replaced."

No, Aycock Barracks is not so bad. With some soap and water, and a bit of airing of the mattresses—which can throw up a smoke screen if treated too vigorously—it would be quite livable.

And really it is good for the girls, for it offers positive proof of what men are satisfied with. Any Aycock girl when she marries will never snivel because her man doesn't notice her lace curtains, doilies, and hooked rugs. She'll accept his indifference with a philosophical resignation because of her experience here.

No, I protest the girls of Aycock are not squawking. However, in respect to this word Squawking—there is one statement in your column that interests me. "They're surrounded by men" you say (with true masculine complacency.) Ah yes, and there's the rub. It's the men, unfortunately, who do the squawking. At ungodly hours—yelling pleasantries, revelling in the wee hours. And when they are not squawking their radios are. Some ardent Republican member of Manley adjusted his radio so that it could be heard from the swimming pool to President Graham's house, under the worthy aim, no doubt, of winning over all the students in the neighborhood to the support of Dewey. I am afraid, however, that his efforts were in vain, for by 1:40 a. m. those who were trying to sleep were quite fed up with the whole convention.

Chastisement . . .

For Shame, NandO

By Pete Gerns

The Raleigh News and Observer of June 25 is guilty of irresponsible journalism. In a story titled "Threats Made over Showing of Films," this newspaper, which usually manages to show some dignity of journalistic endeavor, did a great disservice to this university and its community.

It seems that a few students here did not like the showing of "Make Mine Freedom," a technicolor propaganda short which recently was shown at the Carolina—they booed it, and later asked Mr. Smith, manager of the theater, why he had to show such "bunk."

A radio news commentator, Peter A. Carlton, who earns his livelihood as a member of the WGAI staff at Elizabeth City, and who attended the recent week-long meet of the Southeastern Chamber of Commerce Secretaries, heard some mention about the incident and passed on such stuff as only a vivid imagination can visualize to the News and Observer without consulting Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith then received a phone call from the News and Observer in which he was asked what had happened at the "Make Mine Freedom" show, if he had actually received threats when he showed "The Iron Curtain," a recent photoplay dealing with communist activity in Canada, and whether he feared for his life. Mr. Smith was dumbfounded. He replied that he had never heard of Carlton and explained that "you can't please everybody" to the voice on the other end of the line. He admitted that there had been some booing which occurs with the showing of many pictures, and that he had received what he considered a prankster's call at the showing of "The Iron Curtain." He had passed it off as just another episode and chalked it up to the publicity given to demonstrations against this film in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco. He explicitly told the News and Observer that they should ignore the report made by Carlton.

The next day, the News and Observer wasted a good fifteen inches, that they usually fill with slightly better stuff, on misstatements and exaggerations of facts and quotations from sensation-loving Carlton, on whose shoulders must lie the blame for this unfortunate affair. Several other papers, including the Durham Sun, also played up the story as being gospel truth.

We would like for the reader to know that Mr. Smith is completely innocent of this matter and has been, unfairly, made the scapegoat in this affair, as any superficial purview of the article in question and editorials based on it which since have been sported in various other newspapers of the State will show.

"Wallace carries on FDR's tradition" was the theme of the Wallace-for-President meet held at Raleigh a week ago. The tete-a-tete, whose success was tied to the kite of Paul Robeson's fame, left many disappointed and unimpressed.

Singer Robeson, who has donated a year of his life to the Third Party Movement, was not the Robeson of old. Visibly worn and shaken by the ordeal of a long tour, he failed to lend his full force even to one of his favorite arias, "O Isis, and Osiris," Sarastro's solo from Mozart's "Magic Flute," with whose rendition he only two years ago had brought the house down at Lansing, Michigan. The applause he received for the intonation of several other musical pieces, among them "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Old Man River," was but a little more than polite handclapping.

The greater part of the evening was taken up by Clark Foreman, treasurer of the Third party, in denunciation of Truman, the Democrats in general and the Republicans in particular. He accused them of being actors in the coalition of two parties behind the scenes.

His quest for funds was fairly successful. Heading the list of financial adventurers was the local "Wallace-For-President" club with an offering of $50 to the campaign chest. Among other contributors was one Charles Mosely, of Edwards, Miss. He had come a long way.

Well Tan My Tail

Luray, Va. —(UP)— After nearly a century, it has been learned why a distinguished Cavalier lawyer and once counsul to Italy spent his spare time traveling up and down the Shenandoah Valley buying cow tails.

The diary of the Hon. John M. McPherson, state senator, was found when an old building was razed here.

In it were such notations as:

"This day, May 3, 1847, I paid William Patton 18 cents for 24 cow tails at 3-4 of a cent each."

The notations only confirmed the reports that had been handed down for years—that the esteemed senator traveled the valley on horseback, transacting secretive deals with certain farmers. It was rumored that he bought cow tails.

In another place he made reference to profit made by a certain section of the code of Virginia, and the mystery came to light.

The section provided for sheriffs to lash the bare backs of wife-beaters and habitual rogues with a "well-tanned cow tail."

Lashing of prisoners in Virginia was prohibited several years ago.

Ugly Rumor, Lovely Dream

By Bill Buchan

This business about Saturday classes seems to be popping up again out of nowhere. According to the story that we got Saturday night from a fairly authoritative source who was quoting an excellent source, the six-day class week has already been passed either by the Board of Trustees or a committee of the Board.

Now, the story may be completely false (and we certainly hope it is), still the fact that it is going the rumor-round on campus warrants its repeating here. According to our source, the powers-that-be have devised a neat method of scheduling Saturday classes without changing the current schedule too much.

Their system is simply this: all 8 o'clock Monday classes will meet on Saturday at 8, instead of Monday. All 9 o'clock Tuesday classes will meet on Saturday at 9, instead of Tuesday and so on for 10 o'clocks on Wednesday and 11 o'clocks on Thursday, thus assuring an 8 to 11 class session on Saturday morning.

When this new system is to be put into effect seems to be rather vague, but it could be done very easily for the fall quarter with hardly a turn of the wrist. Naturally, if the trustees approve the idea, the administration will have to go along, even though they might oppose it.

The solution to the problem (taking for granted that it is a "problem" that hundreds of students leave the Hill for weekends) could possibly be found in recreational ideas for Chapel Hill and vicinity. There are any number of recreational facilities that could be constructed and put into use by any enterprising businessman who realizes that Chapel Hill with its thousands of students is a business paradise. For instance, we could use a bowling alley, a billiard parlor, a couple more close-in night clubs, and more than anything else, a new Graham Memorial or student union building.

A buddy and I got to dreaming a couple of nights ago and we tore down and moved Memorial hall from its present location to Emerson stadium. Then we removed Gerrard hall and the wornout Y building and in this huge space formerly occupied by the three buildings, we built a large, beautiful and useful student union building that held a modern snack bar, an auditorium as big as Gerrard, numerous "lounges"—twelve at least. In addition to the lounges, the third floor of the new building was divided into offices for all the organizations on the campus, the Y, Hillel, [illegible] IRC, CCUN, SDA, YDC YPC and dozens of others. There we had a fourth floor that was called "publications alley" and here there were offices close together for Tarnation, the Yackety Yack, the Daily Tar Heel and yes, the Carolina Magazine.

And the best part about the dream was that the new building was located right in the center of the campus and was packed continuously from the time the snack bar opened at 7:30 in the morning until the night club in the basement closed at midnight. And all weekend, in addition to the weekdays, students made the new student union their second home. Then one day, a visiting committee from the Board of Trustees came to look the new building over. They arrived on a Saturday night. They were amazed at the crowds of people both in the new Graham Memorial and in the bowling alleys and billiard parlors and the theaters down town.

They were amazed, but they shouldn't have been, because all that had ever been needed to end the mass exodus on weekend was the new student union and better facilities downtown. Once the students had obtained them, they didn't even think of leaving town.

Logically Speaking . . .

Nothing Is Confusing

By Doris Weaver

A Daily Tar Heel columnist has a broad choice of subjects with which to flout his banner of ignorance before his equally ignorant fellow students. He may choose Communism or he may simply polka dot the column with timely ho-hums in the name of the Almighty Space. I prefer to write about a subject with which I am Thoroughly familiar—nothing.

Webster defines nothing as "that which does not exist," but what Carolina student accepts the word of an authority without an argument? Besides Webster was only a man. What's more, I couldn't very well write about nothing if it did not exist. Ask the Philosophy department—they'll tell you it's both true and false. Webster evidently never took a course in Logic.

Nothing means many things to Carolina students, for they've done a lot of research in that field. It's what they do with most of their time. It's what they learn in a few of their courses and would like to learn a lot more. Nothing is something which does not exist, so they must learn something—that's logic.

The logical way to continue this argument would be to further define logic, but if I know nothing, I certainly don't know the meaning of logic—that's logic.

Nothing and logic are closely related, for we begin with nothing and through logic we trace some confusing assumptions around a circle to learn that nothing is something which does not exist. Therefore, nothing is something. There's only one thing wrong with logic—it isn't logical.

At this point we emit an exhausted sigh and take time out for our editorial ho-hum. Nothing makes me tired, and therefore I feel refreshed and ready to continue.

Nothing is an ever circular vaccum which begins with emptiness and ends in the same happy rut. Nothing is as empty as this argument. It is as real as the professor with a spot of hair on each side of his head who lullabies us to sleep with his melodic monotone. It takes setting-up exercises in the minds of students in logic classes, and prompts them to draw its image where notes should be. Nothing is as attractive to college students as members of the opposite sex.

The logical conclusion follows that nothing really exists—it exists in the minds of many Carolina students. Never take the word of an expert. Think it over and let logic prove to you that he is wrong. However, stop when you've reached a conclusion different from his, for as we whirl around the wheel of logic we reach again the cog which says that he is right. Then we're back where we started—with nothing.

Lenoir Catches It Again

Editor:

In advertising one of the well-known brands of cigarettes, the phrase, "Comparison proves," is used. Conditions in Lenoir Hall today invite that same comparison.

The food is served in minute helpings, the lack of sufficient bus-boys causes congestion in finding a clean table, and the vegetables are no longer served on the plates as so many of us are used to having done at our homes and here, too.

But these complaints are by no means the chief indictment of the management of Lenoir. That indictment is that, although the dining hall was built, put into operation and is supposed to cater to the needs of the students, it no longer does that, but rather suits the convenience of a few who seem determined to put barriers in the way of the students at every turn. And herewith comes the comparison.

Last summer, Lenoir was operated two hours for each meal (two and a quarter hours for breakfast) with the four main floor lines in operation, and in addition, the Pine Room was operated. This was done to meet the needs of 4,000 students. Today, only three lines are operated (two on weekends) and they are open only one and one half hours for lunch and supper, two hours for breakfast. This is done with the enrollment being 4,400 students. Thus the facilities are almost cut in half in the face of an increased enrollment. This is just not logical. The effects often cause lines that are so slow moving and long as to create a delay of 30 or more minutes.

These facts are presented for the consideration of those present in summer school. Let the demand be made and the students will secure better service in our University-operated cafeteria which was intended to have the serving of the student body as its prime consideration.

Seixas Upset By Likas In NCAA Net Finals; Ward Favored As Golf Begins

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael III

Always a Bride's Maid

THE HACKNEYED, BUT SPACE-FILLING EXPRESSION—Always the Bride's Maid but Never the Bride—might well be applied to Tar Heel Vic Seixas. Mr. Victor has been in that spot rather often during a sparkling tennis career, but with special reference to this NCAA tennis title, he has never quite made the top.

This failing, of course, is no besmirch to the character, on the court or off, of the Tar Heel ace. It is merely a case of either having faced a better man, or having faced a man under not the best of circumstances. For, one of the big failings of the national collegiate tennis title as far as Mr. Seixas is concerned. is the fact that the competition is not played on the grassy surface the major national tournaments are.

Modest Mr. Seixas would never let you know that the grass made that much difference, but anyone who has seen the difference will tell you that such a difference exists and leans in Vic's favor. The Seixas game is one of Big Service, Big Rush, and a change of pace that leaves opponents flat-footed at the base lines. Mr. Seixas' form is nothing to write to the Davis Cup committee about and is not advised for the local youngsters who have been inspired to the game, but for Mr. Seixas, it has a lot of winning ability. And that is the purpose of the game in the first place.

Chop, Chop, Chop

NOW SEIXAS HAS A LOT OF CHOP in his rather meaty game, which for the uninformed is a method of hitting the ball with any but the flat surface of the racket and causing the ball to be hit with heavy spin. This spin can do wonders for the hitter, for the ball on hitting the court, veers to one side or the other, or dies a sudden, quick, painless death, which instead causes great anguish for the opponent.

On hard surface such as the tourney in California was played on, the cut or chop causes less effect on the action of the ball and thereby neutralizes to some extent a game such as that of Mr. Seixas. That is one reason why Vic plays so well on the summer tennis sweep, for most all of those tournaments including the nationals at Forest Hills are played on the grass.

The cynics will venture at this point that a true champion si good on any surface and that is true and one reason why Mr. Harry Likas is National collegiate tennis champion.

There is one more fact about that tournament in California that should be reported and that doesn't quite make the limited news accounts. That is the impression that Mr. Seixas has created on California crowds in his appearances during the past two years. A college can be proud of its performers who are always champions off the court if merely runners-up in the actual action.

As for the playing, Vic, 'tis better to have been runner-up than not to have competed at all.

Many Sports, Sport

THE FINE SHOWING OF VIC SEXIAS on the West Coast and the fine promise being shown by Harvie Ward in this week's NCAA golf tournament at Palo Alto proves one point above all others—Carolina is not a one sport college.

Many critics of the University have continually pushed home the point that the University does everything along the football line and lets the rest of the show play as it may. Victor and Harvie are two that have proved otherwise and they are not alone in their efforts. Carolina won its first national championship in cross country last fall and that started the Tar Heels on a fine athletic year.

The football team, of course, won further national recognition in the fall, and the soccer squad ,though young in athletic age at the college, sent members to the Olympic tryouts.

The winter season kept the ball rolling. Basketballers still reckon the national fame of John Dillon, though it ebbed slightly from a 1946 peak while Bob Paxton led the local battle for national cage honors. The swimmers gained their share of national fame and will send at least two performers, as yet unannounced but sure to include Norman Sper, to the Olympic tryouts.

Springtime in Sports

IN THE SPRING THE TAR HEELS' fancy turned full face to national honors. Tennis and golf laurel-seeking has been heretofore exposed, and the baseball team made its way to the Eastern NCAA finals before calling it a day. On the active track field distance man Jimmy Miller scored in the NCAA track and field meet for the Carolina trackmen.

Now comes the word that from the list of Tar Heel academic inactives, can be drawn the name of the first Tar Heel to make the 1948 United States Olympic team. That name is, of course, Chunk Simmons, who left school last Winter, without pretense, knowing fully the needed athletic perfection could not be attained while being held back by a heavy academic load. So, first he will enjoy the greatest thrill of an athlete—the international representation of country—and then return, unburdened to finish his college career.

All of which proves, dear friends, variety is the spice of the seasoned athletic program.

California Swinger Dumps Tar Heel Ace In West Coast Final

Los Angeles — Favored Vic Seixas fell just a step short of his goal of the National collegiate tennis title here last week when a driving newcomer to the collegiate ranks, Harry Likas of San Francisco, upset the Tar Heel ace in the finals of the college singles.

Seixas had reached the championship match by defeating highly-rated Herbie Flam of UCLA on Friday and thereby averaging a pre-tournament loss.

The Hard Way

Meanwhile, Likas had made the finals the hard way. In the round of eight he upset Jack Tuero, seeded third in the tourney to enter the semi-finals. Here he ran into Jimmy Brink of Washington, the No. 2 man in the competition. He eliminated him also.

That put him in the finals against Seixas, the No. 1 netter in the tournament, but again the up-and-coming West Coast star was not to be beaten by big names or fancy ranking.

Likas stroked Seixas from the court in four sets and left the fans wondering if what they had seen was really what had happened. Never was the North Carolina star really in the match as Likas smashed through to a 6-4, 1-6, 7-5, 7-5.

At His Best

Seixas played at his best of the day in the second set which he won and then battled his opponent all the way in the third. But Likas put on the steam and captured the third set and left the court at the intermission with a 2-1 lead.

After the return Vaunt Vic never got back in the match and Likas ran out the set and the championship in easy 6-1 fashion.

It was the second straight year that Seixas had reached the finals. Last year Garner Larned of William and Mary who did not defend his crown this season, defeated the Tar Heel in the finals.

Seixas and partner Clark Taylor were eliminated from the doubles play in the quarter-finals earlier in the week.

Trojans Defeat Yale For NCAA Title

Southern California's Trojans took the National Collegiate baseball title west for the second straight year as they whipped Yale 9 to 2 in the deciding game of their three-game series Saturday.

The Trojans won the first game Friday 3 to 1 by scoring all of their runs in the ninth inning. Trojan pitcher Wally Wood held the Elis to only four hits as he won his 21st game of the year in collegiate competition.

Yale returned Saturday with their pitching ace, Frank Quinn, and defeated the Trojans from California in the first game of the day 8 to 3.

Simmons Wins Olympic Berth, Placing Third In Nat. Decathlon

Bloomfield, N. J., — A former North Carolina trackman, Floyd (Chunk) Simmons, has earned a place on the U. S. Olympic track and field team as a decathlon specialist.

Simmons merited his spot as a result of finishing third in the National AAU decathlon event held here during the past weekend in connection with the Olympic trials.

The national crown was won by a virtual outsider, 17-year-old Bob Mathias of Tulare, Calif., a high school boy competing for national honors for the first time.

Winning Total

Competing in his second decathlon event, Mathias piled up an unofficial total of 7,224 points in the 10-event grind on Friday and Saturday.

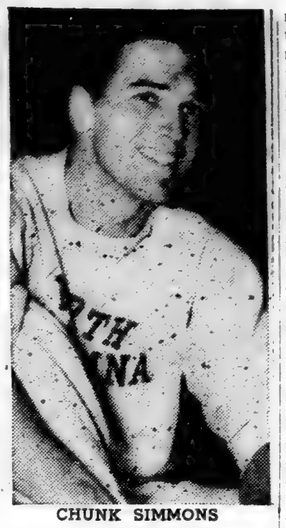
Completing the U. S. Olympic trio was another of the nation's most durable iron men, Irv Mondschein of the New York Pioneer club, who was the defending champion.

Mondschein had 7,101 points to Simmons' 7,054 total for second and third places.

It was almost dark when the first flight of 20 of this country's iron men sloshed through the water-covered Foley field track to finish the 1,500-meter run, last of Saturday's five events. The first five were run Friday.

The meet was run under almost impossible weather conditions. A severe thunderstorm had made a swamp of the midfield where the field events were held and the pole vault pit runway was thick mud.

Nevertheless, the durables of the track and field world decided to finish up the final Olympic tryouts.



Simmons, now representing the Los Angeles AC, had left the University of North Carolina earlier in the year in order to devote full time to training for the big test and a trip to London this summer.

Charlotte Resident

He is a resident of Charlotte, and went to the University after a service career whieh led to the Italian front in the last war. He was wounded north of Rome while serving in the 10th Mountain division.

In his first fall at Chapel Hill, he became a star halfback on the football squad until suffering a broken back in a midseason game with Wake Forest.

After his recovery he turned his full efforts to track and soon became one of the South's and then the nation's leading hurdlers. He has held several Southern conference track titles.

Intramural Golf Pitching Tournament Starts Next Week; Prizes to Winners

The Intramural department came up with something new in the way of summer intramural activities this week. A golf pitching tournament has been announced to start Monday, July 5.

The tournament is open to all University students, faculty, and. administrative personnel Entries opened Monday, June 28, and can be made on blanks posted on Woollen Gymnasium bulletin boards and on Scuttlebutt bulletin boards, or can be made in person by contacting the intramural office, 311 Woollen, telephone F-3321. Entries will close on Friday, July 2.

The contest will consist of pitching golf balls at targets 30 yards, 45 yards, and 60 yards, from the tee. Each contestant must furnish his own golf balls and golf clubs.

Prizes will be offered for the four best scores made in the contest. First prize, a dozen golf balls. Second prize, four leather golf socks. Third prize, six golf balls. Fourth prize, four golf balls.

Hipster Justice To Pass on Hips

Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice has accepted the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce invitation to be one of the judges to pick "Miss North Carolina 1948" at the state beauty pageant to be held at Wrightsville beach July 17. Charlie's acceptance was announced last Wednesday by Tom James, beauty pageant chairman.

Justice, who was second string All-American in 1947 as a sophomore at the University, is the first of seven well-known North Carolinians to accept the invitation to judge the beauty pageant, James said.

Justice will undertake the enviable responsibility of picking North Carolina's most beautiful and talented girl of the year with the full consent and approval of his attractive wife, Sarah, said James.

During their visit to Wrightsville beach the Justices will be the guests of Jake Wade, noted Tar Heel sports writer.

TENNIS

Open and closed tennis doubles begin today. All teams are requested to report to Coach Kenfield at the intramural courts between two and four o'clock.

MONOGRAM MEETING

The Monogram club will meet tonight at 7:30 in room 304 of Woollen gym.

Cheek's 1-Hitter Gives Juniors Win

Righthander Milt Cheek came within one hit of a no-hit game yesterday afternoon at Emerson when the Chapel Hill American legion baseball team continued its winning ways in defeating Bragtown, 8-0.

The win put the locals only a half game behind league-leading Wake Forest who tangled with Raleigh at home today in an unreported game.

Cheek had complete control all the way and received a helping hitting hand from his teammates. The Chapel Hillians got three runs in the bottom of the fourth and after that the issue was never in doubt.

Russell Perry and Bob Holcomb paced the home team with a home run a piece.

Qualifying Rounds In Second Session On Stanford Course

Palo Alto, Calif., June 28—The 51st annual National Collegiate golf tournament starts here today at scenic Stanford university course to determine team and individual championships.

There looks to be a mad scramble for both the individual and team titles. Leading the field of favorites for the former at tee off time this morning was hard-hitting Harvie Ward of the University of North Carolina, who promises to give defending champion, Dave Barclay of Michigan, quite a run for his money.

Ward is the present North-South amateur champion having won this honor at Pinehurst earlier in the year. He defeated high-ranking simon pures such as Dick Chapman and Frank Stranahan in gaining the crown. Ward also has the tournament experience of having played in the Masters at Augusta this year.

Along with Ward and Barclay, others in the running for the college individual title are Babe Lind of Denver, Lou Stafford of Oregon, Charlie Coe of Oklahoma, Bobby Harris of San Jose State, Bob Gardner of UCLA and Paul Gardner of Southern California.

The team title looks to be a toss-up also. High hopes for the big cup are being held by UCLA, Michigan, Duke and the defending champs, LSU, with dark

Frank Brooks Loses In Golf Tournament

Frank Brooks, freshman member of this year's golf team, from Siler City was defeated Friday by H. S. Covington of Orangeburg, S. C., in the final round of the Linville Men's Invitation golf tourney. Covington, medalist and favorite to win the tournament, defeated Brooks 2 and 1 for the title.

Covington parred each of the first 13 holes and went four up. Brooks rallied to take the 14th and 15th, but the 16th and 17th holes were halved to give the match to Covington.

Brooks advanced to the finals Thursday by defeating T. A. Garland of Newland, the Avery County sheriff, 3 and 2. Brooks used his putter to good advantage to make up for the prodigious tee shots of Sheriff Garland.

The Siler City lad broke in with the Tar Heel varsity at the start of the 1948 season and played regularly throughout the year.

CPU Group Hears Convention Talk

An informal synopsis of the Republican convention was given by Edlyn Freerks at the CPU meeting Sunday night. He pointed out that Dewey was nominated for president on the third ballot, and that Earl Warren was selected for vice-president the following day, which was the climax of the convention. The speaker closed by giving a brief resume of the two candidates' lives. In the general discussion the members agreed that the coming election will probably emphasize, not the presidency or the Republican party, but the congressional election and the Democrats.

Qualifying for match play and the team title will be conducted today and tomorrow with each man playing 18 holes on each day. Match play will begin on Wednesday.

The course here at Palo Alto could be the answer to most of the tournament questions. It is a tough 6,648-yard par 36-35 course and will be a decided test to any and all comers.

The team title will be determined on a four-man aggregate low score total. A 606 count won the honor last year for LSU.

Ward is no newcomer to NCAA title play. He advanced as far as the quarter-finals last year before being eliminated to the sidelines. The Tarboro Tartar also made the round of eight of the national amateur last year.

Everyone Invited To Hear Ashby Talk At Summer Vespers

Tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock the second of the regular weekly vesper services will be held in the section of the arboretum next to the greenhouse. The speaker for this service will be Warren Ashby of the Philosophy department, and his topic will be "Baffling Reflections in a Mirror."

Everyone on the campus and in town is invited to attend these services and requested to be prompt. In the event of rain the place of the service will be changed to Gerrard hall.

These services were planned for the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month but because of the interest shown by people attending the first service this was changed to make it a regular weekly service.

These young representatives of their colleges were interested in their world.

Besides the visits to the United Nations at Lake Success, the Tar Heels found time to see old New York. One delegate who was at first a little afraid of the big city exclaimed, "there really is nothing to be afraid of . . . they just love my southern accent . . . and they make you feel right at home."

It was late Saturday morning before the Tar Heels finished their work. They went away weary and satisfied that the North Carolinians had made a substantial contribution to the national organization. The North Carolina report had been given by their new director. Their organizational plan had been accepted in substance by the national steering committee. Each one of them left the institute with the feeling that North Carolina will again set the pace for the year 1948-1949. As one Tar Heel remarked, "We must stir more interest in our home state. We will need everyon to help us make the United Nations strong. Our CCUN must continue a job well begun."

Lewis Mumford Slated To Give Lecture Here

City Authority Plans First Seminar Class During Fall Term

Lewis Mumford, internationally known architectural and town planning critic, author and lecturer at Princeton and Harvard Universities, has been appointed visiting lecturer in the Department of City and Regional Planning at Carolina, Prof. John A. Parker announced today.

Professor Parker said Mumford will arrive at the University for his first seminar during the third week in October. In addition to his seminars for graduate students in the Department of City and Regional Planning, he will give three lectures which will be open to the University and the public.

Will Lecture At State

Mumford will also serve as visiting professor in the School of Architecture and Landscape Design at N. C. State College and as visiting lecturer at the Woman's College of the University of Greensboro.

An eminent architect and writer, Mumford has been a faculty member at Stanford University and at the University of Michigan and has contributed articles to the top-notch architectural magazines in this country.

He is the author of "Green Memories," "Sticks and Stones," "The Brown Decades," "The Culture of Cities," and other volumes which have been widely acclaimed.

Special Investigator

Mumford served as a special investigator in housing for the New York State Housing and Regional Planning Commission in 1924, was co-founder of the Regional Planning Association of America in 1923 and helped frame a series of reports on regional planning, beginning with the regional planning issue of The Survey Graphic in May, 1925.

An architectural critic, Mumford picked up the tradition of Montgomery Schuyler, reappraised the work of Roebling, Richardson and Olmsted, all of whom had fallen into neglect, and discovered the critical contribution of James Bogardus—all of which led to the publication of "The Brown Decades" in 1931.

Served in Hawaii

After the publication of his "The Culture of Cities" in 1938, he served as planning consultant to the City and County Park

Noted European Lecturer Coming

Dr. A. N. J. Den Hollander, Professor of Sociology at the University of Amsterdam, will appear on the campus for a series of lectures July 7-July 16, by special arrangement of the Summer School. Two of his lectures will be delivered to the general public in Hill Hall, while others are designed for special courses.

On Wednesday, July 7, Dr. Den Hollander will address Dr. J. O. Bailey's class in twentieth-century literature on the subject "Trends in European Literature, 1920-1948." This class meets in 213 Saunders Hall at 11 a. m.

Thursday, July 8, the sociologist will speak to Dr. Guy Johnson's class in cultural anthropology on "Patterns of Rural Culture in Europe and America." This talk concerns comparisons among Hungarian, Dutch, and Southern United States farmers. Alumni Building 207, 10 a. m.

At 8 p. m. on Thursday Dr. Hollander will speak to Dr. Katherine Jocker's seminar in sociology with "The Group Image: A Sociological Concept" as his topic. This meeting will be held in 403 Alumni Building.

On Friday, July 9, "Behind the Iron Curtain" is the title of the speech to be delivered in Hill Hall at 8 p. m., in the first of the lecturer's public appearances. Dr. Den Hollander will discuss observations and experiences in Hungary and other Soviet dominated countries. Chancellor House will introduce the speaker.

GM Will Feature Bingo Saturday

"Bingo!"

"Hold your cards until the game checks back."

This will be the trend of conversation in Graham Memorial's main lounge this Saturday night and every Saturday night during the summer months as the game involving cards, numbers, and corn so popular with the students last summer is reinstated to its position on the campus.

"Joker John" Van Hecke will be the man who calls, "There's a winner every time!" And plenty of attendants will see that the winner gets his cash award each time. Each card played will cost two cents and all the money paid for cards will be given to the winner of each game.

Several times during the evening the ante will be raised to a nickel to make for a bigger pot, and the Grand Finale will be only for those with real sporting blood in their veins. This one will cost ten cents the card, and depending on the number of players, the prize varies between $5 and $10. Added suspense is given the Grand Finale by making the winner cover every number on his card.

Vic Huggins Elected As New President Of Merchants Group

L. Vic Huggins was elected president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association at a dinner meeting of the organization held Monday night at the Carolina Inn.

Huggins, who succeeds Harvey D. Bennett as leader of the association, stated in accepting the position that he appreciated not only the honor but also the tremendous responsibility of heading the group.

He called for close cooperation among the members with a view to "better service to the customers," as well as more rapid progress in the development of the community into a trading center.

Pointing out that since the community now has a population approaching 15,000 including both Chapel Hill and Carrboro the new leader said that the business men are now in position to offer better stores, better selections of quality goods, a greater variety, and lower prices due to the increased volume of business.

President Huggins closed his remarks with a challenge to all members that "we must never lose sight of our obligation to constantly strive to improve our service and to keep alert to the needs of our customers."

Other officers named were James H. Davis, vice-president; L. J. Phipps, attorney; and E. C. Smith, state director; Mrs. Lois R. Cranford as secretary-treasurer.

Board of Directors elected for three year terms were John Clarke, F. E. Strowd and W. L. Brooker.

Other board members, whose terms continue for one and two years more, include Jack Lipman; Raymond Andrews of Andrews-Riggsbee, Carrboro; R. H. Marks of Marks Clothing Company, Carrboro; M. M. Timmons of the Porthole; John W. Umstead, Jr.; and C. E. Teague of the University Administration. H. D. Bennett, as retiring president, will serve on the board for the coming year.

H. W. Wentworth of Wentworth and Sloan Jewelry Company, and Roger Wade of Hospital Savings Association were elected to serve the unexpired terms on the board of directors created by the resignation of Bob Fowler of Fowler's Food Store, and the death of E. B. Patterson of Patterson Tire Company.

"All My Sons" Cast Stews, Promises to Beat Hollywood

By Violet LaRue

After having successfully escaped the hazard of sun stroke, the cast of "All My Sons" is beginning to shape its acting into what promises to be an excellent production.

Last Thursday the members of the cast collected in the late Professor Koch's backyard to take publicity pictures for the coming show. The temperature was only 101. It was an experience never to be forgotten by the newcomers to the Playmakers and an inspiration to those who had heard and admired the work of Prof. Koch, the founder of the Carolina Playmakers. The garden in which the pictures were taken was planned and planted by Prof. Koch, who was an enthusiastic amatuer botanist. The cast was paying a tribute to a beloved man who had inspired his students to express themselves through the stories and folk tales concerning their own communities.

The first picture was a failure "due to heat exposure." It was so hot that the film popped out of the camera! After this happened, the whiting in Nat White's hair melted so rapidly that it was practically impossible to keep it from running down the side of his cheeks. More amusing than that was the photographing of the love scenes between Edsel Hughes and Martha Grattan. This resulted in quite a stir of laughter. Both Edsel and Martha are married—but not to each other; their wedding rings were in plain view of the camera. (They weren't married in the love scene either). As one member of the cast said, "Simply a pathetic fallacy." Anyone who is interested in losing weight just try following "All My Sons" around to rehearsals and picture-making, if you can keep up with them, that is.

Those who saw the motion picture version of "All My Sons" have seen what Hollywood can do to a smash hit. And what happened to this play shouldn't happen to a dog—even in Hollywood. The play is much fuller than the Movie version. Each character is better developed in the play. The picture has left out the lighter and more humorous parts. The typical Hollywoodish melodrama completely saturated the movie. Human laughter and sorrows and joys are the emotions in the play. The little everyday conversations and happenings that convey so much meaning and warmth to the characters in the play were entirely obliterated in the screen play; these endearing and human characteristics of the play were replaced in the movie by melodramatic and unnatural incidents and dialogue.

New Scholarship By N. C. Society To Be Awarded

A scholarship, valued at $200, to be awarded to a "worthy graduate student specializing in North Carolina history," has been established at Carolina by the North Carolina Society of the Cincinnati, it was announced here yesterday by Chancellor Robert B. House.

The scholarship was donated by the Society "in honor and in memory of General William Richardson Davie, one of the original founders of the University of North Carolina and an original member of the Society."

The committee of the organization responsible for making the award, Chancellor House said, was composed of Joseph B. Cheshire, Jr., and Graham H. Andrews, both of Raleigh, and Francis O. Clarkson, Charlotte. "It is the hope of the committee that this scholarship may be increased in amount and put on a permanent basis," they said.

Nomination of the recipient will come from the History department and election will be by the administrative board of the Graduate school. Graduate students interested in North Carolina history are invited to make application for the award through the Graduate school dean, Dr. W. W. Pierson, Jr.

Chancellor House said that the provision of an annual grant by the society "will be of great value in stimulating advanced study and research in the history of North Carolina."

Workshop Leaders AttendSymposium

Three consultants in the Workshop in Human Resources and Inter-Cultural Education will participate in a symposium at the National Catholic Community Service Servicemens Club in Fayetteville this Friday night at 7:30.

The program, sponsored jointly by the National Jewish Welfare Board and the NCCS, will be broadcast over WWNF, Fayetteville.

Speakers will be Father Gerard Maguire, Dr. Lester Dix, and Myron Schwartz. Father Maguire formerly advisor to Catholic students at Clemson, is now a member of the faculty at the University of Texas. Dr. Dix, chief consultant for the Workshop, was formerly director of Lincoln School at Teacher's College, Columbia University, and is author of "A Charter for Progressive Education," and numerous articles. Schwartz, director of Jewish Community Relations Council, St. Louis, served as a captain in the U. S. Army during the war.

University students are invited to the symposium which will be followed by a dance featuring the music of Steve Lambert and his orchestra.

Student Council Will Meet Monday

A meeting of the newly appointed Student Council has been scheduled for Monday night at 7 o'clock, according to an announcement by President of the Student Body, Jess Dedmond.

The new members, approved by the legislature last night are Don Shropshire, Bill Jernigan, Steve Nimocks, Bill Payeff, Ralph Phillips, Faith Adams, Nina DeBerry. Marty Davis is the only permanent member of the council in school this summer.

Yackety Yacks

The Yackety Yacks which have been expected, for oh so many weeks, arrived last night. Not all of them . . . just 1,500 copies. These copies will be distributed today in the Horace Williams lounge at Graham Memorial. Those not given out will be available Monday. The remainder which are yet to arrive will be distributed as they come from the press.

New Festival Plans Already Being Made, Grumman States

That the Carolina Folk Festival is definitely to become an annual event was revealed yesterday by R. M. Grumman, chairman of the University Folklore Council. "We have made no definite plans, but we are going to have it," Mr. Grumman said.

He also said Chancellor Robert B. House, and Guy B. Phillips, of the University Education department and head of the Summer School, have given full approval for an annual festival. Paul Green, noted North Carolina playwright and author, sent a letter immediately following the close of the festival this year urging that the festival be made an annual affair, Grumman added.

Fan mail, resulting from a nation-wide broadcast of one-half hour of the festivities, have brought many inquiries about the Carolina Folk Festival and the calls used by Lillie Lee Baker of Texas from such distances as Los Angeles, Calif. and Buffaloe, Wyoming, according to Grumman.

Bascom Lama Lunsford, director of the festival this year, met Chairman Grumman yesterday at the Grandfather Mountain Sing-

Commerce Award Won By Gray For Highest Scholastic Work

Howard D. Gray, Jr. of Winston-Salem, a senior in the School of Commerce, has been awarded the Delta Sigma Pi scholarship key for maintaining the highest averages in grades among the commerce fraternity's membership. The presentation was made at the annual banquet of the fraternity.

Gray, whose winning average was 96.4 percent, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholarship fraternity, and is president of the local chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, social fraternity. The scholarship key is presented each year by Delta Sigma Pi, which fosters the study of business in universities and colleges and promotes closer affiliation between the business world and students of commerce.

Hubert Aenchbacher, Atlanta, Ga., newly elected head master of the fraternity, presided at the banquet and paid tribute to the work of the Alpha Lambda chapter during the year an recognized several members who won honors for achievements.

Among them were William J. Bowman, Greensboro; David J. Robinson, Winston-Salem, and John E. Faulkner, Greensboro, who were elected to membership in Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary scholastic commerce fraternity.

Sixteen new initiates to Delta Sigma Pi were entertained at an informal party following the banquet. They were David B. Clayton, Asheville; Carroll M. Craver, Ellis F. Hall, Jr., and Bobby Joe Herring, all of Winston-Salem; Bonner E. Hudson, Jr., Waxhaw; Herbert J. Knight, Rocky Mount; Jesse C. Morris, Raleigh.

William A. Robinson, Weaverville; John C. Rosser, Broadway; Guy M. Sparger, Mount Airy; Jack D. Stratton, Robinsonville; Fred W. Talton, Clayton; Mason P. Thomas, Jr., Siler City; John F. Tsantes, Wilmington; Hugh W. Watts, Taylorsville, and William R. Wolf, Mt. Carmel, Ill.

Food Poisoning Epidemic Hits Dorms Leaving Toll Of 80 Stricken Patients

An epidemic of food poisoning swept Spencer Hall and other women's dormitories last Monday afternoon with the latest count being 80 stricken patients, half of whom were admitted to the infirmary.

The epidemic, which began about 4 o'clock, had by midnight turned Spencer into a make-shift hospital. Doctors, nurses and internes crowded each other in an effort to get the sickest ones into stretchers and ambulances and leave room for the others to, as one girl said, "just lie down and die."

Dr. W. G. Morgan of the University Infirmary was on duty in Spencer during the worst part of the illnesses and girls from surrounding dormitories acted as nurses all Monday night.

Dr. E. McG. Hedgpeth, also of the University Infirmary, said yesterday that the food served at lunch in the Spencer hall dining room had been analyzed and that the verdict was "staphylococcic food poisoning" caused by ham salad.

All 80 cases were reported as having eaten lunch in Spencer, this including women from the surrounding dormitories, Kenan, Alderman and McIver.

None of the cases were considered serious, according to Dr. Hedgpeth, and the majority of infirmary cases have now been dismissed.

Y's Picnic Derby To Feature Races, Various Contests

Many big fetes are scheduled for the first campus-wide picnic derby to be held at Hogan's Lake next Tuesday afternoon between 5 and 8 o'clock.

Plans for the affair call for a full afternoon of entertainment with games, contests, swimming, softball, and food. Among the most novel events will be a pie eating contest with pastries contributed by the Chapel Hill bakery. The winner of the tasty endurance test is to be given "a fine, non-edible prize."

Another unique stunt will be a beauty contest for feet. Miss Gay Currie, new YWCA director, and Ed Joyner and Bill Carmichael, DTH staffsmen, will judge the competition to pick the largest, the smallest, and the dirtiest feet present. The coed with the sexiest pedal digits will be selected at this time, too, to be named "Miss Best Foot Forward of 1948."

Garvin Publishes Precautions for Polio Prevention

Precautionary measures against the possible prevention of the spread of polio have been printed and issued in a bulletin by Dr. O. David Garvin, District Health Officer here, as a result of Orange county's only case of polio in the current outbreak.

Dr. Garvin, in cooperation with University officials, has had the entire Victory Village, occupied by married students and their families, sprayed with DDT and bulletins issued on precautions to be taken.

These actions were the result of the only case to develop here.

Dr. Garvin, who took a refresher course in the diagnosis and treatment of polio last spring at the Knickerbocker Hospital in New York, drew up the following list of precautions:

1.) Avoid unnecessary contacts with groups and crowds, especially indoors. 2.) There is no advantage in going away, chance of exposure is greater if you travel. 3.) Continue your normal activities. 4.) Treat every fever not readily explained as poliomylitis and go to bed. 5.) Don't take medicine for protection. Do not use gargles or nose drops. 6.) Avoid fatigue. 7.) Avoid use of contaminated water. 8.) Avoid insult to mouth, nose and throat. 9.) Kill flies. 10.) Don't get panicky.

Dr. Garvin pointed out that Dr. Charles Armstrong of the U. S. Public Health Service has demonstrated that "approximately 71 percent of the adult population have had poliomylitis experience without having known about it. This means that 71 percent of adults have developed some immunity to the disease.

No July 4 Program

There will be no 4th of July program in the Forest theater this Sunday, it was announced today. The program, scheduled to be given under the auspices of the University Veteran's Association and the Chapel Hill American Legion, was cancelled because the University band could not participate.

Dr. Morgan Will Lead Discussion

"The Christian Concern in Public Health" is the main topic in a discussion to be led by Dr. Lucy Morgan, head of the Department of Public Health Education at the Presbyterian church, Sunday night beginning at 7:15.

A supper at 6 p.m. will begin the services, followed by a period of singing folk songs, spirituals, and hymns until time for the discussion and study period to start.

All students are invited to attend both the supper and the discussion.

No DTH Tuesday

The Daily Tar Heel will be published on Wednesday of next week, instead of Tuesday, Editor Ed Joyner announced last night. The Colonial Press, publishers of the paper, are observing Monday as a holiday, Joyner said, necessitating the change. The regular Friday edition will appear as usual on July 9.

CPU Meeting

The CPU will meet at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Grail room at Graham Memorial to discuss the significance of the North Carolina primary. All interested persons are invited to attend.

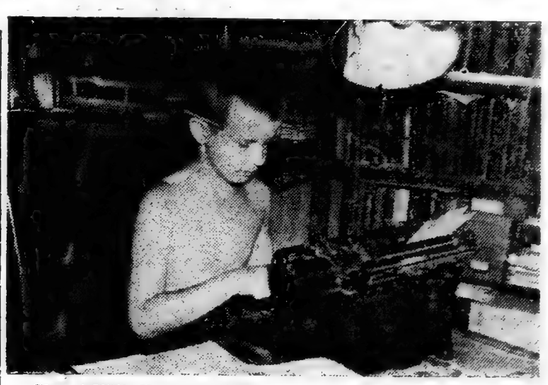
Young Editor-Publisher Threatens Stiff Competition

By Lincoln S. H. Kan



North Carolina newspapers had better look sharp these days, because they are getting serious competition from a new publication . . . the Mallette News.

The Mallette News is published by Master Danny Kyker of 120 Mallette street, Chapel Hill. He is his own editor, managing editor, city editor, business manager and star photographer.

Danny is a young lad who states his age of 9 years 6 months and 28 days with emphasis. Although serious of mein, he has an engaging smile when a particularly "hot scoop" comes his way.

o his assistants, he is sometimes stern as is evidenced by an item in his latest issue of the Mallette News, "I regret that my human interest reporter has been doing only as much work as an ant in a glue factory. I had to fire her."

It is a two column, 4-page issue crammed full of news, human interest stories, ads and helpful household hints. Danny has adopted the policy that editorials are of no necessity, because of the informality of his paper.

Chapel Hill's Youngest Editor . . . Danny Kyker publisher-editor at deadline time.

In a discussion about news policy the 9 year, 6 month, 28 days old editor said, "Unless I get something interesting to outside people off my street, I just print local news."

"It is hard to put out much with my small staff. Jimps Davis is my circulating manager. Nancy Pendergraft is my society reporter, and Mary Francis Davis is my crime and accident reporter," he continued. As an after-thought Danny added, "Sometimes my sister Mervine helps me in the circulation department."

At present the paper is having its troubles. The press which Danny has been using suffered during the recent heat wave. It seems that the gelatine bed of the Hektograph press melted and caused untold damage to the available newsprint during the last time the paper went to press.

Nevertheless, the Mallette News hit the street on time.

The following advice given in the June 23 issue Mallette News in the Home Column should be of interest to the perspiring members of Victory Village, "Iced tea is better if you use

To The Rescue

Carolina's own version of the Red Cross flashed into action and came through with flying colors Tuesday when something far worse than the usual sun-burn sickness hit Spencer dormitory.

With limited facilities for handling 76 cases of food poisoning, the University infirmary staff, aided by volunteer helpers from other women's dormitories, took control of the situation in Spencer and did a magnificent job of pulling the girls through a miserable afternoon and night. There was the sincerest kind of appreciation expressed in muttered grunts of relief, but those people who came to the rescue deserve the gratitude of the whole campus.

Something of a modern Florence Nightingale was Mrs. Mildred Elliot, registered nurse, who accompanied Drs. J. V. Arey, Bill Morgan, and Ed Hedgpeth up and down the hot halls of the dormitory and directed the work of the assistants. She went about her work quietly, but the girls in Spencer realize, nevertheless, how valuable her efforts were.

All Miss Willie Aimes, dietician for the dormitory, needed to complete her roll was a starched white uniform and halo that probably, after all, would have melted over the stove on which she boiled gallons of tea. She and house mother Mrs. Irene Lee kept up an assembly line of iced tea and pitchers of crushed ice, while they answered numerous questions and telephone calls. The complete cooperation during the emergency reached even to the Carolina Inn, the contributor of enough crushed ice to pull the girls through the night.

Now that the girls are on their feet again, and there are some more vacant beds in the infirmary, the campus can look back with some pride on a job well-done and offer its appreciation, along with the girls in Spencer, to the people who did that job.—R.A.

Who's Too Hot?

Somehow we never understand why even the oldest of local residents and even more surprisingly students from the deepest south tropics (suh) continually gripe about the weather. Perhaps, tradition bound, they feel obligated to talk about it since they obviously can do nothing about it.

Getting right down to brass weather tacks we proudly state that we downright LIKE the weather. It hasn't gotten so hot yet that we couldn't take off our shoes and comfortably wiggle our toes. Or wander around comfortably in our summer-bound uniform of T-shirt and khaki trousers. And we still have a most unpleasantly chilly memory of several weeks of snow, ice, and slush from last winter.

Yes, we like the weather hereabouts lately, and the hotter it gets the better we like it. If it wasn't so wonderfully, comfortably, drowsily warm, the swimming pools wouldn't be so appreciated; the beer wouldn't be as welcome and refreshing; and the coeds wouldn't look so cotton-dressy-unswept appealing. So what's the use of hollering about such fine weather? Us, we're enjoying it.—R.F.G.

Date or Death?

We're all four-wheel personalities. That is, we all like nice new shiny Buicks or what have you. But we don't like them bearing down at us, roaring down congested streets, about to hit our tin jallopies. We don't like to have these monsters of the road terminate our lovely lives which we have tried so hard to preserve thus far.

What we're talking about are conversations like this: "Honey I'm going to be late . . . hurry, darling, hurry.

"I've got it wide open, sweet. Don't worry. Just keep pressing the horn. I gotta drive."

Meanwhile the car being driven is cruising down Raleigh street (that's the street going by the gals' dorms) at a 50 mile clip in a 20 mile zone.

The moral we're trying to bring out is this. Please be considerate. There are other guys who want to date the next day or night . . . not wind up on a slab. So how about it huh?—L.K.

Hodgepodge

I Like You, Mr. Crouch

By Ed Joyner

The Daily Tar Heel staff has taken a liking to M. L. Crouch. We do not know Mr. Crouch. In fact we are not even sure he is a Mr. We looked him up in the summer school directory in the Graham Memorial office, but he isn't on the list.

The only thing we know about M. L. Crouch is that he made a one-cent investment last week which we appreciated. He bought a penny postal card, wrote on it and addressed it to the Daily Tar Heel.

This in itself is not remarkable. People quite often address cards to us. The remarkable thing about this postal card is that Mr. Crouch likes our paper. He said so. He wrote it down in blue ink and signed his name to it.

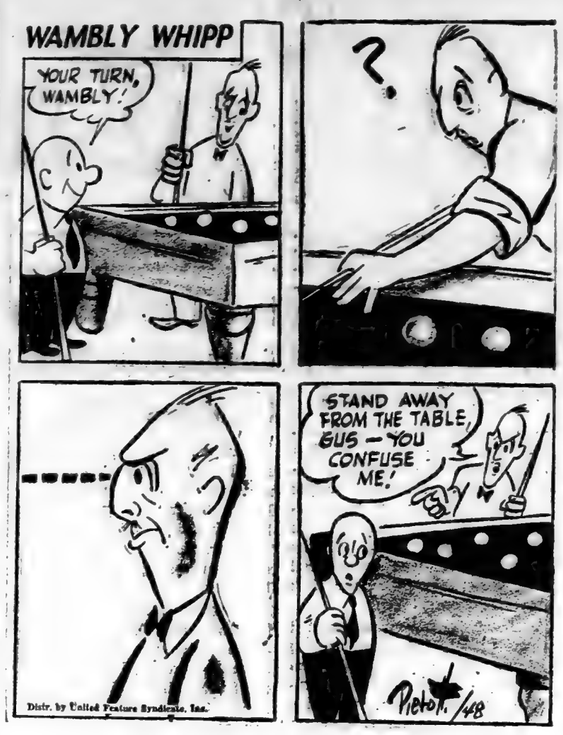
The card started off, "Orchids to the Tar Heel staff!" We hate cliches and that is a muchly overused one, but when you are on the receiving end of those orchids it still sounds pretty good. The second sentence read, "Seldom have I seen a more popular summer school paper."

And right there we began to get suspicious.

Ordinarily the Daily Tar Heel staff is not a cynical group, but long and disillusioning experience with letters from the student body has taught us to beware of those that open with compliments. Almost invariably these letters fall into one of two categories: those in which the compliment is followed by a "but" after which the writer explains in detail the many and heinous faults of the DTH; and those in which the compliment is followed by a request for a favor—usually that the editor or one or all of the staff should drop dead immediately.

So after reading Mr. Crouch's first two sentences I stopped with an unhappy feeling and began taking bets among the staff as to what the "but" would be this time or what he would want us to do for him.

Then I read on. I got safely past the next sentences. I read faster. I got to the end, and then I read it again. There was not a single "but" or a single request on the whole card!



I am not by nature a suspicious person, Mr. Crouch, but I must admit that I waited in this office for three days expecting you to come in with a notice of a meeting of the Podunk club which you would like to have printed in headlines. You did not come, Mr. Crouch, and for that I thank you.

Mr. Crouch, you have done an unprecedented thing. Among college papers in the United States the DTH is recognized as one of the best. It is gaining a good reputation among professional newspaper men in the state. But never to my knowledge in the three years that I have worked on this paper has any student ever written in and said with no reservations, "I think the Daily Tar Heel staff is doing a good job."

Yes, Mr. Crouch, you have done an unprecedented thing, and because of it you will probably be ostracized by your fellow students. For what you have done is comparable to saying something nice about the Playmakers or Administration. It is one of those things which simply is not done.

An unfortunate misconception has grown up among Carolina students that a writer for the DTH is a strange creature who types with only one hand while the other holds a whiskey bottle to his mouth. We have not been able to stand a first-rate crew of beer guzzlers to the bar since the spring of 1947 when the famous DTH chugalug team won the State Intercollegiate Chugalug title.

On behalf of the staff, Mr. Crouch, I thank you for your kind words—and if you should be ostracized for them, come up to see us. We'll teach you to type with one hand.

Pardon My Politics

(Chuck Hauser, who wrote the following column on state politics, was Daily Tar Heel managing editor last spring and will resume that job in the fall. During the summer he is working with the United Press bureau in Raleigh.)

By Chuck Hauser

Raleigh—You should have been here on election night. The sights, the emotions, the celebrations are things that a typewriter has a hard job putting down.

I was standing just three feet away from the next governor of North Carolina at about 10 o'clock Saturday night when a white-haired, dark-eyebrowed, bespectacled man walked in the door of the mezzanine election night headquarters of Kerr Scott in the Carolina hotel.

Charlie Johnson walked in quietly, then almost ran across the room to where the governor-elect stoo.

"Hey, Kerr, congratulations," he said.

"Glad you could come over, Charlie," the other man answered, holding out his hand.

And they stood there for ten minutes shaking hands while the news photographers got their fill of pictures of winner and loser.

Their actions seemed extremely incongruous after the manner in which they had been attacking each other for the past few weeks. Scott had called Johnson a machine candidate and Johnsno had shot right back that Scott was waging a campaign of deception and insinuation. Scott had said that Johnson was losing the state money by non-interest-bearing investments and Johnson had retorted that Scott had been riding around North Carolina on state time and state gasoline building a political machine. And they both had said on Friday night that they would win hands down. One of them was wrong.

But the buddy-buddy old-pal long-time-no-see routine there in the Carolina was a funny sight to see.

From what I could pick up in Raleigh, politics in North Carolina gets a lot filthier than on the Carolina campus, where we think we're pretty good at it. But what I heard about Charlie Johnson's boys was stricty for the birds.

I don't know yet how bad it was this time, but I've heard about a lot of chicanery in that first primary. Things like buying votes and ballot-box juggling—such as in the little precinct where a hundred and fifty people swore up and down that they had voted for Scott in the first primary but when the election figures were released Scott only got fifty-seven votes.

And the reports about the people herded over the South Carolina line to vote for Johnson in precincts in the southern part of the state, and about the colored people who were lined up and voted without ever having been on the registration books. But they all walked away from the polls with an extra dollar or so in their pockets, so who cared? A dollar is a lot of money to some people.

Yes, the dirty politics was present—and I don't imagine it was all one-sided, but I still think the best man won.

Beer and Bareness

By Violet LaRue

Here it is again! Another week of sweat and toil and beer at the Chapel Hill Brew Emporiums. This week marks the end of a blazin' hot month and the beginning of an even hotter one. Oh for some of that blessed rain which we all cussed on the football week-ends last fall!

The Playmakers are quite a crowd and have displayed more energy than any group so far. As the rumor goes the cast for "All My Sons" collected in Mrs. Koch's backyard to make the publicity pictures for the coming production (always get that plug in for the home team) on last Thursday when the temperature was only hovering between 101 and 100—the hottest day in Chapel Hill since around 1897. The cast posed and the camera snapped and the old man in the heat control room on the sun wondered what could be keeping a crowd outside for such a long time. As Sam Hirsch said, "I didn't know that it was such a hot day. But when I got home I felt groggy." It's a wonder that the whole cast didn't have a sunstroke!

Party, party, party—practically all the Carolina Campus shoved off to answer the call of the ocean this week-end. From the looks o' the likes o' those who returned, it wasn't exactly cloudy on the coast. One brilliant suggestion has been offered in order to allow coolness to again reign in dorm rooms: install a crate of drinks well saturated with ice; hook up a 40 inch fan (that works); open all the windows and doors (closing closet doors to prevent distracting odors); then, sit back and pray for a slight breeze.

The B. T. N. M. (Back to Nature Movement) has clutched the very feet of the Carolina gentlemen. Bare backs coming in five different shades—brown, chocolate, black, bronze, and lily white—are the order of the day. Bare feet wriggle along the cool iron parts of the classroom chairs. One bare-footed male subject of the B. T. N. M. was overheard to say in the Y-Court yesterday: "I wish they'd leave the 'tradition' on the walks; civilization is too damn hot for me!"

Cholley's Follies

Yack! Yack! Yack! Yack!

By Charlie Gibson

Patience, folks. Gene Johnstone says again that so help him, Dewey, the new Yackety-Yack will be given out next week. And when and if the Yacks arrive in shipment, it is one man's peeking opinion that all the waiting will not have been in vain.

The '48 Yack is a whopper with 512 pages, weighing more than six pounds. The size of the thing, it seems, is the staff's only explanation for delay and their only decent plea for clethese days. Actually the GM mency before lynching mobs mezzanine maniacs finished all the material a month earlier this time than last year, but printers and binders had a slower and tougher job wrestling with 110 more pages than last year.

What say we applaud all their industry and forget last year altogether anyway, huh? The '47 annual had a novel cover and a well carried out theme for Tar Heels which many in publications circles considered unsurpassable. When staff originality has obviously gone about as far as it can go, subsequent comparisons are injustices not even Spencer dormitory cooks could think up.

However, it is true that the cover of the new yearbook is less striking. Odds are, though, that its brown synthetic leather should prove even more durable than a coed's "No!" The modernistic gold script type on the cover and all through the book is very appropriate for the timely but vague theme—building and future production. Those who only look at pictures and ignore squib captions might miss the unifying idea entirely. It is, too, there, though. Remember "Y" court psychology: Look around and don't give up until you make something of it.

Without further apologies the board of editors—Ruth Evans and Hal Bursley along with Johnstone—have thrown about everything but a sure-hit crossword puzzle into the '48 Yack until it speaks for itself. Among the creditable new features are more color plates, a bigger and better athletic section, senior personality sketches to break up the monotony of a record-breaking class gallery, and more and more informal snapshots.

It is these snapshots that steal the center of interest through the whole book. Much credit for their cleverness goes to Bill Duncan, ex-pictorial editor and next editor-in-chief. The No. 1 Picture of the Year shows a frat house after a slight potty with 29 men (29—Count 'em, girls—29) lying informally stacked on the floor. Most expressive procession. In said scene, Dr. Graham looks impressed while Dean Wells trudges along behind him, looking nothing but hot and tired under a rakishly cocked academic cap.

Most timely photo is of sweating, panicky students digging away on construction of their own dormitory to appease J. E. Wadsworth. Best athletic picture catches the basketball team in mid-air action and tags the results "Dance, Ballerina, Dance". Most unusual sporting pose shows netman Vic Seixas serving some mean boogie-woogie at the piano.

In the best individual portrait division, a bubble bath [illegible] snow women, and a squ[illegible] named "Blip!" rate second place. First honors go to "Pappy" Hamilton rigged as a sulking Injun and [illegible] Giduz plying away at a [illegible] machine with a hammer [illegible] he never heard of putting a nickle in the slot.

Hands down, men, the most attractive section of the book in every sense of the word "attractive" is the beauty spread. The editors were a bit naughty in sprinkling beauty [illegible] glimpses haphazardly throughout the book four times before the pulchritude display finally turned up. Lavergne Johnson, Chapel Hill cameraman extraordinary, did a top-notch job in photographing fifteen good campus reasons to save bottle tops to win something or other. Mr. Johnson contributed his work gratis to the Yack and the evidence produced shows that all the pretty faces and things a Memorial Hall audience cheered for earlier this year are real. Perhaps it's somewhat disappointing, though, that full view poses had to be chosen for uniformity when several head and shoulder portraits recently on display in the Varsity windows downtown were even more beautiful than those the Yack used.

In general this annual is a well-done, authentic, and interesting record of this year in Tar Heelia. Way in the future, gentle reader, when you bounce Junior on your knee and try to convince him that Carolina is too fine to miss even after he survives old age in UMT, the '48 Yack will nostalgicly depict University life in all its tradition, toil and fun.

The Cavorting Picture

Sex Stew Suppression

I am a sin among columnists. For lack of some better way to beat the heat, I have wandered off the sports page—hot with torrid triumphs of sizzling stars—onto the editorial page cloaked in cold, black dignity. The cold is the content; the black is the ink which by some queer quirk of nature and the Colonial Press prints this page blacker than the rest.

But back to this business of being a sin. I am one columnist who differs from the rest. I always have something to write about. That's my sin and that's the difference between me and the rest of these lads and lassies (female lads) who write on this page to fill it and write about nothing and the nothing there is to write about and animals they have known and talked to. My brother talks to horses, but I'm not one to be caught eavesdripping.

As Gertie Stein always would have said, "A column is a column is a column." Those are my sentiments to the letter. There is always something to write about. First, take the weather. On second thought you take it as I can not bear it.

Then there is sex. Some people say that sex has no place on the editorial page. Others say that sex has a place anywhere. The latter I have the scars to prove. Sex is always of reader interest. Nude-Body-Found-In-Bath-Tub has been selling papers in New York for years with only Dick Tracy backing the story up on the inside pages.

Sex is harder to write than it looks. Of course, it all depends upon the way you look at it. The big trouble is the number of people in the world who are against your writing sex in the first place.

They will delete, censor, cut, alter, suppress and do countless thousands of other things to anything you write, which if else proves the power of the written word.

Another big trouble with writing sex is that it loses much of its punch on paper. Sex just isn't a theoretical proposition. It is a proposition that centers around bare reality. It is a proposition. . . .

The one fact that stands out above all is that sex, like columnists, is here to stay. Of course, it's a broad subject to be covered in a single column. If you don't believe it, just ask one.

Mallette Street Accident

(The following article is reprinted from the Mallette News, a weekly newspaper published by Dan Kyker of 122 Mallette street, Chapel Hill. Dan, age 9, is Publisher, Managing Editor, City Editor, and Star Photographer.)

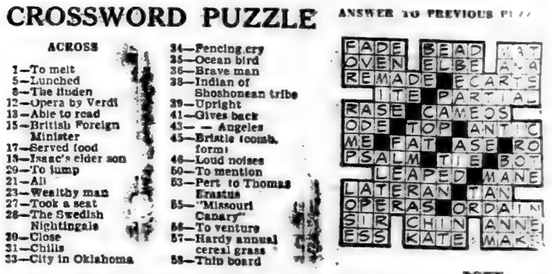
THEATER OWNER HAS ACCIDENT!! Chapel Hill. Jimps Davis, an Apex producer of Apex Producers, Inc., main his thumb in a not too serious accident on the site of the construction of a service garage down near the A&P on Franktheater at 120 Mallette St., hurt lin Street.

The way it seems that the carrying home a case of—of—carrying home a case of—of—you guess what? You guessed it—Pepsi Cola. Try one some time; it hits the spot. 12 oz. for only 5 cents—its de-e-elish.



As I was saying, now what was it? Oh yes! That's it. Now as I said before I so rudely interupted myself, he was carrying the Pepsis home to the mother of his girl friend (or female acquaintance, as it is in smarty pants Latin.) The girl dropped some money and Davis, always the gallant schmoe, stopped to pick it up. As he stooped to pick it up he dropped the Pepsis, breaking two of the bottles and cutting his thumb badly.

Grabbing his thumb and yowling he set down the other bottles and ran home to his mother leaving the other bottles for the girl to carry home. Impolite of him wasn't it?

The time of the accident wa 4:15 a week ago yesterday

Carolinas AAU Swim Meet Slated Here Tomorrow

The Sporting Picture

By Billy Carmichael III

Goodbye, Goat Hill

ONE OF THE NICEST ANNOUNCEMENTS TO COME out of the local athletic office in many a bulletin was a June-dated one concerning a new golf course now under construction on the University owned property at Mason farm.

The announcement passed almost as a squib at the bottom of most sports pages, but the job that is being done, and what will be available when all is said and done, rates a much greater display and will obtain such in the days to come.

Of course, a golf course never looks as good on paper as it does in reality, and something that looks less impressive is a golf course in the process of building.

The Dollar Tour

THE GUIDE THIS WRITER HAD OVER the expanse of the new course, was a quite enthusiastic one and the spirit of the whole golf course movement spread quickly in the minds of all along for the trip. The ride, or walk, which you still have to do the most of, centered mainly about the front nine of the course, which being the beginning, was the logical place to start building.

The timber is mostly all cut on these holes and now the process of removing the stumps comes, followed by the cleaning off of the land which is in progress. The more progressive holes are being prepared for seeding by a machine which picks up, annihilates, turns and restores huge chunks of soil in a slow back and forth operation which is an interest and a pleasure to watch.

Then will come the seeding of the course and the building of the greens which will be the tedious and time-taking task. You can cut, clear, and condition almost as fast as you wish, but the growing and culturing of grood turf on greens and fairways is a time-consuming effort.

Trap as Trap Can

MUCH OF THE TIMBER FOR THE COURSE was cleared by the Pre-Flight school during the war, but after that the course remained a half-dreamed idea until recently when a friend of the University decided the time had come to finish the product.

The course will be one of the most beautiful in the state and country even beyond the limits of simple civic and school pride. The course is cut right from the neighboring pines and few unnecessary trees have been touched in the cutting operation.

The result will be a tough, scenic course with nightmarish, yawning traps that will make a sand wedge a necessity and a blessing on each and every round. The greens will be rolling too, which means nothing has been spared to make the course as good as the best, a true test for the real golfer and an entertaining challenge to duffing sports editors.

The course is not excessively long. But it will take an accurate and exacting game to beat it at par. After all, it seems the purpose of the game is not how far one can hit the ball, but how well it can be done.

The 64-Dollar Inquiry

THE QUESTION EVERYONE IS POPPING AT THIS POINT in the match is just how soon the course will be ready for play. That is a real query with the weather, material shortages and the like all taking part in the answer. The best reply at this time that any official connected with the project will risk is that play on nine holes may begin as early as next spring. Of course, that is figuring the ifs, ands, and buts, but one can never tell. Everything might go well for just one time.

Come rain or shine the course should be in some kind of playing condition about the fall of 1949 which is just around the corner as far as golf course building goes.

And then others are asking who will be able to play the course foremost is students, with the faculty joining in on the fun. As for when completed. The answer, it is easy to report, included first and the rest nothing official is forthcoming, but it looks as if the course will take all the traffic it can bear. Coeds, it is understood, will get a chance to take daytime exercises on the course also, alleviating a current local problem.

One More Need

THE COMING OF A UNIVERSITY GOLF COURSE will just about round out the physical needs for a complete varsity and student athletic program at Carolina. Golf will be added to the intramural plan when the course is ready and mural and University tournaments will be held. With the great interest in the links sport on the campus today, the coming will be highly appreciated to say the least.

That will leave the University athletic program with but one need and the sporting picture views it for the first time—a Coliseum or reasonable facsimile and there is as greater need as there is an envy.

Michigan's Pete Elliott Tops Tar Heel After Carolinian Had Tripped Medalist

Palo Alto, Calif., July 1—Carolina's own Harvey Ward moved into the favorite's position in the NCAA golf tourney at Stanford by eliminating co-medalist Morgan Fottrell, Jr., San Jose State, 2 and 1, in an opening round match yesterday.

The slender Tarboro links star rolled over the par 36-35—71 course which is spread over some 6,000 yards of the Stanford campus in a sparkling even par round.

His fine showing gave support to the argument that the Tarboro Tartar as a match play man is hard to beat. Only this spring he defeated Dick Chapman and Frank Stranahan, British amateur champ, to cop the North-South amateur at Pinehurst.

In Lower Bracket

Ward, who is in the lower bracket, will take on Pete Elliott of Michigan in his next match this morning as second round play gets underway. Two rounds will be played today, eliminating the field down to eight.

Thus, if Ward wins this morning he will square off against the winner of the Zoller-Riebel match this afternoon. Two more matches will be played tomorrow with the 36-hole final coming on Saturday.

The Ward-Fottrell Encounter was the feature match of the opening round. Fottrell with a tournament record of 139 for the 36 hole qualifying trials, teed off as an even choice. He is a member of the San Jose team which copped the national title on Tuesday and has toured the course for years.

Big Break Comes

The big break came on the 15th hole. The tee off found Fottrell one up. Fottrell drove to within 50 yards of the green. But then he flubbed a nine iron shot into a trap and recovered weakly. Ward, meanwhile, was down in par 4 to even the score. It marked the first green Fottrell had missed.

Ward won the 16th and 17th with pars while Fottrell went one over on each and the match was over. Both chalked up par 36 for the first nine where the play was even.

Duke University's Southern conference champions advanced three men into the next round. Fletcher Wall, Jr., defeated Frank Munch, California, 4 and 2, and James McNair ousted Alfred Timbrook, Louisiana State, 2 up, Art Wall turned back Don Hart, Penn State, 3 and 2. Bailey Glenn was beaten by Eli Bariteau, Jr., San Jose State, 2 and 1.

Barclay Wins

Dave Barclay of Michigan, defending champion, had an easy time in dropping Howard Verutti of San Jose State 5 and 3 to stamp himself as a strong contender for this year's crown.

Two of last year's semi-finalists won their opening matches handily. Charlie Coe of the University of Oklahoma defeated Jerry O'Neal, UCLA, 4 and 3 while Lou Stafford of the University of Oregon disposed of Harry Ernst of Boston College. The victor played some great golf on the second nine to overcome a one stroke lead at the end of the first nine holes to win 3 and 2.

In other matches today, Fletcher Wall of Duke, also in the lower bracket with Ward, will tee off against Bob Harris of San Jose State while McNair plays Richards in the same loop. Art Wall will meet Draper in an upper class match

Bulletin

Elliott Upsets Ward

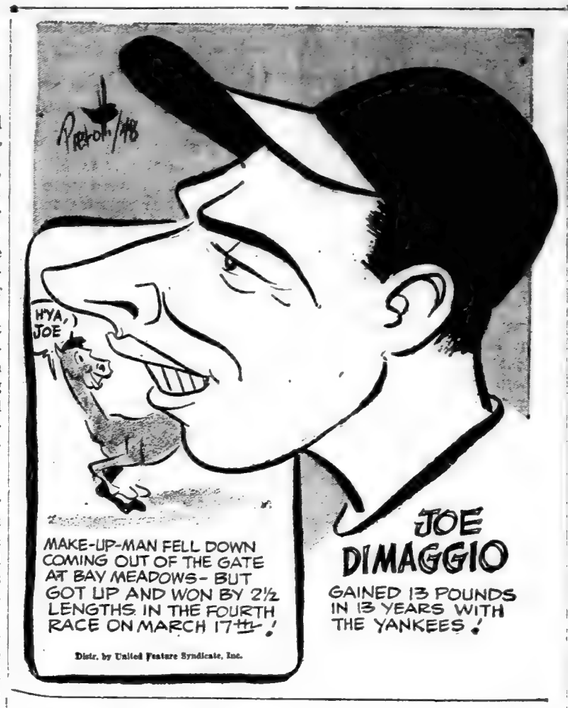
Palo Alto, Calif. — Harvie Ward of North Carolina a heavy favorite in the NCAA golf tournament here this week, was eliminated this morning in second round play by Pete Elliott of the University of Michigan.

Elliott, the underdog shot a two-over-par round in turning back the Tar Heel star who yesterday had himself upset the co-medalist Morgan Fottrell of San Jose State College.

Elliott is the brother of All-American Bump Elliott of the Wolverines. He gained revenge today for a lost to Tar Heel Jack Brantley, Ward's teammate, in a match during the regular season. Ward did not play in the match.

Baseball Juniors Play Wake Forest At Emerson Today

Chapel Hill plays Wake Forest here today at 3 o'clock in a contest that may decide the lead in the Area one, League three American Legion Junior baseball league.



The Chapel Hill juniors moved to within one game of the loop-leading Wake Forest club Wednesday as they defeated the Bragtown team 3-1.

Wake Forest played Raleigh yesterday in an unreported game that will have considerable bearing on the real importance of today's game. If Wake Forest defeated Raleigh yesterday, Chapel Hill would have fallen a game and a half behind and a win today would bring them to within a half game of the top.

However, if Raleigh defeated Wake Forest yesterday, Chapel Hill would move into the league lead by defeating Wake Forest today.

Chapel Hill's victory Wednesday over Bragtown came at the expense of pitcher Clifton Walker, who allowed the local club only three hits, but seven bases on balls and four errors proved costly. Chapel Hill scored three runs, one each in the second, sixth, and eighth innings, as against a single Bragtown run in the ninth.

Joe Hoenig went the route for the winning Chapel Hill squad, keeping six hits well spaced. He gave up only one walk and struck out six batters.

Activity for All

Mural Softball, Tennis Tourneys Ending; Golf Pitching Contest Begins Next Week

The Intramural activity hopper is rather full these days as the ending of the first session brings to a close the first phase of summer mural activity.

Along the softball front, league titles were being decided when this issue went to press. The playoffs in the diamond play will begin on Monday with the top two teams in each league taking part.

Eight to Play

These eight teams will be placed in a single elimination tournament which will be reeled off during the early part of next week. The first round will be played Monday, the semi-finals Tuesday with the championship game slated for Wednesday afternoon.

The softball play thus far in league contests has been conducted on a high playing level and stiff playoff competition is expected.

In the tennis play, the closed tourney is reaching the semi-final round with Bob Cash, a Beta, already in the charmed group of four. In the open singles, the semi-final play is set to begin with Ray Morris, Stan Gruner, Charlie Rice and John Kenfield, Jr. the four remaining contenders.

Golf Pitching

Competition in the intramural golf pitching contest begins Monday and will continue through Wednesday. Entries are still being received and will be taken on the field during the days of the competition.

Four top-flight prizes have been offered in connection with the pitching. A dozen brand new golf balls will go to the winner with the runner-up receiving four leather golf socks. Third and fourth prize winners will be presented six and four balls each.

The horseshoe tournament is completely tangled at the present what with the rain and a series of unplayed matches. The department hopes to have everything ironed out next week in order to complete the competition.

The golf tourney will be held on Emerson field between the the hours of 2:30-6:30 and is opened to any and all comers. It will be the first time such an action has been sponsored by the mural office and officials are interested in observing the outcome.

Mural activity will continue in second session.

Jimmy Thomas And Randy Hudson Attempt Lowering Of Two American Swim Records

The first of three Summer Carolinas AAU swimming meets will get under way in Kessing pool tomorrow at 3:45 with the special added attraction of two attempts to lower American records by University swimmers.

The Carolinas AAU championships this summer have been divided into three sections with the first being held Saturday in Kessing pool, the second scheduled for Raleigh July 17, and the third and last to be held in Tarboro on July 31.

The swimming pool will be closed to the public at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon because of the swimming meet.

Attempt To Lower

Coach Ralph Casey announced early this week that two of his swimmers will attempt to lower American records in two special added events Saturday. Jimmy Thomas, freshman sensation from Baltimore, will attempt to lower the existing American record for 100-yard backstroke. Miss Randy Hudson, coed from Tarboro, will try to lower the women's 200-yard breaststroke record.

Thomas was one of the stars of Coach Dick Jamerson's undefeated Blue Dolphins of last season. Thomas holds the Conference record for 150-yard backstroke and easily won the conference title in that event. Thomas celebrated his 18th birthday last winter by coming within six-tenths of a second of the national freshman record for the same event.

Special Times

The special record attempts will take place at 3:45 and the regular events are scheduled to get under way at 4 o'clock.

The district events are expected to draw at least ten teams with Chapel Hill, Raleigh, Tarboro, and the University favored to win team honors. Feature event of

Season Football Tickets on Sale To General Public

Season tickets for Carolina's home football games next fall have already passed the 1947 total mark, according to an announcement today from the University's Athletic Office. The priority period on season tickets for the general public extends to July 15.

According to Athletic Office Manager Vernon Crook, advantages of buying season tickets are as follows:

1. Priority in location. All season ticket orders received prior to July 15 will be filled before any orders from any group for individual game tickets.

2. The same location for each game. You learn where your seats are and do not have to wait on an usher.

3. No delay at the ticket booth. After you arrive at the stadium you go directly to your seats.

ing where tentative plans for the festival to be held next year were discussed.

Among these plans were certain changes, such as: running three night programs and holding no afternoon programs, holding the festival at least one week earlier this year and not holding any dances after the scheduled programs were concluded. The latter change, according to Grumman, will undoubtedly be put into effect as a result of the money lost on the dances this year.

Grumman said that arrangements have been made for Dr. A. P. Hudson of the University English Department, and Norman Cordon, noted singer, both members of the Folklore advisory council, to attend the Asheville festival August 5-7 to work with Director Lunsford.

Dancer Will Give Concert In Memorial Hall Tuesday

A program of oriental and fantasy dances will be given by Barry Lynn, nationally known concert dancer, in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening, July 6, according to Bill Shuford, Graham Memorial Director.

Lynn, who is one of three men dancers in the country who tour with a solo program, has a highly individualistic style and has achieved wide recognition for his exotic dances.

This is the second appearance of the noted dancer at the University. He performed during last summer's concert series, and plans to make Chapel Hill his headquarters next year.

The program slated by the dancer for his Memorial Hall performance include Promenade, Navajo, Marga Dance, Kantilan, Shustah, Mameluke, Artya Dance, Lusty Hymn, and Archer in the Stars.

the regular meet is expected to be the 100-yard freestyle which will pit Bill Ward of Raleigh, Southern Conference 100-yard champion, against Bruce Fountain of Tarboro and Jimmy Thomas of the University.

Races will be held in six different divisions: boys, junior men, senior men, girls, junior women, and senior women. Chapel Hill will be represented in all six divisions, with the Chapel Hill girls team favored to retain their team championship won last summer.

Medals will be awarded the first five place winners in each event, including relays. A running score will be carried from meet to meet in order to decide the team championships in each division.

The boys' and girls' divisions are limited to those who have not reached their 14th birthdays by July 2, 1948. Juniors must not be over 16 as of the same date.

Death of Russell Recalls Incident Of Disappearance

The death of Dr. Alfred Russell, 45, former University chemistry professor, in a hotel room in Cincinnatti, Ohio, last Tuesday brings to the minds of Chapel Hill residents an incident of two years ago in which the scientist disappeared mysteriously for the period of a week.

Russell, who died from what a coroner termed "natural causes," left here in July of 1946 to assume a position with the State Department of Education in Los Angeles, Cal. He arrived there on July 20 and was reported missing on the following day.

Sheriff's deputies found Russell a week later in a dazed condition and apparently suffering from amnesia. He was charged with burglary and vagrancy and committed to the city jail.

Russell gave authorities a vague story in which he stated he had been assaulted and robbed by a taxicab driver.

The scientist was released after being identified by Monroe C. Kidder, an associate, and placed in custody of his friend.

Russell was a native of Ireland and spent several years as a Rockefeller fellow at the University of Chicago before coming here to serve as a chemistry professor.

Picnic Changed

The date for the AVC outing at Hogan's Lake has been moved up from Saturday to Friday to accommodate those members with conflicting engagements.

The members are requested to meet at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon for transportation to the lake.

Henderson Speechless Over Yack Dedication

By Charlie Gibson

Recently the man who specializes in such mathematics as Fermagoric triangles and Einstein's theory, biographies of a great dramatist, and complete histories of his state was finally speechless. When shown the new Yackety Yack and its dedication that called him a man "his state and the students of his state appreciated," Archibald Henderson was sincerely surprised and obviously delighted.

A month ago Dr. Henderson, an outstanding University personality for the past fifty years, had ventured a guess about that same dedication in joking with Gene Johnstone, one of the three editors for the yearbook. "Gene, you saluted the football team last year. Now I'll bet you'll laud the girls from Carrboro, won't you?"

Caught without a comeback then, Johnstone answered that question only last week. He presented one of the first annuals off the press to Dr. Henderson and told him that he was believed to be the first person ever to receive two Yack dedications.

DR. ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

Yackety Yacks received in the first shipment from the Lassiter Press in Charlotte have already been distributed on the "first-come, first-serve" basis, according to Gene Johnstone. Approximately 500 more Yacks are expected soon, though, and will be given out at a date to be announced.

Another University yearbook in the early '30's honored the head of the mathematics department while he was preparing one of his initial books as official biographer for G. Bernard Shaw, the British playwright. The first dedication was written by Shaw himself and credited Henderson with expanding Carolina's reputation to worldwide proportions.

Now "boshing" such flattery, Dr. Henderson said that he was more pleased with the second dedication than he could have been "with any statue the students themselves could raise in the streets." In the same room at

Tickets for New Play Go on Sale Here Tomorrow

The advance sale of tickets for duction of "All My Sons," to be the forthcoming Playmaker propresented on July 14, 15 and 16 at the Playmakers theater, begins tomorrow at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall and in Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street. All seats for the play are reserved.

"Rehearsals are going along splendidly," Sam Hirsch, director of the play, stated yesterday. "And the members of the cast are confident that they can top the Hollywood version."

"All My Sons" will be the opening show of the season at the theater, and the director and cast promise a good time for all attenders.

Checks Due Today

Those long thin envelopes that look so little but hold so much, and that have caused the Carolina vet so much worry for the past week should be here today or tomorrow.

According to South Building contact was made with the VA in Winston-Salem, who since they didn't know anything had to contact someone else, presumably Richmond. This source said that the checks were being mailed out of Richmond Tuesday night and should reach the Hill today or tomorrow.

Coeds Visit Betas

Coeds may now visit the Beta Theta Pi fraternity house on Tuesday and Thursday evenings beginning at six o'clock, according to the House Privileges Board. Mr. and Mrs. Crowell faculty sponsor and his wife, will act as chaperones on these evenings.

Den Hollander To Give Lecture In Class Today

Prof. A. N. J. Den Hollander, professor of sociology and head of the department in the University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, and former student at the University, will give two public lectures, "Behind the Iron Curtain" and "Holland: Its Country, Its Schools and Its People," in Hill Hall Friday, July 9, and Thursday, July 15, respectively. Both lectures, under the sponsorship of the Summer Session, will be at 8 p. m.

Dr. Den Hollander, beginning today, will also give a series of seminar lectures in several classes on the campus during his 10-day visit to Carolina. Among them are Dr. J. O. Bailey's class in 20th century literature this morning; Dr. Guy Johnson's class in cultural anthropology Thursday at 10 a. m.; Dr. Katherine Jocher's seminar in sociology Thursday at 7:30 p. m.; Dr. S. H. Hobbs' class in rural sociology Monday, July 12, at 8 a. m.; Dr. Howard Odum's class in sociology Tuesday, July 12, at 11 a. m.; Dr. Jocher's seminar Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.; Dr. Guy Johnson's course in race relations Wednesday, July 14, at 11 a. m., and Dr. W. Carson Ryan's class in intercultural education Friday at 3 p. m.

A native of Rotterdam, Dr. Den Hollander was educated at the University of Amsterdam where he took his doctor's degree. He studied at Carolina from 1930 to 1932 and travelled throughout the United States as a Rockefeller Research Fellow in Social Sciences. He wrote extensively about the South after he returned to Holland and contributed a chapter, "The Tradition of 'Poor Whites'" to W. T. Crouch's "Culture in the South," published by the University Press in 1934.

During the war he was a leader in the Dutch underground and was jailed by the Germans on three occasions, spending four months in the concentration camp at Amersfoort. After the war he was appointed head of the Sociology Department at the University of Amsterdam.

His experiences and observations in Hungary and other Soviet dominated countries will be the basis for his lecture, "Behind the Iron Curtain." He spent a part of 1946-47 in Hungary to publish a study on the rural sections of that country. Among recent publications are "As Others See Us," published in "Synthese" for 1947-48, a study of the sociological concept of "Group Images."

Fred Young of Monroe, La., Martha Gratton of Durham and Edsel Hughes of East Orange, N. J., pictured above have three of the leading roles in "All My Sons," forthcoming production of the Carolina Playmakers which is to be presented at the Playmaker theater July 15, 16, and 17. Tickets for the production go on sale today at Swain Hall and Ledbetter-Pickards.

Veteran's Resourcefulness Saves Village Shock Case

Mrs. Dorothy McDade of 186 Jackson Circle, Victory Village, was seriously shocked about 6:15 p.m. last Saturday while working with an electrically defective food mixer, and witnesses state that it was the quick appearance on the scene, and resourcefulness of a disabled World War II veteran which saved her life.

The veteran, Carson Smeltzer of 188 Jackson Circle, was attracted when he heard cries for help coming from the apartment next door, and rushed into the McDade home to find Mrs. McDade lying on the kitchen floor in front of the sink.

Noticing the prone woman's "purplish" color, he felt for her pulse and found none. Smeltzer then sought signs of respiration and found none. So remembering his army taught first aid, the veteran began to apply artificial respiration. (Long on the front lines with the 95th Infantry Division in the European theater of operations, this was not the first time Smeltzer had seen shock.)

Dr. Robert Lindsay, of the University Infirmary, arrived and administered stimulants to the woman while the artificial respiration was in progress. At 6:45, Mrs. McDade was again conscious.

Mrs. Jane Pfouts of 192 Jackson Circle, who was visiting Mrs. McDade at the time of the accident, stated that the woman grasped a water tap while holding to a handle of the electrically operated food mixer at the same time.

Suddenly she seemed to stiffen, Mrs. Pfouts relates, and screamed, "I'm being electrocuted." Then Mrs. McDade fell to the floor.

Mrs. Pfouts immediately shouted for help and the veteran came running.

Mrs. McDade, the wife of Thomas McDade, a graduate student in sociology, was reported yesterday as "completely recovered" from effects of the accident.

Victory Village Is Struck Again

The second case of dread poliomyelitis was reported in Victory Village last Saturday, the victim being Joyce Carol Lowdermilk, one-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Lowdermilk of 215 Jackson Circle.

The child's illness was tentatively diagnosed as infantile paralysis by Dr. Fred Patterson of the University Infirmary, who rushed the patient to Duke hospital where Dr. A. M. McBride made a positive diagnosis.

The Lowdermilks live just across the street from Mrs. Frank W. Nelson, who was the Village's first victim, her case occurring just ten days prior to the second.

Little Joyce is reported to have a mild case, and Mrs. Nelson is said to be improving at Rex hospital in Raleigh where she was taken.

States Rights Set For Di Discussion

Restriction of states rights will be argued at the Dialectic Senate meeting to be held tonight at 9 o'clock in the Di hall, third floor, New West, according to an announcement from Don Shropshire, chairman of the Senate ways and means committee.

A bill to be presented by Bill Crisp proposes eight limitations in state governments which might be more beneficial under national supervision. The measures which the Di will argue pro and con tonight are nationally uniform laws for marriage, annulment, divorce, and separation; incorporation; inheritance and property title; traffic and motor vehicle operation (except with respect to taxes); crime penalities; the making, validity, and execution of contracts; and property and contractual rights of spouses.

Also to be considered is a standard minimum of education to be aided financially, where necessary, by the United States government and supplemented at will by the people in the individual states.

Gran Childress, summer speaker of the Di, invited all Philantropic Assembly members and prospective Senate members as well as present Di senators to participate in the forum discussion this evening. The Phi is now on inactive status until the fall; and the Di, Childress implied, may suspend its summer sessions, too, tonight unless there is more response than there has been during the last few Wednesday night meetings.

Richard Bowen, Di membership chairman, said that membership applications will be available tonight for all those who wish to join this forensic group, either permanently or for the summer only.

Gillins Will Tour Latin America On Research Trip

Dr. John Gillin, professor of anthropology and research professor at the University and Mrs. Gillin have left Chapel Hill on a research trip which will take them through Mexico and much of Guatemala.

This is the ninth anthropological journey to Latin America for Dr. Gillin and the third which has taken him to Guatemala in studies of Indians and mestizo peoples.

Nor is Mrs. Gillin a stranger to expeditions. In 1935, shortly after their marriage, she accompanied her husband who was then in charge of an expedition for Peabody Museum of Harvard. Starting on the West Coast of Ecuador, they crossed the Andes Mountains with pack trains and subsequently traversed the whole length of the Amazon Valley from its headwaters on the eastern Andean slopes. She later accompanied him on a field study in Peru.

This summer they will spend a short time making a cultural survey in the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in Southern Mexico, and will later spend several weeks in the community of San Luis Jilotepeque in eastern Guatemala near the border with El Salvador. San Luis is an isolated community whose population is in part composed of Mayan Indians and in part of modern mestizos who are called "ladinos" in Guatemala. It thus forms a good "laboratory" for the study of the ancient Indian way of life when it is in close relations with modern customs.

Mrs. Gillin will spend her time investigating the patterns of child rearing and child bearing, while Dr. Gillin will devote his attention primarily to a further investigation of the personalities of witch-doctors or magical healers who in that part of the world are both physicians and psychiatrists.

Six years ago Dr. Gillin's research assistant in Guatemala was Melvin Tumin, now assistant professor of anthropology at Princeton University. His research assistant on the 1946 trip was William Davidson, now a student in Duke Medical School. The work is financed by the Carnegie Research Fund, the Viking Fund of New York and the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Gillin is the author of "Moche: A Peruvian Coastal Community," published by the Smithsonian Institution last fall. The book tells of the life of the common people on the Peruvian coast.

Seven Campus Organizations To Sponsor Outstanding Programs For Coming Year

By Mildred Leonard

Owen Brewster, Senator from Maine, Allen Goldsborough, Washington Federal District Judge, and Eric Bunting, president of the National Association of Manufacturers have given definite commitments to speak here during the coming year, according to Charles Long, chairman of the Carolina Forum.

These speakers will be part of a year long program presented in conjunction with the International Relations Club, the Carolina Political Union, the Collegiate Council for United Nations, the Dialectic Senate, the Philanthropic Assembly and the student body under the name of Carolina Forum.

Dewey May Come

A partial commitment was received from Herbert Brownell, campaign manager of Governor Dewey, the Republican nominee for President. Dewey will be in North Carolina sometime prior to the election.

"An all-out effort to secure the Democratic presidential nominee will be made," said Long who recently returned from Washington and the Republican Convention.

The Forum, set up by the student legislature last quarter, is comprised of one representative from each of the seven organizations.

Other Speakers Expected

Other prominent speakers on a national and international level to be contacted are John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission; George Marshall, Secretary of State, and Arthur Vandenberg, Senator from Michigan.

Lack of Interest Cancels Y Picnic

All those who bought tickets to the picnic derby the YMCA, the YWCA, and the Hillel Foundation originally planned to hold at Hogan's Lake yesterday may get their money refunded at the "Y" information desk today, Ed McLeod has announced.

McLeod, chairman of the YMCA, the YWCA, and Hillel's summertime coalition cabinet which recently staged the WSSF auction, apologized to the campus for having to cancel the outing.

"Interest," McLeod explained, "was just too low for the 'Y' to invest the money in that venture this time. The Fourth of July weekend left folks too pooped out for the fun we had scheduled, and all local concerns closed on July 5 so that we were unable to obtain the food we wanted.

"Maybe we can try to treat the campus to another picnic next six weeks. Anyway, please contact our information desk if we owe you money from yesterday."

Kattsoff Speaks At Vespers Here

This evening at 7:00 o'clock, the Coalition Cabinet is presenting the third in its series of weekly vesper services. The speaker for this service will be Dr. Louis O. Kattsoff of the Philosophy department. His topic will be announced at the service.

The public is cordially invited to attend and asked to be prompt as late-comers disturb the order of the service. These services are held in the section of the arboretum next to the greenhouse and in the event of rain the place will be changed to Gerrard Hall.

Legislature to Meet

There will be an important meeting of the Student Legislature Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Dialetcic Senate Hall, third floor, New West, according to George Rodman, acting speaker of the body. All members are required to attend'

Win Free Tickets In GM Tourney

Graham Memorial will sponsor a table tennis tournament Thursday evening, July 8, in the ping pong room behind the Rendezvous. The tournament is scheduled for 7:30 p. m., and all persons wishing to enter are asked to report to Fred Burgess by that time.

The winner of the tournament will receive a book of theater tickets. Burgess said that all persons on the campus—students or faculty members—are eligible for the competition.

The tourney will be of the single elimination type, tentatively scheduled for four rounds. The first and second rounds are to be of one game, with the winner advancing to the next round. The third and fourth rounds—the semi-finals and finals—will be on the basis of the best two out of three games.

All coeds are invited to participate.

It's Hot, This Job Of Keeping You Cool

By Sunny Rollband

Keeping two swimming pools clean and ready for those attempting to escape summer heat seven days a week, is a complicated job—just ask the man who knows, Mr. Arthur Poschen, the pool mechanic.

When the Bowman Gray (indoor) pool was built in 1938, he helped install the complicated filters and feed lines and then stayed on to see that they were kept in tip-top running order.

4000,000 Gallons

The indoor pool, which is 55 feet by 165, has four filters through which 400,000 gallons of water pass daily. In these filters are about ten tons of sand through which the water is filtered.

The outdoor pool, completed in 1943 is 50 feet by 150 feet and has five wooden open-topped filters through which 388,000 gallons of water go every 24 hours.

The indoor pool filters are steel, and are worked automatically by throwing the right switches. However, the outdoor pool which has large wooden filters must have all its valves opened and closed by hand. The soda ash, and alum which are used to clean the water are added automatically in a liquid form to the indoor pool, while they are added in a powdered form by hand in the outdoor pool.

Large Amount of Chlorine

The indoor pool uses about 30 pounds of soda ash, 20 pounds of alum and 33 pounds of chlorine a week, while the outdoor pool requires 200-250 pounds of soda ash, 30 pounds of alum and 175 pounds of chlorine a week. The differences result in the great amount of evaporation which occurs in the outdoor pool, which uses about 10,000 gallons of water a day.

When city water is pumped into the large filters, it goes through the filters, has chemicals added, and then goes out through a makeup tank to the pool. After the water is used in the pool, it comes back through another section of the makeup tank and is sent back through the filters.

Process Removes Dirt

The filters are backwashed once a week. This process removes all the dirt which has come from the pool and settled on top of the sand, and washes the dirt out to the sewer. Fresh water is then added and the chemicalization process is begun again.

I climbed to the top of the wooden filters and watched them being backwashed. They bubble and boil like the cauldron's of Macbeth's witches and suddenly the dirt residue is shaken loose from the sand bed and washed out. Dirty water continues to foam out until the sand is clean and completely free of dirt.

This dirt accumulates despite the showers required of everyone entering the pool. Also seen around the large vats are rings such as can be seen around a bath tub after a particularly grimy person finishes bathing. This is body fat and dirt which is washed out of the pool through filters, settling on the sides. This is all scrubbed off as soon as it accumulates.

Water Vacuum Cleaner

In order to keep the outdoor pool clean, it is vacuum cleaned every Sunday morning about 8 o'clock. Drop around sometime and watch a water vacuum cleaner work. Instead of air doing the evacuation, water does, and takes the dirt with it to the sewer.

Wallaceites Secure 700 Names in One Day

By Henry Adams

Wallace-for-President club members deserve much credit for one thing—they work hard at their game. I watched a covey of them in action getting signatures to get Wallace's name on the North Carolina ballots.

Last Saturday one of the days when the thermometer hit 100 I went over to Durham with some of the local boys and girls to watch how they do it. State law requires that the Progressive party present the names of 10,000 qualified voters on a petition to get placed on the ballot.

Getting these 10,000 signatures is an arduous door-to-door canvassing proposition. The Wallacites have this job about as well mapped out as anyone can wish.

We met in the classroom of a radio training school over in the Negro business district of Durham. There were about 15 UNC students, four or five Duke students, several more from N. C. College at Durham, plus a few miscellaneous Durham residents. Also present was Mary Price, secretary of the N. C. Progressive Party.

The meeting got under way with a demonstration by Mary Price of the do's and don'ts of canvassing. She pointed out some of the objections usually made to signing the petition.

These ranged from "I'll never sign anything until I've talked it over with husband" to "Wallace? Who's he?" or "What! That Communist!" Experienced canvassers laughed and said they had all met these reactions.

After a brief pep talk everyone broke up into parties of two and started out on assignments. They had a map of the city showing all the streets that remained to be covered. Each party was given a map and told just where to go.

The whole city was supposed to be canvassed, but everyone knew the results would vary considerably in different neighborhoods. It's almost as hard to get signatures for Wallace in middle-class and wealthy neighborhoods as it is to sell suspension bridges. Working-class districts, on the other hand, respond much better, while Negro districts produce the most signatures of all.

I went with Aubrey Williams, UNC student, and Nat Bond, N.

Have We Tried?

We were talking to a furriner the other day, who has tried hard in the short time she has been here. She has done everything she could to bring other students who have come from afar to her way of thinking—that each and every one of them should attempt to contribute to the life of America.

Her thesis is that if one comes to enjoy and learn what the United States has to offer, it is the duty of the recipients to give some part of their own culture to the Americans. In this manner, the girl said, we will in some way manage to cross many of the barriers and prejudices which are now holding back the world.

Her complaint is that the foreign students are not trying. She accuses them of not giving any part of themselves, through writing, speaking, joining or just plain living with the folks around Carolina. She says that they have some excuse, because they do study hard (in books, not people).

We are of the opinion that she may be right; however at the same time it might be our own fault. Have we tried to draw our foreign visitors out . . . by trying to think with them, or working with them? Do they withdraw because they think we are too callous to understand what they have to offer?

We ask here both the foreign students and ourselves the questions we have posed.—L.K.

Bad State of Affairs

One of the most disappointing things we've heard in a long time was a recent statement by the retiring president of the student body. He said that he had no intention of entering politics in this state, for in the State of North Carolina politics is conducted strictly on a seniority basis.

Long, hard years of work for the party were necessary, he said, before any person could earn the reward of a chance to serve the people.

When a University student who has shown his ability both as a politician in getting elected, and as a statesman in his handling of student government affairs makes such a statement, it is bound to be disappointing not only to his classmates, but to the taxpayers of the state as a whole, whose money has been used to educate him from elementary school through college.

But the state political situation is just as he pictured it. To get ahead, one must either have the inside track, or work a lifetime before getting anywhere. It is enough to discourage even the most ardent political enthusiasts from entering the field.

It is a known fact that Kerr Scott, who won the Democratic nomination for governor over Charles Johnson, was offered the position of governor by the old machine in 1952, if he would get out of the race and let Johnson have it this time. Scott, with a rebel machine, however, overthrew the old machine.

We now wonder if the new machine will welcome youngsters into its midst, and nurture them to become statesmen rather than simply old and worn out politicians. The University trains statesmen. We'd like to see them feel welcome in politics.—C.O.

Grave Thoughts

We passed a quiet Fourth, burning in the sun on the warm sands. Half-way around the world there were other Americans passing our Independence Day. They were cool there under the stars, under the sod.

Foreign hands tend the little bit of Arlington in Kunming, China, at the foot of the Himalayas. Foreign tongues speak in memory of these men who fought for freedom for all the world and mankind.

The ancestors of these "crazy Amelicans" had also fought for their freedom, and they had won and built the America which later was to be the hope of the world—the "home of the brave." Mei Kuo the beautiful country must be a wonderful land to have raised gallant men.

And as the patriotic roar of Fourth speakers fades into a whisper in our minds, we can't help but think these thoughts.

Perhaps it does take the man who has not had as much really to appreciate American independence and freedom. Perhaps it is where suffering and want are the rule rather than the exception that those who have fought for freedom are given more than just a passing thought.—L.K.

Beach Trips Burn Me Up

By Bill Buchan

I think I am pretty lucky 'cause I ain't got no love for the beach. After the past weekend; I have even less than before. Every year, when folks start gallavanting off to the beach on Friday afternoon, the bug hits me, and I have to go, too. But only once a year, I went down Friday night, spent the day at Wrightsville Saturday and was dern glad to pack up and leave just as early as possible Sunday morning. Not that I have anything against the beach, but the two of us just don't get along.

For instance, I was supposed to leave here Saturday morning at 9 o'clock with some friends. Instead, I let myself get talked into going Friday night—after midnight — with Bob Hennessee. To add to the spirit of adventure, we took off in a 36 Ford, known as "Cindy Lou." Now, there's nothing wrong with Cindy Lou, except she'd never been driven over 50 miles before without breaking down. Despite that, Bob and I loaded up on gas in Durham and left that fair city at 1:30 a. m., Wrightsville bound.

Cindy Lou just bubbled along down the highway and had a wonderful time. She didn't so much as utter a moan between here and Wrightsville, so we pulled in and looked at the wide Atlantic at a little after six Saturday morning, a little tired, but happy, heaven help us, to be at the beach. We tried going to sleep but some little white bugs decided otherwise, and minutes later, we were dressing for the first swim of the season. That much was all right.

Our first mistake was going to sleep on the beach from 8 to 9. Then we went over to one of those joints and swallowed some so-called hotcakes, then back to the beach. Somewhere, somehow, I got the stupid idea in my head that if you stayed in the water, instead of on the beach, the sun didn't bother you as much. All right, I know now I was worng, and I know I was stupid, but it's a heck of a time to find it out now.

To put it short, we swam and sunned, and so help me, built dams on the beach until almost 1. I know now that that is the worst time to be out in the sun, especially when your skin is as delicate as mine evidently was, but I didn't know it then.

About 4 o'clock, we found the people we were supposed to go with at 9, and went to a cottage for a small party. There was a nice, cute, sweet little school teacher named "Sit". Then, the fun started. I was already red as a beet, but didn't think too much about it. I made a date with "Sit" for dinner and afterwards, then went across the bridge to dress and so forth. What followed shouldn't have happened to a dog, not even to a stupid dope like me.

First I got hot, then I had chills, then hot, then longer chills, then hot, but colder and colder. Eventually I gave it all up and went to bed, disgusted to say the least. The next morning, I could hardly move. And red? There ain't never been no equal to my color of red. Hennessee wasn't feeling much better and we packed up and left for good, comfortable locations such as Chapel Hill. didn't even bother to eat breakfast on the beach, but waited until we got to Wilmington.

Now, as I said, I ain't got nothing against the beach, the two of us just don't get along. I've had my expedition for this summer, and if I can help it, there won't be any next summer. Monday, I could hardly move. Sunday night I couldn't sleep and what will happen for the rest of the week. I have my doubts.

I wonder how the weekends are in the mountains?

The Big Guns Boom

By Pete Gerns

Despite recent notices that Georgia and Virginia delegations to the Democratic convention have pledged to vote for Eisenhower, and an announcement that an unpledged Indiana delegation is to sit in on the pow-wow, which is only two weeks off, Truman has been picking up votes since Dewey got the nod at the Republican confab last month.

When Eisenhower stalwarts like Jake Arvey, Cook county (Chicago) political boss, admits that many delegates of both pro-Eisenhower stand and neutral coloring have switched to the President, protestations of Far West Democratic managers that they are 'gin him" will be a little less persuasive. Truman feels that he has over 450 delegates already on his side, with 200 more inclined to vote for him when they'll get into the spirit of things down Philly way. He needs 618 votes to win.

The President will have to combat (or compromise) two mighty opponents before he can feel that he has the nomination in the bag: Fielding Wright, governor of Mississippi, and Ben Laney, governor of Arkansas. Furthermore, the Alabama delegation, which will be the first called upon for a nomination, has indicated that it will give way to any state delegation that wishes to nominate Eisenhower.

All this reminds us of the time when the Eisenhower boom was at its peak and the General was invited to speak before an alumni meeting in the East. During his address, Eisenhower admitted: "I come here as a man with a great decision to make; I am, as you see, deeply and seriously troubled by the question which confronts me. Next November I shall be face to face with one of the greatest problems of my career." At this point reporters covering the meet got ready to rush to the nearest phone as the General continued: "When Army plays Columbia, I'll have to decide on which side of the field to sit."

On the local scene: The WSSF committee, the merchants day in Memorial hall was a credit to the Playmakers, Sound and Fury, professors the WSSF committee, the merchants who contributed to the auction, and the femmes who made the show really worthwhile. Auctioneer Woodhouse managed to raise six dollars per average sale (girl and prof) on a hot night, with Bob Johnson, an apparently civic-minded student picking up two lovely tidbits for twenty-two semoles. (He got'em for a couple of pals).

Something that shouldn't be overlooked, though, was a show of friendly student-professor relationship displayed throughout the evening.

Bob Sain, local Stray-Greek leader, commented on the proceedings with the understatement of the week: "There's one thing about that show: they had some mighty nice-looking evening dresses."

Sign of the times: Sales of "Red Rooster" pills, supposed to "make old men feel young," sent Victor E. Perry, Chicago, to jail for 60 days and put him on probation for three years thereafter. He was convicted for violation of the pure food laws.

Circulars sent out by Perry, who has a wife and five kids, pictured a woman being embraced by a man and red roosters chasing hens. "Red Rooster has never failed in 25 years," the circulars said.

Aw, Go Lie Down And Fry

By Billy Carmichael III

There's an old saying that dates back to the time when heat was invented in the first place that says you just can't beat the heat, or words to that effect. The effect, of course, is showing itself these days to be definitely wilting if not overcoming, and leaves one with the spirit of "don't fight it; it's bigger than the 4,000 of us."

It's a question of knowing just when to give up without being cowardly, having fought the thing to the point where honor ceases to be a liveable condition. And the best thing to do is just lie down and fry.

Of course, there are said to be ways to beat the heat. Ten such ways have recently brought to the attention of this paper by the distinguished Arthur Whimsey in his Whimsey Report on the Heat.

Dr. Whimsey starts off by granting one logical conclusion: It's damn hot. But after that, the doctor will not give a foot. "The heat," he says, "is for the greater part, a state of mind." Better said, Doc, a state of mine.

But the doctor, undaunted, whatever that means, continues blindly on and comes up with several ways to tangle with the torridity: He would try:

1). The old swimming hole—this is either a figment of the doc's imagination or a memory of his youth. We don't have such a thing. A swimming pool might be substituted, but we'd rather not go into that. It's more fun to lie around the outside and watch the world go by. Figuratively speaking, that is.

2). The local ice plant—practical, but not where the boys seem to be hanging out. The ice ain't the only thing that usually gets cracked around the ice plant.

3). The Cinema—all right for a two hour session, but after you get to know the majority of the lines in the showing feature, and feel you know the actor's personally, it gets boring. There aren't enough Commie pictures to hiss at and let off steam.

4). Graham dorm—if you don't think it's cold down there, you should have had the date I had down there the other night. All I did. . . .(deleted).

5). Underneath the President's Mansion—nice place if you can get there. Real atmosphere, but the place is going to the dogs—half the local canines hang out there.

The professor may be right, but we figure there just isn't any way to beat the sun. Right now, we'll settle for a tie.

"Why William, on that cold gray stone
Thus for the length of half a day
Why William sit you thus alone
And dream your time away?"

Note the passivity here—the utter receptiveness to the old gray stone. . . .

Let us turn to another example: To a Butterfly." Page 282

This plot of orchard ground is ours.
My trees they are, my sister's flowers."

Now note how the greatness of Wordsworth's mind naturally encompasses the greater objects. Of course the unsympathetic reader might cynically comment that flowers need weeding—a task of no little labor. But the serious reader will easily see that it is a task incompatible with the meditative life of the poet. Dorothy had time for weeding. . . . But let us go on . . . to page 285.

"My former thoughts returned; the fear that kills Cold, pain, and labor; and all fleshly ills. . . ."

I wish to point out here that the word labor should not be read with fleshly ills. . . . Note punctuation. . . . It is with the word pain that we should read it. . . . That is . . ."

The Eyes Have It

To the Editor:

We first floor dwellers of Kenan, Alderman, and McIver aren't scardy-cats, nor do we want to be little clinging vines who howl for shelter and protection; but it's too doggon hot to keep our blinds and shades drawn after we hit the sack.

That's what some of the girls on the first floor of these dorms have been doing for the past few nights as a result of rumors about a nosey prowler who has taken a liking for orange crates and the lugustrum bushes around the buildings. True, no harm has been done; but it's much nicer to go to sleep without suspecting a pair of piercing eyes outside your window.

Now, the logical thing to do would be for us girls to form something of a Sherlock Holmes-Dick Tracy club, catch the so-and-so, and string him up by the heels—or maybe his eyes. But on second thought, he may have brothers. It has happened before and could conceivably happen again.

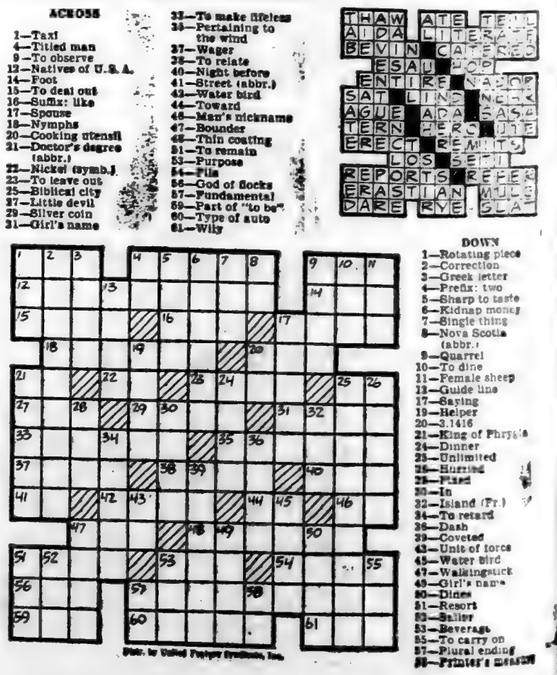
The second solution would be a Gestapo-controlled beat about the area, with the addition of several assistants to the one night-watchman we now have. According to the present set-up, the man ha ssuch a wide area to patrol that he visits each dormitory only once every two hours. This, no doubt, is conductive to the nocturnal habits of the prowler. Such action, however, would probably add items to the budget which the University considers unnecessary.

There is one measure, which is less drastic and less expensive than the preceding suggestions, that could certainly be taken.

On the basis of first hand checking done by the Men's Council, it has been suggested to the Supervisor of Operations that light posts be placed in the following places: the center of the girl's dormitory quadrangle; the northeast corner of Alderman hall; and the southeast corner of McIver hall. No action has been taken on this suggestion.

Lamps placed in these strategic spots could afford enough light to change the atmosphere of the place and discourage such prowlers. With the lights that are now burning, a night watchman could pass within a few feet of a person and still not detect his presence.

To any would-be Casanova who complains that he can't tell Sally good-night in such a galaxy of lights, I add parenthetically that the main path through the Arboretum is the darkest one place east of the dark-room in Swain, when the moon's not too bright.



So, how about some light on the subject?

Taking a Dive for the Old School

THE SLIGHTLY DISAPPOINTING WORD from California that a Carolina Olympic hopeful, Norman Sper, had met with injury while practicing for the London Game tryouts, brings to mind that diving, a beautiful and exciting sport, is also one at which one can both literally and physically break one's neck.

Now the extent of the injury to our Mr. Sper does not, one is happy to hear, run into the seriousness of the broken neck class, but still when a champion like the Tar Heel cheerleader can experience such a difficulty, the sport just ain't in the easy class.

Of course, it will be well to add that said Sper was not in any natural position at the time of his injury, but bent in pretzellike fashion in the midst of a two and one half maneuver of a highly-ambitious nature. Some one should warn people about such dives.

Diving has long been one of the leading features of aquatic athletics from the belly flop of the old swimming hole days to the Olympic perfection of today's international champions-to-be. Like any other sport, it is something that takes a great deal of time to acquire the exacting jist to and requires the taking of many falls that are not of the most comfortable nature. You can sometimes get quite a spine-tingling sensation while learning your trade.

Judgment in Judging

COMPETITIVE DIVING, OF COURSE, requires judging and that sometimes takes as much talent and training as it does to execute the dives themselves. Good diving needs good judging to be properly appreciated, though it often turns out that there are more good divers than there are good judges.

The judges, like in any other sport, are completely honest, but in many cases the limit of their honesty is also the limit of their judging ability. Judging is done on the basis of the complete action of diver—the approach to the board, the spring, the action in the air, the entrance into the water. Each dive is announced before the diver takes to the board. Announced along with the dive is its degree of difficulty—a standard rating of all the dives according to how hard the dive is to perform.

After the dive is completed, each judge—there are usually five—decides the value of the dive on the basis of 10-9-8-7 etc. and flashes his card to the scoring table. Here the judgments are added together, averaged and multiplied times the degree of difficulty. The result is the mathematical attainment of the effort portrayed by the diver.

In standard competition, there are a combination of required and optional dives done by the contestants. The required dives are ones that must be done by all competitors regardless of taste, and show the results of the basic schooling of the competitor. Optionals give the diver a chance to shine with or without plagiarism, depending upon the ability of the opponents. This class tests the limits of the aquabats and usually separates the men from the boys, so to speak.

The Bigger the Board

SPER, FROM WHAT ONE HEARS, is at his best from the high platform and is basically a platform diver. There are two types of diving along this line of thought—platform: where the diver has only the height of the structure to assist him in his efforts; and spring board; where he has the added physical incentive of the springing-catapult nature of the board.

The platform diver is therefore a little stiffer in his actions without the bouncing-baby-boy-actions of his spring board friend. Of course, the platform diving is conducted from a much greater height than the springboard competition is, with the Olympic towers rumored at around as high as 10 meters, which to the layman is roughly 30 feet. That is a big fall for anyone to take, especially when you have to worry about what you're doing on the way down, let alone what you'll do when it comes time to enter the water.

Springboard diving at London will be done from one and three meters—all Olympic distances are in meters instead of yards—which when freely translated amount to about three and ten feet, respectively.

Returning to Sper, who seems to be neglected in this piece at times, from the reports of past and present, the Tar Heel star has a good chance to make the free ride to Europe this summer, barring trouble from that old neck injury and any additional bad luck. This just doesn't seem to be a lucky year for Carolina's favorite sons in national competition. Possibly Sper's will be a successful flop.

Needless to say, the best of the Tar Heels goes to the tryouts with Sper this week, with no one denying that what Sper—who looks to be Carolina's best cheerleader in years—really needs, is to take a tumble at Detroit—into a pool full of national and Olympic honors.

FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE RAIN BARREL

Two of Carolina's fancy alumni made the holiday headlines in their early days as pro baseballers. Vinnie DiLorenzo lasted only three innings in his first starting assignment for Trenton, N. J., the shortness of his stay on the mound being attributed mostly to a streak of wildness. However, his club came through to score several runs in the late innings, and DiLorenzo escaped being charged with the defeat. Jim Kelly, another ex-Tar Heel now playing for the green dollars, had a field day Sunday as Charlotte split a double-header with Rock Hill. Kelly's total for the afternoon was four singles, two runs batted in, and two runs scored.

Seixas Upset In Utah State Net Finals

For the second time in as many weeks Vic Seixas of Carolina went down to defeat in the finals of a tennis tourney, this time to Sam Match of the University of San Francisco in the Utah State men's singles meet.

The Southern Conference titleholder from Philadelphia previously fell victim to the strokes of Harry Likas, also of San Francisco, in the NCAA championship match at Los Angeles.

Match played a spectacular, retrieving brand of tennis in upsetting the top seeded Tar Heel ace by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Vic's final round failures are hard to dispel on the basis of his fine early round exhibitions. The way he conquered Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary college in the semi-finals leaves little doubt that Seixas has the ability to take the title in any collegiate tourney. But somehow he seemed to be just below the needed pitch in both his final round matches.

In the doubles play the team of the two finalists was defeated by the William and Mary duo of Fred Kovaleski and Bernard Bartzen 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Harris Of San Jose State Wins NCAA Golf

Bobby Harris of San Jose State made it a clean sweep for his school, which captured the team title, in the finals of the NCAA golf tourney by defeating Ed Hopkins, Jr., of the University of Texas one up in the 36-hole final at Stanford.

Dave Barclay of Michigan, defending champion, was eliminated in the quarter finals in a wild tourney that was featured by frequent upsets of "name" players such as Harvie Ward of Carolina who defeated one of the co-medalists.

After his opening round win which stamped him as the man to beat to win the event, Ward ran into footballer Pete Elliott of Michigan who set him down 3 and 2. Immediately following this surprise, the upsetter became the upset in his match with James Mallory of Washington.

This went on until all the big boys had knocked each other out of the way to open the door for the advancing of Harris and Hopkins to the final round match. Hopkins came back after being six down at the halfway mark to tie it up on the 35th hole. He blew his chances on the last green, when he missed a 10-foot putt and took a one-over-par five.

Legion Nine Seeks To Capture Crown

Chapel Hill's pride and joy, the Legion junior nine, opened their final week of play in the area one, league three race yesterday with a game at Raleigh almost a lead pipe cinch to cop the crown for the second straight season.

The tilt at the capital city will be returned by one at Emerson field today as the locals seek to pad their one and one-half game margin over the second place Wake Forest entry.

All that separates the leaders from the title on Friday's closing, after this series, is one game to be played Friday with Durham at Chapel Hill.

Wake Forest who tumbled from first place to within easy reach of the third place Durham team in two days now must capture both games against Durham this week or find themselves left out completely. Leading the league most of the year doesn't seem to be a sure ticket to first place, as the Baptists found out last weekend.

The new leaders took over last Friday with an easy 9-1 win on the basis of Milton Cheek's two-hit masterpiece. He coasted home on a barrage of 10 hits which included three homers. Two of them were pounded out by catcher Wayne White. Chapel Hill repeated the victory the very next day in the loser's park, this time in a tight 1-0 tilt. They won on the basis of a double and two successive wild pitches in the fourth frame.

Durham, meanwhile, picked up ground to cap a drive that has brought them up into the position of a strong contender for the runner-up spot and a possible winner if Chapel Hill should falter with the goal within reaching distance.

A three-way scramble could develop if the locals fall apart but otherwise the fight now is for the runner-up honors with a two-game series settling the argument as to who will join Chapel Hill in the state eliminations.

Durham journeyed to Wake Forest yesterday in the first of a two-game set that will probably decide matters. They meet again tonight in Durham.

Yesterday's and today's meetings with Raleigh ought not to be too big a stumbling block as the boys from the capital city are barely above even in their overall record. At present they rest solidly in fourth place. They trail Durham by two games and lead Garner by a comfortable five-game margin with a nine won and eight lost record.

Horseshoe Playotts Today; Softball Tourney Continues

First session intramural play rolls into its final phases this week with the finals of the horseshoe competition being completed today and the softball playoff tourney being pushed towards a Monday championship game.

The horseshoe affair is one of the closest in mural history and today's finals will be possibly the leading attraction of the summer mural festives. Play in both the singles and doubles division will be conducted.

The softball tourney is still a toss-up, too. Today's games will pit Victory Village against Zeta Psi in one 5 o'clock game while the Grads face Phi Delt in another.

In the lower bracket, Mangum will battle Sigma Nu while the Law School faces the winner of yesterday's game between the PiKAs and ATO. Both these games will also be at 5.

On Thursday the semi-finals will be conducted and Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock the big championship contest will be reeled off.

Fields for today's games are: Victory Village - Zeta, No. 1; Grads-Phi Delt, No. 2; Sigma Nu-Mangum, No. 3; Law School-winner of PiKa-ATO, No. 4.

Other mural activity being conducted this week is the golf pitching contest. Play started Monday with a large number of persons taking part in the swinging. Golfers and duffers alike will get further chance to take part in this competition today and tomorrow from 2:30 until 6 o'clock on Emerson field.

Thus far, Dan Harris of the Phi Kaps, Gene Smith of Grimes, and A. M. Utley, also of Grimes, seem to be pacing the field.

Faculty, students, and administrative personnel are urged to come down to Emerson and try their golfing skill in this newest of mural entertainments. Entries can be made at the time of play.

Be sure to bring your own clubs and balls. Clubs should be for 30, 45, and 60 yard distances.

Swim Meet Called Because of Polio

The Carolinas AAU swimming meet which was to have been held here last Saturday has been postponed until Saturday, July 24. The outbreak of polio in certain sections of the state was the only reason given for the postponement.

The meeting Saturday would have been the first of a series of three Carolinas meets to decide the various team champions in the six different divisions. Chapel Hill girls team was favored to retain the team championship which they won last summer.

The schedule now calls for the first meet of the series to take place in Raleigh on Saturday, July 17, the second meet to take place in Chapel Hill on July 24, and the third meet to be at Tarboro on July 31.

Competition in the three meets will come from various parts of North Carolina, with teams from Raleigh, Tarboro, Chapel Hill, Wilson, Charlotte, and the University, favorites for team honors.

Sper Slightly Injured During Practice; Will Compete For Diving Team

Three University students, Norm Sper, Jimmy Thomas, and Randy Hudson, will compete against the country's best swimmers for positions on the American Olympic swimming team in Detroit this week.

The final American swimming trials will get underway at Detroit Thursday, July 8, and will continue through Sunday, July 11. The first three finishers in each event will be considered for the team which will journey to England for the Olympic championships next month.

Jimmy Thomas and Randy Hudson, accompanied by coach Ralph Casey, left Chapel Hill Monday and will be joined in Detroit by Norm Sper, who has been working out at his home, Hollywood, Calif.

Sper Injured

Word was received here last week that Norm Sper had suffered a neck injury while practicing a cutaway two and one-half at the Los Angeles Olympic pool, but would still be able to perform at Detroit. Sper was practicing the dive which he expects to use as one of his optional dives in the 10-meter platform diving trials at Detroit. The exact extent and nature of Sper's injury is not known here, but he missed practice for several days while undergoing physio-therapy at the Hollywood Hospital.

Sper was crowned national diving champion on three different occasions while still a schoolboy. In 1944 he won both the 3-meter and the 10-meter diving national championships, and in 1945 he retained his crown in the 3-meter dive, but the 10-meter dive was not held that year. Sper will receive his chief opposition from Dr. Sammy Lee of Pasadena, Bruce Harlan of Ohio State University, and from Miller Anderson, also of Ohio State. Anderson is the present National NCAA diving champion and was a former national AAU champion. Harlan is a former national platform diving champion and National NCAA champion.

Thomas

Jimmy Thomas from Baltimore was the freshman sensation of last year's undefeated Blue Dolphins. Thomas is scheduled to compete in the 100-meter backstroke and the 200-meter freestyle trials. The 18-year-old backstroker, who holds the Conference record, came within six-tenths of a second of tying the

Home Ticket Sale Surpasses Record

More season tickets for home football games have already been sold than ever before in the history of the University, with approximately 1,400 season tickets still remaining to be sold as of Tuesday afternoon.

If the sale of tickets were to be stopped today, a crowd of 40,000 would be assured for one home game in the fall, and a crowd of 25,000 would be on hand for the smallest game of the season, with other home games falling somewhere in between.

Indications now are that most seats on both sides of Kenan stadium will be sold in season tickets and that ticket orders for individual games will have to be filled at the ends of the field directly behind the goal posts.

HOGAN LEADS GOLFERS

Belting Ben Hogan yesterday counted his season's golf earnings at $20,197.50 and decided to pass up the next two big opportunities to add to it.

Downtown to Dorm Too Much Walking Avows Hitchhiker

It's foolish to walk from uptown Chapel Hill to a point way out yonder called A Dormitory when all you gotta do is throw up a thumb and travel first class in things like Buicks and Cadillacs.

At least that's the reasoning of a student named Bob who resides in the newly-completed brick strutcure located across from Woollen gym.

It isn't a case of laziness on the part of the short-distant hitchhiker, either, says Bob's roommate. He merely sees no point in bucking the summer heat for a distance of about two city blocks and a country block when it's much easier to ride.

Bob's simple operation starts in front of the postoffice with the kindly motorist pulling over to the curb in answer to Bob's beckoning thumb.

Once in the car Bob finds out nine times in 10 his friend is headed for Durham. Off goes Bob immediately into his song and dance of how much better the Raleigh road is for traveling to Durham. He describes a velvety road that is scenery-laden with a minimum of traffic in contrast to a road filled with hairpin turns and deathtraps—the one his driver intended to take from the start.

If successful in his verbal venture then everything for Bob is okay and shipshape. He gets out at A dorm and smiles a beaming good-bye to his benefactor.

Should the driver by chance like his roads with hairpin turns then Bob gets off at the stop light in front of Spencer dorm and waves his thumb once more—this time toward dorm A.

An account of Bob's hitchhiking procedure from Dorm A to an uptown spot is a carbon copy of the above—only backwards.

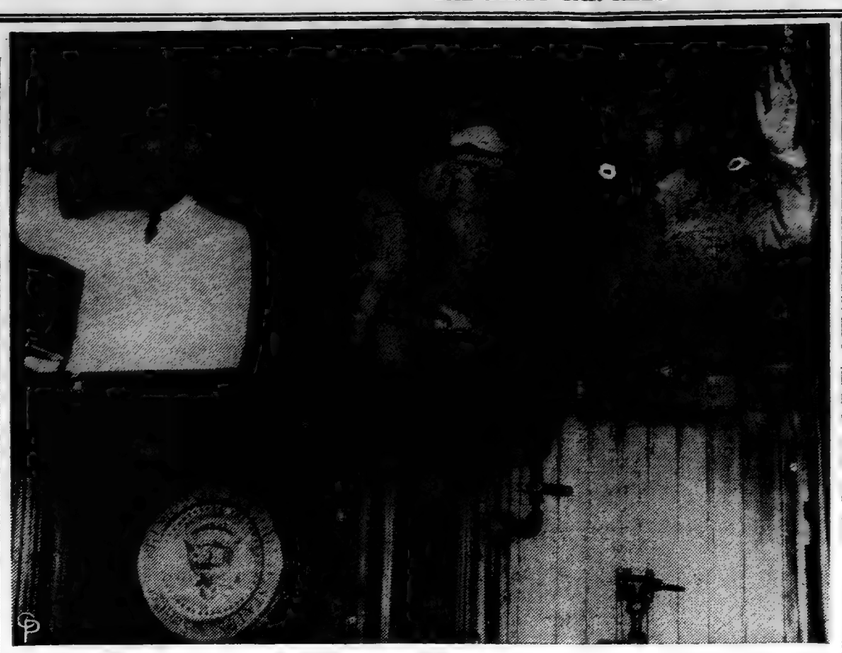
that moment, however, a sort of statue was in the making as another of the many Henderson awards. Segovia, a local sculptor, was busy at work on a handsome bust of Dr. Henderson which is to be presented to the University upon its completion in two months.

His latest tribute in print left Dr. Henderson too gratified to complain about two oversights in the text of the dedication. First, the picture in the yearbook shows him talking to an unidentified man in front of his home here in Chapel Hill. His companion in the photograph is actually Archibald, Jr., the oldest of his five children who is now working on a Ph. D. at Columbia.

The second error in the annual is the mention of Dr. Henderson's "retirement last summer." in reality this summer finds him still teaching in Phillips hall as diligently as ever, his resignation not becoming effective until next fall.



He also has several books underway. Besides "The Campus of the First State University," a history now in the publishers' hands, he is currently exchanging letters with Shaw in hopes of soon informing the reading public of new and misinterpreted facts about his famous literary friend.

Dr. Henderson was elected, according to Johnstone, by Yack staff vote and by a survey of representative students' general preference as to who should receive the honor. Other faculty members similarly chosen to be given recognition for their services on two later pages in the yearbook were F. C. Shepard, J. M. Lear, Lyman Cotten, Federico G. Gil, Geraldine Foster, E. H. Newcomer, Clemens Sommer, Early Wynn, M. B. Garrett, J. W. Lasley, Hugo Giduz, and William S. Newman.

One-Termers Must Notify Laundry

All students enrolled in the first term of summer school who do not intend to remain for the second term, and who wish their unused laundry credits refunded before leaving Chapel Hill, are requested to notify the University Laundry office before July 17. The office is located at 106 W. Franklin street.

Those students failing to notify the office will not receive their refund at the end of the first summer session.

national freshman NCAA record for the same event.

The 200-meter freestyle will be something new for Thomas, but according to coach Ralph Casey, "the boy shows promise as a freestyler and the experience will be good for him."

Thomas is scheduled to swim in trial heats of the backstroke on Friday and trial heats of the 200-meter freestyle on Saturday. Finals of the two events are to be run off Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

Randy Hudson

Randy Hudson, coed from Tarboro, has been swimming in state and national swimming competition for nearly ten years and competing in the Olympic trials has long been her ambition. Randy will swim in the 200-meter breaststroke and the 400-meter freestyle events.

World Peace Group Interest Increasing In High Schools

Mecklenburg County is leading over 80 counties with a count of 13 schools participating in the High School World Peace Study and Speaking Program for 1947-48.

The Speaking Program was originated by O. K. Merritt, Mt. Airy business man and now sponsored by the University Extension Division under the directorship of E. R. Rankin.

Its purpose is to stimulate interest in world affairs among the young people of North Carolina. "This year we have accomplished much through the 188 schools participating along our objectives," said Director Rankin. It is estimated that the program has reached about 150,000 people within this state.

Mary Louise Merritt, daughter of O. K. Merritt, and Bill Evans, University graduate student made frequent field trips throughout the state to encourage participation. The results of their work show the schools participating included Waynesville to Hertford on the coast.

The question used this year was "How Can the United Nations be Strengthened?" High school teachers used this program in their social study, English, history, and Public Speech classes.

The winners of the speaking contest are expected to speak before community civic groups such as the Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis and PTA's as well as church groups and radio stations.

The participating high schools are sponsored in their locality by local civic organizations who pay the registration fee to the University headquarters. This entitles them to receive material and information to conduct their program.

From a poll taken on the high schools who have already held their contests, it is revealed that the majority found the topic and the program stimulating and express a desire to participate again the coming year.

Scientists Will Meet in Berlin

Students or professors of natural science were extended an invitation this week to attend a meeting on natural science at the Technical University of Berlin from August 19 to September 5 in the British occupation sector.

The meeting which is under the sponsorship of the British Military Government, will bring together famous representatives from universities of many European states. "Science, Technology and Humanity" is the theme of the meeting.

"Scientists who can contribute both towards progress or toward catastrophe must face these problebs," the invitation states.

The American Military Government will furnish transportation to any interested persons at their own expense. Students wishing to participate in this meeting may gain full particulars from: Chief, Cultural Exchange Branch, Education and Cultural Relations Division, OMGUS, APO 742, care of the Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Checks Hot Water

Besides keeping pool machines running, Poschen also must see that the two tanks which supply the men and women's locker rooms with hot water are working and that the condensation pump which heats the whole building is functioning properly.

Poschen, formerly a Carolina lumberman, says that the machinery "is just like a child. Every sound means that a different thing is wrong and must be checked." He also says that because of the infantile paralysis which has appeared so close to the campus, additional chlorine has been added to the pool, so don't complain if it does sting your eyes a little, it's for your own benefit.

UVA to Feature Quiz, Orchestra

The University Veteran's Association open house tonight will feature a three-piece combo from radio station WTIK in Durham and a $30 accumulated jackpot. And furthermore, it's open to all students, not just veterans.

This regular weekly feature of the UVA is built around the Dr. I. Q. quiz program. Merchants of Chapel Hill donate gifts that are given out for questions answered correctly.

CPU Meeting

The CPU will meet at 8 p. m. Sunday to discuss the situation in Yugoslavia. All interested persons are invited to attend.

R. P. Calhoon to Conduct Seminar

The University Extension division announced today the University will sponsor a Personnel Seminar here on Friday and Saturday to study various methods of interviewing and other problems connected with personnel work.

The seminar will start at 8 o'clock Friday morning and will be led by R. P. Calhoon of the Commerce School. The class will be held in the basement of the Naval Armory.

At present 24 persons have preregistered including Dean of Women, Katherine K. Carmichael; and University Placement Officer, Joe Galloway. Other students are expected to be registered at Whitehead Dormitory.

Everyone Invited To Pops Concert

Weather permitting, the "On the Lawn" Pops concert of recorded music will be presented tonight at 8 o'clock at Graham Memorial. The concert tonight will feature a repeat performance of Katalevsky's "The Comedians," which was so favorably received by the audience Sunday night. Also included on the program will be Rachmaninoff's piano Concerto No. 3 and several shorter selections.

Concerts of this type will be presented throughout the summer on Sunday nights at 7:30 and on Wednesday night at 8:00.

Notice for Pilots

Plans are being made to transport all Air Force Reserve Pilots to Atlanta, Ga. this week-end to engage in Reserve flying activities. All Pilots who plan to go must contact Dr. C. C. Carter, 310 Bingham Hall, not later than Wednesday July 7.

GM Director

Applications for the position as director of Graham Memorial are now being accepted, according to an announcement from Dean of Men Fred Weaver. Anyone desiring to apply for the position should file their application with Dean Weaver in the next few days.

-Wallace-

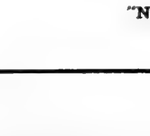
C. College student to cover a mixed neighborhood in the west side of Durham. There were several very substantial middle-class homes. As expected calling there didn't bring any signatures. There were a few smaller houses on the streets where low-income families lived. We learned that a previous party had already gotten signatures here.

We went on and found ourselves in an all-Negro district. Going from door to door, I found a surprising pro-Wallace sentiment here. Many who were not registered or had voted in the Democratic primaries said they wanted to see Wallace win in 1948.

A lot of Negro voters were willing, even pleased, to sign the petition. We stopped at one house and found a friendly man who was completely sold on Wallace so much so, that after he signed he called his wife and insisted that she do likewise.



Even in this district it was still a tedious chore to get signatures. In at least half the places there was nobody home. The majority of those contacted were either not registered or had voted in the Democratic primaries, making their signatures invalid.

The entire group got over 700 signatures for the afternoon, high man being Bob Eagle with a total of 53. Ironically enough, Eagle has not yet decided for whom he will vote but would like to see Wallace's name on the ballot in case he decides to vote for him.

A veteran of five years in the Florida real estate business, Eagle seems to have been enhanced with the idea of selling a new product.

Top Rutgers Lecturers Here For Bankers Meet

Plans have been completed for the 12th Annual Bankers Conference which opens here Sunday, July 11, and continues through Friday, July 16.

Class room sessions will begin early Monday morning and will continue through Friday noon. Sessions are being held under the sponsorship of the North and South Carolina Bankers Associations, the North and South Carolina Banking departments, and the University.

New School Planned

For the first time since the conference was inaugurated, a full five-day study of trust operations, entitled the Technical Trust school, will also be held to run concurrently with the regular sessions.

Strictly an educational program, the conference will have this year a faculty of nine lecturers and instructors who are members of the faculty of the Graduate School of Banking of Rutgers University.

Rutgers Lecturers

These Rutgers faculty lecturers are M. J. Brines, special lecturer, Fordham University School of Business; Carlisle R. Davis, American Institute of Banking; T. Allen Glenn, Jr., former member of Reconstruction Finance Cor-

Rendezvous Features Sturgell Trio Tonight

The Jack Sturgell Trio will be featured tonight and every Friday night from 9 to 1 o'clock in the Rendezvous room, Manager Arnold Wilson announced yesterday. Manager Wilson also said that plans are being made for floor shows for Friday nights to the accompaniment of the Sturgell Trio.

In the afternoons if you are bothered with the heat, the cool depths of Graham Memorial, i.e., the Rendezvous, provide an ideal place to spend your time. There are comfortable couches and soft music. Cards and other games are available for the more energetic patrons. But the Rendezvous is eespecially noted for its atmosphere of restful relaxation.

The ping pong tournaments in the room behind the Rendezvous will be held on Thursday nights.

S&F Tickets On Sale At "Y" For Comedy Show Next Weekend

Tickets for Sound and Fury's summer production, "Mardi Gras," are on sale in the "Y" now, at 55 cents each, Jerry Weiss, Sound and Fury president announced yesterday. The show will be presented in Memorial Hall on Friday and Saturday nights, July 16 and 17, at eight o'clock.

"Mardi Gras," another Pete Strader book, is a comedy concerning a pleasant journey to Hell during the time of the religious movement of Mardi Gras in New Orleans. The script is punctuated with song and dance routines, designed by Mrs. Wherry, Sound and Fury's associateadvisor, and her assistant Betsy Kennedy.

"Mardi Gras" is characterized by the over-popular theme of wine, women, and some of the gin left over from last fall's production of "Gin Lane."

The cast is headed by Pat Ellis, Colbert Leonard, Jane Hunter, and Tommy Thomas, all survivors of the final shooting scene in "Gin Lane." Pete Strader is directing; Tread Covington is composing; and Jim Hall is arranging the music.

Elizabeth Lovell To Speak at Forum

Mss Elizabeth Lovell will be the leader for the Supper Forum of the Westminster Fellowship at the Presbyterian church this Sunday evening. Miss Lovell formerly taught physcal education in Nebraska, and was public health educator with the Orange-Person-Chatham District Health Department until 1946 when she became health education supervisor with the State Board of Health. This program will be the second in a series of studies on the "Christian Concern in Public Health."

All students, married or single, are invited to attend the Supper Forum. Supper is served at 6:15; the study and discussion begins at 7:15.

Wesleyans' Dance Slated for Tonight

Wesley foundation will hold its first summer square dance tonight in the Recreation center beside the Methodist church, Ed Penland, summer Recreation committee chairman announced yesterday. The party-dance is a special occasion for the purpose of introducing Brooks Patton, the new W. F. Director, to old and new members and all other students to Wesley. Reverend Patton began his work with the Foundation last week. All students are invited to come and meet the new Director.

'All My Sons' Plans For Presentation Near Completion

"All My Sons," the 1947 New York critics prize winning play, will open the 30th summer season for the Carolina Playmakers on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, July 14, 15, 16, in the Carolina Playmakers Theater at 8:30 p. m.

Better Than Movie

Director Sam Hirsch believes this rich emotional play will bring much more enjoyment to the audience than the movie version just released in this area. "Too little of the rich humor and too much overemphasis on the melodramatic phase of the story are the faults of the movie version," Hirsch said. "The movie emphasized the three leading characters only and also left out much of the playwright's own comment on conditions after the war. We've placed our emphasis on characterization and believe that is the angle which will appeal most to the audience."

Hirsch said he was greatly pleased with the casting, which welcomes many newcomers to the Playmaker stage. The cast includes Nat White, Birmingham, Ala., a senior; Marion Miller, Aberdeen, Md., a graduate student; Edsel Hughes, East Orange, N. J., senior; Martha Grattan, Durham, graduate student; Fred Young, Monroe, La., junior; Bill Hardy, Durham, special student; Rue Guthrie, Charlotte, graduate student; Paul Keziah, Mineral Springs, senior; Lucia Collart, New York, senior; and David Rosen, Chapel Hill, a student in the elementary school.

Technical Staff

Serving on the technical staff are Murray McCain, assistant to the director; Walter J. Meserve, Jr., stage manager; Bob Eberle, scenery and lighting designer; Bob Barr, master electrician; Helen Brown, costume supervisor; Edna Dooley, mistress of props; Fred Johnson, house manager; Violet LaRue and Jerry Weiss, publicity.

Reserve seat tickets are now on sale at the Carolina Playmaker's Business Office in Swain Hall and at Ledbetter-Pickard's.

Plans are being completed for the presentation of "As You Like It" in the Forest Theater, August 19 and 20. Sam Hirsch will direct.

Invitation Extended

Any members of the Order of the Eastern Star who are in Chapel Hill for the summer are invited to attend the meetings of the Chapel Hill group, according to an announcement this week by Mrs. Elizabeth D. Montgomery. Members of the Brazen Pillars who are here are also invited to the Eastern Star meetings.

US Cancer Institute Gives Medical School Large Research Fund

A donation of $5,000 to the University Medical School by the National Cancer Institute was confirmed this week by Dr. Kenneth M. Brinlhous, head of the Medical School Department of Pathology.

The money will be used to continue a program of instruction for resident medical students in cancer detection and treatment. Instruction will also be available to practicing physicians who wish to acquaint themselves with the latest methods of fighting the nation's number one killer, according to Dr. Brinkhous.

Work on the program was begun last October with an initial grant of $3,500 from the Cancer Institute. This money was used primarily for the purchase of equipment and preparation for the course to be offered, Dr. Brinkhous said.

He added that the new grant will be put in use next October 1, and it is hoped the work will proceed on a much broader scale than has been the case this year.

Course in Books Set for Late July

The University Extension Division, in cooperation with the Great Books Foundation of the University of Chicago, will offer a training course for prospective leaders of Great Book Seminars at Chapel Hill from July 26 until August 7.

The group will meet for two hours daily, except Sunday, under the leadership of an experienced leader of Great Book Seminars, Dr. Martin Shockley, professor of English at Evansville College, Evansville, Ind.

No tution will be charged for the course but it will be necessary for each member of the course to own or have access to the set of 16 first-year books which may be secured from the Great Books Foundation, Box NN, Chicago 90, Ill., at a cost of $7.50.

Members of the course will be accommodated in either Whitehead or Stacy dormitory at the rate of about $8 per week for one person.

The Extension Division will charge a registration fee of $5 which will include the use of the library, infirmary service and the privilege of using the outdoor swimming pool.

The reading list for the course will be based on classics of western civilization and will range from Plato and Aristotle, through Aquinas and Rousseau, to Adam Smith and Karl Marx.

Training classes will meet daily from 4 o'clock until 7 in the afternoons in the U. S. Navy (R. O. T. C.) Armory.

Workshop to Give Exhibit, Reception

The Workshop on Human Resources and Intercultural Education will sponsor an art exhibit and reception on Saturday, July 11 at 7:30 p. m. in the Alumni Building, Room 407.

This exhibit will include paintings and figures made from various materials such as tempera paint, finger paints, paper mache, and clay. These projects were undertaken and completed under the guidance of Miss Marion Quinn, Art Supervisor in Elizabeth, New Jersey.

The public is invited to view the exhibit and meet the members of the workshop.

Ten Minute Senator

A. W. Sapp, summer school student from Greensboro, was inducted as a member of the Dialectic Senate last night. Later, at the call for new business, a motion was made and passed to adjourn for the summer. Senator Sapp was officially a member for ten minutes.

FIRING AWAY WITH TWO toy guns, David Rosen, Chapel Hill student, appears in a playful mood as he trots through his role in "All My Sons" on the back of Nat White, Birmingham, Alabama senior in the Dramatic Art Department. The prize winning play will be presented by the Playmakers in their theater here July 14, 15 and 16.

Deadline Named For Reinstatement Of NSLI Policies

World War II veterans who have lapsed their National Service Life Insurance have only until July 31 to reinstate under the present easy plan, the Veterans Administration pointed out today.

In most cases, a veteran now may reinstate a lapsed policy without a physical examination by paying two monthly premiums and signing a statement that his health is as good as when he dropped his insurance. On and after August 1, a physical examination will be required where a policy has been lapsed more than 90 days.

Veterans wishing help in reinstating should visit the VA office, 302 Morris St., Durham, or should write to the Insurance Director, Veterans Administration, 900 N. Lombardy St., Richmond 20, Virginia.

Swain Radio Center Plans Unusual Shows

In contract with the United States Navy and the Institute for Research in Social Sciences, the University Communication Center is experimenting in an effort to discover which method of presentation over the air is more effective, according to Miss Jane Grills, production-director of the forthcoming series. The experiment, the first of its kind to be attempted, is designed to discover whether people can learn more from listening to a radio talk, drama, variety show, or round table discussion.

The 24 scripts were written by Mr. William Workman, alumnus of Carolina hired by the Navy to write the scripts, and consist of six scripts in each of the four categories of presentation. The material in each script in the grouping of the four types is exactly the same, and by keeping the attitude, the time and other variables constant, the staff will attempt to find out which type of program is more effective as a teaching medium.

The subject matter is based on S. I. Hayakawa's "Language in Action" which is being used as a textbook in 16 Social Studies at State College starting this fall. The students in these classes will first be pre-tested to determine their general knowledge in the field. Each class will use the textbook, do required assignments, ask the instructors questions, and listen to the records, starting October 2.

The 16 classes have been split into four groups. One group will listen to the six talks, one to the dramas, one to the variety show, and the other to the round table discussions. Then the students will be re-tested to see which type of broadcast has been more effective.

So far, all the talks have been recorded, and four of the round table records have been completed. Yesterday production of the drama and variety shows be-

UNC Spoonsors Manteo Art Center

The Roanoke Island Art Center in Manteo will open this summer for the first time under the sponsorship of the University of North Carolina.

This school, which is being held in connection with Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," will open July 12 and continue until August 21.

Miss Louisa Mustin, formerly of the department of art, University of Alabama, has been named the director of the art center. In addition to heading the summer school, Miss Mustin will teach a course in the appreciation of art.

Staff members will include William Meade Prince, eminent artist and professional illustrator, who will be in charge of the beginning courses in drawing and painting. Paul Young of the music department of the University of North Carolina, will teach a course in music. The work in speech and acting is to be handled by Miss Elizabeth Welch of the faculty of Salem College, and Harry Coble, professional dancer, will give work in body training.

All courses carry degree credit in one or more divisions of the University, and credit can be transferred to other institutions. Course carrying six quarter hours credit will meet 10 or 12 times a week, and courses carrying three quarter hours credit meet five or six times a week.

Preregistration For Fall Term Begins Here July 15

Preregistration dates for Fall quarter have been set for July 15 and 16 for those students now in school who will not attend the second summer school session, according to an announcement yesterday by Edwin S. Lanier, Central Records director.

Students already registered and also those who intend to register for the second session will not be permitted to preregister on the above dates but should wait until August 9 and 10, it was announced.

Final examinations for the first summer term will be held on July 19 and 20. The exam schedule will be posted tomorrow or Monday on bulletin boards and at South building information desk.

Regular registration for second term summer school will be held on July 21, the day preceding the second session's beginning.

Talk Tonight Is Discussion Of Communism

Professor A. N. J. Den Hollander, professor of sociology and head of that department at the University of Amsterdam, will give a public lecture tonight in Hill hall at 8.

The lecture, "Behind the Iron Curtain," will mark the first public appearance of the noted Dutch educator and wartime underground leader.

Dr. Den Hollander, who has been in Chapel Hill for the past week lecturing in various classes, will deliver another lecture next Thursday night in Hill hall. This lecture, dealing with postwar Dutch education problems, is entitled, "Holland, Its Country, Its Schools, and Its People."

Tonight, Dr. Den Hollander will speak of his experiences and observations in Hungary and other Soviet-dominated European countries since the end of the war. He will be introduced by Chnacellor House.

Much of the material for tonight's lecture will be drawn from his stay during 1946-47 in Hungary and eastern Europe. During this period, he was in Hungary making a study of the rural conditions in that country.

University Band To Give Concert

The University Summer School Band will present a lawn concert this Sunday afternoon, July 11, at 4:30 o'clock near the Davie Poplar.

Earl Slocum will direct the band in a program of varied compositions including marches, light concert, and novelty numbers. The public is invited.

The program will include: The Buccaneers March, Skarnicka; Triumph of Ishtar Overture, Olivadoti; Holst's Second Suite in F; March, the Major's Battalion, Cook; and Naughty Marietta Selection, Herbert.

Tausman's Carnival Suite; Gay Nineties Overture, Lang; Thou Swell from "Connecticut Yankee," Rodgers; American Patrol, Meacham; and the Depasz March by Lincoln.

Weber to Address Wallace Club Here

Dr. R. Palmer Weber, Southern director of the National Wallace for President Committee will discuss the Wallace movement in the Southern states at a meeting of the Carolina Wallace Club Friday night at 8:30 o'clock in Roland Parker lounge No. 3.

Dr. Weber was research director for the CIO-PAC before resigning to work for the Wallace Committee. He was formerly chief economist for the Kilgore Committee. He received his Ph. D. in philosophy from the University of Virginia.

The meeting is open to the public and there will be a question and answer period after Dr. Weber's address.

Village Council Keeps Open Ears

The Victory Village Council requests that all persons who object to the recent plan of one-way traffic on Daniels Road come to the council meeting Monday night to voice their disapproval.

Mayor Bill Goulding stated that the recent traffic regulation, already approved by the villagers, had been brought up for discussion again because of the loud objections made to the persons putting up one-way signs on the street.

These objectors, Goulding said, were asked to appear at the council meeting last Monday night, but the only dissenting voice was that of one of the councilmen.

If none of the Daniels Street residents appear next Monday night, the Village Council will assume that the present set-up meets with the approval of a majority of the persons using that street, and no action will be taken to repeal the regulation.

Graduate Exam

The National Graduate Record examination will be given August 2nd and 3rd. Deadline for registration for the examination is noon, July 15.

Coeds Dare Designers To Junk New Skirts

By Jim Dickinson

Campus maidens are all smiles these days despite a gathering rumor that Paris and New York designers are preparing to junk the New Look and branch off at a new tangent in skirt attire.

"What else can they do that hasn't been done?" said one coed, taking a downward glance at several yards of cloth plastered with more trimmings than a Christmas tree.

"Auto designers can change their products' lines each year," she went on, "and the same used to be true of women's skirts. But now the lines are gone. The only lines represented here are those which can't be seen."

"It's interesting to hear that another change is in the offing," said another young lady. "I've hardly become accustomed to this one yet—perhaps the next design will be a little easier to take. But I would like to take a peek at what's coming before they push something else off on me."

Some talk has gone around that hobble skirts will be the coming fad on the clothing agenda. These are the ones which start at hip-size and are exactly bod-size from there to a point about eight inches from the sidewalk.

The girl wearing this fashion walks along in ripples and is afraid to attempt a step which exceeds 16 inches. Her only excuse for walking at all lies in the fact that the hem is split in a place or two for more room. If an occasion arises which calls for running, she just forgets it and takes the consequences.

A majority of the girls are little perturbed about the threatened change because they realize the skirts couldn't possibly get any longer without dragging Mama earth. A sharp pair of scissors and a needle can cure any change in the upward or roundward directions, they say.

No report has been received from Papa-who-pays back home but it's a safe bet he's doing more sweating over the whole affair than anybody else.

It would be more than gratifying to him to be able to sleep at night with assurance that the wardrobe he's stored up during the last year is safe for at least another year—with only an addition or two here and there.

To sum it up, the pin-ups feel sure they have the designer in the palms of their hands—just where he has them since the days of the New Look bobbed up. They can sit back and defy him to give them something they can't match in one way or another.

Whatever comes forth the coeds and 40 million other women will no doubt be waiting—and hopefully—that something new will come out to displace the fashions of already a years standing. They always have.

True To Truman

Gen. Eisenhower says (again) that he will not accept the nomination for president of the United States. So what?

Well, it seems there are a bunch of characters up in Virginia, Georgia, Alabama and a couple of other states who don't like Harry Truman, or something. And they keep yelling about states' rights, or something. In fact, they're yelling their heads off.

We think Harry Truman's a pretty good boy, ourselves. He's had a rough job trying to fill Franklin Delano Roosevelt's shoes. It would be a rough job for anybody. And Harry's made a pretty good job of it. He took over the presidency at a critical time, and he came through admirably.

But now we're at peace. So what do some loyal sons of the South do? The minute Harry wants to do something about giving all the Negroes in the country a chance to vote, and get jobs, and be protected from lynchings, these boys begin yelling about the federal government trying to take over powers that belong to the individual states, (Of course, they don't mention that their states have done nothing in the right direction re voting, jobs, lynching, etc.). Worse than that, they act like a bunch of sulky kids. They go off in a corner and announce that if they can't have their way, they just won't play ball. They'll go find someone else to play with.

Gen. Eisenhower's a good boy, too. He's a military man and he's doing a very smart thing, now that he's retired, by trying to keep out of politics. But the Republicans are scared stiff that the Democrats will talk Ike into accepting the nomination. They know Dewey can't win if that happens. We think they had better be doing a little worrying no matter who the Democrats nominate, considering the material they are putting up for president of these United States.

What does it all boil down to? This, at any rate: We should certainly appreciate the fact that the Democrats of North Carolina are wise, adult, and broad-minded enough to send their delegation to Philadelphia Monday uninstructed.—C.H.

Clearing a Point

On Tuesday, June 29, we printed on this page a column and an editorial concerning the work of one Peter Carlton, originator of an article carried in newspapers of the state concerning threats allegedly made against the operator of local theaters for the showing of patriotic films. Acting on information contained in the News and Observer article which stated that Mr. Carlton was a news commentator for radio station WGAI in Elizabeth City as well as being secretary of the Edenton-Chowan chamber of commerce, we said that Mr. Carlton was an employee of station WGAI.

We have since learned from a source in Elizabeth City that Mr. Carlton is not a member of the WGAI staff and has no official connection with that station. As secretary of the Edenton-Chowan chamber of commerce Mr. Carlton presents a weekly program of comments on the news each Sunday. His time on the air is paid for by the chamber of commerce.

Mr. Carlton is in no way a representative of radio station WGAI.

Now Is The Time...

Now is the time for all good restaurateurs to come to the aid of the students.

Something must be done about the eating situation in Chapel Hill after the hour of midnight. One establishment kept its doors open "24 hours a day every day (closed Tuesdays)" back during the spring quarter, and don't think many students didn't appreciate it. Nowadays, unless you have a car to whip over to the Durham Toddle House, you're sunk when you get hungry during that late study session before a quiz, or following that party when you've either got to have something to eat or pass out. (We usually pass out, now that summer's come.)

So let's get together boys. You, Max, and you, Tommy, and you, Ben, and all the rest of you, let's get together and figure out which one of you is going to stay open all night. Maybe you all can alternate—one stay open one night and the others in their turn throughout the seven days of the week.

Now is the time . . .—C.H.

Draw One, Bartender

By Ed Joyner

Got a complaint from a coed the other day.

"Things are dull around here," she says. What we need is some parties and some dances and some fun. I've never seen a summer school with so little going on."

Me, I am in favor of the idea. Me, I am usually in favor of any ideas coeds suggest. In fact, I am usually in favor of coeds, period. But there is a guy present at the time who is doing a nice job of flunking a course or so here and there during spring quarter and is now sweating it out to get back into school for the football games next fall.

'Some people are here to study," he observes—which considering the source, I consider a pretty observant remark.

"Maybe that explains the situation," replies the coed. "I didn't think of that."

Now this coed, maybe she is being facetious, which is to say maybe she is squelching the guy in an ironical manner. And again, maybe she is serious. About coeds you never can tell. Except for Johnny Clampitt. He can tell.

All of which above conversation reminds me that it is true, some people are here to study. Not that this deplorable state of affairs is too noticeable at the local pubs and the swimming pool, but the people at those places are usually all wet anyway, and as for the pool, the figures there speak for themselves.

As I am saying, this scintilating bit of dialogue reminds me that some people are here to study. Me, I am here because I am drawing down $3.34 a week for getting out the DTH. Also, I would like to pass Math 8. This is not because I am anxious to get away from trig, you understand. During the last three years I've become rather attached to the old course, but like the dean says, it just doesn't look right for a senior to keep on taking the same freshman subject year after year.

Also at the beginning of the quarter I am figuring maybe I will do some reading this summer. I figure I will read some books which I don't have to read, just because I want to read them. I figure I might even read some of the text books from the courses I took last winter.

So after this guy mentions about people being here to study I get ambitious and go down to the library. This is a ritual I perform religiously twice every quarter—once to get a required reading book and again to pay the fine when I take it back a week late and still unread.

Trouble is, every time I go in the library and look at all those books it gives me a hungry feeling and at this university you can't afford to get a hungry feeling about books. You are so busy studying prescribed courses to get a diploma, with which and a nickel maybe you can get a cup of coffee after you get out if the price of coffee doesn't go up, you don't have time to worry about getting an education.

There is over half a million books in that library. This is straight poop, because just today I am reading in the South Atlantic Bulletin that on July 1, 1947 they have 494,467 volumes, and when I am checking this at the library they say it is old stuff and that now they have more than half a million.

Of this half a million I figure at least 2,000 are worth reading and I start figuring which one shall I read first. Then I figure some more. I figure if I read a book every day in the year including Mondays it will take me five years, five months and 21 days to read 2,000 books. At that rate I can get educated faster sleeping through professors' lectures for four years.

I figure what the hell, I might as well go down town and get a brew.

Reel In That Line

By Violet LaRue

These past few cool star-lit nights are the kind of nights that get into masculine blood. As the Carolina gentleman languidly gazes at the girl walking beside him on said star-lit night, his mind turns back to a shady nook beside a lazy stream. He sees himself in this lovely place with a long stemmed, blonde, cane fishing rod. The dream situation of the Carolina male. So gals, beware that languid gaze; it'll bring you nothing—but fish!

The C. L. A. H. L. (Carolina Lean and Hungry Look) is the new rage on ye olde campus. No one can find out whether it is the recurrance of an old tradition or the addition of a current fad. However, some individuals do have their own opinions. Questions such as the following have been overheard: Is Uncle Sam trying to reduce my waistline?; This is certainly a fine way for Washington to try to make the "free chow" of the Army more attractive to us than the food at Lenoir Hall! Many are of the opinion that the whole unfortunate situation is the work of a poor uneducated dope (who had the misfortune to graduate from Dook with a degree in Polly Sigh). It is clearly a conspiracy sponsored by the Communists. (Latest headline: NO ONE HUNGRY IN RUSSIA!).

Only one more week to go, then it is off to the beach for the numerous "one summer sessioners." Everything is running low at the end of this session. Not only have the invitations for a free beer ceased, but people are actually turning down invites for an evening of entertainment in the Arboretum. After this week-end's hangover, next week will seem like a nightmare. Midnight oil will be burning, blood shot eyes will be half closed, and for the first time books bought at the beginning of the term will be opened.

This frenzy of activity will end with the usual comment, in answer to the question: How did you do on the exam?, "That exam is the worst exam I have ever been exposed to. I wish I had not bothered to study; all the studying that I did, the hours that I sat up pouring over my books! only to flunk that exam!" (Of course, for the purpose of publication, the language has been considerably—shall we say—cleaned up). Which just goes to show you that at times you can't make a nickel.

No doubt, the advice that the doctors issue answering the question "How can I keep from having polio?" has been very confusing to the inmates of Carolina. Doctors say, "Avoid crowds; do not come in contact with a large group." This means that you can't go to class, swimming, Lenoir Hall, Graham Memorial, the Carolina Theatre, the University, Harry's, and above all the DTH office. The perfect solution to the problem is to become a hermit and write a song which will become No. 1 on the Hit Parade and live in luxury for the rest of your life.

At a fraternity "picnic" at Hogan's last Saturday night it seems that one of the better known brothers lost his date (some are of the opinion that he didn't have one). During the process of hunting his date—after crawling over one couple and under another, he arrived at the most isolated spot around Hogan's (if you can visualize an isolated spot at Hogan's) and there he found a couple all alone. "I beg your pardon," he said when he realized that the girl was not his date. Then he turned and walked into the lake.

Write Away

Comes A Question

Editor:

In the Write Away of today's issue (July 7) you printed a letter from some girl (I refrain from using Co-ed because some of the summer students think they aren't) in the Woman's quad titled "The Eyes Have It." For some reason this girl has withheld her name, so, for lack of a better name, I will call her Miss Name Withheld.

Miss Withheld, I would like to ask you one question. The last sentence in your letter said "How about some light on the subject?" My question is this: What subject are you talking about?

Impatiently awaiting some answer to this, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

Ed McLeod

Found: One Lost Colony

By Chuck Hauser

Raleigh—Just rolled back into the big city after a terrific weekend on the Banks. And with me I brought back one sage piece of advice—if you have a chance to see the "Lost Colony" anytime during the summer, don't hesitate a moment in hightailing it down to Roanoke Island and catching the show.

We got down to Nag's Head to our hotel early Saturday evening and beat it right over to Manteo where we picked up our tickets and took off for Fort Raleigh. We saw the Saturday night performance from out front and stayed over the next night to see it again—from back-stage. We finally left the Banks about midnight Sunday night and headed for Raleigh to go to work the next morning.

The show is really wonderful—I can't begin to describe it, but you all know the subject matter—it's supposed to tell you what happened to Sir Walter Raleigh's colony that settled at Fort Raleigh on Roanoke Island some many years ago (I'm not so hot on dates—just ask the history department). Of course it doesn't tell what happened to the colony in the end—but it does show what went on before the early settlers disappeared. And it tells the story in a blaze of brilliant costumes and scenery.

There are other interesting things to see on the Banks—in fact, there are so many things to do and see that we just didn't get around to them all. But we did visit the Wright Brothers memorial at Kill Devil Hill. The monument, located on the largest sand dune on a stretch of land which is nothing but a sand dune itself rising up between the Atlantic ocean and various sounds, is an imposing structure. The dune on which it stands, like all the others, would shift and move considerably, except for the fact that it is anchored down with a growth of tough sage grass and other plants that were the result of years of experimentation. But in 1928 the national park service began building the monument on Kill Devil Hill, began planting the soil-grasping plants on the sides of the dune, and erected a small granite monument about 200 yards north of the hill—to show where it originally was in 1903 before the wind shifted it to its present position.

* * *

There's a man named Alphius Drinkwater who lives in Manteo on Roanoke Island. Alphius Drinkwater is 73 years old and doesn't act a year of it. He's as young and spry as the day he sent the Morse code message to a New York newspaper which said: "The Wright brothers, aeronauts, made their first flight today in . . ." Yes, Alphius was the man that flashed that first message. And in 1903 the story was so fantastic that most newspapers refused to print it.

Alphius and Mrs. Drinkwater live in a small three-room house in Manteo in the backyard of their large two-story house. The big house they rent for the summer to members of the cast of the Lost Colony—all of them Carolina folk. And they're all pretty nice people. When we rolled up to the door of Alhpius' house we didn't know we were going to walk into a party. But there was a huge one going on. They were serving a drink that was brand new on me—grapefruit daiquiris. The recipe: Cut a hole in the top of a whole grapefruit that has been residing in a deep freeze for several hours. Pour in one jigger of triple-sec, fill up the rest with rum, and top with a cherry sitting in the hole. Put the whole ungodly creation back in the deep freeze for several hours, and when you take it out to drink it—I mean eat it—handle carefully.

* * *

We heard an interesting story while we were down at Nag's Head—the story of how the town got its name. It seems that in the old days, various unscrupulous characters would hang lanterns on the necks of horses (nags) and parade them up and down the beach during stormy weather. Ships at sea would see the lanterns and put in for shore, thinking the lights meant a harbor. When they piled up on the reefs off the Banks, the unscrupulous characters would wait until clear weather, go out to the ship, kill the members of the crew that hadn't been thrown into the sea, and plunder the vessel. Ah, the good old days. . . .

Facts and Figures

Prophet Without Honor?

By Sam Whitehall

In an obscure corner of Graham Memorial there is a picture of one of the most famous alumni that Carolina has produced. With the exception of this picture, there is no other way for a visitor or student to know that Thomas Wolfe went to school here.

The popularity of Wolfe is increasing throughout this country every year, and yet his own University almost hides the fact that he began his higher education here. Until several months ago, Wolfe's novels were included in an English course taught here, but now even they have been discontinued. Members of the English department with whom we have talked expressed regret over this move but could provide no answer or reason for the move.

Several years ago, Paul Green tried to raise enough money to buy Thomas Wolfe's original manuscripts for the University. He was unsuccessful, however, and the precious papers are in the possession of Harvard University, carefully kept in air-cooled cases. The University of Louisville has a special course on Wolfe because of its nearness to his home in Asheville and Carolina, where he went to school. Here, we don't even include his novels in a general English course.

In the first edition of the summer DTH, an editorial was printed suggesting that one of the new dormitories be named for Wolfe. As was expected, no action has been taken on such a suggestion as yet, but it is to be hoped that the necessary officials will consider naming one for him, in addition to the ones for O. Max Gardner and Josephus Daniels, two of the University's greatest friends.

It certainly seems strange that we go on from month to month ignoring Wolfe. If nothing else, the state should provide one of those silver historical markers for the highways, pointing out the fact that Wolfe was an eager student here.

Many students in English would like to study Wolfe in their courses but have no opportunity. Members of the faculty, conscious of the students' wishes, would be wise to place Wolfe's work back on the curriculum.

Cholley's Follies

Caught With Shorts Down

By Charlie Gibson

In newspaper lingo "fillers" are non-edible. They are just brief paragraphs that take up any spare inches of space left after everybody except Junius Scales has stuck in notices about meetings.

Yet scanning these little printpassers is, literally, catching America with its shorts down.

How can John Doe get his name in the paper somewhere during one of his off-moments? Recent examples have proved that all you have to do, dear John, is kiss beautiful girls, get a freak divorce, sell beer in the House of Commons, or drop dead.

HELLO TO ARMS: Bruce Ferguson, a 23-year-old ex-AAF gunner who helped invade Okinawa, is now Boston's only former GI male model. He gets paid $7.50 per hour for his specialty—holding and kissing beautiful girls. And to think that poor ole Folsom has to waste so much of his time being governor, too.

JAVA JAG: Mrs. Marie Dunn, a Los Angeles housewife, was granted a divorce because her husband drank too much. "But he doesn't drink whiskey," said Mrs. Dunn. "With him, it's coffee. He has to have 15 to 20 cups of it before I can get him out of the kitchen every morning." Guess maybe he was good until at last dropped, huh?

GINTLEMEN: The unpredictable Lady Astor auctioned off three bottles of gin in the supposedly dignified House of Commons. No, England's bewigged bigwigs have not taken to tippling—at least not in public. The auction was for a benefit, and can you imagine what Lady Astor lectured on before the bidding? Yep, temperance.

PRAYERS ANSWERED: With 46 years of preaching behind him, Dr. Charles Babcock of North Hollywood, Calif., had told friends, "I pray that when I die, I'll die in the pulpit." One Monday night he interrupted his sermon suddenly, said "folks, you'll have to excuse me a minute," then dropped dead. No doubt his exceptional politeness in moments of emergency will be long remembered.

And then there are the times when not just a paragraph but a whole column is needed badly. Yep, Ed, the thing is ready now.

Spears, Wincoff, Baldwin Take Mural Horseshoe Crowns

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

With your regular columnist Billy Carmichael down in Texas for a summer school session, today marks the appearance of a new column, "With the Tar Heels," on the pages of the Daily Tar Heel. Its purpose will be to present the facts on the activities of Carolina athletes this summer and in the future, along with comments on any significant sports items that may appear.

The material for "With the Tar Heels" will not be taken entirely from the Chapel Hill sporting scene. There will be reports on Carolina alumni and their success in sports. Also there will be frequent items relating to other colleges in the Big Four. It is the aim of this column to present an unbiased picture of sports all over the State.

The traveling Carmichael has promised to send back reports on the football squads at Georgia, LSU, and Texas—all teams that the Tar Heels meet on the gridiron next fall. His stories will be printed here, and should make interesting reading, giving the students an idea of what to expect from their opponents when football time rolls around again. And the coming season promises to be quite a thriller, with the Tar Heels tackling the most ambitious schedule in their history.

Out of the Southwest

Still on the football subject, from out of the Southwest comes a letter from Bill Sansing, sports publicist for the University of Texas. Bill sings the "blues" when he refers to the Carolina-Texas grid classic. The Texan writes, "We hope to have a good strong team against you, but the defense will likely outshine the offense, as opposed to last year's situation." He concludes with "just take it easy on us."

True, Texas lost Bobby Layne, the main cog in its offense. But there are others. One man alone couldn't have been responsible for the 34-0 defeat the Longhorns administered to the Tar Heels last year.

Carolina students should cast aside any idea that Texas will be easy picking for the locals next year. The Longhorns will be tough. It should be noted that before playing Carolina, Texas meets LSU in its season opener on September 18, while the Tar Heels won't face an opponent until the Texas game. Thus, Coach Blair Cherry will have one week in which to correct errors made in the opener with LSU, while Carolina's Carl Snavely won't see his boys under fire until the big test.

He Turned Down 30 Offers

Cleaning the cuff: Jack Hussey, former Tar Heel gridder and baseball outfielder, recently had a 26-game consecutive hitting streak snapped. Jack is the cleanup batter for Goldsboro in the Coastal Plain League and already has hit five home runs with the bases loaded. . . . Joe Dudeck, an All-Pennsylvania high school football guard, has decided to go to Carolina for his college education. An Associated Press report said he turned down 30 other collegiate offers before deciding to come here. . . .

Sam Mordecai, who was somewhat of a pitching sensation for Zeta Psi in the intramural softball league this spring, is continuing his great work in the City softball leagues in Raleigh this summer. He turned in no-hitters on two successive nights recently. . . . Kyle Cox, Daily Tar Heel sports writer, is spending his summer as scorekeeper for the Sanford Spinners in the Tobacco State League. . . .

George Sparger, co-captain of the 1947 football team, has completed work on a booklet on high school athletics in North Carolina. . . . Bill McGinn, lefthanded ace for the jayvee baseball team here this past season, was honored with a berth on the Carolinas' All-Star Boys' baseball game in Charlotte this week. McGinn is counted on next year to take up much of the slack left in the Carolina pitching staff when Vinnie DiLorenzo turned pro. . . .

Jim's a Manager Now

Jim Hayworth, co-captain of Carolina's 1948 NCAA baseball nine, is now managing Elizabeth City in the semi-pro Albemarle League. . . . Ott Evans, another member of the 1948 Tar Heels, is an outfielder for Elizabeth City. . . . In the same league, Stan Goodman, jayvee second baseman, is performing for Hertford. . . .

Soccer Coach Marvin Allen must be looking for a big season next year. Before school was out this spring, he issued soccer shoes to each of his returning players. The shoes are big and difficult to become accustomed to using, so Coach Allen wanted the boys to break them in this summer. . . . Frank Robinson, Carolina's speed ball pitcher this spring, made his debut in professional baseball the other night. He is playing for Goldsboro in the Coastal Plain, and was batted from the box in his first start. Frank has complained of a sore arm recently and it evidently has not improved. . . .

Finals in Softball Slated for Monday In Intramural Play

The first session intramural horseshoes program ended Wednesday with the crowning of the individual titlests in the singles and doubles play. Marshal Spears took the top spot in the one-man hurling while the duo crown was captured by Kay Winecoff and Skeets Baldwin.

It was decided to give all golf fans one more chance to haul down one of the four big prizes offered in the golf pitching contest being held down on Emerson field this week. The final deadline for entry reset for Monday.

Meanwhile on the softball scene the action was thick and fast with the semi-finals run off yesterday. The winners will battle it out for the campus championship on Monday.

Wednesday's finals in the irons was a tough day for Bill Sunas of Durham. The Sigma Chi who found that it just wasn't his time to win lost in the top singles match and was also a member of the losing doubles combine. His partner was Jack Thompson. The new doubles kings are both members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Though the number of participants has not been too large the interest and effort displayed by all the contestants brought about the addition of one more day in the golf pitching event. It was announced that the targets will be in the center of Emerson field over the week-end for all who would like to practice up for the final round.

When the week's activity ended a tight battle existed for the first place between Algernon Zollicoffer and C. C. Canaday both of Grimes with scores of 61 and 58 respectively. R. S. Kittrell of the Law School follows with a total of 54.

The big final tilt in the softball world will bring together the survivors of yesterday's semi-final round. Victory Village took on the Grads while the Law School opposed Mangum in the games that advanced the best of the original 28 team field to the campus title match.

Headed for .400 Year?

STAN MUSIAL, outfielder for the St. Louis Cardinals, is currently enjoying one of his most successful seasons at bat. The Donora, Pa., slugger is leading both Major Leagues with a .414 average and also holds the top position in several other individual departments. He is third in the National League in home runs and second in the matter of runs-batted-in.

Chapel Hill, Wake Forest Win To Move In Area Eliminations

The Chapel Hill Legion juniors hammered out a decisive 14-6 decision over the Raleigh nine to hold onto the top spot in the area one, league three race Wednesday afternoon at Emerson field.

By taking this all important tilt the locals held fast to their one game margin over the second place Waker Forset team and assured themselves of no worse than a tie for first place at the close of the first round of play today.

Durham will come to town today for a meeting that would have been a must to win if the Chapel Hill crew had not defeated the capital city boys. Wake Forest sewed up the other spot in the state playoffs from this league by edging out Durham 2-1 in a twelve inning thriller in the loser's park Wednesday night.

Today's contest can't help the visitors any as they are two full notches behind the runner-up Wake Forest club. If Chapel Hill drops the game and Wake defeats the lowly Garner nine the two top teams will end the schedule all tied up with a record of 15 wins and 5 losses. No matter what happens the two outfits have won the right to move into the state elimination playoffs that will lead right up the ladder to national honors to some worthy nine.

The class the boys from the Hill showed in swamping Raleigh took some of the sting out of the upset that they were the victims of the night before over in Raleigh to the tune of 6-4.

Raleigh showed they meant business when after Chapel Hill pushed across a run in the bottom of the second they came through with four runs in the top of the third.

It didn't take the winners long to decide the issue though because in the last of that very same third frame they pounded the losers hard to rack up seven tallies. To put the game far out of reach they also scored two in the fifth and three in the sixth. They added the final run in the seventh.

The very best Raleigh could do after the early vicious onslaught was to come up with two scores in the top of the ninth.

The two leaders will now move into a round robin play series with the other loop champs and runner-ups.

McGinn Sparkles

Charlotte, July 8—Although his team was defeated, 6-2, Bill McGinn, University of North Carolina lefthander, turned in the top pitching performance of the afternoon here yesterday as South Carolina defeated North Carolina in the fifth annual Carolina All-Star boys game.

McGinn pitched three innings for the Tar Heel athletes, and he held his opponents hitless. He struck out three and walked two. Al Curtis, who hurled for Duke last season, pitched the initial three innings for South Carolina and was credited with the win.

McGinn pitched for Coach Henry House's Jayvee baseball nine at Carolina this past season.

Victor Seixas Wins Second Round Match In New Jersey Meet

Spring Lake, N. J. — Victor Seixas, University of North Carolina Southern Conference net champion, was among four other seeded stars who advanced into the quarter-final round of the annual Spring Lake Bathing and Tennis Club invitation tennis tournament here Wednesday.

Seixas, the country's 11th ranking netster who won by default from Jeff Podesta of Montclair yesterday, was given a close call by steady Tony Vincent of the University of Miami. After dropping the first set, the fourth-seeded Philadelphia star rallied to win by scores of 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Meets Tom Brown

Seixas now goes against fifth-seeded Tom Brown of San Francisco who just arrived in the United States after competing in the Wimbledon tourney last week. Brown, the hot-and-cold coast star encountered considerable difficulty yesterday with the composition courts but finally ousted Geller in straight sets, 10-8, 6-4. The match between Seixas and Brown should prove to be the quarter-final highlight with the winner advancing into the semi-finals to meet Mulloy, Talbert or Moylan. Both Seixas and Brown have had court trouble this season.

Other seeded players advancing today were top seeded Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., the nation's fourth-ranking player and member of the United States Davis Cup squad; William F. Tlbert of New York; defending champion Edward Moylan of San Francisco, and Tom Brown of San Francisco.

Talbert Advances

Talbert, seeded behind Mulloy, swept through Robert Derdasha of New York and today takes on Richard Savitt, Cornell's rising star and the youngest player to gain the round of eight.

Third-seeded Moylan, who whipped Frank Parker and Mulloy on successive days here last year, is also one of the favorites to enter the final round.

Among the stars missing from the field here are Frank Parker of Los Angeles, nine times winner of the event, and rangy Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, who last week won the Wimbledon singles crown by vanquishing Jack Bromwich of Australia.

Single Game Tickets All Sold to Duke Tilt

The Athletic Department announced yesterday that "It is not in a position at this time to accept additional orders for individual tickets to the Carolina-Duke football game on November 20 at Chapel Hill."

"This does not mean that the game is already a sellout," the statement emphasized. "The Duke Athletic Association through its office in Durham expects to take care of purchasers of Duke season tickets, and of Duke alumni from tickets allotted the Duke athletic office."

Thomas, Sper, Hudson, Begin Bids for Olymyic Swim Team

University students Norm Sper, Jimmy Thomas, and Randy Hudson, were among a total of 401 contestants seeking places on the United States Olympic swimming and diving team as final trials began yesterday in Detroit's Rouge Park pools. Twenty-seven men and twenty-one women will be chosen for the American squad which will travel to London in two separate groups for the Olympic games beginning July 29.

Thomas will swim in the 100-meter backstroke and the 200-meter freestyle, with the backstroke his best event. The 18-year-old freshman from Baltimore holds the Southern conference record for the 150-yards backstroke, and last winter came within six-tenths of a second of equaling the national NCAA freshman record for the event.

Sper will limit his competition to the high-platform diving, in which event he was crowned national AAU champion in 1944. In the same year he also won the AAU title in the three meter springboard diving, and retained his title in this event in 1945. The high-platform event was not held in 1945.

Randy Hudson

Randy Hudson will swim in the women's 200-meter breaststroke and the 400-meter freestyle events. The Tarboro coed climaxes a life-long ambition by trying out for the Olympic swimming team.

Coach Ray Daughters of the Washington Athletic club, Seattle, will accompany his squad of women swimmers and divers when they sail from New York July 14 aboard the United States liner America.

The 27 members of the men's team will fly direct from Detroit to London accompanied by their coach, Robert J. H. Kiphuth, veteran Yale and Olympic coach.

First Three

The first three finishers will win places on the team in each of the following events: For men—springboard diving, high platform diving, 100-meter freestyle, 200-meter freestyle, 400-meter freestyle, 100-meter backstroke, 200-meter breaststroke, 1500-meter freestyle; for women—springboard diving, high-platform diving, 100-meter freestyle, 200-meter breaststroke, 100-meter backstroke. Extra places will be awarded to fill out relay teams.

The American Olympic swimming teams are expected to make strong showings at the games in London, with the American women favored to continue their monopoly on Olympic diving.

State Athletic Post

Raleigh, July 8—Roy B. Clogston, who for the past few years has served as director of athletics at St. Lawrence university, has been appointed as the new athletic director at N. C. State college. He replaces J. L. VonGlohn.

Clogston was elected to the position after a five-hour meeting of the State Athletic Council yesterday. Others mentioned prominently for the job were Duke's Jerry Gerrard, Tom Hines, and Gus Tebell. Both Gerard and Tebell withdrew their nominations early in the afternoon when a satisfactory salary agreement was not reached.

Clogston was recommended highly by Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame and Tom Hamilton, Navy. He has never before been associated with State college.

Von Glohn now has been given the position of purchasing agent for the State athletic teams.

Bingo Games Top Weekend Program At Student Union

So you've got a date this Saturday night and don't know what to do? Then don't forget that "Joker John" Van Hecke will be back in the main lounge of Graham Memorial calling the numbers for the regular Saturday night "Bingo" games. The session will start at 8:00 and continue until 11:00.

There was a good turnout for last week's games and all indications points to another good night this week. The amount of the prizes depends on the number of cards played each game. All the money paid for cards for each game is returned to the winner of that game. Cards will cost two cents for most of the games with several five cent games thrown in to make larger prizes. The five cent games were very popular last week and there will be more this time.

The last game of the night will be the Grand Finale when the cards will cost ten cents and the pot will be much bigger than the others.

If you don't have a date, come anyway. Bring your friends, too. Don't forget that the size of each prize depends on the number of people playing. Somebody's going to win each game and help increase your take.

MONOGRAM PICNIC

The Monogram club picnic is scheduled for Hogan's lake this afternoon at 5 o'clock. Transportation will be available, leaving Woollen gym at 5 o'clock. In case of rain the picnic will be held at Nathan's lake.

Soloist Barry Lynn Features White Slacks and Pastels

By Alfred Crabb

Barry Lynn gave a well publicized, moderately well attended dance concert in Memorial Hall last Tuesday night. He was skillfully assisted in staging and lighting by Robert Barr and Jim Riley. Viewed in retrospect, the program note furnished by Mr. Lynn is interesting. It meant little to me before I saw him dance.

"The dances on this program are designs in movement and should be viewed in this manner. Each has a particular style and movement quality. There is no story or literal theme but rather an overall emotional quality that permeates each dance. This is what we wish you to sense and enjoy. Dancing, like all the arts, must be observed first with the heart and then with the head."

My heart went out to this brave man even before he started dancing for his courage in attempting a one-man show. My head tells me now that he carried out this difficult task with more smoothness and fewer unannounced intermissions than I anticipated. I may not with conscience say that my heart rejoiced throughout the evening, and my head has tried to explain just why this is, for Mr. Lynn is well trained and exhibits nice technique. And his strong lungs are handsomely housed.

Mr. Lynn was accompanied by recordings, and regardless of what Petrillo must thing, there are advantages in this. The tempo is constant and predictable; rehearsals are easily arranged; transporting an entire orchestra is made simple. These advantages are on the dancer's side. The audience is glad to hear the music played so well, but something unpleasant happens to it when amplified in Memorial Hall.

After a number called Promenade, full of the soft arms of the Russian school and the soft shuss of ballet slippers, came a dance "styled in the manner of the desert nomads," entitled Navajo. Lynn, as an Indian, wore white slacks and was thoroughly tame. Those white slacks are interesting, for though this number could have logically called for an abbreviated costume, the next two dances featured pastel colored scarfs and little else. The first of these two, the Marga Dance, had something to do with high style, according to my program. The second was a movement portrayal of musical "flower passages," and demonstrated a remarkable dexterity in foot patterns.

The second half of the program was performed to Khatchaturian's Gayne Suite, and was labeled Fantasy Figures on the program. The most interesting of the five parts was the first, in which Mr. Lynn whirled and turned with precision and grace. This was a tour de force in a double sense. In the last number Mr. Lynn used a gauze twinkling with what might have been the constellation Saggittarius in portraying the Archer in the Stars. A dramatic effect finally entered the program as the bowman extinguished the lights with imaginary arrows at the end of the number.

Mr. Lynn was guilty of too small a dance vocabulary. All these numbers had a certain sameness, consisting of a serious absence of masculine movements. Since Ted Shawn's troupe of men demonstrated the possibilities open to the male dancer, it is disappointing to see a concert which resembles a flower show—all gladioli differing only on color. I longed for a zinnia or two.

Romance Ends In Pigeon Tragedy

New York—The most highly touted romance since Lana Turner and Bob Topping ending in something of a fizzle today.

A gala blessed-event party was held for Sidney and Melbourne, the two pigeons who moved into Manhattan's plush St. Moritz hotel for their honeymoon two weeks ago.

Sidney was there, crouched dutifully over her two fluffy offspring. Sidney Eason, the Australian liquor dealer who gave up his 19th floor room to the newlyweds was on hand. But Melbourne, the father, was conspicuous by his absence.

Eason did his best to ward off the insistent questions of newsreel cameramen and radio and newspaper reporters who arrived to congratulate the cooing pair. Australian Consul General C. V. Kellway also tried to gloss over the situation.

But there was no denying it. The happy father never did show. Raymond Mulligan, a representative of the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals stood by to see that Sidney and the youngsters weren't overtaxed by the goings on. Mulligan, a hard-eyed realist, said he wasn't a bit surprised at Melbourne.

"Pigeons," he explained, "are notoriously fickle. It's one dame today, with them, another gal tomorrow."

Doctor Robert Murphy, of the American Museum of History, quickly took issue with Mulligan. Murphy said: "That's not true of all pigeons. Country pigeons are remarkably faithful to their mates and help with the food. City pigeons are, admittedly, more casual in their family life."

Eason told reporters he couldn't understand Melbourne's failure to appear for the festivities. "Only last night," he said, "Melbourne flew right in the window and he and Sidney kissed each other on the sill."

Sidney hunched in the corner and pecked nervously at her young, Capricornia and Cumberland, shooing them under her wings when photographers pushed too close. A hotel press agent presented Sidney with a big cake, made of corn meal and corn flakes. Sidney refused the cake and kept an eagle eye on the window.

Industrialists To Have Course

The University sponsored Institute for Business and Industry announced through the Extension Division that a 30 hour Time Study course will be conducted here July 12 through the 17.

Dr. John E. Dykstra, Professor of Industrial Management said the course was designed for supervisors, arbitrators, labor leaders and management. The subjects to be covered will include Work Load and Incentive Pay and Timing Techniques."

Hillbilly Takes Music Over Navy Career

The navy recruiting office in Richmond found proof today of an old adage. But it was almost too crestfallen to admit it.

The recruiters lined up Lewis Edward Jennings of Ashland, Virginia, as a prospective deckswabber. They brought him in for an I. Q. initial placement test.

To their amazement, Jennings—a Marine corps veteran—gave the correct answers to every one of the 80 test questions.

The recruiters envisioned themselves signing up a future admiral. But . . . a wise man changes his mind. And Jennings was no exception. Today the office sadly announced that Jennings preferred a career as a hillbilly maestro to the navy.

Topflight SafetyMen Will Teach Institute For Driver Education

A short Institute on Driver Education is to be offered to North Carolina teachers in Chapel Hill July 22-28 under the sponsorship of the State Department of Public Instruction and the University School of Education, it was announced yesterday.

The course is designed to prepare teachers to conduct classes in driver education in their own schools. Certificates will be presented to those who satisfactorily complete the requirements.

The state committee for traffic safety is giving $25 scholarships for each principal or teacher taking the course.

Directors of the Institute will be Dean Guy B. Phillips of the School of Education and John L. Cameron, State Department of Public Instruction. In charge of instruction will be Dr. David G. Monroe, assistant director of the Institute of Government at the University.

The staff of instruction will be composed of Dr. Herbert J. Stack, director, Center for Safety Education, New York University; Arthur T. Moore, veteran police officer, formerly captain in the North Carolina Highway Patrol, and director of the mechanical inspection division of the Motor Vehicle Department; Major Samuel L. Gaynor, Jr., assistant director, Highway Safety Division; E. R. Peele, Highway Safety Division, and C. C. Brown, director, Division of School Transportation.

Riots, Lynchings To Be Discussed

Dr. Guy Johnson, sociology department faculty member, will give an address on riots and lynchings in the Presbyterian church at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

The meeting, to be sponsored by the American Veterans Committee, will hear a discussion of the activities and investigations of the Southern Regional Council.

Johnson will give a detailed account of the Council's findings in recent investigations of riots in Columbia, Tenn., and lynchings in Walton County, Ga.

He will give a report on work already accomplished in the betterment of living conditions and human relationships in the South, and will outline the program the Council has set up for future work.

Members of the AVC are urged to arrive promptly at 7:30 in order that a short business meeting may be held.

Student Party Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Student Party in the Grail Room of Graham Memorial at 9 o'clock Tuesday night. In keeping with the established policies of the Student Party this meeting will be open and all students are invited to attend. At this time the party will select members to be recommended to the President of the student body to fill the vacancies created by departing members of the Student Council.

HARRY S. TRUMAN, the man who didn't want the job of President of the United States in 1945, walks confidently around the White House grounds as the Democrats in Philadelphia debate his candidacy. He expects to be nominated on the first ballot.

Quiz Program Has $52 Jackpot

If the jackpot at the University Veteran's Association's regular open house keeps building up it will soon rival the $64 question on the "Take It or Leave It" program.

And just because it is the UVA's club house, and sponsored by the UVA doesn't mean that just vets are welcome. In fact, just the opposite is the rule. The open house is open to all students whether vet or not.

Dr. Harold Meyer To Teach in West

Dr. Harold D. Meyer, professor of sociology at Carolina and director of the North Carolina Recreation Commission, will leave Chapel Hill July 18 to teach recreation leadership courses in the Department of Physical Education in the University of Colorado during the second summer session, July 26-August 27.

As consultant to the California State Recreation Commission, Dr. Meyer during the first two weeks in September will visit the golden state cities of Sacramento, San Francisco, San Jose, San Diego, Los Angeles, Stockton and Bakersfield.

On return to Chapel Hill, Dr. Meyer will stop off at Omaha, Neb., to preside at the annual meeting of the American Recreation Society, being held this year in conjunction with the National Recreation Congress, September 24-30.

Dr. Meyer, a national authority on recreation and youth problems, is also national chairman of the College Conference on Training of Recreation Leaders, on regional and national boards of the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, educational consultant of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and on the planning committee of the White House Conference for Family Life.

Measure to Establish Order of Ascendancy To President Passed

By Clyde Osbourne

A hurriedly acting Student Legislature in a special session last Thursday night passed a bill to establish the order of ascendancy to the duties of president of the student body in the absence of both the president and vice-president.

First in Line For Office

The secretary-treasurer of the student body was named first in line for the presidential duties by the new piece of legislation, as it was passed, with the parliamentarian of the Student Legislature second, the chairman of the Ways and Means committee of the Student Legislature third, and chairman of the Rules committee of the Legislature fourth.

As originally written the bill called for the speaker pro-tempore of the Legislature to be second in line for ascension to the high post, but this provision was struck out of the measure while it was in the hands of the Ways and Means committee. Another change made by the committeemen gave the officer acting in the president's position the power to veto. The bill when introduced, denied him this power.

No Proxies Accepted

Guarding against the possibility that some person not elected by the student body should get the duties of president, the legislation stipulates that no proxy of one of the officers mentioned as presidential successors would be eligible for the position. The officer next in line will take the duties.

A de-glamourization article was attached to the end of the bill, stating that any person performing the duties of the top student office will continue to use his own official title and not the title of president of the student body.

Also on the agenda for the rushed session was a bill appropriating $40 to pay for the registration fees of five delegates to the National Student Association convention which is to be held in Madison, Wisconsin, August 23 through August 28.

Cunningham Objects

The measure met strong objections from Tom Cunningham, who stated that a prior bill passed by the Student Legislature appropriated $241 for the purpose of the University's joining the National Student Association and stipulated that only three delegates should be appointed by the president of the student body. His objections were brushed aside and the proponents of the measure, acting in rapid-fire order, shoved the bill through.

(A copy of the legislation to which Cunningham was referring was shown to the Daily Tar Heel yesterday by acting speaker of the Student Legislature George Rodman. The bill allows the president of the student body to appoint additional delegates if he chooses).

Annual Bankers Meeting Gets Record Attendance

A record number of more than 200 bankers from North and South Carolina and several other neighboring states registered here yesterday for the 12th annual Carolinas Bankers Conference which got under way with the first class sessions Monday morning and will continue through Friday noon.

Louis D. Brooks, Charlotte, is chairman of the conference again this year.

Discussion Leaders

Discussion leader for the morning session Monday was T. Allen Glenn, Jr., president of the Peoples National Bank of Norristown, Pa., formerly in the investment business with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He will discuss internal credits at the opening morning session each day.

Basic considerations in credits will be discussed by Carlisle R. Davis, vice-president and secretary, State Planters Bank and Trust Co., Richmond, Va., and past president Robert Morris Associates. His lectures will continue through Friday.

Employee Relations

Harold E. Zarker, vice-president, the First Bank and Trust Co., Perth Amboy, N. J., and chairman, Committee on Bank Operations and Management, New York Bankers Association, gave the closing lecture at the Monday morning session. His topic was employee relations.

All three lecturers are members of the Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University.

The afternoon session Monday featured a panel discussion on banking laws and regulations, led by representatives of supervisory agencies.

Louis S. Hadley, president, First Trust Co., St. Paul, Minn., head of the Trust Division, American Bankers Association, and faculty member of the Rutgers Graduate School of Banking, at the first night session last evening.

Speaker Tonight

Tonight's speaker will be Dr. Harold A. Bosley, who recently assumed his duties as Dean of the Duke University Divinity School. Willis A. Sutton, Atlanta, who has been in educational work for 45 years, will speak at Wednesday night's session, and A. L. M. Wiggins, Undersecretary of the Treasury and past president of the American Bankers Association, will speak Thursday night.

Health Authority Says to Continue Usual Way of Life

By Vestal C. Taylor

In an interview with this reporter last Friday Morning, Dr. O. D. Garvin, District Health Officer for the Orange, Person and Chatham county district, issued the following statement for publication, concerning the Poliomylitis epidemic. "I strongly recommend and urge that everyone remain here unless it becomes absolutely necessary for them to go elsewhere. Do not invite persons from other sections of the state to come here for visits."

Dr. Garvin particularly directed this message to the residents of Victory Village and to all other married students with small children.

He went on to advise against sending children and wives home to parents or friends in other parts of the state, since the rate of polio in other sections is usually much higher than here in Chapel Hill, and the likelihood of exposure is much greater in the new surroundings. On the other hand, Dr. Garvin pointed out, anyone leaving this area and going to an area heretofore uninfected will be likely to carry the disease with him.

"Since the polio has struck us, we can't run away from it now." Dr. Garvin said, "It is much better to continue our normal way of life here."

Dr. Garvin urged all persons to treat all fevers not yet diagnosed as polio and go to bed, but not to take any medicine for protection. "There is no known spray, gargle or medicine for poliomylitis," he said.

Dancers to Give Summer Concert

The University Dance group will give its summer concert in the Playmaker theater on August 1, according to an announcement yesterday by members of the group.

Frances Johnson will serve as correlating director for the program with Bill Hooks and Bill Hooks and Earl Hall acting as assistant directors and choreographers.

The program will include dance satire and folk dances as well as modern and ballet numbers.

Miss Johnson and Bill Hooks will be featured in a special Moorish dance, the music for which has been written by Harold Schiffman.

French Counselor Will Speak Here

Rene de Messieres, cultural counselor for the French government in New York will be the featured speaker at the French House banquet celebrating Bastille Day, July 14.

The banquet, celebrating the French equivalent of the American July 4 will be held at Carolina Inn, where Chancellor Robert House, and President Frank Graham are among the invited guests.

March Of Dimes Funds Sought In Polio Battle

North Carolina chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis were asked yesterday to pool 50 percent of their March of Dimes funds for a centralized fight against polio in this state.

The request was made in a letter to the state's 100 National Foundation chapters by the recently formed "North Carolina Epidemic Fund Committee."

The committee consists of three chapter chairmen and is charged with the responsibilities "for receiving funds and for disbursing such funds to chapters needing financial assistance in carrying on the medical care program for infantile paralysis patients."

Philip S. Randolph, state epidemic coordinator for the National Foundation, will act as executive secretary for the committee.

"By this means," Randolph said, "the chapters will unite in coping with the current emergency. The chapters are the ones who raise our funds and they will also be the ones who spend them.

"North Carolina chapters have made tremendous progress since the disastrous epidemic of 1944. Their organization has reached a state where it is possible for them to take over complete responsibility for meeting an emergency of this sort."

The new fund will be administered by Paul Butler of the North Carolina Power and Light Company, Moore county chairman; Earl Franklin, U. S. Marshall, Burke county chairman, and Rex Edison, of the T. H. Bess Company, Gastonia, Gaston county chairman.

Examinations Slated Next Week

Final examinations for the first term summer school will begin at 8 o'clock next Monday morning and continue until Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, according to the schedule released yesterday by Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records Office.

Examinations are to be given on the above dates for all courses including 6-weeks courses and 12-weeks courses, it was announced.

Arrangements for examinations in Accounting courses will be made during this week and announcements of same will be made in the various classrooms.

The examination schedule, which may be found elsewhere on this page, has been approved by the Director of the summer session and the Committee of Deans.

Yack

Yackety Yacks will be distributed tomorrow afternoon in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial from 2 to 5 o'clock. This is the last time that the year books will be available during the summer months.

Business Seminar Ends with Report

A two-day seminar in interviewing closed yesterday afternoon with the handing in of final committee reports to Prof. R. P. Calhoon of the University School of Commerce.

The seminar spent two days in examining interviewing practices and in developing standards of sound procedure for employment, counseling, grievance, discipline and separation types of interview.

Standards were prepared by the following committees: On Interview Guides, E. I. Michaels (chairman), Vick Chemical Company, Greensboro; N. Scott Featherstone, Collins and Aikman, Roxboro; Dr. Katherine Carmichael, University of North Carolina; Richard Q. Ward, Sydney Blumenthal and Company, Rocky Mount; Harry Morse, Carolina Coach Company, Raleigh.

On Procedures: Karl Benson (chairman), May-McEwen-Kaiser, Burlington; Berlette Swain, University of North Carolina; Floy Townsend, Blue Bell, Inc., Lenoir; Mary Fisher, Rocky Mount Mills, Rocky Mount; Boyce Holoman, Boylan-Pearce, Raleigh.

On Questions: R. L. Wilkes (chairman), Fieldcrest Mills, Spray; Ben Tillett, Collins and Aikman; Joe Galloway, University of North Carolina; Genoise Davidson, Blue Bell, Inc.; R. G. Hodges, Wilkes Hosiery Mills, North Wilkesboro.

The seminar was a part of the program of Institutes for Business and Industry offered by the University School of Commerce and sponsored by the Business Foundation of North Carolina, Inc.

Many new faces . . . . . . but all good troops

"All My Sons" in First Showing Tomorrow

By Violet LaRue

The curtain will rise on the Carolina Playmaker production, "All My Sons", at 8:30 tomorrow night. After weeks of work and sweat the director and his cast and stage crew will present their audience with a first class production.

Much publicity and praise are given to the cast and to the director, but it is seldom that the hard-working, less glamorous workers on the production are given any thanks or appreciation for all the work which they have done. The stage crew and costumers are vital to the production and should be given as much praise as the actors.

The backstage crews have been working day and night in order to make a setting for the play. They have done a fine job; a job that will form a perfect backdrop for the actual play.

With most of the regular Playmakers at Manteo, the scene shop has had the appearance of Grand Central Station for the past few weeks. There have been many new faces, but all have given a willing and eager hand to help with the many problems of building a set.

As Bob Eberle said, "My crew as a whole is not too experienced, but the members are good troops and I think that they have learned something about this business of building a set."

It seems that the members of the crew did profit by the mistakes that they made. The first day most of the girls arrived at the scene shop to paint and hammer in their new gingham dresses. It didn't take them long to find out what to wear to the scene shop.

All of the scenery for the play was made from "odds and end" of other sets. When you see the set, you may be looking at a bit of rejuvinated scenery from "Saint Joan" or "Enemy of the People". The awnings that you will see are bits of borrowed property painted a duller shade in order to keep the glare out of your eyes. Also you will see "ivy by moonlight"—this is one of Bob Eberle's pet inventions.

For weeks the scene shop crew and the prop crew were passing the buck around to who would be responsible for building a

Fighting For Peace

We have just been listening to war stories. They seem funny now . . . but they certainly didn't seem funny when they happened to many of us.

Strangely enough, some of us get a dreamy-eyed look in our eyes when war tales are related. The girls laugh and, "ooh . . . tell us more! Isn't he just priceless!" So our chests swell and out come more war stories dug from barroom binges with ex-comrades.

The dreamy look is uniform nostalgia. And to those who might have it, they can have it, because the chance to wear your brass-button blouse may soon be here.

War talk is abundant. If you don't believe us, take a look at the newspapers.

And what can we do about war hysteria? What can we do to stop an "inevitable war"?

We can read up on current events. We can try to understand our "inevitable" enemy. We can communicate our desires to our Congressional representatives, and ask that they have faith in the United Nations.

The United Nations needs the little man's faith now more than ever for it was created for us, the little folks. We must not fail the United Nations.

It is in our hearts and in our faith that the war dogs can first gain strength.

Do we want Peace? If we do, then we must fight as hard for Peace as we did in War.—L.K.

Tip To The Vets

Gentlemen, you're not P.C.'s any more.

Today we heard from one who could have easily been one of the "lost generation" of the post-World War II. He had this to say.

"I have no grudge against the veterans who have had jobs before they went in. They deserve to get their positions back. But what I feel is about those who have not got the qualifications for the job and who had never held a job."

Maybe my fellow vets will raise a howl and say, "Hell, they got their training when we were in the holes!"

Perhaps so, soldier . . . yet could we have done as well as they when they had a psychological block against them . . . when they were too young?

Let's think it over buddy . . . we're going to have to work like the very devil. The cream is taken but what the devil, we've got it in us so let's show them.—H.K.

Nostalgic For Knowledge

Imagine to yourself having lunch with two beautiful young ladies, soft-spoken and with the nicest drawl. One a statuesque blond glimpse of heaven. The other a smooth, sophisticated eye-catcher.

Then imagine hearing Carolina being thus criticized, "I expected some rah-rah but not quite this much . . . after all, I came here to get some new ideas."

"Seriously," said the other, "do you have scholars here?" We were completely flabbergasted. Actually, in the mad rush to get a sheepskin—and to have a last fling of our youth, we had not thought very much about the problem.

Perhaps the reason we had not thought about whether or not Carolina still produced scholars is the fact that we who are of the pre-war Carolina had received some of the spirit which our teachers gave us.

We can still remember the lectures which dealt with everything about life, excepting the text. We recall fondly the hours we spent chatting informally with our favorite professors who had time to talk to you, instead of having to correct departmental quizzes numbering into the hundreds.

Yet, the young lady had a point. Has Carolina turned into a diploma factory? Are we giving those who have the capacity to be scholars the chances they should have?

Perhaps these questions would be better answered by the administration and our professors.

We think there is some truth in the accusations being made about Carolina and all the other universities which are now over-loaded. We don't like departmental quizzes; and we realize, also, that this is a circumstance beyond control of the administration for the present.

However, we hope that something will be done before too many freshman classes have come and graduated, after we are gone. Flexibility must be achieved, if succeeding generations of students are going to have the opportunities which we have received.

A last word. Scholars are still here. People with ideas are also around. All you have to do is look. And if you still want to be a scholar, the library is at the end of the quad. Perhaps it is a little difficult, but we still think that the professors are not too busy to give you some attention. They haven't changed. It's just us.—L.K.

Hodgepodge

Gung Have New Poddy

By Ed Joyner

Poddy, Pahty or Potty—no matter how you spell it, it's still a party.

The process of educating any young man or woman is not complete without at least a couple, couple-and-a-half, or four parties—and at universities and colleges throughout the length and breadth of this fair country parties have become a tradition and an institution as a required part of the extra-curriculum.

Parties may be held at any time day or night—and usually are. However after much experimentation the experts have concluded that Friday and Saturday nights are the most propitious times to start short parties. (Short parties are limited to those under 48 hours in duration.) This leaves Sunday free for church.

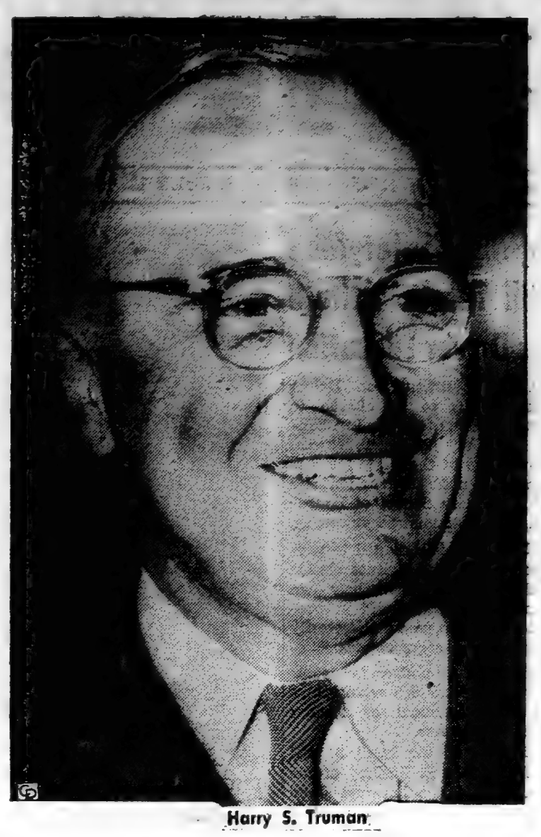
Parties may be started for any reason or excuse, or for no good reason at all. For instance we heard of one person who graduated from a university in March. His friends decided that this momentous occasion called for a farewell party, which it did and they did. The party necessitated his staying over the next day to recuperate and this led to a second farewell party the second night. Finally on the third night all of the graduate's friends who were still able to lift the weight of a glass gathered for a farewell-farewell party, plied the honored guest with intoxicating beverages, took his body to the express depot and shipped it home. Then in pure relief that they could finally halt the farewell party, they started a celebration party.

A pahty is a pahty is a pahty, and all parties resemble, to a certain extent, all other parties. However, each party is a separate and a distinctive entity and has characteristics of its own which make it not quite like any other party.

The three prime requisites for a party are liquid refreshments, cigarettes, and congenial people. Music of one sort or another generally is a by product. Always the cigarettes give out, sometimes the refreshments give out, but usually one or two of the congenial people plod bravely on to the party's end.

The most distinctive feature of any party is its watch-word. Every party that is worthy of the name has a watch-word. This watch-word is not a premeditated slogan but arises spontaneously in the midst of the gayety. It may be a song, it may be a phrase, it may be the punch line of a joke. It is something that catches the fancy of the partiers as a group and from then on it sets the tone of the party.

Mention of the watchword becomes the signal for hilarious mirth. It is repeated over and over and becomes the basis for horrible puns, and when the party is over it becomes the subject of reminiscences and the banner that identifies the members of the particular congenial group of its particular party. But no matter how you struggle to resurrect it on future occasions it can never again be used for a party.



As the chimes of the bell tower are the call to classes, so "Gung have pahty" is the call to glasses around these parts. That one phrase has probably caused more confusion among telegraph operators than any other in recent months. It is a rallying call and signature for all communications in preparation for a party—and always the telegrapher must repeat it at the bottom of a telegram to show that is what he meant to send.

Tuxedos in 8 o'clocks, eyes sunk in heads, a run on the tooth paste market—these are the after signs of a party. Any professor can spot a post-party person on sight.

Yep, it takes at least a couple or a couple and a half or four parties to complete a liberal education. It just takes some people longer to get educated than others.

After all, a party is a party is a party.

Democrats' Best Bet

Harry S. Truman

The Cavorting Picture

Milledgeville, Ga.

By Billy Carmichael III

Georgia—When Sherman said that war was hell he must have been speaking about fighting it in Georgia. It would be hell doing most anything down here; and fighting the weather was probably the biggest one thing Sherman was confronted with though I don't remember what part of the year he marched to the sea.

Yet, in the course of Homeric travels I stumbled upon something of a Chapel Hill in Georgia in the little town of Milledgeville. Milledgeville, like Chapel Hill, is a small college town, being the home of the Georgia State College for Women. Still, Milledgeville has just a bit more variety than the Hill since it is also the home of the largest mental hospital in the world, a reform school, part of the state prison system, a shirt factory, and an ex-war plant doing something or other. All of which means you meet all kinds of people in this little town of 10,000.

The place where I am residing was formerly the Governor's mansion back in pre—, during, and post-civil war days, and back before Talmadge and the two-governor system. It is now the home of the president of GSCW and what a place to call home.

The Mansion, as it is both professionally and lovingly called, brings to mind that the housing shortage is nothing new in the state of Georgia. Once upon a time here they had three governors living in the place at the same time. It seems, as it could only seem in Georgia, that the retiring governor's wife was having a child and chivalry saw to it that she was not to be turned out on the roads in such a condition which was damn white of him, whoever chivalry was. Well, in came the new governor, duly elected and then came the dastardly Yankee governor to make it one big happy family.

Today, the housing problem isn't that bad in Milledgeville but the people in Georgia, thinking along old lines, think it will take nothing short of pregnancy to keep Harry Truman in the White House.

The friend I am visiting is building one of those studies in the basement that everyone plans but never quite gets around to installing. She's taken an old southern storeroom where they used to put the hams, bacon, goodies and all the rest of the goods and made it over into quite a workable establishment. The irony of the project is that both the modern and the original work on the room was done by slave labor—first Negro, now convict.

The floor in the place was rotten and unusable from years of exactly that kind of treatment. But when the planking was removed, an old tile floor was revealed as had been somewhat expected. My friend wanted to preserve the tile, but no one with the exception of a single prison guard thought there was anything to do but concrete the entire establishment.

My friend had to leave town at this point, and upon her return she was surprised to find the prisoners had compromised. They had uprooted the tile and relaid it, replacing the dirt packing with a more substantial one of cement.

The painting on the room, though, had come to a sudden halt with the job only half finished. It seems that the painter had escaped in the midst of the job. But the courts of Georgia have now obliged with a new painter and the works goes on.

The crowning touch in Milledgeville is the train that runs up and down the main street. I'd seen this in Morehead City, but the one down here goes Morehead one better. It stops for red lights.

This 'n That

Thought For Today

By Bill Buchan

Friday afternoon, I was riding on a bus heading for Washington, D. C. that was loaded with a group of Puerto Ricans who obviously had just landed in the United States somewhere in the South. Their constant Spanish chatter, back and forth over the aisles of the bus grew to glowing amazement as the leader of the group, with a "Guide to America" in his hands pointed out the scenery.

Finally, after the long ride from Richmond, we rode onto the Arlington Bridge. The Puerto Ricans, unimpressed by the water below, quieted down into a thoughtful silence. Then suddenly one of the youngsters yelled a hysterical scream and pointed in amazement at the Washington Monument on the left and the Capitol dome on the right. That bus went wild. It was all the driver could do to keep the excited foreigners out of his vision as he tried to continue driving. The Americans who didn't know Spanish were unable to tell exactly what they were saying, but their enthusiasm gave us a clear understanding of their happiness of being in America. A soldier, sitting besides me, commented, "I've crossed this bridge a hundred times and never paid any attention to those buildings. I guess we just take them for granted."

I guess we do.

Cholley's Follies

Real Metropolitan Polish

By Charlie Gibson

In the middle of the "Y" court at high noon Friday Norman Cordon appeared in an authentic "Street Scene." Co-starring with Earl Wynn, head of the University radio school, and supported (to the tune of $11.25!) by a lowly DTH columnist, North Carolina's only member of the Metropolitan Opera Company gave what everyone present agreed was a polished performance. He shined my shoes.

The well-received version of "Street Scene" on Broadway last year featured the same Norman Cordon and drew bigger but less amazed audiences than the one that gathered hurriedly for this local performance. It was a gigantic production: the shoes were brogans. Still, the co-stars were frankly disappointed over the absence of sound cameras.

Many of those on hand testified that nothing so startling had happened in the "Y" court since that day ole Dan the Dog bothered to dig out one of his fleas. In fact, Cordon's suave stage presence and squatting stance were compared favorably to Dan's.

During the first half of the show Wynn assumed only his usual radio school position as director. He coached Cordon about the right end of the brush for applying polish, the proper mixture of spit and polish on the shoe, and the professional flip of the shine rag. Once they exchanged roles and Wynn assumed the stoop, Cordon proved that he did, too, at least know how to sing. For moral support he chirped a few lines in his well-known bass, including "Nobody knows the troubles I've seen."

A request from the audience by Chancellor House for the more appropriate "Shine on, Harvest Moon" was ignored. After all, since when have mere harmonica players ever respected the finer arts?

Somehow the shine was completed, and the shoes and I survived. One brogan had a faint gleam a la Wynn, but the other was much duller than Cordon's own bald dome. The audience began to disperse, wishing that Cordon had crooned more, or else fearing that Wynn and I might turn warblers ourselves at any moment. No danger of that, though. With that six feet plus of sheer vocal chords around, only the Met and God can make a treeo.

Word had gotten around by that time to explain that the backer of the show—"Angel" as we say in the show business—was WSSF. Probably the most expensive shoe shine in history came about after I bid $11.25 at the recent charity auction for the services of the Cordon - Wynn bootblacking corporation. The auction, a pleasant evening's entertainment in Memorial hall, netted approximately $300. This last minute boost raised the University donation for the year up to $5,000, ranking UNC among the six most generous universities in the country.

But what's this about nonfulfilment of contracts? It is believed that many of those sold on the block have not carried out their agreements. WSSF, you know, certainly does not stand for "We Shall Save Face." The trouble does not lie in the choice coeds who were sold as dates. They cooperate. Almost all the girls have transacted the evening engagements as bargained for, and there have been no complaints about services not rendered in their case.

The faculty is at fault. Now Dean Carmichael, you make Chancellor House spit out that harmonica serenade you bought. It's a shame, isn't it, that the original bill of goods for "harmonica music in Harry's" was changed to "harmonica music anywhere in Chapel Hill!" Dean Weaver, serve up that hour of tennis instruction if ever your racket employer contacts you. Was she the one who swooned with a big "FREDDIE!!" upon sight of you in Memorial hall that night? Mrs. E. J. Woodhouse, put Walt Spearman, your next door neighbor, to work and don't miss out on that baby-sitting your own auctioneer husband talked you into paying so dearly for. Roy Armstrong, you, though, need not worry just yet about staging your one-man band act for Susan Gardner, summertime coed. When she let you off backstage with a promise to play your mouth harp and other gadgets not even Spike Jones had heard of, she postponed your concert "until I come up and see you sometime." She actually meant until she tries to enter Carolina a year from now. The $4 she paid for you may be the cheapest UNC admission fee of all times, she hopes.

Whirlpool

Searching For An Answer

By Lincoln S. H. Kan

I'm in a Whirlpool, you are in a Whirlpool, the whole blessed world is in a Whirlpool? And what is that Whirlpool? What is the center towards which we are gravitating?

The Whirlpool is the present life in which we are living. The center is the culmination of all the forces which direct Man and his destiny!

This column is an attempt to analyze the whirlpool of international events as they occur.

I have not sat at roundtables until my elbows got calloused from propping, my head up while I'm trying to sleep through an international confab. I have not been completely hardened by the lies that have been mouthed, and then had to report for home consumption in a hopeful vein. What I have to say may represent many who are trying to figure out what it's all about . . . where are we going . . . what's going to happen?

But let us get on with the subject on hand and that is Tito. What about him? What about Russia? What about the sudden reversal of the Daily Worker so reminiscent of the switch when the United States and Russia became allies during the last conflagration.

Frankly I think that we're getting the wool pulled over our eyes. Have you ever taken time to consider what the Russians might be thinking?

Stalin would very much like to have a complete encirclement of the Dardenelles. He has the Black Sea under his control. Yet the Greeks and the American Mission block him from the eastern sector. He and the Politburo have two methods by which they can gain complete control of the entire Balkans.

One method would be to march into the area under some pretext or other. Therefore, Albania, the little country who would fall beneath Yugoslavia's many legions would be picked to start a fight with Tito. Obviously, help must be rendered to the Albanians . . . so the Red Army marches. But supposing the Yugoslav troops melt before the might of the bear with only token resistance. It would be too late for any other power to intervene, because it would be a "fait accompli" before any orders can be issued by our slow-moving democracies. Then Yugoslavia becomes another S. S. R., if they are good little boys. The Russian Army is then well entrenched all the way to the Adriatic coast . . . Albania becomes, perhaps a part of Yugoslavia . . . Italy next.

The second method is to suck in the western powers and allow them to back Tito and thus complote the Balkan Entente with western money and efforts. When the job is done, by a series of economic and mutual agreement pacts, Russia demonstrates her willingness to cooperate with the new Balkan federation. Communism is hurrahed. The masters at the Kremlin still have political control and by military agreements they would have gained further springboards from which to threaten the west.

However, as sensible people, we can not let suspicion fog our chance for peace. Because with a Balkan federation friendly to the west we would have pushed the Iron Curtain back considerably. We would be within closer striking distance to Russian thinking. Our information bases could hit into Russian hearts and minds much easier. Suspicion that the western powers are after conquest of the world might be lined-out in the thoughts of the Russian people.

If the Tito-Kremlin break is sincere, how are we to take advantage of it? I think these steps should be taken. 1) The promise that Marshall aid and United Nations economic and social cooperation will be extended to Yugoslavia and all other Balkan countries who may desire to join the Tito group. 2) Rapid and permanent peace treaties be affected and signed for Austria and Germany, which will compel the withdrawal of all occupation troops. 3) Full rights of sovereignty and respect to their economic freedom should be guaranteed by the great powers.

What has been said is one man's opinion . . . it may not be the panacea leading to peace. The ways of Man are strange and can take sudden and unexpected changes which might lead toward chaos. All I can say is that if Man is bent on self-destruction . . . he has no right to live. There is so much to be gained for the human race in Peace.

Norm Sper Narrowly Misses On Olympic Diving Team

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

Bones McKinney, probably the best basketball player ever developed in this state, is still going strong on the hardwoods, despite approaching middle age and the terrific summer heat. Bones, who during the winter months performs as a professional cager for the Washington Capitals, is working for the City Recreation Department in Raleigh during the summer and is a great favorite with the kids. But he still takes time off for an occasional basketball drill.

The former Carolina star was seen sweltering in 90 degree heat the other day while playing with some of State College's Indiana basketball stars. And old Bones was doing right well for himself. It will be remembered that he performed for the 1946 Carolina team which won the Eastern NCAA basketball title and then lost to Oklahoma A & M, 44-41, for the National championship.

One of the favorite topics of conversation between State and Carolina sports enthusiasts has always been which was the better basketball team—Carolina's 1946 champions or the State quint of this past season, conference champions and also NCAA tourney participants. Seeing McKinney drop in hook shots, overheads, and tap-in shots against some of the State stars the other day leads us to believe the 1946 White Phantoms would have fared rather well against the 1948 Wolfpack.

College Records Mean Little

Baseball is a funny sport at times. For example, why is it that a team can be trounced convincingly in one game of a doubleheader and then hand an equally bad defeat to the same opponent in the second game, a few minutes later. The answer to that probably is the pitching. But how can you explain a player whose batting average in college hardly matched his weight and who then proceeds to go to the pros, improving his average the higher he goes in the pro ranks.

Such is the case of Tom Clayton and Jack Hussey, both former Tar Heel baseball players. Tom, who hails from Roxboro, had little luck during his college career. His batting was bad and fielding erratic, but perhaps some scout saw future promise in Tom. That summer, just after his unimpressive college play, he signed with Red Springs, of the Class D Tobacco State League. He hit considerably better at Red Springs and gained a big jump to Savannah, of the Class B Sally League this summer. Savannah has been in seventh place in the loop for most of this summer, but Clayton was batting in the cleanup spot and providing most of the offensive punch.

For some reason, the Philadelphia Athletics, whose farm system Tom is a member of, decided he needed a little more training in a lower league, so Clayton now plays for Martinsville in the Carolina League. But we noticed he hit three home runs in one game the other day and his average is above .300. He has a good chance for advancing to a higher league next season.

The case of Jack Hussey is similar. In 1943 the High Point boy batted only .268 for the Tar Heels. He fared even worse when he returned from the war in 1947. But Hussey didn't give up baseball. Instead he signed with Goldsboro of the Coastal Plain League, and now is burning up that Class D loop with an average of over .400. He ranks high in home runs and runs-batted-in and is considered a good bet to move up to a higher classification of ball soon.

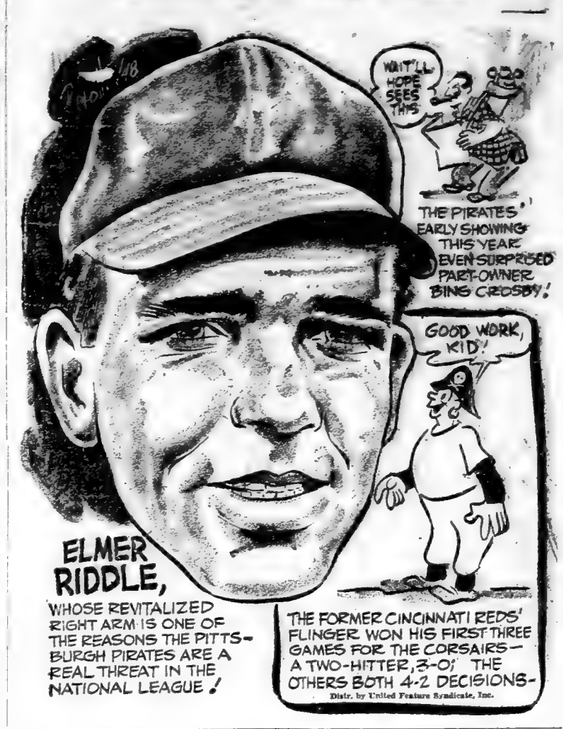
Misses Third Place In Platform Diving By Only .29 Points

Norm Sper, University head cheerleader and Conference diving champ, placed fourth in the final Olympic high platform diving trials Sunday at Detroit, thereby missing a place on the 1948 Olympic diving team by the narrowest of margins.

Dr. Sammy Lee of Pasadena, California, won the event with a score of 144.37 points. Second, third, and fourth places were separated by only .57 of a point, with Carolina's Norm Sper fourth. Second place was won by Ohio State's Bruce Harlan, who had already won first place in the 3-meter diving trials Friday. Third place was won by Miller Anderson also of Ohio State, who had placed second to Harlan in the 3-meter dive. Harlan scored 128.69, Anderson 128.41, and Sper 128.12. The Olympic team for this event was made up of the first three finishers. Sper missed the boat by only .29 of a point.

Sper had injured his neck about a week ago while practicing at the Los Angeles Olympic pool and was forced to miss a week's practice while undergoing x-ray treatment at the Hollywood Hospital. Just what bearing this injury had on Norm's performance Sunday at Detroit is not known here.



He had previously won the national AAU title in the high platform event in 1944. In the same year he had also won the national title in the 3-meter diving event. Bruce Harlan won the national AAU 3-meter springboard title and the NCAA title in the same event in 1946. Miller Anderson was a double winner in NCAA competition in 1947 and again in 1948, winning both the 1-meter and the 3-meter diving events. Anderson also won the national AAU high platform title in 1943 while in the Army Air Forces.

Randall Hudson, coed from Tarboro, also failed to make the Olympic team when she could do no better than fifth in the women's 200-meter breaststroke on Saturday.

Randy qualified for the finals in this event in trials run off Friday. The field of eight finalists was led by Miss Jeanne Wilson

Grads, Mangum Battle For Softball Honors

The Grads and Mangum met yesterday on the intramural field in the first game of a best two out of three series to determine the intramural softball champion for the first summer session. They will play again today at 5 o'clock and if a third tilt is needed it is scheduled for tomorrow.

Both moved in the final round of play after winning semi-final games Thursday. The Grads defeated Victory Village, 6-3, while Mangum edged the Law School, 5-3.

Three out of four titles have been decided in the tennis tournaments with the other crown on the verge of being settled. Ray Morris copped the open singles honors by besting Charlie Rice, 6-2, 10-8. Morris was also a member of the open doubles championship duo with John Kenfield Jr., which edged out Rice and Stan Gruner for the title, 7-5, 8-6.

In the closed singles play Las Dameron won over Tom Southerland, 7-5, 6-2. The closed doubles title was not settled late yesterday. Dameron and Paul Keenan had advanced to the finals. A semi-final match between Dr. A. M. Jordan and Southerland and Harry Brown and Charlie Stevens would advance the winners to the other final round berth.

The intramural golf pitching tournament that was being held on Emerson field closed yesterday with the title-holder not known at the Tar Heel deadline.

Simmons Among U.S. Olympic Hopefuls Leaving Wednesday

New York — Floyd (Chunk) Simmons, former Southern Conference hurdles champion and member of the pre-Olympic track squad which toured Europe last summer, is among the 65-man U. S. track and field squad assembling in New York for "processing" before sailing for London on Wednesday. The Olympic hopefuls will sail on the S. S. America.

Simmons merited his spot on the Olympic squad by finishing third in the National AAU decathlon event held at Bloomsfield, N. J. June 26. The National crown was won by an outsider, 17-year-old Bob Mathias of Tulare, Calif., who piled up a total of 7,224 points in the 10-event grind. Defending champion Irv Mondschein of the New York Pioneer club was second with 7,101 points, followed by Simmons who had a total of 7,054. Simmons, now representing the Los Angeles AC, left the University of North Carolina earlier in the year in order to devote full time to training for the big test and a trip to London. The Charlotte, N. C. trackster holds several Southern Conference track titles.

Headed by speedsters, Nel Patton, Barney Ewell and Mal Whitfield, the U. S. team appears strong enough to carry on the tradition of American domination in the Olympic track and field. Ewell, six-time winner of the national sprint championship, had not been reckoned to win the trials final but he hit the tape a good two feet in front of famed Mel Patton, the world's

Legion Play Ends As Chapel Hill, Wake Forest Tie

The area one, league three American Legion junior race closed Friday in as tight a finish as could be expected among three clubs without a three-way deadlock. Durham's rampaging nine who made a strong bid to move into the State elimination play by taking a doubleheader on Thursday capped their play by beating the first place Chapel Hill team to drop them back into a tie with Wake Forest who routed Garner.

Both teams hung up records of 15 wins against 5 defeats while the desperate Bulls pulled in one notch to the rear with a 14-6 record.

In getting back on top, or at least in a deadlock, the Baptists evened things up with Chapel Hill for dropping them out of first place a week or so ago after they led the pack for most of the season.

Talbert Takes Title

Spring Lake, N. J., July 11—William F. Talbert of New York won the annual Spring Lake Bathing and Tennis Club invitation tennis tournament today when top-seeded Gardner Mulloy of Miami was forced to default in the final round.

Second - seeded Talbert stroked his way to easy wins stroked his way to easy wins three-set final, 6-1, 8-1, as Mulloy tried to continue despite a severe case of infected feet.

Record Is Claimed for Playboy Auto

His worst weather and road conditions in 15 years of auto test and speed driving were faced by Robert McKenzie, 44, of 716 Abbott Rd., when he piloted a standard pilot model Playboy machine recently from New York to Los Angeles on his 54th transcontinental run. Nonetheless, with son Bob Jr. ,21, he made the trip in 62 hours and 20 minutes.

By averaging better than 50 miles an hour, the McKenzies claim for the Playboy Motor Car Corporation of Buffalo a record in the 2000 pound weight class.

"I think we experienced every condition that could be drummed up by the weather man—snow, fog, rain, and plenty of very bad roads," said Mr. McKenzie of the March 30 - April 1 run. "There was even ice on the roads in Flagstaff, Ariz," he added.

When the pressure was over and the McKenzies started back, Mr. McKenzie "found them beginning to put in sand to patch up the holes." Arriving back Friday, Bob Jr. headed for a good rest while his father reported on the trip before heading back west. The father is employed in the engineering department of Playboy.

In a survey of 5000 engineer-readers just completed by Automotive Engineer magazine for its April issue, "the new Playboy was selected by 55.23 percent as the best car" in the bantam-size class. Cadillac, Buick and Ford were listed as outstanding in their respective classes.

"In the high-priced and bantam size fields," the magazine said, the clear majority selection of the Cadillac and Playboy indicated that, in the opinion of automotive engineers, the two cars have outstanding qualities this year which place them in a position superior to other makes in the same class."

The third Carolina entry in the final Olympic trials, Jimmy Thomas, failed to qualify for the finals in either the 100-meter backstroke or the 200-meter freestyle. The 18-year-old freshman from Baltimore holds the Conference record for the 150-yard backstroke.

The three Carolina entries were accompanied to Detroit by Coach Ralph Casey and are expected back in Chapel Hill early Tuesday.

100-yard dash record holder from Southern California. The brilliant clocking by Ewell was a promising sign for the American Olympic track men.

Gilbert Dodds, whose 4:05.3 is the fastest competitive mile ever run indoors, aggravated a leg injury during an exhibition that caused him to miss the tryouts and the boat. There is still some mystery as to what prompted Dodds, the national 500 meter champion from the Boston Athletic Association, to run in an unimportant exhibition as late as last Monday.

Followers of the sport still shook their heads over the failure of Charley Fonville, the Michigan weight star, to make the team in the shot put.

Some shared the amazement of Harrison Dillard, the Baldwin-Wallace timber topper who has been in something of a daze since he tangled up and failed to finish in the 110-meter hurdle final. The speedy Dillard won't be left behind with Fonville and Dodds however. He finished third behind Ewell and Patton in the 100-meter dash.

Sound And Fury Show Begins Friday Night

By Doris Weaver

"Sinner friends," shouts the back-country preacher, "Life is a dressing room for Heaven and you'd better get ready!" Sound and Fury has changed the lyrics to "Life is a dressing room for Hell—come join the fun!" for "Mardi Gras which will be presented in Memorial Hall on Friday and Saturday nights.

"Mardi Gras" is a laugh-filled fantasy about life, death, and a pleasant trip to Hades during the time of the religious movement in New Orleans for which it is named. According to Pete Strader, author and director, "It isn't as bad as people say. Why, Hell's fun—you'll have a hot time there!"

In Strader's new and different portrait of Hell, his leading man (played by Colbert Leonard) is forced to return from death to life rather than vice-versa. He must secure a dime to pay his way across the styx to Hell, since the undertaker snitched his last one. Even bribery won't take him higher up.

Back on Earth, he is charged with drunken driving by a realistic court which can't absorb the fact that he is dead. They are more convinced that he's crazy. After that, the typical S and F fireworks begin.

Music for the show is under the direction of Tread Covington with arrangements by John Hall. James Bell provides a special tune.

The leading roles are played by Pat Ellis, Colbert Leonard, Jane Hunter, and Tommy Thomas. Pat adds a bit of "come hither" to the innocent eyes which played Clara in last fall's S and F production, "Gin Lane," and Jane retains her Brooklyn accent just for laughs. Colbert becomes a Casanova and Tommy is more the comedian than ever.

The supporting cast includes Alex Lassiter, Rita Loeb, Bill Saunders, Faith Adams, Jerry Weiss, Doris Weaver, Ig Heniford, Dan Morgan, V. C. Taylor

Hillel to Present Vesper Service

The Hillel Foundation will present the final vesper service of the first summer session under the sponsorship of the Coalition Cabinet at 7:00 o'clock tomorrow evening. The speaker will be announced at the service.

According to word received from the "Y" this is a fullfillment of the plans made at the beginning of summer school of trying to present to the students a series of services with religious emphasis that would have interest for everyone on the campus.

As next Wednesday is not a regular school day the vesper services will not be held but will continue on a regular weekly schedule after the second session of summer school gets under way.

The service tomorrow will be held in the Arboretum next to the greenhouse and the public is cordially invited to attend. In the event of rain the place of the service will be changed to Gerrard Hall without announcement.

SENATOR ALBEN W. BARKLEY, Democratic candidate for the vice-presidency, is shown here as he finished his famous keynote address at the convention this week. The speech, which was well received throughout the country, caused the delegates to give their first real impromtu demonstrations of the convention.

Kirby To Serve As Acting Student Body President

Secretary-Treasurer To Take Dedmond's Duties During Second Summer Session

By Bill Buchan

Bob Kirby, senior for Charlotte and present secretary-treasurer of the student body, will serve as the ruling student government leader during the last session of summer school, according to an announcement yesterday by Jess Dedmond, president of the student body.

Kirby assumes the duties under a bill passed by the student legislature last week when Dedmond announced his intention of leaving school for the next session. Vice president Jim Godwin, who would ordinarily assume Dedmond's duties, is not in school this summer.

Will Retain Title

Under the provisions of the bill, Kirby will serve as president but will retain his title of secretary-treasurer. The parliamentarian of the Legislature was named as second in line under Kirby, with the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee third, and the chairman of the Rules committee fourth.

Dedmond also disclosed a meeting held Monday night by fraternity representatives and fraternity advisors which was termed "a general discussion of fraternity problems with no specific recommendations made."

Fraternity Meeting

In discussing the meeting, Dedmond stated, "My purpose in calling the meeting was in an effort to find solutions to everyday problems confronting fraternities which tend to bring adverse criticism on them. It is hoped that when agreements are reached, final means of showing the positive, rather than the negative side of fraternity life will be shown."

Among the questions discussed at the meeting was the problem of women visitors, concerning their conduct and visiting hours. A discussion was also held on the suggestion of house mothers for the individual houses.

Better Relations Sought

Another suggestion was made that the faculty committee and fraternity representatives meet together at least once per term in an effort to establish better relations and cooperation between the two groups.

Dean of Men Fred Weaver announced that he was attempting to find a man to serve as an assistant to him, who would handle all fraternity problems in order to maintain closer relationship.

Faculty members present at the meeting expressed a desire that the meetings continue until agreements could be reached and a more workable relationship established.

Freshmen Chapel Plan Snags On Attendance

Plans are rapidly taking shape for the freshman chapel program to be re-instated this fall, announced Ed Lanier, member of the chapel committee.

Bill Miller and Lanier are working out the answer to the attendance problem. One of the suggested plans involves using a card-indexing system with the new student's name and home on the card. A number is then given the student and when he enters the auditorium he fills a printed form which is returned to a box on his leaving the hall. These forms are then checked with the files and absences noted.

The student will receive a call from his advisor on the first unexcused absence. The second absence will initiate a letter to the student's parents. If the student is absent a third time he is automatically dropped from the rolls and will have to go to the chapel meetings in his sophomore year. He will not be able to leave general college until he makes up that one hour chapel credit, which the freshmen will receive.

Other members of the freshman chapel committee are: Dean William Welles, Dean C. P. Spruill, Dean Fred Weaver, Ed Lanier, Bill Miller and Jess Dedmond.

Garvin Explains Use of DDT Spray

Dr. O. David Garvin, District Health Officer for Orange, Person, Chatham and Lee Counties, has issued the following information on the use of DDT spraying for insect and fly control:

"Experience with DDT spraying for fly and insect control has produced effective results when the spraying has been done correctly," Dr. Garvin said. To be effective the spray should be applied by trained workers and a good DDT mixture and pressure sprayers should be used.

Dr. Garvin pointed out that the use of flit guns for spraying is not satisfactory because the spray is not applied in an even, covering coat. Much of the spray is wasted when applied in this method.

When the DDT is applied directly to the walls and ceilings of houses, privies, barns and porches by trained workers it is a worthwhile measure in controlling flies and insects.

In regard to spraying as a polio preventive measure, Dr. J. W. R. Norton, State Health Officer, has said, "it must be pointed out that the part played by the fly in the spread of polio is still not clear. It is the opinion of most authorities at this time that the most important method of spread of this disease is by person to person contact and that spread by flies is only of secondary importance." However, Dr. Norton goes on to say that, "flies are known to play a part in the transmission of several filth borne diseases so that year round fly control is a valuable public health program for its over-all benefit."

Greeks, Customs, Pins And a Candle in Hand

It's an old Carolina custom for a fraternity to serenade a coed when one of its members pins her up, but when a sorority turns the tables and serenades a Greek, then it must be leap year.

In the case of the Chi Omegas serenading Bobby Stockton at the Beta house Wednesday night, however, leap year wasn't the cause. The sorority girls were just retaliating for a practical joke the Betas pulled last Sunday.

It seems Mr. Stockton was having dinner at the Chi Omega house, one lonely male in a sheik's heaven. This was too good a chance for the Beta's to miss. First they called up, asked for Miss Roberta Stockton and read a telegram which purportedly said: "So glad you pledged Chi O. Love Mother." Then, en masse, Mr. Stockton's brothers appeared at the sorority house and serenaded during dinner.

Wednesday night the sorority returned the compliment. Just before 11 o'clock they showed up at the Beta house with a pledge pin for Roberta Stockton. The pin was 10 inches wide and a foot high. Then while Kenny Powell and Chan Highsmith held the struggling Robert before a window with a candle in his hand, the girls serenaded him with "Our One Chi O Boy," "Hush Little Baby," and "We're Rushing You Chi Omega."

Afterwards they moved slowly away, softly singing, "Crawl into your trundle bed and cover up your little head."

Citizens Warned Against Dangers Of Spotted Fever

Five cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever have been reported in the last ten days, with two of the instances fatal, Dr. David O. Garvin, health officer of Orange, Person, Chatham, and Lee Counties, stated today, issuing a warning to the residents of the area in regard to the disease.

Dr. Garvin urges that the people of Orange-Person-Chatham and Lee Counties be vaccinated against Rocky Mountain Spotted fever by their private physician or at the Health Department.

Many families have overlooked the necessity for protection against this disease that is carried by ticks. People working out-of-doors and children who play out-of-doors in areas where there are wood, grass and weeds, should have the protection given by the vaccine.

Dr. Garvin pointed out that many people will visit tick infested areas for picnics and on vacations. Any individuals or families planning outings should have the protective vaccine.

The vaccine is injected under the skin in the upper arm. Three injections are given, one each week for three weeks.

Health Department clinics in Orange County are held at the Hillsboro and Chapel Hill Health Departments every Friday from 2-4 p. m. and every Saturday from 9-12 a. m.

Orientation Work To Begin June 21

Chairman of the Orientation Committee Bill Miller said today, "Even if the number of new students is going to be small this coming second summer term, we will not neglect our duty to orient them.

"The orientation program will start Wednesday June 21 at 7:30 p. m. in Gerrard Hall," Miller said. It is expected that Dean of Men Fred Weaver, President of the Student Body Jess Dedmond and a representative of the coeds will be attending the meeting for the new students.

Up to the present time it is reported that the admissions office has approximately 25 newcomers registered.

Atomic Age Exhibit

"Atomic Energy," a 24-panel photographic exhibition compiled by Life Magazine in consultation with the United States Atomic Energy Commission, will open in the large gallery at Person Hall on July 18.

New Polio Victim

Mrs. George Radman, wife of the assistant football coach and former Carolina football star, was carried to Duke hospital late yesterday afternoon after her illness was diagnosed as polio by local physicians. Mrs. Radman, who lives at 139 Mason Farm Road, is the third victim of the dread disease in Victory Village.

Harold Norwood, twenty-one year old youth of Chapel Hill, Route 1, was stricken earlier this week bringing the Orange County total to 4.

Wallace Club

The Wallace-for-President Club will meet tonight at 8:30 in Roland Parker Lounge No. 3, Graham Memorial. A report will be given on the petition drive, plus a report on the checking of the petitions which is now being made with the county election boards.

Council Repeals 1-Way Road Rule On Daniels Street

Acting upon a petition signed by more than one-half of the residents of Daniels Road, the Victory Village Council last Monday night repealed the one-way traffic regulation for that street.

There had been many complaints from the residents of the street who owned automobiles. The complaintants stated that the act forced them drive far out of way, down King Street and Johnson Road before entering Daniels Road.

Last week Mayor Bill Goulding issued a request for all persons residing on Daniels Road who wished to object to the regulation to appear before the council at its Monday night meeting. He also stressed that many persons on the street were in favor of the act.

The residents replied to the request by circulating a petition, and finding a majority of objectors, they presented it to the council for action.

Chorus Rehearsal Starts on Monday

The Summer School Chorus will have its first meeting Monday, July 26, at 5 p. m. in the auditorium of Hill Music Hall. Rehearsals are scheduled for 5 p. m., Mondays and Wednesdays throughout the remainder of the summer session.

The program, as selected, includes a Bach Cantata, the Polvetzian dances and choruses from Prince Igor by Borodin, and selections from the oratorio, The Peaceable Kingdom, by the contemporary composer, Randall Thompson.

All interested persons are urged to attend.

French Exam

The French Reading exam for students in the School of Commerce will be given Friday, July 16, at 2:30. The exam will be in room 308 of Murphy.

Merchants To Pay For DDT Spray Program

With the number of poliomyelitis cases throughout the state hitting above the 600 mark yesterday, the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association announced that it is sponsoring a campaign to clean up and spray every business establishment within the city limits of the twin towns as one hope that the disease may be stopped here.

L. V. Huggins, president of the association, in making the announcement stated that the work is being done in cooperation with the District Health Department, and while there was no proof that the dread disease is being spread by insects, it is known that insects can spread it.

Officially the campaign begins this morning with the first business house getting the works to be Ab's Book Shop on East Franklin street. The garbage houses, garbage cans, porches, doors, and surrounding area of each merchant will be cleaned up and sprayed with DDT.

A spraying team, trained by the Health Department, will do the work, with the Merchants Association underwriting all of the cost for DDT and labor. The Health Department will lend its spraying equipment to the association for the use of the project.

District Health Department Engineer James Westbrook, commenting on the project yesterday, said that he thought it could do a lot of good toward preventing spread of the feared infantile paralysis from insect sources, but warned that the greatest number of cases come as the result of contact with the disease.

Union Board Seeks Permanent Head

The Student Union Board of Directors, acting as a committee of selection for a new director for Graham Memorial, is not interested in appointing any person not willing to assume the position on a permanent basis. Dean Fred H. Weaver, Chairman of the Board, revealed Wednesday morning.

"We have written various alumnae of the University hoping to find a suitable man for the job." Dean Weaver said. He added that "the committee of the board has decided to wait as long as necessary to get the right man."

It is the intention of the board to find a man who will operate the union on a professional basis. The size of the job will depend on how far the director carries the operation of Graham Memorial and the Student Union beyond the obviously nominal functions, according to Weaver. "We want to put this Student Union on the same footing with Unions everywhere," the Dean asserted.

Many High School Candidates Apply For Scholarships

Dean D. D. Carroll announced yesterday that over 200 applications from 150 high school graduates were received for the Andy Bershak and Smith Scholarship, and that the winners will be chosen by July 24.

The Andy Bershak Scholarship which totals $2,000 for four years was conceived by fraternity men on the campus and awarded each year to deserving high school graduates who need help and who have evidenced high scholarship and leadership. The award is in memory of one of Carolina's All-Americans, who had one of the highest scholastic averages of past students.

Last Saturday thirty-nine applicants were here to be interviewed and were entertained at a luncheon in Lenoir Hall. Forty had been invited however at the last moment it was reported that the candidate had joined the Navy.

Single Term Vets Should Visit VA

Al veterans who registered for both terms of Summer School and have decided to attend only the first term, and drop out the second, are asked to check by 315 South Building and arrange to have their subsistence stopped for the second term.

The Veterans Advisor stresses that this applies only to veterans who registered for both terms and are not going to be here the second one.

It's Inaccurate . . . . . But It's Encouraging

'Mardi Gras' Promises To Be A Show Of Hell

By Doris Weaver

Sound and Fury has taken a leap ahead of the science and the religion department to give Carolina an inaccurate but encouraging prevue of Hell in "Mardi Gras" which promises to be a (censored) of a show. This comic fantasy (or is it fantastic comedy?) is to spread its flames of laughter in Memorial Hall in the coming two nights.

The new and unique version of that hot-bed of happy sin and gin which is presented in "Mardi Gras" would cause even Billy Sunday to roll back his stone and change his resting place.

This lifely comedy of death offers everything from anything (goes) to exotic Dusty Moore and her equally exotic dance style. That alone is worth the price of admission. Dusty sets music to dance to the tunes of "Mardi Gras" and "Ring Around the Moon."

Author and director Pete Strader has woven at least one, sometimes more, of his typical double meanings into practically every line. He who laughs last—may not find the meanings as clear as those in last summer's "Weep No More," but there are new fields of laughter to explore—aren't there? South Building will agree, anyway.

Acocrding to Pete, "We assume that our student audience plans to visit Hell someday, so they might as well know what they're missing. Not that 'Mardi Gras' proposes to encourage early suicide, but this particular conception of that gay city is just as pleasant as the journey."

Mrs. R. J. Wherry of the Wherry Dance studio has spent countless afternoons drilling a chorus line of tired, aching girls. They have spent the following moments in a state of collapse moaning, "This ballet is as hot as the theme of the show!" One of the discouraged amateurs was heard remarking during the course of a rehearsal, "Ballet dancers look like swans—I resemble a miniature elephant."

The curtain goes up on "Mardi Gras" tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall. In the words of author Strader, "Come on down—we'll have a Hell of a time!"

French Counsul Emphasizes Need Of French Summer School

The increasing role of French Summer schools, coresponding to the increasing importance of the study of French was stressed Wednesday night at a celebration of Bastille Day by Rene de Messieres, cultural adviser to the United States at the French Embassy offices in New York. Chancellor Robert B. House responded to the speech which was delivered at a banquet sponsored by the French House of the University of North Carolina at the Carolina Inn.

Mr. de Messieres, formerly professor of French Literature at the University of Lyon in France and at Wellesley College in New York, said that international relations have become so complicated that only complete comprehension can be the basis of mutual understanding. Realizing this, the UNESCO commission decided on English and French as the official international languages and is now working on a project which will require the teaching of either of these languages.

At the present time in France, 80 per cent of the students in secondary schools are learning English, and in England a parallel situation exists. He said it is important that the United States create a similar situation here.

France, he said, "is the keystone because it is geographically the center of it. It is the keystone because it is historically the epitime of it. It is the keystone of it because its spiritual destiny seems . . . to permit its diverse fundamental traits to be assimilated with one another, as well as to try to organize this inorganic or disrupted Europe."

But, he added, that France is also an entity of its own, with a "particular genius for clarity" and a quality of restlessness which "has always kept it from being satisfied with ready made formulas."

Prof. Hugo Giduz, director of the French House since its formation in 1945, presided at the banquet which had as its invited guests Chancellor and Mrs. Robert B. House, W. M. Dey, head of the Romance Language Department.

Students and Faculty members attending the annual French House program in Chapel Hill are shown here on the steps of the house. Students are not allowed to speak anything but French while in the house. The annual program will end tomorrow.

Playmaker Review . . .

'All My Sons' Is Good

W. P. Covington, III

"All My Sons," challenging drama against war profiteering written by Arthur Miller, which opened Wednesday night at the Playmaker Theatre for a three-day stand, is concerned with a man's responsibilities towards others. The play has an urgency and originality in its authentic American characters placed in a situation that is sharply individual yet broad and vitally important in its implications.

It shows in no uncertain colors the evil of selfish self-seeking even when the self is the family unit and not merely the individual person. The protagonist, a rough yet kindly man (Nathaniel White) who has made money as a small-time manufacturer of airplane engines during the war, is devoted to his family and more concerned with making a living for his children and wife than he is with his responsibility toward others. As a result his son (Edsel Hughes) returning from the war with the experience of a new kind of companionship and mutual responsibility behind him, finds himself at cross-purposes with his father. When the full iniquity of that father's conduct in relation to the defective machines and the manner in which he has shifted the blame to his partner is revealed, disaster ensues.

Around this central action Mr. Miller groups a number of sensitively developed characters and events: the mother, superstitious and dominating, convinced that her long reported missing son will return, is played excellently by Marian Miller; the missing son's fiancee engaged to the younger son, and daughter of the partner is charmingly and sensibly portrayed by Martha Grattan; her brother, hysterical and anguished, who is convinced his father is innocent, yet cannot resist the geniality and kindliness of the man he knows to be his father's enemy is interpreted by Frederick Young too melodramatically and spasmodically to be in keeping with the style of his co-actors.

All these people battle their difficult way through suffering and misapprehension in a confined and cluttered backyard—nicely designed by Robert Eberle—which is the very epitome of a certain kind of American living.

"All My Sons" is directed by Sam Hirsch with a good undercurrent of intensity but with not enough emphasis on symbolic detail. He has gathered together an able cast and schooled them to play together in the creation of a sustained and rising mood of feeling. Mr. Hirsch's blocking was, in general, very good. Several scenes, however—especially the first act love scene and the climax of the letter scene—were not pleasing to the eye. His first act is too slowly paced. But the follow-up acts are well worth waiting for, especially the climactic father-son show-down scene in the second act.

Nathaniel White (the father) and Edsel Hughes (the son) two old timers on the Playmaker stage buried in a sea of new-comers, emerge each in his own right, to turn in two of the finest performances of their careers and of the show. This reviewer has watched the careers of these two actors at the Playmaker Theatre with interest—but has not been so pleased with their past performances. It is an invigorating evening in the theatre to watch these two perform in "All My Sons."

William Hardy as the wry self-controlled, easy talking, friendly neighbor and Rue Guthrie, as his wife, an overweight women who fears it, turn in convincing and nice supporting character roles.

Others in the cast of practically an all new-face show include Paul Keziah as Frank, Lucia Collarte as Lydia and youngster David Rosen as Bert.

Costumes supervised by Helen Brown are good and in keeping with the show. Mrs. Grattan's gowns are especially worthy of note. Mrs. Miller's second act entrance costume and hair-dress are the only sore-thumbs in this department.

Robert Eberle's lighting does not do his set justice. His second act lighting is poor in comparison with good first and third act lighting. It is granted Mr. Eberle gave himself a difficult set to light.

Make-up, as a whole, is not up to usual Playmaker standards.

Mr. Hirsch, his cast, and his production staff are to be commended for turning out an enjoyable evening in less than the usually allotted rehearsal time for a Playmaker show plus all the drawbacks of a summer production against them. "All My Sons" closes Friday evening, July 16. Curtain time is 8:30.

Write Away

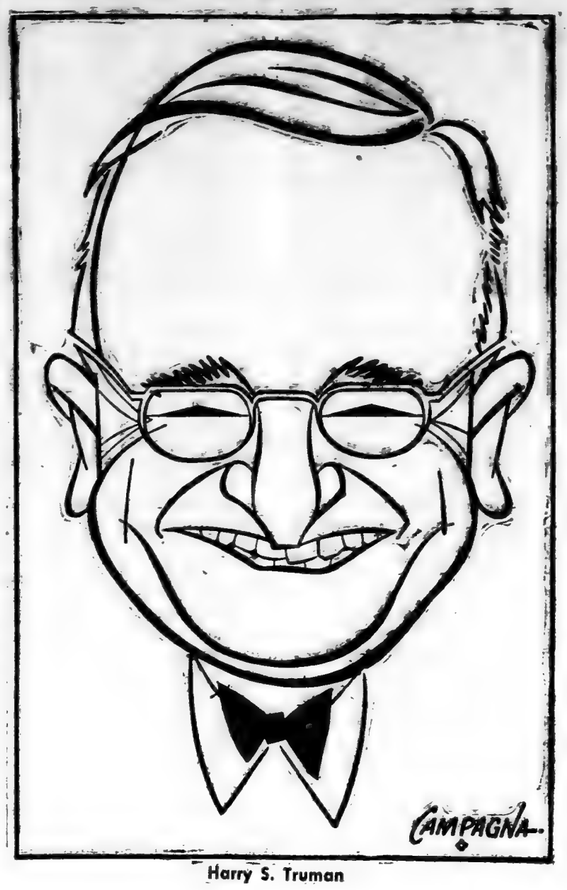
Too Much Sex Talk

Editor:

In the Daily Tar Heel, July 9, there appeared an article—"Coed's Dare Designers to Junk New Skirts." Somehow I feel that it should not pass without comment. As articles go it was well written and entertaining. And that seems to me to be just the point. Day after day in paper after paper I read well written articles, but confidentially they are no longer so entertaining—especially when the majority of them concern sex and brew.

Understand, it is not that this article is "sexy"; it is rather the tenor of this and other papers as a whole. In a world that is literally burning up around us, university educated journalists waste their time and ours with trivialities. Understand also—I am not opposed to brew (I wish I could afford it) and I think sex is wonderful for people between twelve and sixty. Particularly when it's in season; i. e., from July 1 to June 30 inclusive. However, this article along with the dozens of others that have appeared on this subject (long skirts, that is) could have been much more interesting, not to say thought provoking, had it dealt with some of the humanitarian factors involved.

For instance, I wonder if either the author of said article or the wearers of long skirts are aware of the immense amount of suffering in the world today created by the lack of food, shelter and clothing. And if they are aware, are they as callous as they appear to be? Think for a moment—three-fourths of the world's population is in need of the basic necessities. During the war, 60,000,000 Chinese roamed their native land carrying all their earthly possessions on their backs. In Europe untold millions of people were forced on to the roads by the pressures of war. Today thousands of people flee the totalitarian environment of Soviet Russia only to gain the privilege of starving and freezing to death democratically.



Just so you'll get the picture I shall relate two incidents viewed by a minister in Germany (1946). One a little boy thirteen years old, undersized and undernourished, among 20,000 refugees. He had become permanently separated from his parents three weeks before. His only possession was a man's coat which hung loosely to his otherwise naked body.

The other in a crowded air-raid shelter where the people were huddled together to keep out of the cold February rain. A young woman giving birth to a child. That infant did not have even a manger of straw. It was laid out on the cold cement floor to die. If you were a young expectant mother or father in devastated Europe I am sure that the shallowness and flippancy of American papers would prepare you psychologically to meet the birth and death of your child. For the lack of adequate clothing and food, infant mortality in various parts of Europe the past few winters has neared the 100 percent mark.

Space does not permit my giving these incidents the glamour they deserve. However, the next time you admire all that extra cloth wasted in the current fashions, don't feel sorry or responsible for all those people who are deprived of their birthright because of our inhumanity to man. Just concentrate on that BIG three letter word, S-E-X, and laugh in your bier.

The Cavorting Picture

Papers & Politics

By Billy Carmichael III

Atlanta—This capital of the South is as hot as if the Confederates had just put the torch to it last night.

Or at least it seems that way to one who arrived in the city this morning, coming into the same train station that has served Atlanta in its dingy way since the railroads first came into Georgia.

It is funny to walk across the old tracks of the station and to realize that this is the same station that was a Confederate hospital in the civil war as so vividly depicted in Gone With the Wind. It doesn't look as if they have changed it much and the people of the city will tell you they haven't changed a thing except to build the stone station house that serves as a gateway to the city.

Train stations as a whole aren't very pretty and even with the coming of the Diesel engines, they aren't much cleaner. You don't get much of the feeling of the Old South coming into Atlanta that way unless you get it from the blood stains in the yards the red caps say date back to the bloody battle of the Civil War.

Maybe one has no right to look for the Old South at all. Perhaps it is an era that is gone and outgrown and just isn't among the present signs of the times.

Atlanta certainly has outgrown it. It has the definitely commercial look with the hardness of an era of big business. Even its newspapers are that way. There are two large ones—the Constitution—"Georgia Owned, Edited, and Operated"; and the Journal which "Covers Dixie Like the Dew." Both papers remind one of the tabloids of New York. They reach for the sensational, for what purpose one can't quite tell, since one is a morning paper and the other an afternoon, eliminating the possibility of circulation wars.

You can read the front page of either and you can't find much meat to feast the eyes upon. There are a great deal of pictures that don't seem to merit their large size anymore than the daily headlined story seems to need a string of large type across the top of the page. It takes you a week in Georgia to get accustomed to reading either of them. It would take a year to become accustomed to Georgia politics.

The best feature in either paper is an editorial column in the Constitution by associate editor Jack Tarver, presenting short comments on the happenings of the day. Yesterday, Tarver suggested the Democratic platform was for "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of the Republicans." Today, he suggests if the Democrats can't draft Eisenhower, they might call for volunteers. He adds, "If there's any optimism in the air, it's because of the poor ventilation." Tarver is the most read thing in Atlanta these days next to the thermometer, and most people turn to him before the funny papers. Tarver concludes today that "the Democratic party is Harried."

Atlanta, being the capital, is, of course, in the center of the current race for governor, an office which seems to be cherished dearly in this state. Politics in Georgia are different from North Carolina; down here they play at them harder and rougher than we do at home. Politically, Georgia is ultramodern—they have two machines instead of one.

One vehicle belongs to the present acting Governor, M. E. Thompson, who seems to be the candidate that the open mind would probably choose. His opponent is the fiery son of the late Eugene Talmadge who goes by the name of Herman. The state is split over the two as it was when both declared themselves governor less than two years ago. Neither man is very capable for the job as good Georgia governors go. Thompson, who wandered in out of the rain like Truman, is running on his squatter's right. Herman's certainly no Dewey and there's no one who refuses to be drafted.

But Georgia peaches are still wonderful!

Newsboys Lose

Keep Your Wooden Nickels

By Pete Gerns

The newspaper boys at Lenoir Hall are losing approximately 50 cents a day on their papers. Jim Williams, who handles the Charlotte Observer, Raleigh News and Observer, Greensboro Daily News, and Durham Morning Herald, tells us that bus tokens, Canadian and other foreign coins, buttons, and even fragments of records are being deposited daily in his money boxes.

If we were told about such practices at another school, we'd probably be inclined to shrug our shoulders and tell the newsboys that that's the chance they're taking. When we realize that this has been going on for some time on our campus, we feel that we must take the matter more seriously. When a student signs up for training in this institution he is required to sign a pledge stating that he will follow the Honor Code: not to lie, cheat or steal. He agrees to this because it's part of his education which many of the students here earnestly seek.

Last quarter, when the newsboys at Lenoir hall were using cigar boxes and letting customers make their own change, the shortage amounted to an average of $1.00 a day. Several times 90 per cent of the money would be gone, and in one instance the entire box was taken.

Since the boys were operating at a loss, they had to install metal boxes at the beginning of this term. Sealed cigar boxes which are sometimes still used have been broken into numerous times, and on two occasions attempts have been made to pry open the locks on the metal containers.

Supposedly honest Carolina students have been observed putting pennies into the boxes for a five-cent paper, and dropping nickels for a Sunday issue.

Let's call a halt to these nefarious practices. Let's stop a minute and put ourselves into the newsboys' place. They want to make an honest living by hard work (and don't think peddling papers is a soft occupation). They are doing their utmost in giving us proper and timely service. What little they earn, they have well earned.

This writer appeals to your fairness and inherent honesty. If you want to get a paper, don't read it at the stand, fold it, tear it, and perhaps put it back on the wrong pile. PUT A NICKEL IN THAT BOX!

Speaking for the customer: The new Wilkinson Dry Shaver, manufactured by the Wilkinson Sword Co., Ltd., "by appointment Sword Cutlers to H. M. King George VI," may be the answer to the prayer of every bearded male. It shaves without soap, uses no water or electricity, needs no chemicals, blades, or honing. It is said to work well in bed, on the bus, or in the class room.

The razor has a curved shaving surface, slotted to receive hairs. Rocking the razor causes an inner head to shear off hairs. If for some reason you must shave without water or electricity, it may be worth the gamble—if you can get one with a money-back guarantee.

The Food and Drug Administration has charged Kathryn, Inc., manufacturers of hormone cream, with misnaming their "NuYouth" since the name created the impression that the cream is effective in renewing the attributes of youth in the mature users when in fact it does no such thing. The product is being replaced with "Kathryn Hormone Creme," which presumably will be characterized by much the same size, shape, and contents.

The House Party Is Over

By Violet LaRue

Down at the local cinema this past week there appeared a short consisting of two "flashbacks" into the movie industry's earlier days. To the delight and enlightment of the "troops" the "flashbacks" concerned a chaste girl being chased and an innocent debutant at the mercy of a dastard (you read the word correctly). And the public thought their censors were too strict!

But to skip the chatter about the "light and fancy free," we are reminded that exam time is here. This means that it is time to stop scratching those chigger bites and start scratching some sense into our baked brains. To the young coed who is taking only one course (archeology by name) and the young Carolina gentleman who is loaded, with courses, (Commerce 72 and Business Law by name) the advice "No Arboretumology" is hereby issued—if the gentleman would like to pass his exams. The Six Weeks House Party is over as of this week-end for some coeds. Too bad that exam time had to spoil the end of a blooming romance, but school will be school—college, that is. To those of you who have been drudging along, just hang on kids; Carolina will still be here next term.

By the way, if you acquired any red bugs (more commonly called chiggers) on any recent parties, a trip to the pool will cure your ailment. One two hour dip in that swimming pool will cure anything! Including athletes foot.

Books are open; radios are turned off; telephones have stopped ringing; and you can't even find a fourth for a friendly game—in fact you can't find a second. Carolina ain't what she used to be. Hard times have come! Favorite Carolina campus haunts are deserted. There is no more last minute lingering around the front and back doors of the women's dorms; instead there is a hurried—"Good night, good luck, and it's been fun" routine. Oh, well, you can't make time all the time. But can you blame one for trying?

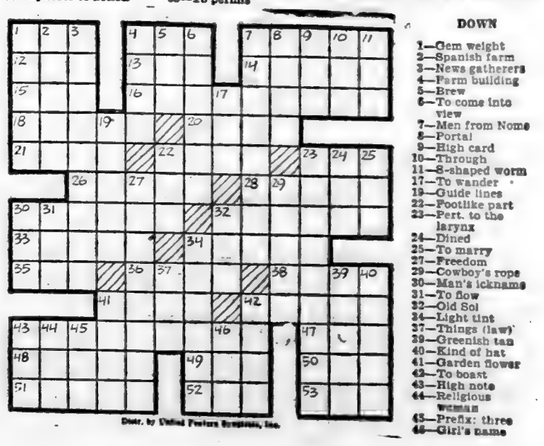
To those of you who won't be back next term, we're bidding you goodbye—but not for long. We'll be looking forward to seeing you in there rooting for Carolina at Kenan Stadium next fall. To the Six Weeks House Party gals we say s'long till next summer. It has been great having you here and we hope to see your refreshing faces around next summer.

Campus Fashions

Comfort Is The Keynote

Skirts are longer, hair is shorter, but the blue jean parade marches on in the same old way. These are the main points that make the hit parade of fashion preferences on college campuses in a survey made recently by Women's Wear Daily. Sweaters, too, rate as essential, but at some schools their popularity is waning. Trousers still are important factors in the campus wardrobe—jeans for every day wear, augmented by shorts and pedal pushers; slacks at some schools. Ski pants are universal for cold weather wear. "We go to class in jeans; we go to the dining room in skirts," is the theme song that expresses what "they wear" most graphically.

The skirt story as told by students at Smith, Vassar, Sarah Lawrence and some of the coed colleges classifies the longer, fuller skirt as well liked but confined to wear for dates, dinner and dress-up. The consistent demand for a slim skirt that can be worn on campus and to classes indicates that the college crowd still puts comfort and practicality first. (Long, full skirts get caught in bicycle wheels and trail on classroom floors.) Slim gored skirts with easy fulness are asked for repeatedly. Black faille, smooth lightweight woolen, dark plaids and corduroy have been the past season favorites—and these can go on as a success story for fall, most of the girls agree.



Pretty blouses with short puff sleeves and off-shoulder necklines, with bertha ruffles, and heavy crochet type lace have been pets with girls at Smith and Vassar. Long sleeved, quaint-looking blouses in batiste or fine count cotton, with square ruffled or tucked yokes also are in top favor.

The "separate jacket" which was once the mainstay of every college wardrobe, is no longer evident; and the logical question becomes, "what kind of jacket do you want as replacement?" Girls still wear their old prep school blazers in dark color flannel, and they are still partial to white tweed boyish jackets and fine whale corduroy classic jackets, but the jacket as a "must" has lost it favored place.

Grads Take Two From Mangum To Win Mural Softball Crown

With The TAR HEELS

By Dick Jenrette

Since the nomination of Kerr Scott as the Democratic candidate for Governor of North Carolina, State College sports fans have been wearing broad smiles from ear to ear. One reason is that Scott was quoted during the campaign as saying that one of his first objectives would be to complete the Coliseum on the campus of the Raleigh school. That massive structure was first undertaken in 1943, and there has been little progress made toward its completion since the first year.

Scott is a State alumnus and doubtless will stick by his campaign promise. Incumbent Governor Gregg Cherry actually beat him to the punch by authorizing the expenditure of funds necessary for its completion. At this moment, only a handful of workers are at work on the Coliseum. However, with Scott in line for the governorship, State fans are confident the task will be completed by the 1950 season.

Perhaps then the State students and alumni will no longer voice their persistent claims that Carolina receives most of the money appropriated by the State Legislature for colleges.

Possible Intersectional Doubleheaders

There is a definite need at Carolina for an indoor field house that has a larger seating capacity than Woollen Gym. But Tar Heel supporters should bear no resentment over State's receiving its indoor stadium first. Everett Case, State basketball mentor who has done much toward the betterment of the brand of ball in this State, has stated that on the completion of the Coliseum, he will schedule doubleheaders between local teams and strong intersectional outfits that will visit Raleigh. For example State might meet Southern California in one game, with Carolina engaging NYU in the second game. This billing certainly would fill the structure to its 15,000 capacity.

Such a plan, if followed, would go a long way toward making North Carolina more basketball conscious.

The Coliseum will have the largest seating capacity of any similar structure in the South. This fact will create at least one change in the current basketball procedure in the Southern conference—that being the return in 1950 of the loop's annual tourney to Raleigh from its current site in Duke's Indoor Stadium in Durham.

And there is a possibility that the Coliseum's size will lure the annual NCAA basketball tourney for the national championship to North Carolina. The NCAA voted recently to rotate the site of the event over the nation instead of playing it in New York each year. Washington, out on the West Coast, will be host to the tourney in 1948. The South may be in line for 1950.

One Raleigh newspaperman, Neale Patrick, of the Raleigh Times, suggested that Raleigh put in a bid for the tourney, assuming that the Coliseum is ready. The Capital City certainly is the logical site, and if North Carolinians make known their desire to play hosts to the NCAA, the 1950 tourney conceivably may be played here.

A Word from Our Pros

Jim Kelly, cleanup batter on Carolina's NCAA baseball team this spring, has had rough going thus far in becoming used to the pitching in the Tri-State League, where he plays centerfield for Charlotte. Jim writes us that he is hitting only .200 and is disappointed with himself. He continues, "The pitching here isn't much better than the Big Four, although it's predominantly lefthanded." Being a lefthanded batter himself, Kelly has always found southpaws a little difficult to hit. Charlotte has six lefthanded batters in its lineup, and opposing managers always make an effort to pitch a lefthander against them.

Jim says he had a card from Vinnie DiLorenzo, the ace pitcher on the 1948 Carolina baseball team and now a pro with Trenton, of the Class B Inter-State League. Vinnie also is having his bumps. He was knocked out in his first start.

Mrs. Page Ousts Girl Champion In Southern Play

Nashville, Tenn., July 14.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, retiring president of the Southern Women's Golf association, eliminated the North Carolina girls' champion, Billie Praether of Mt. Airy, 5 and 4 here today, as the Southern Women's golf tournament followed the form chart at Belle Meade club.

Along with Mrs. Page, Medalis Margaret Gunther of Memphis and Curtis Cup star Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., were listed as the favorites advancing into the quarter-final round in a comparative group.

Miss Gunther eliminated Mrs. Debow Sparks of Nashville 4 and 3, while Miss Riley ousted Betty Rushing of Eldorado, Ark., 6 and 4.

Taylor Beaten

Chicago, July 13. —(AP)—Tom Brown Jr., of San Francisco led the seeded players into the third round of the national clay court championships today.

Other results included:

Clark Taylor, New Haven, Conn., defeated Norm Bickel, Oak Park, Ill., 7-5, 6-3. (First round).

Herb Flam, Beverly Hills, Calif., defeated Clark Taylor, New Haven, Conn., 6-4, 7-5. (Second round).

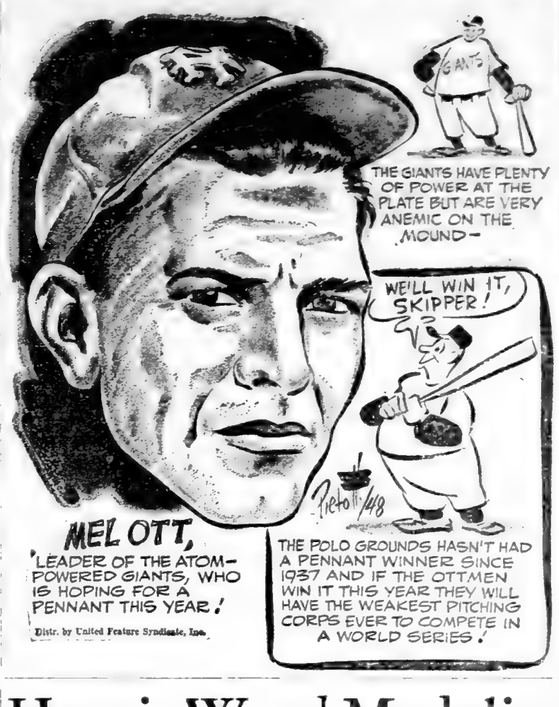
Taylor Thorne Hurls Two Three Hitters To Star For Winners

The Grads made use of some good pitching and some solid hitting to hang two straight defeats on Mangum in taking the intramural softball title this week.

Taking advantage of the three hit hurling of Taylor Thorne the winners had no trouble in capturing the opening game of a best two out of three set on Monday by 10-1. They came right back the next day and though not as potent at the plate they still won by a comfortable margin, 4-1. Thorne repeated with another three-hitter.



In the golf pitching contest Algernon Zollicoffer of Grimes took the first prize of a dozen new golf balls by scoring a total of 61 points. Warren Wilson of the Lambda Chi's and Claude Canaday also of Grimes tied for runner-up honors by scoring 58. It was decided to match for the second prize of four golf socks with the loser receiving six new golf balls. R. S. Kittrell who came in fourth with 54 won four new golf balls. Through the entrance was not too large, competition was keen and it is expected that another contest will be held next year.

Dr. A. M. Johnson of the Education department and Tom Southerland stroked their way to the closed doubles crown in the tennis world. Previously Ray Morris won the open singles title, Morris and John Kenfield, Jr., who conducted the tennis tournaments, took the open doubles honors, and Las Dameron captured the closed singles championship.

The horseshoe awards were won by Marshall Spears of Grimes in the individual division and Skeets Baldwin and Kay Winecoff SPE's, in the doubles play.

Plans have already been made for the second session program. The entry deadlines are as follows: softball, July 29; tennis, July 31; and horseshoes, August 3. Tentative plans have also been laid to hold bait-casting and archery competition. All entries can be made by getting in touch with the intramural office, room 311 Woollen gym. Phone F-3321.

A Man of Power But No Pitching

Harvie Ward Medalist In Charlotte Playoff

Charlotte, July 14 — Harvie Ward, Jr., of Tarboro, University of North Carolina student and North-South amateur champion, won medal honors here today in the Carolinas Amateur Golf Tournament when he defeated Emory Harper of Columbia and Frank Edens of Lumberton in an 18-hole playoff.

The three players tied for medal honors in Tuesday's qualifying round with one-under par 71's. However Ward was the smoothest of the three today to come through with another 71, while Harper had a 74 and Edens a 77. Edens, the 18-year-old high school grad from Lumberton, has been the tournament surprise so far. Having never played the course before the youngster whizzed around as if he knew it by heart.

Most of the favorites won first round matches today as the championship field was cut to 16 players. Defending champion Billy Joe Patton Morganton. Ward, Harper, Edens and former champion Jimmy McNair of Aiken led the advance into the second round. Two 18-hole rounds tomorrow will determine the four left for Friday's semifinals at the Charlotte Country Club.

In the first round champion flights, Patton defeated Rendlemen, Salisbury, 5 and 4. Ward defeated Blair, Winston-Salem, 7 and 6. Harper defeated Varnes, Columbia, 3 and 1. Edens defeated Baker, Charlotte, 4 and 3.

McBryde Pitches Legion Two-Hitter As Locals Win

Second-round play in the Area One American Legion junior baseball race got underway here Wednesday when the Chapel Hill juniors posted a convincing 5 to 1 victory over Roanoke Rapids.

Louis McBryde, on the hill for the winners, checked the invaders on two hits, one a home run which accounted for Roanoke Rapids lone run of the ball game. McBryde fanned two and was never in danger after his mates provided him with a three-run lead in the opening round.

Bubber Mathews, Roanoke Rapids left fielder, cracked out a four-bagger in the second frame for the first hit off McBryde. The second and last hit off the Chapel Hill pitcher was a fluke singel by Messer in the eighth frame.

Russell Perry, Chapel Hill's slugging first baseman, sparked the winner's nine-hit attack when he slammed a round-tripper with a mate aboard in the first inning. Fenno McGinty accounted for the locals last two runs when he poled another four-bagger into deep left-center with a mate on in the sixth.

The Chapel Hill juniors will journey to Rockey Mount on Friday for its next contest and play at Wilson on Saturday.

Hayworth Signs Up

Jim Hayworth, co-captain and third baseman for Coach Bunn Hearn's Southern Conference baseball champions, is reported to have signed a contract with President Herb Brett of the Danville Leaf's earlier this week.

Former Freshman Cage Star Dies

Miami, Fla., July 14—John Lawson (Junior) Fields, 22, one of the greatest athletes ever developed at Miami Edison High School, died in a hospital here Monday.

Known for his brilliant football and basketball play from 1943 to 1945, Fields athletic ability won him a University of North Carolina scholarship and he became the first freshman to win a starting place on a Tar Heel basketball team.

After his freshman year, illness made it impossible for him to return to school.

FRANCES JOHNSON, above, will be one of the featured dancers at the University Dance Club's program to be presented in the Playmaker Theater August 1. Miss Johnson has appeared in other programs on the campus and is well known for her vivid interpretations of various Latin American dances.

Hooks, Johnson Dance Team To Be Featured In Program

The University Dance Group's concert to be held in the Playmaker theater August 1 will feature the dance team of Bill Hooks and Frances Johnson and selections by other performers well known on campus.

The program will include impressions of ballet in satire by Betsy Brunk and adagio dances by Edsel Hughes, performer of long standing with the Playmakers and professional work with the "Life With Father" company.

Bob MacDonald, a major in music, will present a piano interlude and will accompany special numbers. He is well remembered for his group of concert numbers on Miss Johnson's Spanish program during spring quarter.

Others working with the dance group are Edna Dooley, noted for parts in Laboratory theatre productions, Harriet Sanders, graduate art student, and Colbert Leonard, dancer from Sound and Fury and the Playmakers.

Bill Hooks, graduate student in history, danced with Miss Johnson in the concert last quarter.

'As You Like It' Tryouts To Be Monday Afternoon

The major production of the Carolina Playmakers for the second summer session will be "As You Like It." Tryouts for Shakespeare's pastoral comedy will be held in the Forest theater on Monday afternoon, July 26, from 4 to 6 p.m. The Forest theater is located opposite the Monogram club.

The show will be presented in the Forest theater Thursday and Friday nights, August 19 and 20. The production is being given in the outdoor theater in an effort to beat the heat. All members of the Chapel Hill community are invited to try out for "As You Like It," and since rehearsals will be held out of doors, weather permitting, they promise to be enjoyable.

Director Sam Hirsch has prepared a new streamlined version of this favorite Shakespearean comedy; placing the main emphasis on the fun and music of the show. "As You Like It" will be presented in two acts as a musical comedy. There are speaking parts for 17 men and 4 women. Some of the more familiar characters in the play are Rosalind and Orlando, the romantic leads; Jacques, the melancholy philosopher who presents the famous soliloquy about "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players . . ."; Touchstone, the clown; and Audrey, Touchstone's country love.

In case of rain Monday afternoon the tryouts will be held in Memorial hall at the scheduled time.

'Sisters' Tragedy' To Be Presented

To start off the second summer session the Dramatic Art department has announced "The Sisters' Tragedy" as the first of two plays to be presented in the Student Laboratory. The plays will be presented tonight at 8:30 in the Playmakers theater. There is no admission charge; the public is invited.

"The Sisters' Tragedy" was written by Richard Hughes, author of "The Innocent Voyage." George Bernard Shaw commented on this play by saying, "It is the finest one-act play ever written."

The play deals with a hide-bound, fanatically religious Welsh family and concerns the fate of the youngest sister, who murders her blind, deaf mute brother because she believes it will be better off for all of them if he is dead.

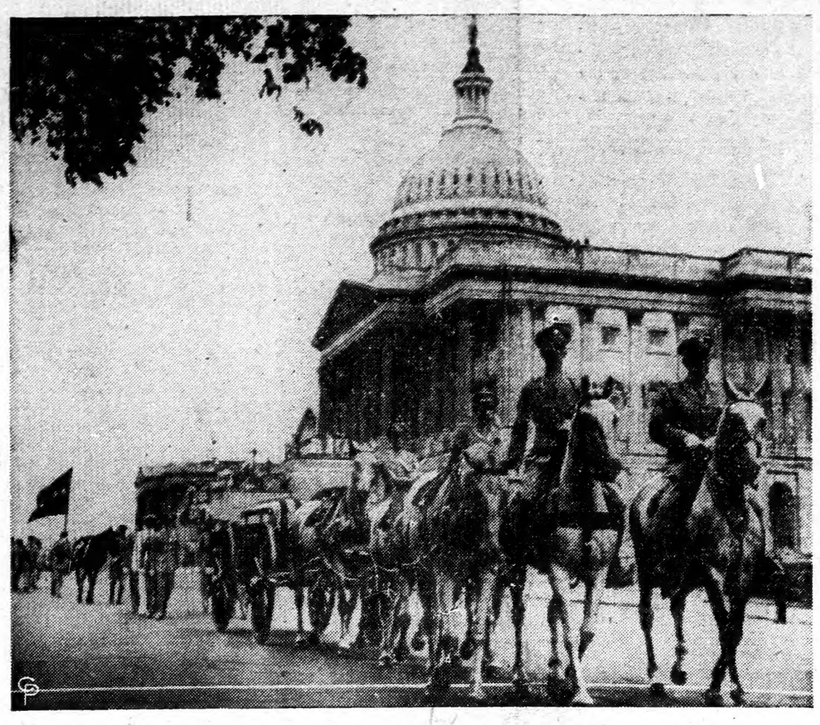
The cast includes Edna Dooley, Terrell Everett, Jane Myers, Charles Norton, and George Levine. Setting designed by James Riley. Stage manager is Ellen Smith. They play is directed by Bob Barr.

French House Ends Annual Activities

Everyone knows at least one phrase in French, even though it may be only "Parlez-vous Francaise?" But in the Maison Francaise, one speaks Francaise, or not at all!

In 1945 Prof. Hugo Giduz began the first Maison Francaise on the Carolina campus because he felt there was a need for oral work in a natural environment. Each summer, during the first six-week session, the house opens its doors to help teachers and prospective teachers of French gain proficiency in all phases of French in an atmosphere which is as French as can be simulated.

Women students live at the house and separate arrangements are made for the men. However, all must take their meals at the house and all must use French in communicating with each other and with their instructors. The staff at the house is composed of teachers of French, and the course carries regular undergraduate college credit. Emphasis is placed on the culture and the civilization of France, and a review of grammar.



In 1945, after attracting the attention of the French Embassy in New York, the house received from it numerous articles, magazines and books which were to facilitate the formation of an exhibit of materials on teaching French. In the same year officials of the American Relief for France granted a small sum to assist in entertaining French cadets who were studying at Carolina.

Last week, M. De Messieres, French cultural adviser at the New York consulate, spoke at the annual July 14 banquet, and on Sunday the house was officially closed for this year.

Prizes awarded by the French Embassy went to ten students. Anastacia Tomborine and John Grier both received medals for all-round citizenship for the six-week session. Books and magazines were awarded for superior work in various classes to Mrs. Dorothea Powers, Margaret Newhard, Anastacia Tomborine, Robert Clark, Jean Andrews, Grace M. Ellenberg, Otis Beeson, Maxalynn Mourane, and Nancy Derminer.

Student Party Meeting

The Student party will meet Tuesday night at 9 o'clock in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

There, as he had requested, he was buried in the company of heroes he had commanded in World War I. Preregistration Set for August 9

Preregistration for fall quarter will be held on August 9-10 and regular fall registration on September 21-23, according to an announcement yesterday by Edwin S. Lanier, director of Central Records office.

The preregistration dates will be available for those students who are attending the second term summer school and expect to return for the fall quarter.

Students failing to preregister in August will be permitted to register on the regular registration dates of September 21-23.

Dropping and adding of courses for the second summer session will continue through tomorrow, Lanier announced.

UNC Midshipmen Arrive in Hawaii

Ten days in Hawaii was uppermost in the minds of 90 University of North Carolina NROTC midshipmen as they went down the gangway yesterday of the sleek Cleveland Class cruiser, Astoria.

The Astoria, anchored in Pearl Harbor, has 355 NROTC midshipmen from seven universities aboard.

Yesterday morning the embryo naval officers on board these vessels for their annual summer training cruise, had no time to think of Hawaii liberty or dances. They had their hands full as they got their first real taste of full scale wartime exercises.

Kan, CCUN Summer State Head, Submits 'Berlin Plan' To AAUN

The North Carolina state division of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations concurred yesterday through their summer state director Lincoln S. H. Kan with the Executive Committee of their parent organization, the American Association for the United Nations, in asking that the Berlin crisis be submitted to the United Nations for action by the Security Council or the General Assembly.

Excerpts of the statement follow: "The Berlin crisis should be submitted to the United Nations upon the initiative of the United States if it becomes clear that direct negotiations provided under the Charter have broken down. The United States is in Berlin by perfectly legal right. It should stay there.

"The members of the United Nations are obligated under Article 37 to submit any such disputes to the Security Council if they have not been able to settle them by direct negotiations.

"One of the compelling reasons in submitting the Berlin dispute to the United Nations is that the history of the United Nations shows, the collective judgment of many states furnishes not only the force of public opinion in demanding a settlement, but wisdom for the settlement. The crisis in Iran, Indonesia, Kashmir and Palestine, in all of which the UN Security Council was either able to secure a settlement or is in the

"The present firm position of the American government which must be maintained would in no way be lessened by the submission of this question to the UN in an effort to seek the full force of world opinion and judgment in this great crisis."

UN Security Council was either able to secure a settlement or is in the process of securing a settlement, show what the collective judgment of the members can accomplish.

New Polio Case Brings Total To Seven For Orange County

'Dog Days' Are Ended For Trailer Dwellers

Dog days came to an end for trailer court dwellers Wednesday morning. At a meeting called by Dean Fred Weaver at which Dr. O. David Garvin, district health officer, Dr. E. McG. Hedgpeth, University physician, and P. L. Burch, manager of the trailer court, were present, it was decided that the cats and dogs in the area were a menace to health and sanitation and should be disposed of.

Dr. Garvin said that in his opinion the animals created a definite health hazzard and that some rule prohibiting the keeping of pets in the area should be made and enforced. Some of the dog owners present at the meeting asked if there could be a rule that permitted them to keep their pets provided that they kept them penned up. Dr. Garvin said that in his opinion such a rule would be unworkable since some of the people did not want to do that. "Besides," he added, "where ever there are dogs there is a tendency for strays to collect and who would take care of them?"

Dr. Hedgpeth said that he agreed with Dr. Garvin and they recommended to Dean Weaver that the pets be disposed of. Dean Weaver said that since the doctors considered the pets as potentially dangerous to the health and sanitation of the residents in the court they would have to be got rid of. Weaver said that the dormitory rule with regard to the keeping of pets might have to be enforced in the trailer court. This rule makes it a condition that no resident of a dormitory shall be permitted to keep a pet on University property.

Visiting Approved For Coed Students

A number of fraternities were approved by the Dean of Women and House Privileges Board yesterday for coed visiting rules during second term summer school, according to an announcement by Katherine Carmichael, dean of women.

The approved fraternities are: Alpha Tau Omega, Chi Phi, DKE, Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Lambda Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Beta Tau, Zeta Psi.

Jack Girard, acting president of the Interfraternity Council, said yesterday that all fraternities who have not turned in applications to have coed visitors should do so as soon as possible.

Fraternity houses will be open for coed visiting only in the event that presiding officers submit statements desiring same.

Zionist Leader To Talk on Israel

Mrs. E. J. Evans of Durham, past president of Hadassah, the Zionist womans medical organization of Durham, will speak to the Baptist Student Union at the Baptist Church Sunday July 25. Dinner will be served at 6:00 o'clock and will be followed by a March of Time movie on Palestine, after which Mrs. Evans, who is an authority on Israel, will discuss the Zionist Movement. All are welcome, and a special invitation is extended to members of the Hillel Foundation.

Health Officers List Symptoms of Disease In New Fact Sheet

By Leonard Dudley

Orange county conuted its seventh case of polio on Tuesday when Mildred Louise Thompson, 3-year-old, of Hillsboro was admitted to Duke hospital for treatmen. Of these seven cases, six are in the vicinity of Chapel Hill, according to Dr. O. David Garvin, district health officer.

When asked about the symptoms of the disease Dr. Garvin said that there was, "no one symptom that can be singled out as being characteristic of polio; it may be anything from fever to a common cold."

According to Dr. Charles Armstrong of the U. S. Public Health Service, it has been demonstrated that approximately 71 per cent of the adult population have had poliomylitis experience without having known about it. "This means that 71 per cent of the adult population have developed some immunity to the disease," Dr. Garvin said. "According to Dr. Philip Stimpson, Specialist with the National Foundation for Infantile paralysis, it is estimated that for every 1,000 persons exposed to the disease, 45 will have the disease in such mild form that it will be disregarded or passed by as a minor illness. Only 3 persons of the 1,000 will have enough symptoms to be diagnosed. Of these 3 cases only one case will have any type of residual paralysis," he added.

The most common symptoms, according to a fact sheet distributed by the health department, are restlessness, drowsyness, and fever." A person may become irritable and not want to be moved. He may vomit once or twice and complain of headache or pain in the back or the back of the neck. He is likely to be constipated or may have diarrhea; he may develop a sore, stiff neck and spine and pains in the back, arms and legs. Paralysis or stiffening of the extremities may or may not occur," the fact sheet says.

Sina Spiker Joins UNC Press Staff

Miss Sina Spiker has rejoined the staff of the University of North Carolina Press and will be in editorial charge of the University Record and Special Catalogues, work which had been handled until July 1, 1948, by John Fries Blair, Miss Porter Cowles, Acting Director of the Press, announced today.

DTH to Discontinue For Second Session

This issue of the Daily Tar Heel will be the last one published during the summer, Ed Joyner, editor and a member of the Publications Board, said yesterday.

Joyner made the announcement after having conferred with the Publications Board and with Orville Campbell, owner of Colonial Press, Inc., which prints the paper.

"There is so little activity on the campus this summer that the need for a newspaper is not commensurate with the cost of publication," Joyner said in explaining why the paper would cease publishing.

"The fact that the Daily Tar Heel has been operating with a skeleton staff this summer and that several staff members did not return for the second term was also a factor in the decision," he added.

During the first summer session the paper was published twice a week as is customary during the summer. This is the second year that publication has been suspended during the second term. Last year a shortage of newsprint caused the stoppage.

Plans are already being completed to resume publication of the Daily Tar Heel on the first day of classes in the fall, the editor said.

"With the return of a regular staff and daily issues we expect to have the best college newspaper in the country," he stated.

Southern Historical Collection Gives Insight To South's Past

By R. W. Madry & Owen Lewis

For generations cautious students of history have observed that the South has been misrepresented and in some instances even slandered by the writers of American history.

Many intelligent Southerners have been wont to complain, and with justification, that New England has been played up so persistently that many Americans really believe that the Revolution was begun, fought and won there; and that from that section have come most of the important personages in our history.

The same thing is true, in lesser degree, of the West. Both sections have been investigated and written about until, together, they seem of dominating importance. They do loom large in American history, but in comparison with the two other sections, particularly the South, unbiased observers would doubtless agree they don't deserve the proportionate space and credit accorded them.

Why Such Neglect?

Why is this so? The South has lived a life—social, economic, industrial, political—as distinctive as that of any other section. It has played a part in national history second to none of the others. Its contribution of leaders, particularly in the realm of politics, has been impressive. Why has it not attracted the attention of historical investigation to the same extent as the other sections? Why do we know infinitely more of the rather dull and austere life of New England than we do of the more colorful South?

The answer, in brief, is that the South has been indifferent about preserving its records—both private and public. From an early date, the Southern people have shown a striking disregard of the importance of records.

Dr. Hamilton's Plan

This appalling situation might have continued indefinitely but for the courage, wisdom, and indefatigable energy of one man, Dr. J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton, who 25 years ago conceived the plan for a Southern Historical Collection, where material from 14 Southern states—North and South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Maryland, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Kentucky and Missouri— might be gathered in one place, in a fireproof building, and made easily accessible to students and investigators of history from all over the world.

There was already in the Library an excellent nucleus for such a Collection. Under the leadership of Governor David L. Swain, then president of the University, the North Carolina Historical Society was formed in 1844 for the purpose of gathering all available material relating to North Carolina. Prior to the Civil War, a great deal of such material was gathered, but, with the war, Governor Swain's death and the closing of the University, much of it was lost. A nucleus of the collection remained, however, and once the University again opened its doors, additions were made. These additions included the unique body of North Carolina the library of the department of rural social science, and the Kenan Collection on the Civil War.

University Trustees Back Plan

The University trustees were so favorably impressed with Dr. Hamilton's plan that in 1930 they voted to establish the Southern Historical Collection and relieved him of administrative duties so that he could devote more time to the project.

Even so, as someone has said, Dr. Hamilton had at the time little more than "faith and a shoestring" with which to work. Undertaking a job on which thousands of dollars were needed at the outset, he had to depend mainly on the contributions of a few friends and an A-model Ford that could climb the steepest red hill in Dixie.

He began scouring the South for the invaluable materials that now comprise the Southern collection—for every kind of book, pamphlet, manuscript, photo, letter, diary, and public and private record of any sort that would shed light on the past and present of the South.

The material began to trickle in at first, and it was not until after Dr. Hamilton had spent considerable time in the field assuring the prospective contributors that it began to come in any substantial volume.

Much in Cellars and Garrets

A great deal of the material was found in musty cellars, dusty garrets, in storage rooms, outhouses, and public buildings. Most of it had little or no money value and its owners, as often as not, were unaware of its existence.

Many valuable documents, Dr. Hamilton found, had already been destroyed by fire or rats or by housewives bent on the ceaseless task of destroying "trash."

It was a tremendous job, but deRoulhac Hamilton was not to be discouraged. Taking a page from the book, so to speak, of his great grandfather, James Hamilton, who served as the nullification Governor of South Carolina, Dr. Hamilton heeded a choice bit of advice which Governor Hamilton is credited with handing out: "He who dallies is a dastard; he who delays is damned." Thus forewarned, he plunged his tireless energy and unrelenting perserverance into the overwhelming task that confronted him.

Three Million Items Today

Today the Southern Historical Collection numbers at least three million items, representing 2309 different collections that each contain from one to 150,000 items. An immense amount of other material has also been promised, either in wills or agreements.

Dr. Hamilton has lived to witness his own immortality, for the Collection is a fitting monument to the man who conceived the plan and gave to its development 25 of the best years of his life.

Dr. Hamilton Retiring

Dr. Hamilton has just retired as director of the Southern Collection for, although still active and vigorous and looking younger, he has reached the age of 70, the limit set by University trustees for active service.

But the work of fthe Southern Historical Collection will go on for, although an enormous amount of material has been assembled, Dr. Hamilton feels that the surface has hardly been scratched. His successor is one of his former University students, Dr. James W. Patton, another authority on Southern history, who recently resigned as head of the N. C. State College History Department to take the job at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Hamilton has been connected with the University for 42 years. An authority on the Reconstruction period and con-

It's Hot So What

(It's hot. Sure it's hot. But it hasn't always been. There was a time when it snowed. It also rained. It was cool. We cussed that too. Just to remind you of the good old days, here's a reprint of a little gem Bob Sain wrote back in January.)

Nasty weather outside these past few days, hunh?

Mud. Lots of it. Red, brown, yellow. All colors.

Now and then we think it might be a good idea to write an editorial recommending the abolition of mud but as we pointed out up there about half an inch ago mud is sometimes red and we got to look out for witch hunts.

Oh, well. Maybe it'll stop raining sometime soon.

(I guess you never had to write an editorial when you didn't have any eternal truths to tell, hunh? Well, it isn't easy.)

It may not be important but this is the tenth anniversary of Thomas Wolfe's death and the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Communism.

We know an English prof who likes Wordsworth. The other day he read us a poem, glowed for a minute and then cooed: "Now isn't that just like bright sunlight on a summer evening?"

We find that sometimes the DTH makes boners, too. For instance, from Tuesday's paper: "A man who sells gazoa also sells gelida (ice cream). But in you take a lump but of the re-truth a gazoz seller never feels quite at home selling ice cream. white fluid, the red fluid, the There is more art in mixing the yellow fluid, and the gaz which go into the miking of a glass of frigerator, stick it on a biscuit and there you are. And you have got your teeth well into it before your face is a dripping mass of slush."

It sure is.

Then on the same day, on the same page, John K. B. McDowell says, in discussing Alban Berg's opera, "I sincerely believe that my father's black spats worn with his dinner jacket created a more favorable and lasting impression . . ."

We wish to point out that anybody's father, wearing only black spats and a dinner jacket, could create, if not a favorable, at least a lasting impression.

Come on up and write an editorial sometime. Hunh? —B.S.

For The New 25

In the first edition of the paper at the beginning of a new term, the Daily Tar Heel usually carries an editorial welcoming new students to Chapel Hill and explaining the "Carolina way of life." This term, only some 25 new students are expected here in addition to some who are regular students or who have been to the Village before.

Despite this small number, however, we feel it important to explain the Carolina "freedom." A freedom that allows organizations of all sizes and shapes to exist. The most famous of these are the Communists and the Wallace club. They are famous only because they are unusual and make better news copy. At one time, in addition to the Wallace-for-president group, we also had a Stassen and an Eisenhower group in existence. We are anticipating the formation of a "Thurmond-for-president" organization as soon as more students return in the fall. In addition to our Communist friends, we have the Carolina Conservative Club, the Young Democrats and the Young Republicans, but these groups are not being publicized and condemned as are the Communists, so it is seldom they rate any mention in state papers.

We would like for all the new people on the campus to investigate and learn about the many stories, rumors and just plain bull that they've been hearing oh, these many months about Chapel Hill. We are convinced that the new people will come to like and respect Carolina and it's freedom as much as we do.

We'd like to know that the 25 new students here will take an interest in the life around themselves and go away from Chapel Hill with a fresh, accurate impression of our way of life.—B.B.

Chapel Hill is a fine place, but everybody needs a vacation once in a while. Buchan's girl is here and he wants the rest of the summer to have a good time. Gallagher is flunking Spanish and he needs to study. Holden is disgusted and he's going home. I'm broke, so I'm going home, too. Goodby.

Convention

Great Act At Philly

By Bob Hennessee

The Missouri Waltz was being played. Twenty-two thousand people were standing. Flags were waving and banners were hanging. Alabama was walking out and Truman was walking in.

That was the picture of Convention Hall 2 a. m. Thursday July 15. And those who were there will never forget it, will never forget the greatest "act" ever staged. With all Hollywood's great actors they have never in the past and never shall in the future put on a performance that is equal to the "great show" of the Democrats of '48.

Only those who were there will ever know the real story of the "great show" will ever know of the emotional thoughts that seemed to protrude from the eyes of the delegates, the alternates, the pages, the ushers, and from those in the galleries. It was the greatest exhibition of loyalty since Caesar and Anthony.

As Truman walked out towards the speaker's platform Jimmy Roosevelt raised his head and looked up at the picture of his father which was hanging above the rostrum. Then he began singing and tears fell from his eyes. A man standing behind me was singing as loud as his aged lungs would allow but like most everyone else he was singing for the radio, the television, the newsreel cameras, and to the memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt. A little kid who was sitting in front of me looked up at his mother and asked why the "great man" wasn't going to be there; and a man beside me was mumbling to himself "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Everyone joined-in in the singing and cheering. Everyone, for a few minutes at least, had forgotten the pre-convention hope, which was hope against hope, of casting Truman to the wayside. Emotion was at an all-time high.

Truman, with his speech, made the people believe, if only for a short time, that he could and would win the election in November. But this distilled emotion soon subsided when the final cheers had ended and everyone began spreading out over the huge city—in the fresh air. There were those who went to the hotel-room parties and kept on laughing, singing and getting drunk. Then there were those who wanted to relax and think—and maybe get a little sentimental with themselves. These people went to the many dimly-lighted bars and found a seat in a corner and sipped at a martini or a highball until the sun began piercing through the alleys between the tall buildings, and then it was time—time to pack that grip and all those memories and head for Centerville, Iowa, Hoboken, Kansas, or Chapel Hill, North Carolina—time to put conventions and speeches aside and go home.

Dwight D. Eisenhower will not be president of the United States for the next four years, but it isn't because a man named Marty Snyder didn't work. Snyder was Eisenhower's old mess sergeant, and with a jeep and a loudspeaker he kept the name Eisenhower on the minds of thousands of people who got anywhere near the Belview-Stratford hotel. For three days and two nights Snyder never stopped shouting the name of the retired chief of staff.

Charlie Hodson, University student, stumped Snyder when he asked how the General felt about FEPC, civil rights, and other domestic problems, but the sergeant went on with his fight until police finally carried him off to jail—for disturbing the peace.

Leading Problem

Spirit Doesn't Pay Bills

(Bob Morrison, editor of the Daily Tar Heel in 1945-1946, is now an instructor in English at the University of Illinois. Returning here for a visit, he has written the following guest column which graphically points up what is probably the most pressing problem of our university at the present time—that of an underpaid faculty.)

By Robert Morrison

A Carolina student happened to mention recently to an Indianapolis editor the salary a professor received here and the amount of our appropriation from the legislature.

"Are you sure you're talking about Chapel Hill?" the editor exclaimed. "Why, the University of North Carolina is the place with the wonderful press, the source of so much scholarship, and the best rated university in the South! How can it be that a full professor could be receiving $5,000 or less?"

Dr. George Stoddard, (the president of the University of Illinois who addressed the Carolina student body last summer) frankly asked the Illinois legislature for $70,000,000 last year—and furthermore, he got it! He later decided that seventy million more was needed for a special building program—and he is going to get that, too!

Biennial appropriations three and four times the amount allotted the Greater University of North Carolina are not uncommon for a great host of state universities.

As the Indianapolis editor said, our press is world famous. About two years ago its editor, Terry Couch, was being paid $6,000 annually for operating the best university press in the South. Now he is earning in excess off $12,000 as director of the University of Chicago Press.

A trustees' report (printed in full in a recent issue of the Alumni Review) resolved the problem to an unmistakeable conclusion: Either the University of North Carolina must pay its staff salaries proportionate to the other great universities of America, or Carolina will cease to be one of the great universities of America.

Many people ask such questions as these: "How has Carolina been able to keep as many first class professors as it has? How have we been able to maintain our good national reputation this long?"

There are several answers to these questions. In the first place, Chapel Hill offers professors a number of advantages not found at every state university. Chapel Hill offers what the economists call "psychic income." The community is small and friendly, the people are interesting and progressive, and last (but perhaps not least) the cost of living is lower than in many university communities (hard to believe, but true!). Another answer to these questions and a reason for Carolina's national respect lies in the courageous liberalism of Chapel Hill's student body, faculty, and townspeople. This spirit brings suspicion and misunderstanding from many Bilboish dark corners of the state, but the intelligent and informed throughout the nation have high admiration for the Carolina spirit.

Unfortunately, an attractive village and a healthy spirit is not enough to maintain a first class American university for long.

Just Here

Sign Talk Beats Spanish

(Larry Berry is one of several Daily Tar Heel staff members spending the summer in foreign parts. From Mexico City he sends the following dispatch.)

By Larry Berry

Mexico City, July 12—From the seeming squalor of these streets rise some of the more striking examples of modern architecture making a city of extreme contrasts. These contrasts extend into all fields with special interest at present being Diego Rivera, his art and political views. Many young people of this city believe he is trying to pave the way for the masses when education reaches them and questions concerning the Roman Church arise. Most Mexicans relegate his art to a secondary position now and center the discussion on his political views. One seemingly intelligent Mexican told me that he thought Rivera to be the exemplification of the coming intelligentsia of Mexico. Of course this idea is not very prevalent in a country which has over ninety per cent of its population owing allegiance to the Vatican. Personally I believe his choice of color is usually good, but many times his art seems too massive in structure. As a politician he shows much bad judgment coupled with a sensationalist's martyr complex. He was much better when viewed from the United States than from here.

I am forever amazed at the felicity with which these six and seven year old Mexican children spout Spanish while we labor with it. Of course we comfort ourselves with the thought that the little Mexicans cannot speak English, but this is a dubious comfort. Mexico City operates on a bilingual system (Spanish-English), really tri-lingual if one wishes to include the ever valuable sign languages. Under this system many people receive the erroneous idea they can speak two languages when actually they cannot even speak one. This leads to mix-ups in bargaining (street bargaining being one of the major occupations of the population with tourists also indulging), social chatter, and direction giving. No one minds these mix-ups, but rather everyone seems to expect the obstructions.

Being a student, theoretically I have more time and better opportunities of seeing the country than most tourists have. The trouble is that "siesta time" keeps rearing its beautiful head and I fall into the habit. It is one of the most relaxing habits I have known and because of "siesta time" this travelogue comes to a halt for the present.

Cold Showers Might Help

By Violet LaRue

Overnight Carolina has gone Hollywood after the first showing of Arsenic City in "The Dude Goes West" at the local cinema. The old campus is practically a ghost town! After spending half the afternoon around Franklin Street Wednesday we counted approximately twenty Carolina inmates. Where has everyone gone?

The above plight of the Carolina Campus will last only a short while. By the time this is printed Carolina will be on its feet again (we hope) and off to a new term.

With the pools, the Rendezvous Room, and the Veterans Club closed because of the epidemic of Polio, Carolina Students will have to find some new hangouts in which to spend their spare time.

The suggestion has been proposed that showers be installed in all of the classrooms in order to improve the heat situation. Another suggestion has been made that all students be allowed to attend classes barefooted. Carolina males are all in favor of the proposed new ruling that they be allowed to attend classes shirtless. We are not sure whether this is to avoid the heat or to show off manly physiques.

In case you think that the Grass Loungers in front of BVP are loafing and wasting their time, you are mistaken. They are only resting. It seems that a lot of the attendants of Carolina are resting every afternoon and every night on the front porches of the girls' dorms and the lawns of said "homes." As one young gentleman remarked, "I think that I deserve a rest. I've been in this school for six years!" We think he needs a rest, too.

At the last Quiz Program at the Vets Club all one of the contestants could say was, "I want money." If you could have heard the fiendish laughter and wolfish gleams on the faces of the males present, you would have thought they were all starving to death. To tell the truth they were! Uncle Sam had not advanced them their $75 at that time. One contestant after she had been thoroughly coached by the audience and passed into the zone of contestant for the $50 jack pot, was finally asked the fateful question: Has the University ever closed its doors? To which the lady, after much heavy concentration, answered, "Yes." It was closed before it opened." The answer was that the University did close its doors in 1870 during the Reconstruction days following the Great War.

Exams were really a farce this past term. The more you wrote the messier it got until finally the exam book was a blur of melted ink.

Going into an exam was like self willed suicide. Turkish Baths have never hoped to have the heat that the classrooms had on the horrible days of July 19 and 20. How can you expect anyone short of a moron to exist in such heat . . . much less a normal Carolina student who is struggling to both exist and pass the course.

This morning the Campus Favorite George or Cobber, as he is known in the better circles, was seen stumbling along Franklin Street. We would like to request that the next time some Carolina party decides to take a hike or go on a walking party they please, not go so far that the poor dog can't even walk the next morning. We don't mind your sharing our dogs and inviting them to your parties, but don't wear them out . . . they're only canine after all!

It is with deepest sincerity and heartfelt gratification that we, the students of the great University of North Carolina thank South Building for the one day vacation between terms. We would like to know, before our tears of appreciation dry, CAN YOU SPARE IT?

Mardi Gras

Joe Miller Saved It

By Chuck Hauser

Why we enjoyed last weekend's Sound and Fury show is a hard thing to say. The show had its good points, but, like everything, it had its bad points, and the bad points of Author Pete Strader's "Mardi Gras" were deplorable.

A very few things saved the show. They were, first of all, an energetic couple named Tommy Thomas and Jane Hunter, next the disarming acting ability of Faith Adams, and the beautiful singing voice of Pat Ellis, who did brilliantly considering the material Composer Tread Covington gave her to work with. We think we'd like to hear her go to town on a little Cole Porter some time.

The Thomas-Hunter portrayal of a ham actor and his consort was the highlight of the show. Thomas, who got his chance to do another of his courtroom specialities (The first was back in "Gin Lane" days), came through admirably and deftly handled the whole book (Joe Miller) that Author Strader threw at him. Alternating with Miss Hunter as straight man and comedian, Thomas ran the gamut of all the old chestnuts that have been traipsing around the burlesque circuits, lo, these many years. The gleeful pair really put the book to shame as they went through their lines happily oblivious of the stuff the audience was having to bear.

Faith Adams in her role as the unmourning fiancee of a dead playboy delivered one of the best drunk scenes we have witnessed since we saw Ingrid Bergman in "Notorious." That gal can really act. We remember her from "Gin Lane" where she spent a full scene playing hide-and-seek around a tremendous bed with an amorous racketeer.

In case the show comes up for discussion over the breakfast table in Lenoir hall (God save you!) here's what it was all about: A New Orleans playboy is killed in an automobile wreck (while "driving along the levee," of all miraculous things. Where will they put roads in N. O. next?) and when he gets to the banks of the River Styx on his way to Hell, an offensive character by the name of Charon (well-played by James Riley) tells him he needs a dime to pay for the ferry ride. The playboy, Beauregard St. Charles (Colbert Leonard handled the part adequately), gets until the end of Mardi Gras (which is in progress) to get a dime—which must be given to him out of someone's love for him. So this vulgar and tiresome young boor returns to life to collect his just deserts. The rest of the story you can guess—they live happily ever after; it's too bad the show couldn't.

But in the interim, we hear some wonderfully-sung songs such as "Who Killed Vaudeville?" and "Rabbits," some marvelous voodoo dancing by a talented girl named Dusty Moore, and some jokes like "Was your neck broken?"—"No, but it was damn well interrupted!" and "Say when"—"Right after the next drink."

Oh yes, there was a girl named Ann Grainger who kept slinking around suggestively telling everyone, "I'm se-e-exy-y-y."

She wasn't.

Get Moving, Billy

Editor:

Somebody down in Atlanta has been handing Billy Carmichael III a lot of bunk. which just goes to show that if you must travel. you shouldn't believe everything you hear. If he arrived at the same station that was in "Gone With the Wind" he must have been riding the rods, because that place is now only a freight yard. And if he entered the same station that was used for a hospital during that "late unpleasantness," either he or his red-cap has the imagination of an Orson Welles. That station was torn down quite a few years back, and a new one built on the upper level just off Spring Street, not far from the Terminal Station. He could not possibly have taken a good look at either of the two stations, or the style of their architecture would have revealed one to belong to the 1890's and the other to the 1930's. But possibly he was too intrigued with the Georgia peaches to notice. Incidentally, he'd better not stay in Georgia too long this summer—doesn't he know that in a race for governor anyone named Carmichael isn't safe from the Talmadge machine?

Triple Threat Tailback Turns Into Judge Of Beauty Queens

(This column by Charlie Justice, Tar Heel football star turned beauty judge, is being reprinted by special permission of Smith Barrier, Sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News. Justice wrote it for the News while Smith was vacationing at the beach last week.)

By Charlie Justice

Wrightsville Beach, July 18.—For the first time in my life I'm beginning to understand how Gabe Hill felt after that Carolina Georgia Sugar Bowl game down in New Orleans. According to the newspapers and some 70-odd thousand fans who saw the game, Mr. Hill made but one glaring mistake.

Right now I feel that I've just finished making 25 serious errors. There were 26 of those North Carolina beauties, Smith, but there's no need to tell you that for you were there helping do the judging. And anyone of those 26 queens—well they rated "Miss North Carolina" in my estimation. But like the Jaycees told us, we could select but one and that we did. Beautiful wasn't she?

What a tough assignment that was, trying to select one out of that 26. Why, I'd rather try and carry a football through the Chicago Bears' line than have to go through it again. But just in case any of the Jaycees who invited me to help out this year might be reading this epistle I might add that I doubt that I'd turn down the opportunity to do it again next year.

Also I must admit that Miss North Carolina, while most attractive, still rates No. 2 with me. You've met No. 1, Smith. She's my wife, Sarah, a petite young lady with a twinkle in her eye, one who has contributed greatly to my success with the pigskin.

Let me talk about Sarah for a paragraph or two. All those newspaper clippings about the ability of the Tar Heels can have a funny effect on a young fellow like me. And when there are a lot of write-ups with comments about No. 22, I discover that my chest starts to swell just a little without my ever realizing it.

Sarah To The Rescue

This is where Sarah, bless her soul, comes to the rescue. She sees those things, and kinda puts me in my place, makes me realize that carrying a football for Carolina will not make a successful businessman. And then she usually points out that I'd better hit the books or there won't be anymore football.

It works from another angle. After those Texas and Wake Forest defeats last year, the student body and coaches and Tar Heel supporters got to feeling pretty low. Members of the football squad were even lower. They knew they had the makings of a great team, but something was missing.

That's when I needed Sarah most, and it was swell to go home at night and receive the assurance from her that everything would work out okay.

I could write you several columns about Sarah, but that would be just a little too personal for the readers of your fine column. But down here at Wrightsville I couldn't help but think about something that she has pointed out to me many, many times.

Selecting beauty queens and playing football is one and the same in the Justice family. You see down here we couldn't select but one queen, and she alone will receive all the pictures and headlines. But it wouldn't even have been a beauty contest if the other 25 girls hadn't put in their appearance.

It Takes Whole Team

The same holds true on a football field. The only criticism I've ever had of the fine sports writers of North Carolina is that they seem to forget those other 10 men on the Carolina eleven sometimes. And those other 10, well, they have to sweat and fight and scrap and block and tackle and run and pass and hustle—more often than not, a lot more than I do. The linesmen have to participate in every play while I carry the ball once or twice in a series of offensive plays.

I'm not trying to say that a tailback has it easy—no one does in this game of football—but I am saying that a lot of Carolina players take terriffic punishment Saturday after Saturday without getting the Sunday morning headlines.

This will probably be my first and last opportunity at newspaper columning, so I'd like to forget beauty queens and talk a bit of football just a line or two more. Those second, third and fourth stringers at the Hill take as much punishment as any of the rest of us, and the fans—unless they are personal friends—never even know their jersey numbers. Our football team will never be any better than the third or fourth stringers. If they don't furnish us tough competition during those practice sessions, we can't go out on Saturday and hold our own against teams like Duke and Georgia and Texas.

It took more than poise and beauty for Miss Patty Osbourne to be named Miss North Carolina. It took a bit of luck. I'm happy that she had that good fortune for I know exactly how she feels. I've been lucky these past few years, lucky to have Sarah, lucky to be getting an education at Chapel Hill, lucky to have a man like Coach Snavely, plus his capable assistants, teaching me the million and one things I don't know about football.

And come to think of it, the time isn't far off before they'll be teaching me a few things once again. Now it's only 42 more days until the first practice session gets under way, and some 67 sunsets before the Texas skirmish. Which reminds me I'd better forget about beauty queens and turn the thoughts to football once again.

Tandy Is Signed To Football Post At Reynolds High

Winston-Salem — John Tandy, who starred for four years as an end in football with the University of North Carolina Tar Heels, yesterday was named new head gridiron coach at R. J. Reynolds high school.

The announcement of the appointment of Tandy to the post was made by John W. Moore, superintendent of city schools. He was recommended for the post by athletic leaders at Chapel Hill.

Tandy, a native of Westfield, N. J., played four years of outstanding football for the Tar Heels. He is 27 years of age, married and has two children. Tandy will assume his new duties when football practice is called at Reynolds high August 20.

After starring at Westfield high, Tandy entered Carolina in 1940 and played two years before entering the navy. He returned to Chapel Hill after the war and played as a regular end in 1946 and 1947. While in service, Tandy coached a service football team at Honolulu. He was a chief petty officer in the navy.

Tandy also was an outstanding track star at Carolina, running the middle distance for Coach Bob Fetzer's Southern conference team.

The new Reynolds coach played under three coaches while at Carolina. He starred for Ray Wolf's team, played under Jim Tatum, and for the last two years as a key man on Carl Snavely's powerful teams, playing both offensive and defensive end.

The Jersey flanker grabbed a pass to score the touchdown which gave Carolina a victory over the University of Georgia last year. He was considered an able running mate in the pass-catching department with tall Art Weiner.

Being graduated this spring, he is considered one of the keenest students of football at Carolina. His year of coaching in the navy gives him needed experience in this field.

He is also a Phi Beta Kappa. He weighs 175 pounds and is six feet tall.

He will succeed George Thompson who resigned several days ago to accept the athletic directorship at Edenton high. Thompson had agreed to terms to replace Hal Bradley, who coached Reynolds last year, but asked to be released to take the job at Edenton.

John Kirk, Appalachian State line star last fall, will assist Tandy in the coaching of the Black Demons.

US Entries at Work

London — America's Olympic forces, now settled on the scene, got down yesterday to the serious business of trying to reach peak form for the games just a week away.

The largest delegation yet to report, the United States' 341 athletes, representing seventeen different teams, are all safely quartered in the London area.

Ex-Princeton Star Eliminates Seixas In Straight Sets

Philadelphia, July 21—Unseeded Bill Vogt pulled an upset today by eliminating defending champion Victor Seixas, Jr., in a third round match in the 49th Pennsylvania men's tennis championship.

The six-foot, four-inch Princeton university graduate beat the former University of North Carolina tennis captain in straight sets, 9-7, 6-4. The top-seeded Seixas had won the title the past two years.

Second-seeded Tom Brown, of San Francisco, moved into the quarter-finals with a 6-3, 8-6 victory over Andy Paton of the University of Michigan. Third-seeded Harry Likas, Jr., also of San Francisco, joined him with a 6-3, 6-3 decision over Dick Savitt of Orange, N. J.

It marked the fourth time this summer that the tall 25-year-old Southern Conference singles champion has been dumped from the tournament ranks by the upset route. At times he has flashed some excellent form but in losing it has always been a case of his conqueror displaying the better game.

Others advancing were:

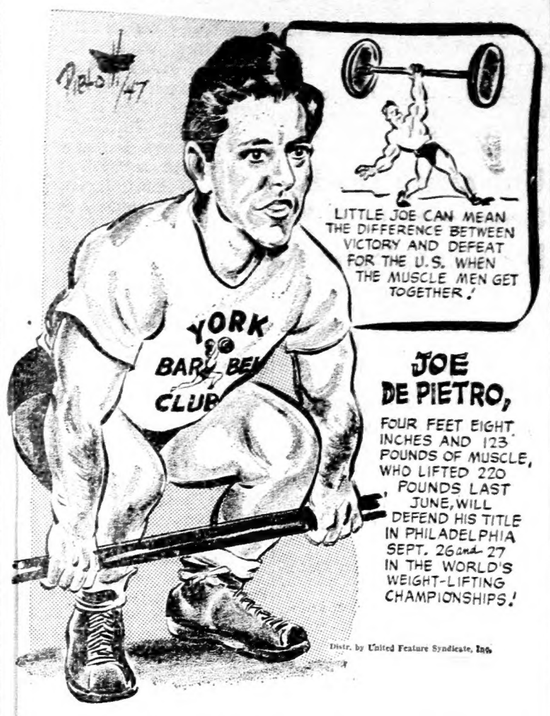
Herbert Behrens, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who beat Clarence Carter, San Francisco, 6-3, 6-2; Sam Match, Los Angeles, 6-4, 7-5 winner over Frank X. Shields,

Former Duke Star Victor Over Ward

Charlotte, July 17—Jimmy McNair of Aiken, S. C. today annexed his second Carolinas' amateur golf championship by scoring a decisive 6 and 5 victory over Keely Grice, Jr., of Charlotte.

Playing with rapid assurance under a sizzling sun, the Duke star played a steady par golf most of the way while Grice was battling with bogeys.

Yesterday the South Carolinian eliminated North and South amateur champion, Harvie Ward of Tarboro and the University of North Carolina, 4 and 3 in one of the semi-final round tussles. Grice duplicated the score in defeating Erwin Laxton of Charlotte in the other match.



McNair experienced a little trouble with his putting but was consistently deadly with his irons. Grice completely lost the sure touch displayed in earlier rounds.

It marked the second time McNair was crowned the Carolinas amateur champ. He also copped the title at Winston-Salem in 1946. Studies at Duke, from which he graduated last month, kept him out of last year's play which was won by Billy Joe Patton of Morgantown.

Patton lost in an early round tilt this year.

Chapel Hill Juniors In Area One Victory

The American Legion Juniors of Chapel Hill continued their mastery over Wake Forest here Wednesday, punching out a 6 to 3 victory over the visitors, thanks to the one-hit relief pitching of Louis McBryde for six innings.

Wake Forest caught on to Chapel Hill starter Billy May in the third inning for three runs to take the lead. However, Wake Forest ace Billy Hawks was sent to the showers in the fifth when the hometown boys dished up an even more thunderous uprising to score four times.

From there on, Chapel Hill coasted in behind the brilliant chunking of McBryde who has posted two wins in his last three starts.

A smashing two-run homer by shortstop Bobby Steward in the eighth inning accounted for the locals' final runs.

It was the third victory for Chapel Hill in five starts in the second round of Area One play. Wake Forest has won two games and lost three, while Wilson continues to lead the loop with four straight wins.

Chapel Hill began their Area One play by posting a convincing 5 to 1 victory over Roanoke Rapids. Then the locals hit the lose column for two in a row as Rocky Mount racked up 14 to 9 victory, and Wilson a 6 to 3.

The Chapel Hill lads won their second contest behind the fine hurling of lanky Milton Cheek. Cheek silenced the bats of the 'Ahoskie American Legion Juniors while his mates collected six runs in a 6 to 1 victory.

Chapel Hill meets Roanoke Rapids on Thursday in a postponed game which was rained out Tuesday.

Mural Schedule Set For Second Session; Play Begins Aug. 2

Intramural activities for the second summer session in five different events are scheduled to get under way Thursday, July 29. The five events scheduled for the second session include softball, tennis, horseshoes, archery, and bait casting.

Entries for the different events can be made at 311 Woollen gymnasium or by calling F-3321. Entry dates for the events are: softball, July 23 to July 29; tennis, July 23 to July 31; horseshoes, July 23 to August 3; archery, July 27 through the tournament; bait casting, August 3 through the contest.

Play is scheduled to start on Monday, August 2, in softball and archery. Tennis will get under way the following day, Tuesday, August 3. Horseshoes will open Thursday, August 5, and bait casting will not begin until Wednesday, August 11.

A meeting of all softball team managers has been called for Tuesday, July 27, at 7:30 in room 302 Woollen. The intramural department is anxious that all those interested in softball during the second summer session attend this meeting. All phases of second session activities will be discussed as will ground rules and procedures followed in softball play. Team entries can be made at this meeting.

There will also be a short meeting of all softball umpires on Wednesday, July 28, at 5 o'clock in room 302 Woollen gymnasium.

All persons connected with the University in the capacity of student, faculty, or administration in any way are eligible for second summer session intramural activities.

Play in all events will be scheduled four days each week from 4 o'clock to 6 o'clock, Monday through Thursday. Schedules will be posted in the intramural office, and will be sent out to all intramural managers. Pertinent notices will be placed on the main intramural bulletin board located on the walk between Woollen gymnasium and the Tin Can. Notices also will be placed on smaller intramural bulletin boards at both Scuttlebutts.

Plans for the bait casting and archery events have not as yet been completed, but all interested persons are asked to contact the intramural office to discuss these events. Plans call for accepting entries in the archery and bait casting events during the holding of the contests.

Pros in Penn.

Reading, Pa.—Ben Hogan and Lloyd Mangrum brought their duel for golf's money winning honors down to the Berkshire Country Club's long fairways and well trapped greens yesterday in the first round of the $15,000 Reading Open tournament.

Nearly 150 other top-ranking pros and amateurs also have entered the four-day tourney but Hogan, U. S. Open and PGA titlist, and the long-hitting Mangrum are favored.

The field numbers just about every name golfer in the country with all of the sport's ten leading money winners matching drives, chips and putts in the same tournament for the first time this year.

stitutional history, he was head of the University's History Department from 1907, one year after he joined the faculty, until 1929, when he resigned in order to become director of the Southern Collection. Under his direction, the History Department quickly became one of the most distinguished divisions of the University and attracted favorable attention throughout the nation.

He was district director of the war issues course of the Fourth District of the Student Army Training Corps in 1918, and the following year he was lecturer in the citizenship unit of the Army Educational Corps of the A. E. F. He was consultant in general education to the war plans division of the General Staff from 1920 to 1922.

He has served as a visiting professor at Harvard, Michigan, Chicago, and Southern California. For 16 years, 1908-24, he was editor of the James Sprunt historical publications, and from 1921 to 1935 he was book review editor on the Greensboro Daily News.

Dr. Hamilton is the author of eight volumes on historical subjects, and he has edited six others. He has been a frequent contributor to newspapers, magazines and reviews.

He was born in Hillsboro, N. C., the son of Daniel Heyward and Frances Gray (deRoulhac) Hamilton. He was graduated from the University of the South in Tennessee with an M. A. degree and took his doctorate at Columbia University. Before coming to the University he was instructor in the Horner Military School at Oxford and was principal of the high school at Wilmington. Washington and Lee and the University of the South have conferred honcrary degrees on him.

Forty years ago he married the former Mary Cornelia Thompson of Raleigh. They have two sons, J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton, Jr., a Washington newspaper correspondent, and Dr. Alfred T. Hamilton, a Raleigh surgeon.

Three Phases of History

It is impossible to do justice in a newspaper article to the immensity and diversity of the Southern Historical Collection. The material contained therein covers every period of Southern history, but it is especially strong with respect to the period from 1800 to 1875, and in three phases of the story of the South it is unsurpassed anywhere. Those phases are: the social system of the old South; the Confederacy and the Civil War; and the plantation system and slavery.

Much of the richness and variety of the collection stems from the fact that it contains so much personal correspondence. On this subject, Dr. Hamilton says, "Public men were always conscious that their letters might be printed; they were apt to write guardedly. . . . In the letter of a son to a mother there is no concealment. . . ."

The Collection is sectional in nature, but it is national in purpose, character and scope. The collection is open to all investigators. Writers and scholars make extensive use of it and it is recognized as the final authority on practically every phase of Southern history.

High Estimates of Collection

High estimates have been placed on the value of the Southern Collection. Claude G. Bowers, former ambassador to Spain and Ambassador to Chile since 1939, said, ". . . as a student and writer of history, I know of nothing the South or any of its people have undertaken in many years that promises such lasting advantages to the Southern people. It is an inspiration of genius. No greater contribution to the truth of history has ever been rendered in this country."

Gerald W. Johnson, well known author and newspaper man, says: "Dr. Hamilton has been getting this collection together for 25 years and considering that he has had little assistance and less money he has done a great job; pretty nearly a miraculous job. It is the thing that will keep his name famous among historians when yours and mine are no longer even scratches on a tombstone. It will also make Chapel Hill a mecca for great men whose business is the study of the past."

Although he has retired as head of the Southern Collection, Dr. Hamilton will continue to write and edit, and our guess is that he is already at work on a history of the South.

Dodds to Go to Games

Boston, July 20—It seemed virtually certain tonight that gallopin' Gil Dodds—gimpy leg and all—would go to the Olympic Games as the people's choice.

For the fans to whom the indoor mile king gave so much of himself, so often, for so little were rallying to raise funds to send him and his wife to the 14th Olympic as spectators.

University Sends Grumman to U.N. For Consultation

Director of the University Extension Division, Russell M. Grumman announced today that he will be sent by the University to New York to meet the United Nations director of public information William Agar on Monday at the Princeton Club.

"The purpose of the trip," he said "is to clarify various issues so that we might better set up the proposed United Nations Information Center here at the University."

A meeting was held last Thursday by the cooperating members and departments to draft a tentative plan of operation. Those present at the meeting representing the participating organizations and departments were: Benedicta Santos, CCUN; Earl Wynn, Radio department; Charles F. Milner, Visual Aid; Mrs. N. B. Adams, Extension Library; William P. Kellam, Library; E. R. Rankin, High School World Peace Forum; Charles O. Long, Dialectic Senate and Carolina Forum and Lincoln S. H. Kan, CCUN.

Grumman also announced that the Seminar on Great Books has been canceled due to insufficient enrollment.

City's Tax Rate To Remain Same

Although the cost of labor and practically all services have increased during the past year, Chapel Hill's tax rate, now $1.63, will not be raised, according to a tentative budget adopted by the Board of Aldermen for 1948-49.

Salaries of several of the town officials and of most of the policemen, firemen and members of the labor force were increased on an average of from seven to 10 percent under the new budget, which calls for a total expenditure of $118,084 as compared to a budget of $100,547 last year.

A report by Manager G. W. Ray showed that last year's budget was underspent by $3,973. The town on July 1 had an operating surplus of approximately $20,000.
